Fey Held Distinguished Post In U.S. Government Service

John T. Fey, clerk of the Supreme Court, was today elected by the Board of Trustees of the University of Vermont and State Agricultural College to succeed Dr. Carl W. Borgmann as president of University, effective July 1. Mr. Fey will be the 17th president since the founding of the University in 1791.

Dr. Borgmann, recently named to direct the Ford Foundation's new Division of Science and Engineering, will serve at Vermont through June 30.

Mr. Fey was born in Hopewell, Va., on March 10, 1917, and has served as Clerk of the Supreme Court since July, 1956, when he was appointed to that post by Chief Justice Earl Warren. He is the twelfth clerk to serve the Court since the appointment of the first clerk in February, 1790.

Mr. Fey attended high school in Cumberland, Md., and completed his pre-law undergraduate work at Washington and Lee University. He received the LL.B. degree in 1949 from the University of Maryland, and was awarded the Master of Business Administration degree by Harvard University.

He served four years in the Marine Corps during World War II, seeing service in the South Pacific, and holds the rank of Lt. Colonel in the Marine Corps Reserve.

Mr. Fey practiced law in Cumberland, Md., and served from 1946 to 1950 in the Maryland Legislature as a Republican member of the House of Delegates, and was also attorney to the Alleghany County Board of Commissioners. He was appointed to the faculty at George Washington University as associate professor of law in 1949.

In 1952 Yale University awarded him the degree of Doctor of Juridical Science for his work in the field of taxation.

He was named Acting Dean of the George Washington University Law School in June, 1953, and Dean in October of that year. He currently teaches Federal Income Taxation, Real Property, and Legal Accounting as a Professor of Law on the part-time faculty of George Washington.

Mr. Fey is a member of the District of Columbia Bar, the Federal Bar Association and the American Bar Association.

He is married to the former Jane Kessler Gerber of Trenton, N.J., and he and Mrs. Fey have one son, 10 years old.

President Borgmann, in commenting on Mr. Fey's appointment, expressed his "personal gratitude and commendation" to the faculty, trustees, alumni and University Council representatives who served on the presidency committee for "a job well done."

"All of them busy people, they brought to their responsibility on behalf of all the University's family and friends a devotion and energy which, by itself, constitutes the best possible recommendation Mr. Fey could be given.

"Speaking for myself, I am very much pleased with their decision. I believe John Fey's appointment is an excellent promise for the continued growth and quality of the University."

Constitution Of New Drinking Ruling

This will serve as your official notification of the action taken last Wednesday, February 26, by the University Council instituting a new policy on the use of alcoholic beverages by undergraduate students at the University of Vermont.

The regulation, which was put into effect immediately following the Council's meeting, reads as follows:

A. Undergraduate students, regardless of age, are not permitted the use of alcoholic beverages:
 1. at any University social function;
 2. on University property;
 3. in any housing which accomodates students in residence, i.e., those not living with parents or spouse.

B. All students, regardless of age, will be held responsible for appropriate conduct with reference to the use of liquor.

This statement replaces section 7, page 3, of the "Green Pages" in your Date Book.

Many of you may be aware of the reasons for this change in policy. However, it is probably well to make them a matter of record. First of all, it was patently clear that after five years of sincere effort, student leadership was still unable to successfully administer a policy which required that individuals and groups in the University community honor Vermont State liquor laws. This policy, then, was neither working nor workable.

It was the judgment of those reviewing this question that the policy also was not educationally sound, since it hampered the full development of the University's social program by a narrowing and undue emphasis on alcoholic beverages as a central concern of social functions. It is our firm conviction that, by removing liquor as an issue with which leadership has to deal, creative energies will be free to develop a broadened University social program.

The matter of enforcement has been an issue since the policy was made public. You should know our philosophy and plans in this regard.

The relationship between an individual and any university community is a voluntary one. In seeking the privilege of this relationship, the individual commits himself to meet the responsibilities that are concomitant with that privilege. Basic among these responsibilities is a continuing moral commitment to the unique set of policies, rules, regulations, or laws that define the nature of that community. Since the association is a voluntary one, it is the clear responsibility of the individual to determine for himself whether he can honor the commitment involved. If he cannot, as a moral man he should not accept the privilege tendered.

Each student and each organization on campus will be expected to assume the responsibility for self-discipline with regard to the new policy. No signed statements committing either the individual or the group will be required. Instead, it will be assumed that the continued attendance of an individual and continued existence of an organization on campus will be commitment enough.

Responsible self-government as a vital dimension of student life will continue. Groups or individuals who have problems of self-discipline with regard to this or any other University policy will find several offices on the campus ready to assist them.

Finally, you should know that no "police" efforts, save those developed by your own organization, will be instituted. Disciplinary action, however, will be taken whenever violations are brought to the attention of the University.

We are sincerely convinced that when you have given serious consideration to the policy outlined above, you will accept it in the spirit in which it has been developed and adopted - with a firm conviction that it sets a standard and defines a social climate which is in the best interest, educationally, of the University of Vermont.

FOR BETTER OR FOR WORSE

The first thought that comes into our minds upon entering college is, of course, marriage. But how many of us go about seeking mates, as I like to call them, in a truly scientific manner? Not many, you may be sure.

So let us today make a scientific survey of the two principal causes of marriage—personality need and propinquity.

Personality need means that we choose mates because they possess certain qualities that complete and fulfill our own personalities. Take, for example, the case of Alanson Duck.

As a freshman Alanson made a fine scholastic record, played varsity scrabble, and was president of his class. One would think that Alanson was a totally fulfilled man. But he was not. There was something lacking in his life, something vague and indefinable that was needed to make his personality complete.

Then one day Alanson discovered what it was. As he was walking out of his class in Flemish pottery, a fetching coed named Grace Ek offered him a handsome red and white pack and said, "Marlboro?"

"Yes!" he cried, for all at once he knew what he had been needing to round out his personality—the hearty fulfillment of Marlboro Cigarettes, the soul-repairing mildness of their fine tobacco, the easy draw of their unparalleled filter, the ease and convenience of their crushproof flip-top box. "Yes, I will take a Marlboro!" cried Alanson. "And I will also take you to wife if you will have me!"

"Ja!" she exclaimed, throwing her apron over her face. But after a while she removed it and they were married. Today they live happily in Baffin Land where Alanson is with an otter-glazing firm and Grace is a bookie.

Propinquity, the second principal cause of marriage, simply means closeness. Put a boy and a girl close together for a sustained period of time and their proximity will certainly ripen into love and their love into marriage. A perfect example is the case of Fafnir Sigafoos.

While a freshman at Louisiana State University, Fafnir was required to crawl through the Big Inch pipeline as part of his fraternity initiation. He entered the pipe at Baton Rouge and, alone and joyless, he proceeded to crawl north.

As he passed Lafayette, Indiana, he was agreeably surprised to be joined by a comely girl named Mary Alice Isinglass, a Purdue freshman, who, oddly enough, had to crawl through the Big Inch as part of her sorority initiation.

When they reached the Vermont border they were going steady

Chatting amiably as they crawled through Ohio, Pennsylvania, and New York State, Fafnir and Mary Alice discovered they had much in common—like a mutual affection for licorice, ludoslediding, and the nonsense verse of Arnold Toynbee. When they reached the Vermont border they were going steady, and when they emerged from the pipe at Boothbay Harbor, Maine, they were engaged.

After a good hot bath they were married and today they live in Klamath Falls, Oregon, where Fafnir is in the weights and measures department and Mary Alice is in the roofing game. They have three children, all named Norman. © 1958 Max Shulman

INTERVIEW WITH MR. FEY

"I nominate John T. Fey as the next president of the University of Vermont." These were the words that were heard at the Board of Trustees meeting on March 8, 1958. An adjournment was called for a Press Conference, where members of the press had the opportunity to ask the new president questions. Here is the story as gathered after hearing the answers of Mr. Fey.

Mr. Fey, was approached for considering this job about one month ago by Mr. Neil Tolman, President of the Alumni Council and a new member of the Board of Trustees. Since then Mr. Fey has been interviewed on two occasions by members of the Board of Trustees and members of the faculty. This man comes well recommended and gives up a life time job to take this new position. When asked why he left such a position as clerk of the United States Supreme Court, he said, "I hesitate to leave, but this is a challenge. I hope to increase academic standards and serve the community." He went on to say why he considered Vermont, "I feel it is a great thrill and a great pleasure. The University of Vermont has a rich background with many intellectual achievements." He is very impressed with the campus and with the faculty members that he has met.

At this point, Mr. Fey was interrupted by a phone call from the Chief Justice of the Supreme Court, Earl Warren. Warren recommended Vermont very highly and stated he had fond memories of Vermont where he received an honorary degree two years ago.

As for future plans, Mr. Fey said he will acquaint himself first with all current problems. This pertains to the drinking problem which he wants to look into further before making any statements. He felt Dr. Borgmann had started many new programs which he would like to continue such as the building program. He wants to review this program in great detail and he feels it is anexcellent program.

Concerning our athletic program, our new president favors expanding athletics which he feels is an important part of a college program. He felt that judging by experience he had at Washington and Lee, Fey feels that collegiate sports activities build up a school. The addition to the library, and a new field house and gym are some of his first projects in mind, because he realizes the need for them. Pertaining to scholarships, he said, "They should be a part of the over-all scholarship program; but a student must earn it and keep the scholarship academically."

Mr. Fey went on to say that out-of-staters are an important part of the University because they give the in-staters contact with new ideas as well as to bring new life to the university. As for Fraternities, Mr. Fey was a social member of a fraternity in his college days and he has fond memories of fraternity life. He felt that, just as at Washington and Lee, fraternity on this small campus in a small town is a "useful function." He also is in favor of student government which, he feels, gives a person a good background. He feels that a school needs student's ideas.

Concerning education of the different colleges here at UVM, he stated, "Education develops an awareness for all and all schools are important. We need the technicians as well as the humanitarians in society."

Mr. Fey plans to stay at UVM as long as he can be a help to our community and of use to the community. This school has a high academic standing, that is why he is here. Mr. Fey felt it is a great

The Vermont Cynic

New Staff

A new Senior Staff has taken over the publication of your CYNIC, but underneath it all the CYNIC carries on as before. The same duties will be performed, the stories will be written and rewritten, and the newspaper will be set up on Tuesday to make the deadline.

The duty of an editorial is to search for knowledge and progress. Editorials should be used to stimulate thought and discussion among the student body. We intend to take sides on issues with the hope that it may bring out your interest, pro or con, on the topic.

When a new staff takes over, new ideas and improvements are expected. We hope this year's staff will have the enthusiasm necessary to fulfill the responsibility of the official newspaper of the University of Vermont. To the old staff who have set the standards for us, it is our pleasure to say congratulations for a topnotch job.

Our main purpose is to give you the news concisely and accurately. We hope to look objectively at the news and eliminate any bias that we have. At times we will take sides on issues of interest and in this way we hope to encourage meaningful controversy. The "Letters To The Editor" column is your opportunity to state your ideas and opinion about your University, and it is our expectation that this advantage will be used to its greatest extent.

Welcome Mr. Fey

We wish to extend our congratulations to the committee which chose our new president. Mr. Fey impressed all the members of the press conference during his interview on Saturday. Here is a man who we feel will give this University the leadership and growth seen in the past years and all the more necessary for the future.

Our new president, who takes office July first, stated that the admission of out-of-state students is as important as that of in-state students. It is our belief that out-of-staters bring to UVM sectional ideas and a variety of interests. We think that being a fraternity man, Mr. Fey will also take an active interest in fraternity affairs. Fraternities on a small campus integrate student life, and help the student to learn and live with others. Washington and Lee University, where Mr. Fey completed his pre-law undergraduate work, let the students govern themselves,with the exceptionof academic affairs. We hope this same policy will take root here in a more effective Student Court and judiciary system.

So, welcome Mr. Fey to the University of Vermont and may your stay be long and pleasant. To President Borgmann, let us wish you our best and our gratitude for having built a strong foundation for our new president.

LETTERS

Who Enters Heaven?

Dear Sir:

The writer of this letter wishes to express his personal disappointment in hearing of the recent stand taken by the fresh import now holding the office of Dean of Men at the University. I say have been led to false conclusions by recent articles and editorials in the Burlington Free Press, but if the statements there are valid I understand that a University student is forbidden by the University to drink, regardless of his age, unless one of the three conditions is satisfied:

(1) He is in a licensed tavern;

(2) He is at the home of his parents;

(3) He is married and at the residence he shares with his wife.

With reference to the last condition, I say it is darn nice of that Dean Clifford fellow not to invade the bedrooms of young married couples. His thoughtfulness will be appreciated, I'm sure.

The attitude of the new Dean reminds me of the story of the psychiatrist who went to heaven and arrived before St. Peter in front of the Pearly Gates:

St. Peter: (Thumbing through the Big Book) And what did you do on earth that makes you worthy of entering heaven?

Psychiatrist: Well, I tried to be a good psychiatrist.

St. Peter: (Lighting up with joy) Oh, I'm so glad one of you fellows has finally come along. You see, we're all a little worried about God: he seems to think that he is Earle Clifford.

In closing I must give a word of warning: remember, little children, Big Brother is everywhere and knows everything you do. Be good, little children, or when you are through with this life you won't go to that wonderful place up there, "The Land of Degrees," but you will go to the other place.

Sincerely,

John B. Lounsbury, '57

LESSON LEARNED

There is no better lesson to be learned, here or elsewhere, than the painful task of self-government. The art of balancing your personal liberty with that of your responsibility to the University community of which you are a part, if learned at all, is the finest dividend you can receive from these four years. In a sense, I think this is the meaning of your protest -- a protest made without question, in defense of the idea of protecting your individuality - an individuality that, in this case means the right to drink. Let me be clear on this - within the limits of the laws, as a citizen of a State, you have this 'right' - insofar as it is a self-regarding act. To drink per se, is not a sin. The implication that it is - I totally deplore. It is not the business of anyone to decide for anyone else the motive - or even the lack of one - which leads one to drink. What the state - an involuntary association does command - and a university community or any other voluntary association for that matter can demand - is responsibility on the part of those who drink. Any association, I think, has an equal 'right' to demand that Errol Garner is out. At least as an extra for the current Lane Series. It is kind of bad news and it came about because Garner won't be around as some had thought he might be. He will be in other areas of the country.

Some folks have said that there wasn't much about music in last weeks column. That is correct.

A faculty member approached me the other day and said I was all wet about students here having to give up certain Constitutional rights as a prerequisite for admission. And he has several heavy tomes and a few sheeplike followers to prove this to his own complete satisfaction. He also said that since I didn't know what I was talking about, I should keep comments on Constitutionality out of the column. If you run across him, treat him kindly. Everyone has a right to his own opinion.

There is a new Long Playing record by Mr. Sinatra called Come Fly With Me. As an orchestral background the music of Billy May is superb. When the band lets go it is also far and away above the usual innocuous sound made by many bands which accompany singers. Sinatra usually works with Nelson Riddle. He is the best for Frank. They together very well. Sort of like corn bread and buttermilk. Mr. May is nearly as good as Mr. Riddle but recently Mr. Gordon Jenkins accompanied Mr. Sinatra on an LP and the music was syrupy and showed no Prohibition is in its third week. Fraternities can't get chaperones for parties and a new President has been chosen. Time marches on!

As I see the present situation at UVM, Dean Clifford is something of a victim of circumstances. I don't think he, as a tyrant, wanted to cut out all drinking at UVM. As Dean of Men, his was the task of stopping drinking by those under 21, especially in fraternity houses. Kake Walk, as we all know, is a festive weekend for everybody; and as a result all members of the University Family indulge. Many influential members of the University Family thought this an intolerable, flagrant violation of state laws and put the pressure on poor Deany. He very honestly stated that it was rather difficult for him to enforce the laws in their present state and so he got together with a few associates and drew up a new set of rules to stop underage drinking at UVM. As far as teaching respect for regulations, the violations.

It's strange how the most logical plans on paper don't work in actual practice!

Actually the new rules went a bit too far. Mounted on top of many other difficult rules and policies set forth by our guiding fathers it was too much to bear. The students united in a common cause. A committee was set up which has the backing of a majority of the stuthe drinking must be a self-regarding proposition. Beyond that, the state, any association, indeed, society itself, ought not to go.

You have the right to ask - as you are at this meeting - what provocation there was for this new policy - a policy which you deem to deny your 'inalienable right' to drink, especially insofar as it is or may be a self-regarding act.

I think we need not fool - or, at least, try to fool, one another. Under the former policy, to the best of my knowledge, no person, of legal age, was ever bothered by anyone connected with this University when he or she drank in any situation where the effect was purely personal, where the act, in short, was purely self-regarding. The difficulties arose, again to the best of my knowledge, from social situations in which the drinking was not so confined - where, in fact, the drinking was oriented toward the group as a whole, where it became not a self-regarding act, but rather one, I think with great social pressure connotations. The drinking, in terms of tone and temper was indiscriminate. In regard to age, it was indiscriminate as well. Liquor was regularly supplied for the under 21's by the 21's and over; this is a situation that existed in the Houses and in the various apartments and annexes around the town. The legitimate drinkers have become, in short, not merely individual drinkers, but the procurers of liquor for others as well. The traffic in drivers' licenses and I.D. cards has been a fact. Many of you have so informed me, with candor, and sometimes, with regret, about the existing situation.

I would be less than honest, if I told you this has been a healthy situation. I would also be less than honest if I told you that I am deeply concerned over what an adult, responsible student does in regard to purely personalized drinking. This is his own business, as long as it concerns only him. I do not think, however, that he has any so-called right, as a member of this University community, to invite - and certainly not to abet, others in breaking either the law, or in any way interfering with another's right to abstain. If the meaning of this new policy - in administrative terms - is that individuals as such are to be held accountable only for those actions that make drinking more than a self-regarding act, that may imply indeed direct, observable, unmistakable harm to other students, then I lend my support. If the new policy is an effort to encourage a climate where your individuality can be more than of one-dimensional scope, I lend my support. If the new policy is one aimed not at denying your rights as a single individual, but rather is directed toward making you equally aware of your total academic community responsibilities, I lend my support. And if the new policy is aimed at correcting known and admitted-by-all present and past abuses, but not at ferreting out suspected, probable, unsupported, violations of decorum, I lend my support.

Liberty, if it is meaningful, can never be license. We live together in confidence only with mutual respect for one's rights, and one's responsibilities. You, as individuals cannot grow intellectually, or socially, by having a club over your heads. The growth we all seek, I hope, comes only from your ability to recognize the meaning and the responsibility of being 'free' individuals. That growth is an agonizingly painful process within an an extremely delicate art, - the art of learning to know yourself and those around you, to grow without stunting the growth of others in the process.

Today, you are defending your right to stand firm and erect on your own two feet. If it means something more than defending your right to awkwardly stagger, I salute you. If it means only this, I'm sorry - for all of us.

Professor William Steele

Principle

I am writing this letter in protest to the recent action taken by the University Council which prevents students of this University from exercising their privilege as citizens of this great country.

This law, in my estimation, will add nothing to make this University a better place to attend college. It will result in many of the same effects that Prohibition produced in the twenties, but on a smaller scale. We, the students, symbolize the people of the country who fought for their rights as citizens and the University symbolizes the government trying to enforce an unenforceable law. The people of the United States would not live according to the law of Congress just as the students of U.V.M. will not tolerate the recent unnecessary action taken by the University Council.

The University is, by this law, acting against the very principles upon which it was formed. By accepting us into college, the administration was telling us that they believed we were mature, responsible individuals. But by the action that has been taken it is, in effect, telling us that we are no longer considered as such. The University expects its students to be responsible toward such things as: finishing assignments on time, attending classes, checking bulletin boards, academic honesty, etc. In other words, this school considers its students mature and responsible while classes are in session. But after classes, the administration changes its view to one which makes us appear as immature children unable to cope with everyday problems.

The administration is, by their action, preventing the student body from becoming well-rounded citizens by hindering a part of the education which we came here to obtain. In my opinion, if the University isn't doing a better job of making their students responsible, mature citizens, (that they are admitting by this new law) I would suggest abolishing this school as a higher place of learning.

John J. Harvey

Before I reached the age at which I could legally drink, my parents instilled in me the proper manner to handle this phenomonon.

While at the University, I do not find myself among the very few who have fallen victim of the violent use of liquor, but rather I find that I am developing a proper and well balanced education for the use of the same. I find that I can feel at ease at any occasion where liquor might be served, be it with my colleagues or with members of the University faculty. I can honestly say that if it weren't for the University my education in regard to drinking would not be as well grooned as it is.

Therefore, I would like to express to the University Council, through this media, my opinion on the subject which has had so much controversy in the past week.

I feel that the persons, that were not as fortunate as I to have an excellent parental education, who attend this university, may someday find it costly to themselves morally, socially, or even finalcially due to the lack of this "slow maturation process." As a soldier in the service requires the very best training before entering combat, so does the young adult require some type of training before he is exposed to the social practices which the (so-called) adult pursues. I don't think this is a question of right vs. wrong, I think it is a question of harm vs. good. I believe that this slow maturation process belongs in an institution of higher learning, an institution which educates young adults.

Very truly yours,

Marvin S. Dobert

Student s View

I am writing this letter regarding the recent proclamation issued by the University for the welfare of the University family. The University proposes to take away our rights as citizens. I, for one, am waiting for that wonderful day this summer when I will reach that magic number, 21. I was looking forward to coming back to the University next year, but now I'm not so sure. The administration is continuing a long range plan to make us slaves, and frankly, I'm not going to wait around to see it happen. There are plenty of other excellent colleges in this democratic country of ours, so it is not necessary to attend this totalitarian institution. There will be no enforcement of this law as far as 21 year olds go and I think I am right in saying this is a general consensus of opinion. When I drink I want to be home, I don't want to be on the road driving recklesaly with the possibility of becoming a 1958 death statistic. This law is pointless as far as I can see.

See you at the rally.

Tony Smart

"Thanks"

I wish to thank the administration of this University for their contribution to the student society here at Vermont. Their recent action, I am sure, will have a permeating effect on morals and scholarship. By this action we students have been told just how immature we are in regard to the handling of alcoholic beverages. Yet, it seems strange to me that we may become mature in this matter of drinking by traveling a mere fifty miles. There are only fifty miles separating maturity and immaturity! Does it not seem strange that we can measure such an intangible in miles?

Has the administration no regard for their own conscience? Can they honestly say that sleep will come after reading such headlines as "Six Students Killed Returning from Canada"? Can they find someone else to blame? They are sending us to New York and Canada!

In essence, the administration is saying that we are mature between the hours of 8 A.M. to 5 P.M., Monday through Friday. We are mature enough to give eloquent speeches, publish our own, well-respected, newspaper, and present a famed play on the stage. But when it comes to social maturity, we are still wet behind the ears.

To the administration, I say thank you for making this University what it is. You are helping us so much.

A Fog?

Newsclipping Burlington Free Press, 1960: A grey, dense fog seems finally to have settled over the University campus. The fog, indications of which had been noted and predicted for more than a decade, virtually eliminates any signs of the sun's rays on the University grounds. Travelling is reported hazardous and most of the students are affording themselves of the illumination available in downtown establishments. One of our "on the spot" reporters, after making a vain attempt to locate the University library, sought to take refuge in the Sociology Department, but was again frustrated by the obscure and beclouded atmosphere. He reports that there were several moments during which he had difficulty breathing and during which his eyes, searching for light, severly smarted. (He stated that he experienced no pain while his eyes remained shut.)

All the news is not depressing, however, as the Administration, which for several years has been operating off campus, has announced that fog will not in any way hinder fund raising activities or curtail their now stupendous athletic progras.

So far, we have not been able to locate any faculty members for comment

Far from being a pessimist or a frustrated writer of another 1984, this writer views several recent occurrences here on campus with both consternation and apprehension. Student consciousness seems to have been awakened by one of these issues, but, unfortunately seems to be relatively unaffected by the others. These issues directly affect the students and we must be more than aware of them, we must express ourselves - in a way that we will be heard - constantly. If not, a fog will truly settle.

Shortly after the administration issued its edict on alcohol consumption, a reference librarian, Mr. Herbert Leader, received notice of his dismissal. Mr. Leader was told that he was fired for professional reasons, but states that this is not true. He says that he had received repeated warnings to desist in his attempt to halt fund collections in public schools from Mr. Haviland, Director of Billings Library. Mr. Leader insists that his dismissal is a direct result of his not complying with these demands. If this is true, Mr. Leader was given notice for expressing views which were not quite in accord with those of his superiors, or with those by whom his superiors are influenced.

Also in the news is the non-renewal of the contract of Dr. Davis, Associate Professor of Sociology. We have too few men like Dr. Davis and it seems that the administration is of the view that too few is too much. Dr. Davis recently made the statement that the effect that Vermont's academic standards should be improved. Dr. Davis' comments have been termed "malicious" by the administration.

Since students are directly affected by these actions on the part of the administration, they should be completely informed of all the reasons for these actions. They should demand them!

Unfortunately there seems to be an insidious correlation between one's attempt to air one's constructive, albeit discordant views and one's liability be placed in the administrative firing line.

Flicking Out

by Judith White

"Flicking out," a favorite pastime of most UVM students, has recently undergone examination by the Opinion Research Corporation of Princeton, New Jersey. Their findings should be of some interest to you - the movie industry's most significant source of revenue and enthusiasm.

Audiences are predominantly young, consisting of students between the ages of 15-29. Significantly, few people attend the theatre alone (where else can you go on a date?)

A substantial number of people tramp down to the theatre without previously knowing what is being shown, and those who do bother to find out, consult either the newspapers or friends who have already seen the film. Previews, newspapers, and magazine and television advertising are deemed the most objective judges of the worth of a picture, while theatre posters are considered most misleading.

Those interviewed claim that they are more interested in story content than in the actors themselves, but it seems to me that Marilyn Monroe and Anthony Perkins draw crowds even if the plot is non-existent.

The advent of television certainly has created headaches and empty pockets for movie companies and theatre owners throughout the nation, but surprisingly enough the survey disclosed that as many people would prefer to see current films at a theatre as would prefer to see them through the media of "pay television."

American laziness accounts for most of television's popularity. Those who preferred television stressed its convenience and accessibility and pointed out that it does away with problems of theatre parking. However, the remaining 50% of theatre supporters appreciated the technical superiority (large screen, better sound, color) which the theatre showing affords and enjoyed the idea of breaking away from home routine by seeking another atmosphere.

Few people complained of the ever-increasing admission rates or of the declining quality of current pictures. If these two predominant evils still remain unnoticed, as the survey indicates, then it seems that movies are here to stay.

In all races of mankind, more boys than girls are born; generally life span of men is shorter than that of women.

Clifford Explains New Drinking Rule

Public licensed establishments will be the only places in which University of Vermont undergraduate students will be able to drink alcoholic beverages legally under a new University policy adopted by the University Council.

The "broadened" University policy was adopted on a recommendation from the Office of the Dean of Men. It will go into effect immediately.

Dean Earle W. Clifford said the proposal was made and adopted "as educationally more sound for the UVM campus than the existing policy of application of the Vermont State liquor law to the University community.

"In addition, that regulation was unsatisfactory from an administrative standpoint, placing an undue and difficult - if not impossible - burden on the leadership of student groups responsible for enforcing the policy."

Alcoholic beverages have been "taboo" on property owned by the University, and for those under 21 years of age, the legal drinking age established by the state. The new policy would extend a ban on alcohol to all residences in which University students-regardless of age-are housed. It means, in effect, that UVM students who are legally of age may legally drink in public licensed establishments or licensed private clubs, and nowhere else.

Dean Clifford noted that the old policy had placed responsibility for administration and enforcement with the students concerned. This responsibility will be continued under the new policy.

He said that the University feels that "social education is a significant part of the total college experience. We feel that group experiences can be more meaningful and focus on broader objectives with the removal of alcohol as an issue with which student leaders need to be concerned.

"In essence, it is the design of this policy to provide a freer opportunity for social creativity for all University students."

He made it clear that the University was satisfied that student organizations had made a sincere effort to abide by the former policy. "The difficulties they encountered led to this new, sounder policy."

Free Offering Of The "Messiah"

Faure's "Requiem" and excerpts from Handel's "Messiah" will be sung by the University Choir Sunday, March 16, at 4 P.M. The concert is free and public.

The harp part will be played by Flora Strickland Fulton, who played with the choir at their last performance of the "Requiem." Sadah Shuchari Start will play the violin, and also the viola, since Faure uses the viola but not the violin in several numbers. Obbligatos to the solos will be played by Mrs. Start, and by Herbert Schultz, trumpeter. Mariam Natilee Marston will by the organist, and Judith Dutton the pianist.

The soloists will be Barbara Weinrich and Helen Chicoice, sopranos; George Merritt and Maurice Villemaire, tenors; and Francis Weinrich and Stephen Pearl, basses. Howard Bennett will direct the performance.

Teacher's Ass'n Meets On March 14

Teachers from the Champlain Valley area will meet this Friday, (Mar. 14) for the 51st annual March Conference, sponsored by the Champlain Valley Teachers' Association and the University of Vermont.

Meetings will be held at the Burlington High School, beginning at 9:15 a.m. The General Morning Session will be opened at 9:45 by LaFayette L. Saucier, president of the Association, followed by a business meeting, invocation by Rabbi Max B. Wall of Burlington, and greetings from the University by Dean George V. Kidder and from the Vermont State Department of Education by Dr. A. John Holden, Jr., commissioner of education.

At 10:30, Dr. Harry W. Kirwin, professor of history at Loyola College, Baltimore, Maryland, will give the keynote address.

Following lunch, the afternoon session will consist of consultation groups, lasting from 1:45 to 2:30 p.m. The various consultation groups will consider the topics of retirement, certification, physical education, guidance and counseling, school health problems, and audio-visual aids.

A stage presentation entitled "Vermont Maid Fashions" will be given at 2:30 by girls in home economics from the various Vermont high schools.

Books and instructional materials arranged in the Burlington High School Cafeteria will be exhibited throughout the Conference.

regard for the vocalist.

The Benny Goodman band has disbanded. It was being led by Urbie Green. I have always felt odd about one guy capitalizing on another guy's reputation. Y'know the Glenn Miller band led by Tex Beneke and so on. It sort of increases the flow of liver bile into my digestive system.

Dakota Staton, a new singer, is someone to watch. She has the potential to become as great an artist as Sarah Vaughan. I don't mean to imply that she imitates Sassy, 'cause she doesn't. But if you hear her name announced as a vocalist give a listen, she's worth it.

The new Count Basie album called simply Basie is fine and mellow and good and swings and talks and sings and Wow.

Summer H.S. Music Course At University

Brochures announcing the new summer High School Music Session at the University of Vermont will be in the mails shortly. It was announced recently by Dr. Earl A. Knife, director of UVM's Summer Session.

Inauguration of the music session was approved at the last meeting of the University's Board of Trustees, February 22.

The new session will offer a three-weeks program in band, chorus, orchestra, and ensemble for high school students and recent high school graduates. The program will coincide with the first three weeks of the regular summer session, June 30 to July 18.

The session will include daily band, chorus, and orchestra rehearsals, instrumental and vocal ensemble practice, and optional private instruction in instruments or voice. Most rehearsals will be in preparation for a concert-festival at the end of the session.

Students will have the opportunity to participate in a varied social and recreational program.

All students attending the music session will live in dormitories on the Redstone campus, and their meals will be served in the Waterman Cafeteria.

Airman Of The Month

The 870TH Air Force ROTC Cadet Wing of the University of Vermont is proud to announce that Cadet A/2C Herbert J. Brown has been designated as the Cadet Airman of the Month of February. This means that he has met up to the requirements of this award by outstanding interest and ability at leadership laboratory and in the classroom, neatness in appearance, high scholastic standing, and recommendation by the Cadet Airman of the Month Board.

This cadet is awarded a yellow ribbon designating him as Airman of the Month of the Cadet Wing. He also receives letters of commendation from the Professor of Air Science and the Cadet Wing Commander, and gifts from the local merchants sponsoring the award. These include: two, two dollar dinners from the Park C Cafe at 143 Main St., a five dollar gift certificate from Humphrey and Son's at 83 Church St., a McGregor sport shirt from Hayes and Carney's at 127 Church St., and two free passes to the Flynn Theater at 153 Main St.

Mathematician John B. Jackson, like many other mathematicians, engineers and physicists, came to IBM directly from graduate school. Today, an Applied Science Representative, he reviews his progress and tells how he uses his math background in a new field.

What's it like to be with IBM?

First of all, what does an Applied Science Representative do? In John Jackson's own words, "I work constantly with key executives of the many and varied customers served by IBM in the territory for which I am responsible, advising them on the use of their electronic data processing machines. I consult with these customers, analyze their scientific and technical problems for solution with IBM machines. Occasionally, I write papers and give talks and demonstrations on electronic computing. All in all, it's pretty fascinating . . ." In other words, he is a full-fledged computing expert, a consultant . . . and a very important person in this coming age of automation through electronics.

A consulting sales job

During the three years that John Jackson has spent with IBM as an Applied Science Representative, he has guided innumerable customers to new and better ways of doing things with electronic computers. For example, a leading aircraft manufacturer wanted to experiment with a radically different design for a nuclear reactor. Although the basic format had been established, the project still required many months of toil with mathematical equations. The aircraft people decided that they couldn't afford to wait that long, so they called on IBM. After consultation with top executives, John Jackson helped to map out a computer program that saved the organization over 100 days of pencil-chewing arithmetic. Later, for this same company, he organized the establishment of computer systems for aircraft performance predictions and for data reduction of wind tunnel tests. At the same time, he worked with this company's own employees, training them in the use of IBM equipment. He remains in touch with this customer to assist with new studies and problems as they develop.

Consulting with top executives

A new field for the mathematician—IBM computers

Why did John Jackson decide to join IBM? Today, he is exercising his mathematical know-how in a field that was practically unheard of ten years ago. Even now, this kind of work may be news to you. It was to him a few years back when he was an undergraduate at the University of Colorado. At that time, he was considering mathematical research. But he liked the excitement and diversification of business and industry, and he wanted to use his mathematical background in that area. It was not until he was interviewed by IBM that he became aware of this new field for mathematicians. A few months later, he began his career as an Applied Science trainee.

Mapping out a computer program

John Jackson has progressed rapidly since he joined the Company. He's now the Washington representative operating with one of IBM's key Divisions, Military Products, in the Washington, D. C., office. With his wife Katherine, daughter Lisa, and John, Jr., he enjoys life in the nation's capital.

Discussing a mathematics problem

Interesting and challenging responsibilities, plus the knowledge that he is making a substantial contribution in a rapidly expanding area of IBM that is important to the Company and to the nation, assure John Jackson that he is moving along a road of real future opportunities.

This profile is just one example of what it's like to be with IBM. There are excellent opportunities for well-qualified college men in Research, Development, Manufacturing, Sales and Applied Science. The late Leonard Liebling, editor of Musical Courier, always remembered the day during his youth when a visitor arrived just as the family was about to sit down to dinner. Mr. Liebling, Sr., annoyed that anyone should choose the dinner hour as visiting time, had the maid ask the guest to wait. After an unhurried dinner, Mr. Liebling greeted his friend, "Sorry to keep you waiting, but we always eat at seven."

"That's what I thought," replied the friend, "when you asked me to come to dinner tonight."

More than 100 Army ROTC students were in attendance last Tuesday evening at the UVM Alumni Student Lounge at a meeting by Lt. Col. Miles L. Wachendorf, Assistant Division Engineer for Civil Works, New England Division, US Army Engineer Corps.

Col. Wachendorf spoke on the role and mission of the Army Engineer Corps in both peace and war and presented a newly released Department of the Army film which depicted the many and varied tasks performed by the engineers.

Col. Wachendorf, a 1942 West Point graduate, described the role of the engineer corps in the event of nuclear warfare. He related in detail the civil works program in the New England area, emphasizing the building of levees and the supervision of harbors and rivers. "More than ever before the Engineer Corps is necessary for successful offense and defense" he stated. "Its role is both construction and destruction."

Col Wachendorf was introduced by Lt. Col. Eston T. White, Chairman of the Department of Military Science at the University.

Emergency Committee Presents Proposals To Strengthen Student Rights

By Dave Colburn

The Student Emergency Committee is working hard to accomplish the things which was brought to light in the recent sit-in demonstration. However the committee is the committee which was elected in the assembly that met after the sit-in. This committee served to bring the two parties into the open. This fact should be the task of great importance to the student body. It should be the duty of the student government. [illegible] other parties of the school to work the committee. The committee has attempted with the help of student and government.

The committee feels that the primary cause of the sit-in was the lack of student participation in the affairs which affect their lives. When finished, the proposals will be submitted to President Borgeann.

The first is concerned primarily with the grievance problem. The Committee feels that students must participate in the hearings. Also, they feel that there is a possible conflict of interest when one of the members of the hearing board is both judge and prosecutor.

The second proposal is that the Emergency Committee should become a permanent one composed mainly of students. The purpose of this group would be to bring to light problems concerning the students' welfare of their non-academic activities.

The last proposal is that a Student Executive Council be incorporated at the University. This group would consist of the presidents of the Student Association, the Inter-fraternity Council, Pan Hellenic Council, the Women's Student Government Association, and one member elected at large from the Student Association. There would also be four voting members, one from each college at the University.

This council would meet with the University Council on problems directly concerning the students' responsibilities of self-government. The committee realizes that the University Council also wants to leave out of the students' hands matters which are not the responsibilities of the students. If a Student Executive Council were established, it would be agreed that it would not have anything to do with these matters.

As stated before, these are only general proposals. The precise wording has not yet been agreed upon. Before making the final proposals, the Committee has met with the Student Association Executive Committee, and will continue to do. It is now studying the Constitution of the Student Association, the regulations in the back of the UVM Date Book, and good working student governments in other colleges and universities -- mainly, West Point, Middlebury College, and the Universities of Virginia and North Carolina.

The Committee will welcome any suggestions which could help it in reaching its goal -- that of giving the students a right to have a voice in the regulations governing their college life.

...ents and the committee is petitioning the administration for an equitable increase in the rights of students. The students are just asking for a healthier situation; more conducive to the development of mature, stable individuals. To guide is to aid; to supress is to invite revolt. At the present time the administration is inviting radicalism. The seeds of discontent are sewn, perhaps they can be uprooted by understanding and a realistic attitude; or shall they be nurtured to despotism?

We have a new President coming into office. So far he has chuckled off the "squeaks". Around here some people laugh off unpleasant situations; others talk around them and still others aggravate them. We need a man to do a man's job. Someone to face the situation and deal with it intelligently and honestly. Scanning Mr. Fey's background it is obvious that he is fully qualified. He must keep in mind that he is dealing with college men and women and not adolescent rusty gears.

It's strange that a chain of anti-administration reactions should follow so closely upon one another. First the students, then Mr. Leader and now Mr. Davis. Hmmmm, strange, aye, Watson.

Student Assn. Proposes $5 Raise In Fee

by Fred Sharff

In a recent report to the Student Advisory Committee, the Student Association Council requested that permission be grated for a necessary raise of $5 a year in the student activity fee. However, in their consideration, the Student Advisory Committee declined to act on the raise from the now $15 to $20 per year in the fee, until a proposed straw vote concerning the matter was approved by the student body in the March Student Association Council elections.

Representing the Student Association Council's view on this subject, Dave Curtis, Acting Treasurer stated, "The Council realizes the imposition on the part of the students by raising the activity fees, however, in the long run, the students themselves will benefit by the proposed increase."

The various organizations on campus are in need of money, otherwise their essential projects will diminish. Last spring's requested allocations from various U.V.M. organizations totaled $55,000, because of the rise in the material and operating costs. The Student Association Council was only able to meet the budget requests a little more than half way, approximately $37,000, due to the "low" activity fee.

According to Curtis, it is apparent that only with student insight of this problem and complete cooperation for a student activity fee raise, that a high of $52,000 could be reached, giving the separate U.V.M. organizations new economical strength.

Vermont thus agreed to team with the other state universities of New England in giving professional education to New England students.

Out-of-state students at the University will pay the same tuition as Vermont students. Out-of-state residents of Vermont will receive additional professional and graduate training in specialized courses offered but not available at the University of Vermont.

The plan formulated with the support and assistance of the New England Board of Higher Education, does not apply to the residents of the states of other parts of programs at the most modern, efficient, specialized staff and facilities in each state.

Each of the participating universities, the University of Connecticut, Maine, Massachusetts, New Hampshire, Rhode Island and Vermont - has to add graduate study if its programs are to be offered on a regional basis. If a program is the only one of its kind offered at a New England state university, it may be designated "regional" for students from all the other New England states.

If a program is offered at several New England states, but not all, it may be "regional" for students from those states which do not offer such a program.

Qualified students from Vermont will receive admission preference and in-state tuition benefits in the following courses:

Campus-to-Career Case History

Roy Vaughn Getts discusses a central office power installation with Switchman R.F. Heider.

"I like (and get) 'start-to-finish' engineering assignments"

"When it comes to making a job interesting, I think the assignments a man gets are more important than the size of the project he's working on," says Roy Vaughn of Illinois Bell Telephone Company. "I found that out soon after I graduated. My first job was with an organization where the projects were big, but the individual engineering assignments lacked variety and scope.

"After this experience I looked over power engineering opportunities in a number of companies. I joined Illinois Bell because it promised the most interesting and challenging work. That was three years ago. My work with IBT has [illegible] that I was looking for.

"My job is to engineer the power requirements for telephone central offices. The work never gets routine. One job may be for a new building, the next for expanding existing plant. And power needs vary tremendously from little rural dial offices serving a few hundred telephones, to big metropolitan telephone plants serving hundreds of thousands.

"But what I like best is that I generally handle the job from start to finish. I determine the operational and emergency power requirements of the facilities to be served, and order the equipment needed. And I'm usually on hand during installation to see the job through.

"Not only does this kind of engineering assignment keep work interesting, but I find it is helping me become a better manager. And that improves my chances for advancement."

Roy L. Vaughn, Jr., graduated from Illinois Institute of Technology in 1954 with a B.S. in E.E. degree. Coach Ralph LaPointe Tells Of His Major League Experiences

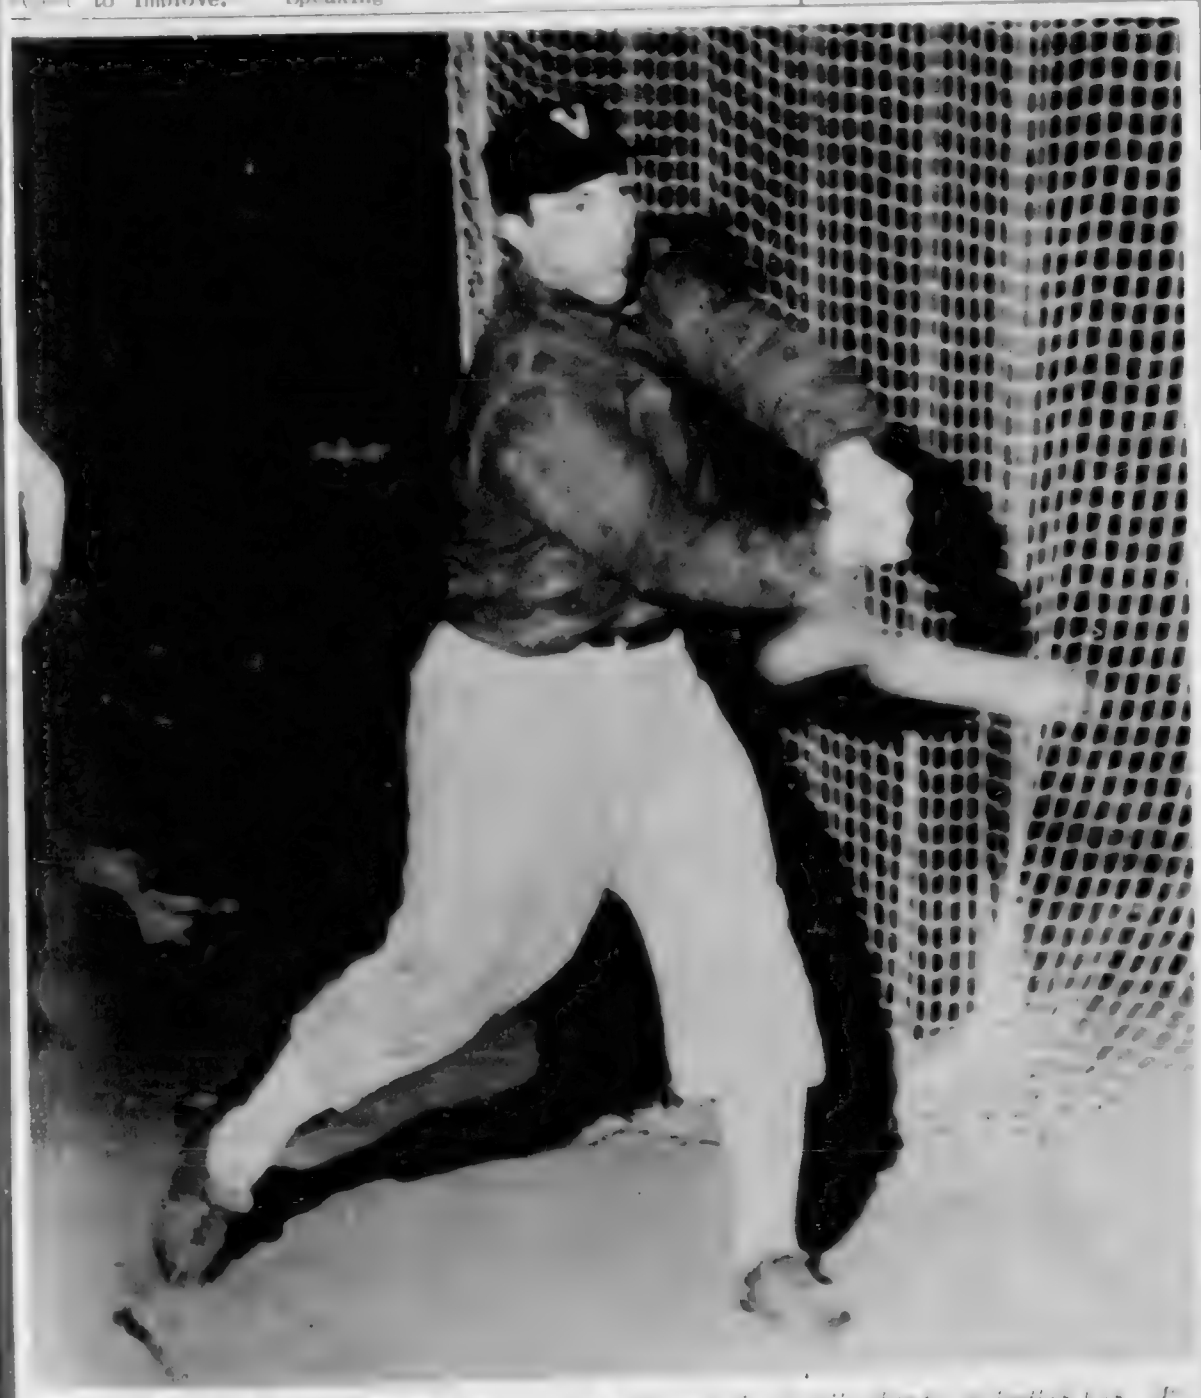
by DAVE WINER

Baseball Coach Ralph Lapointe is a 1950 graduate of the University of Vermont with a degree in education. His college career had been momentarily interrupted when Uncle Sam called him to three years of active duty with the U.S. Army. Ralph was active in various sports while at UVM, but played only Freshman baseball due to the interruption. Sports were forgotten in the army except for some baseball when time would allow.



Since his discharge from the army, Ralph has almost continually played ball with one team or another. He spent two years in the major leagues, one with the Philadelphia Phillies and the other with the St. Louis Cardinals. Ralph was also in the International League for four years, the Texas League for one, and played semi-professional ball in Canada from 1952 until 1954. He spent the 1955 season with the Burlington Athletics before deciding to give up playing and stick to coaching.

In 1947 he played one month with Baltimore while it was still in the minor leagues and then was called up to the Phillies where he played out the remainder of the season as a utility infielder and batted an impressive .307. During this year, Lapointe came close to hitting for the cycle at Pittsburg one day with a single, two doubles, and a home run. Coach Lapointe remarked that one very interesting incident occurred in a scheduled game with the Brooklyn Dodgers. It was the very beginning of the season and Jackie Robinson was about to make his debut as the first Negro baseball player in the major leagues. Ralph recalls that there were quite a few hours of deliberation before it was agreed that Robinson would play and the game got under way on time.

I guess you would say the Sophomore jinx hit Ralph in 1948 while he was with the St. Louis Cardinals. It was the year that the Cardinals and the Braves fought down to the wire for the National League pennant and the Braves finally captured it. Lapointe's batting average dropped to .223 but, though in a slump, he did not lose his spirit. When beaned one day by a wild pitch, he refused relief and remained in the game. He was particularly known for his ability to steal bases against National League pitchers and feels that speed was his biggest asset in baseball.

Ralph's most exciting experience in professional baseball was his first year in spring training. The thrill of competing against other rookies for a position on the team places great strain on a ball player, and he found himself one of thirteen trying for shortstop.

In the International League, Ralph played with Rochester, Baltimore, and Toronto, and in 1951 he was with Tulsa in the Texas League. He was out of action for quite a while in Texas after tearing ligaments in his knee, and this was one of the deciding factors in his retirement from professional baseball.

THE SPECTATOR
BY JERRY HELLER

Last Saturday I had the great honor and privilege of being present at the Trustees meeting when the official vote was taken for the selection of the seventeenth president of the University of Vermont. This was a thrilling experience and was only surpassed in my opportunity to be present and participate in the first press conference that the new president, John T. Fey presided over. As sports editor I naturally was anxious to find out Mr. Fey's opinion on sports at U.V.M. I was very pleased with the impression that I received of not only the man but his views on athletics.

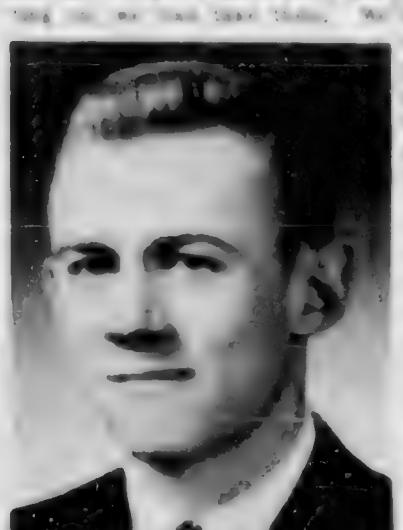
Mr. Fey is very much in favor of an inter-collegiate sports program. He considers this integral part of the college education. He feels that UVM's sports program could be expanded but is definitely not in favor of deemphasizing inter-collegiate athletics. The new president said that he recognized the needs of the athletic department for a new gym and field house and stated that these projects will hold high priority in the development program. He is in favor of scholarships for athletes if they can meet the academic standards of the university. Mr. Fey stated he didn't feel that you have to lower academic standards to have a good football team." He used for an example of a scholastic athlete, Eddie LeBaron, the All American football player who attended the College of the Pacific and was Phi Beta Kappa.

As an undergraduate at Washington and Lee University, Mr. Fey participated in such sports as track, wrestling, and played freshman football. He is enthusiastic about the possibilities of learning how to ski in our wintry country.

The new president is a youthful and interesting person. His accomplishments are very impressive and I'm sure that he will be instrumental in improving sports at UVM. This university is very privileged to have such a distinguished and outstanding personality as John T. Fey as president.

Netmen Forecast Winning Season

by PAUL STANTON



The varsity has a very good chance for a winning season. The boys are both enthusiastic and ambitious and we hope to exceed last year's Yankee Conference performance." These were the words of Tennis Coach Fred Wagner at the conclusion of last year's [illegible] Last year the Catamounts finished with a 6-6 win-loss record and finished seventh in the Yankee Conference behind Maine, in fifth place. Maine, the champ, had 7 Yankee Conference victories and was beaten by Rhode Island, the 1955 champ, 5-4. Vermont's team was a very good balance of hitting, fielding and pitching. Coach Wagner was also pleased with the performance of the freshmen on the team.

Coach Wagner has a very tough schedule this year. Middlebury twice, once before and once after the Y meet, and our perennial rivals the Panthers will no doubt preview our Yankee Conference opposition. Last year we lost both matches to Middlebury although all individual matches were close, and we hope to improve on this record."

The Yankee Conference is operated in a very strange fashion. Each school selects six singles players and three doubles teams and then the championship tournament begins. One point is awarded for each match victory and it is possible for a school winning two matches, although not probable. The University of New Hampshire will host this year's championship tournament on May 4-5 at Durham.

Middlebury College, the defending conference champion, has a very strong team returning this year. Dave Hansen, captain of last year's team, Dave Fraser, Bill Fraser and Jack Bennett. The rest of the members of Dave Hansen's championship squad graduated with Hansen. Middlebury will host [illegible] away for another year, and, with Spring and the ground looking almost impossible for a game of baseball, baseballs still have found their way into the cages with Coach Ralph Lapointe and his cold [illegible]. Since February 24, the Cats have been [illegible] two to three hours [illegible] Practices to this Feb. 29. Coach Lapointe [illegible] limbering up for the Southern trip which they open against Upsala on April 2. This is an appropriate time to introduce to you the pitching and receiving staff that will make up the 1956 Vermont battery.

The first chucker is a lanky junior from Enosburg Falls, Vt., Ross Artus. Ross played a major part of his earlier baseball at Tilton Prep (New Hampshire) where he also participated in football and basketball. In 1955, after a [illegible] in the US Navy and a year at Duke University, Ross transferred to UVM and has been a mainstay in the Cats pitching ever since. His future plans are in retail business and his prediction for Vermont in the Yankee Conference — 1st place.

Another Vermonter, from Alburg, is junior Karl Ashline. Karl played baseball and basketball in high school, and has also been playing summer ball for [illegible]burg, Que., and Richmond, Vt., in a border league. His favorite pitch is a curve which he has used to good advantage in his career. In Liberal Arts, Karl plans to coach after leaving UVM.

Another big right-hander on the pitching staff is Carl Carlson, a junior from Clifton, New Jersey. Playing no Freshman baseball, Carl came along fast last year and earned a place on this year's squad. For two summers Carl has played in the North Jersey League, which has greatly aided him. A zoology major, Carl is undecided about the future (possibly Veterinarian school) except for one thing — Vermont first in Y.C.

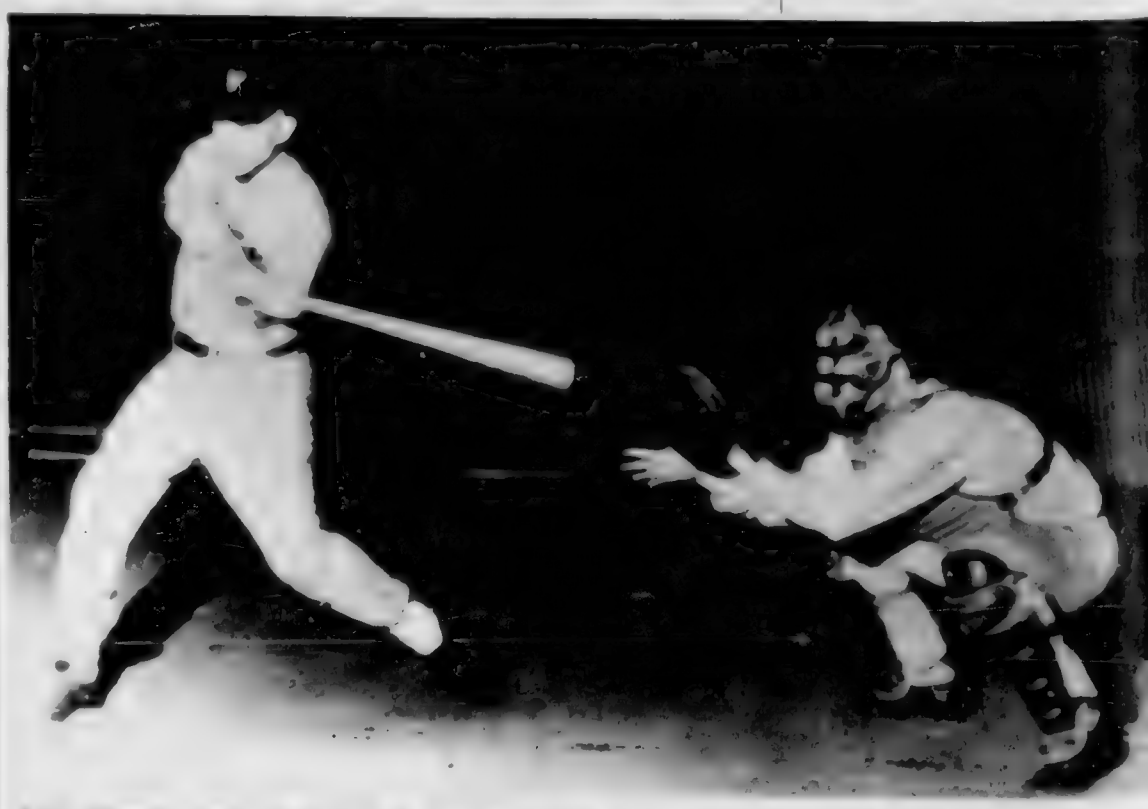
Bob Chapman played his high school ball for BFA of Fairfax, [illegible], where he also participated [illegible] Bob is back for his [illegible] year after completing his military obligation in the U.S. Army. He has played two [illegible] more of baseball in the Connecticut Park League. His most effective pitch in his fast ball. A junior in pre-dentistry, Bob has an "optimistic outlook" for the Catamounts this season.

One of the two left-handers on the staff this year is Steve Cooper, a sophomore from Manchester, Conn. Cooper was interested last year in Freshman competition and hopes to break into a starting berth on the varsity. The last two summers Steve has played in an Industrial League in Hartford, Conn., and added if he had the chance to go further in baseball he would take it. He is a pre-med student and predicts a first place for the Cats in the Y.C.

Another soph with a lot of promise is Bob Flance from Manhassett, Long Island, N.Y. As a frosh, Bob played basketball, baseball, and football. This year he participated in football besides baseball. Bob's pet pitch is a curve ball, which he used to good advantage last year, losing only one game. In Commerce and Economics, he is undecided about the future.

The only pitcher who is a senior on this year's squad is Russ Henrichs, from College Point, N.Y. This husky English major will be carrying much of the pitching load for the Cats this season. Russ has been the victim of many one-run losses such as his three-hitter against Dartmouth last year which he lost 2-1, but with his mound savvy, he's really tough in the clutch. A member of the GOLD KEY and KEY AND SERPENT, Russ plans to sign up for a career in baseball in June.

The third soph chucker is Marty Katz from Hicksville, Long Island, N.Y. In high school Marty played baseball, basketball, and football. Continuing in college, he was on the varsity basketball squad and now baseball. Marty's favorite pitch is a knuckle ball. He is an English major and predicts a first for UVM in the Yankee Conference.



The other southpaw on the staff, a junior from Bro[illegible], N.Y., is Bet Koones. In [illegible] Bob played baseball a[illegible] but has devoted all [illegible] baseball in college. [illegible] that the southern tri[illegible] UVM in the swing of [illegible] they will take a first [illegible] The future is undecided [illegible] case, but he'd like to give base[illegible]ball a try, possibly in the [illegible]ds field.

Another boy who might [illegible]ed upon to throw is Chuck [illegible] a letter from Meriden Conn. [illegible] usually plays second [illegible] the Cats, but he stays [illegible] in case. The last three summ[illegible] he has played ball for the [illegible]den Knights. Chuck is [illegible] about the future and see[illegible]bilities in the Economics [illegible] or baseball. He predicts [illegible] first in Y.C.

The first of UVM's [illegible]chers is Bob Davis from [illegible]ville, N.Y. This hustling [illegible] participated in X-country [illegible] baseball in high school, [illegible]ing his baseball into [illegible] Bob has played three [illegible] with the Fulton County [illegible] and one summer with the [illegible]dam Collegians, and predicts [illegible] Vermont will take the Y.C.

Don Santa Crose, a junior [illegible] Staten Island, N.Y., rounds [illegible] the catching staff. "Ace" [illegible]cipated in football and [illegible] in high school, and has [illegible] three summers of ball [illegible] Murphy A M League (NY). [illegible] feels that the Cats have [illegible] knit squad because the veterans help out the younger ball-players in such things as hitting. [illegible]ning to go into the hotel business, Don said that he would like to try baseball if he had the chance, and for the near future he sees UVM 1st in Y.C.

Coach Lapointe stated that this year's ball club is about the same as last year's team, losing only a few men. This year the Cats have a full Yankee Conference schedule for the first time. Vermont was 5-1 in the Yankee Conference last year, but didn't play the required number of games (eight). They have [illegible] good speed on the bases, which should give the opposition plenty of trouble. They also have [illegible] good soph chuckers who'll be around for a couple of years.

Four Elected To Phi Beta Kappa

By Linda Sack

Three juniors and a senior have recently been elected into the UVM chapter of Phi Beta Kappa. Lola A. Foster, Shirley C. Long, Robert J. Ouellette, and Lewis Slater were initiated into the Alpha chapter Tuesday evening, March 13, at 8:00 p.m., in the faculty lounge. Professor Malcolm Daggett of the Romance Language department and president of the organization, presided.

Membership in this national scholastic honorary society is based primarily on high academic standards. To be eligible, one must have at least 3/4 of his studies in the liberal arts or non-technical subjects. Requirements for a junior are much higher than for a senior since there are two more opportunities in the senior year to be admitted - at the end of first semester and at graduation. This is the first election from the Class of '59. However, there is one more opportunity for the present seniors to be considered.

Lewis Slater, the only senior elected at this time, is from Flushing, New York. Enrolled in the College of Arts and Science, he is a chemistry major. In the fall he will enter the UVM Medical School. During his four years, Lew has participated in varsity track.

Lola Foster, from Hardwick, Vermont, is a future secondary education teacher in the College of Education and Nursing. In three years, Lola has been active in many organizations. She was treasurer of Alpha Lambda Delta and Kappa Delta Pi, the honorary society for education majors. She was a member of Spinsters Ariden last year and this year belongs to Staff and Gondal. 45 Piece Orchestra Offers Thrilling Finish To This Year's Series

by Helen Marcus

On Saturday, March 22, 1958, Mantovani and his 45 piece orchestra, will appear at 8:30 P.M. at Memorial Auditorium. His appearance will by the last of the Lane Artist Series for the year. Mantovani calls himself the "master of the tumbling strings" and has fascinated many with his "New Music."

He is currently here from England for his third American tour. Indeed, his success here, and in England, has been somewhat "phenomenal." "Green Sleeves," is his most famous selection, and each evening, at midnight, it introduces "Music Through the Night" on the National Broadcasting Company stations. "Charmaine" has become Mantovani's theme song and he composed "Cara Mia" for David Whitfield. He has won wide acclaim, as evidenced by the popularity of his recordings. Bailey's Music Store has said that every fifth record sold is a Mantovani recording. He is not just a conductor but an energetic and dynamic showman, a musical personality.

The enthusiasm for Mantovani's lilting arrangements spread first to England, then throughout the United Kingdom and on to the Continent, where he is especially admired in Germany, to which he took his orchestra in person for a sensationally successful tour by air in 1954. Mantovani and his music are also familiar to the film-going public. Before the war he provided the musical background and arrangements for many films. He limits his television appearances to some half-dozen skillfully produced half hour shows a year, on the premise that "Television is the greatest medium in the world for making and breaking you." Mantovani is interested in the success of his popular and semi-popular airs, but his new music, all of which he has made himself in the past three years, he is modestly proud of the fact that almost anybody with half an ear can on first hearing spot one of his distinctive recordings, with its sharp emphasis on the melody as performed by the string section.

This great musician was born in Venice, but later moved to England. Despite his father having been a musician, he tried to dissuade his son from a career of music. At the age of 16 Mantovani performed in public. At 18 he had his own orchestra and at 21 was performing in one of London's most fashionable hotels. He then turned to the theatre and became Noel Coward's musical director. Afterwards he began his succession of background scores for British films. It was London "Life" Records that really introduced him to the world. His first album was "Waltzing with Mantovani" which displayed the string tones by which he is so well known.

For his appearance on the Lane Series, Mantovani and his orchestra will play:

Our State University

Since the State University is receiving [illegible] this is a good time to review matters there. But we must view [illegible] against a general background but as the [illegible] at the University are due to local causes.

What colleges [illegible] America's anti-intellectual [illegible] about one in a thousand more than it does [illegible]. By tolerate a [illegible] of the [illegible] and reward [illegible] of [illegible] has made [illegible] Activity [illegible] fraternities [illegible] and [illegible] spirit is usually more important than high grades for future success. A college degree has become a status symbol, a [illegible] and admitting to the great middle class. From this angle [illegible] state fits our society very well.

Our society is dynamic, but education here has ministered [illegible] status of static, [illegible] compartments. Education [illegible] suffers from excessive departmentalism. Many students sense the artificial nature of their studies, and [illegible] interest. Indeed, the split between education and life seems to go back to the first grade where education, [illegible] and alternating work-activity periods in a few [illegible] or experimental colleges have helped. But an AB degree from the average academic mill too often stands for Academic Baloney.

Public schools and colleges suffer from financial starvation and the outmoded boundaries of States and Localities. Education facilities have fallen behind the growth of population and national income, as a result of the depressions 30s, the war 40s, and the student increase of the 50s. One reason why academic standards are so low at the State University is the poor preparation of many students from small-town schools. Immense Federal funds and administrative streamlining are needed to rebuild our [illegible] system and to raise standards all along the line.

Founded in 1791, the College at Burlington has been a marginal institution from the first. Its early decades were marked by financial crises, a disastrous fire, poor management. The last drive crisis was in 1940. In 1872 the Springfield REPUBLICAN described Vermont as "the Micawber of colleges, always poor, always waiting for something to turn up."

Times are better now. Since 1945, Vt. enrollments, faculty and plant have grown. Only the Medical School, however, is of good quality. The spirit of the rest of the University may perhaps be inferred from the inert persistence of its archaic Latin nickname, UVM.

In public relations and in finances the Borgmann regime (1952-58) has been a great success. It has continued the building program begun in 1945. It has won ever larger State subsidiaries, which have raised the percent of Vermont young people going to college.

But in other ways the regime has missed the boat. One of these is the Novicoff case. This medical professor, a nationally known cancer researcher, was fired in 1953 for invoking the 5th amendment. For this flagrant violation of academic freedom, the University Administration now faces a richly deserved censure by the American Association of University Professors.

This case reflects the anti-intellectual bias of America, its intolerance of dissent. The chief loser in the purges is not the victims, though most suffered greatly, and also unjustly, the Supreme Court has since ruled. The chief loser is the nation which thereby wasted talent and saddled itself with self-defeating conformity. Even when mounting foreign and domestic crises reveal the need for experiment.

One of the few purge victims able to stay in the field, Novicoff, was in the news recently for an important cancer discovery.

Little or nothing has been done to raise the academic level of the University's undergraduate colleges. Needed above all is a set of Deans who will supply real leadership to their Schools.

I once served on the admissions committee of a small college. When an applicant failed to qualify for admission, the standard joke of the other committee members was, "Let that one apply to Vt." Such is the insularity of the Vt. campus, however, that few staff members realize their reputation.

There are serious gaps and imbalances in the Arts program. There are no courses in Russian, Far East studies, history of science, or general education. Economics is lopsided with business courses. Ten people teach government, where 4 or 5 would be normal. Only 1 teaches sociology. There is a surplus of snap courses with easy multiple-choice exams. The graduate program outside the Medical School is something of a paper tiger.

The Vt. authorities seem to want full classes and happy students. Must they seek them at the cost of academic standards?

Goddard College, with but a fraction of Vt.'s resources, does a better educational job. And at St. Michael's there is probably more bustle and more concern for raising standards—and perhaps less insularity—than at Vt. which hardly admits that St. Michael's exists.

The best Vt. students are as good as the best students anywhere. But they are too little challenged by their work. Fraternities and sororities, which mainly serve

Leader's Case Reviewed

By Shelly Weiner

Approximately two weeks ago, Mr. Herbert Leader was released from his duties as a member of the Billings Library staff. Mr. Leader had been on the library roster for about eighteen months.

Following this act, two varying opinions circulated about the UVM campus as to the reasons for Mr. Leader's dismissal. Leader himself maintains that he was fired for his outside interests. He had been actively opposed to the March of Dimes fund raising campaign by the children of the Burlington public schools. Because it was his belief that this practice resulted in the exploitation of the pupils.

When Mr. Morrison C. Haviland, director of the library, was asked about the causes for Mr. Leader's dismissal he replied, "for professional reasons only." Mr. Haviland did not wish to comment further on the matter.

On March 6, upon learning of his release, Mr. Leader appealed to President Borgmann to hold a hearing to investigate the circumstances leading to his removal. Under UVM regulations there are no provisions for a hearing on the dismissal of a Class 2 employee, such as Mr. Leader. However, ignoring the customary procedure, President Borgmann met with Messrs. Leader and Haviland in the presence of two members of the library committee. After this meeting Dr. Borgmann reaffirmed that Leader had been released for professional reasons only.

In a private conference with this reporter, Dr. Borgmann once again maintained, that Leader was released purely for his failure to meet with the necessary standards as an employee of the Library staff and not for any other outside interests.

I am quite sure that many will disagree with the actions of the UVM administration concerning Mr. Herbert Leader's dismissal. Many will feel that this latest development is directly related to the recent internal upheavals at UVM. It has even been rumored that pressure was brought to bear on Mr. Leader by residents of Burlington for his recent campaigns. This rumor, in my estimation, is utterly lacking in evidence. We often like to cast ourselves in the role of champions of the oppressed. We can hardly say why we do this we just say "it makes us feel good". This should not be "Banned books" are the subject of a current display at the Billings Library at the University of Vermont.

The display is in conjunction with National Library Week March 16-22, and will exhibit some of the more familiar books which at some time have been banned, censored, or criticized.

Following are some books which will be exhibited and the reasons for their criticism.

Hans Christian Andersen's "Fairy Tales" was barred in Russia during the reign of Nicholas I because the tales tended to glorify princes and princesses.

"Alice's Adventures in Wonderland" by Lewis Carroll was forbidden in China in 1911 on the grounds that "animals should not use human languages and that it was disastrous to put animals and human beings on the same level."

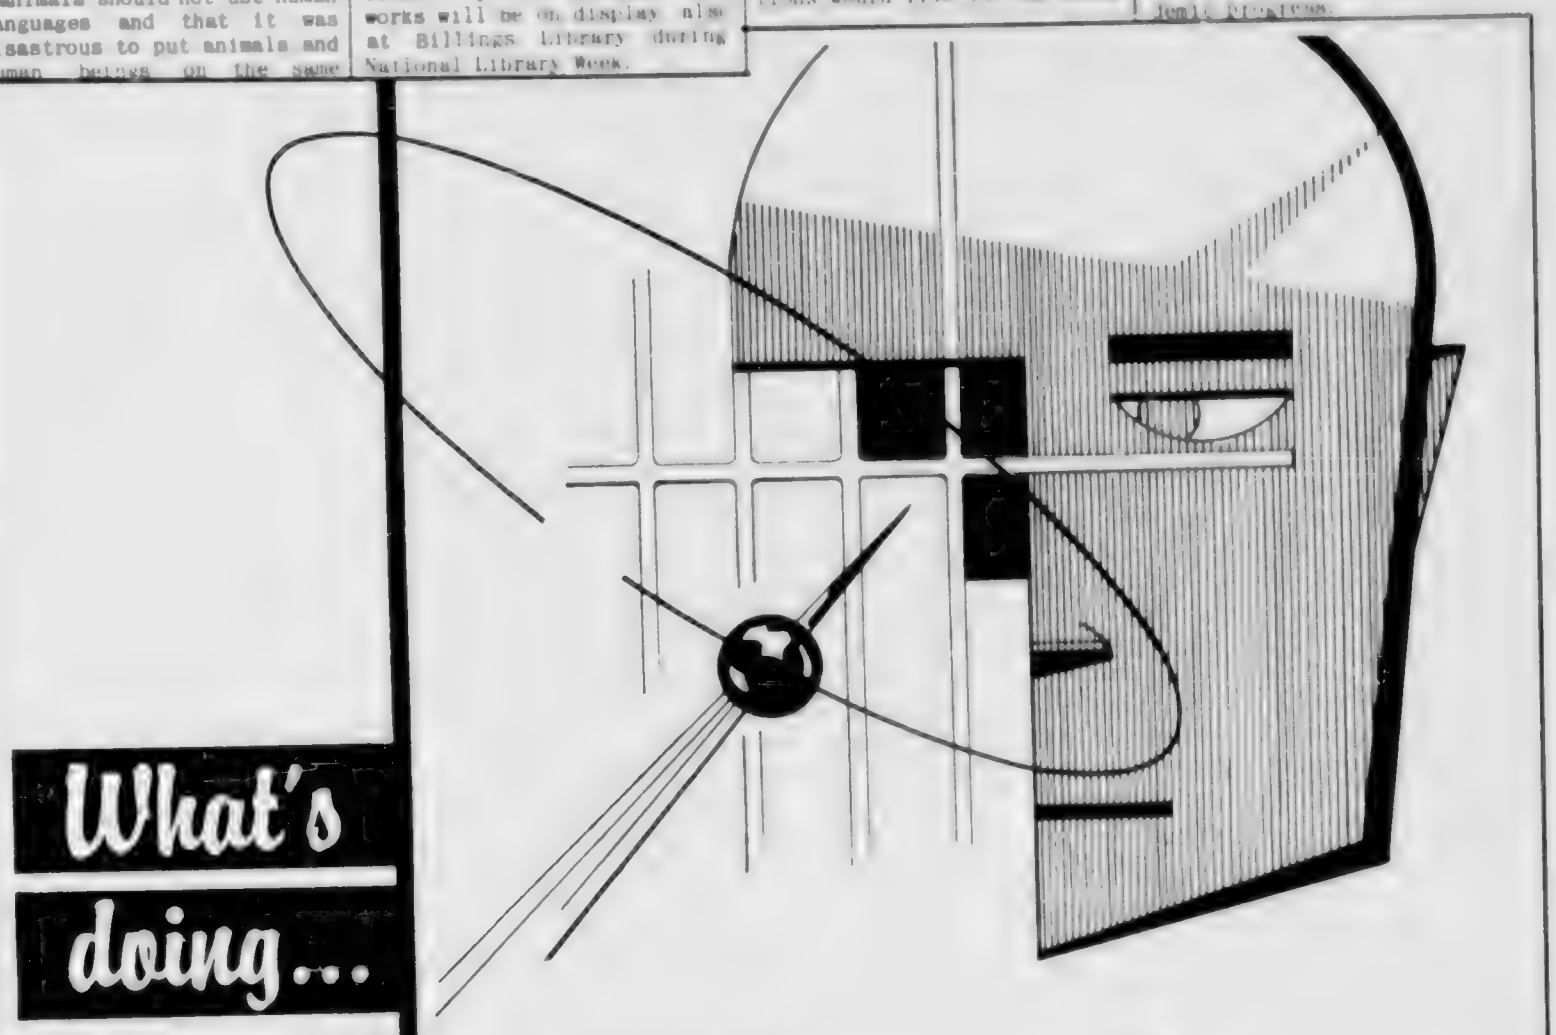
In 1953 a citizen in Indianapolis requested that all volumes of "Robin Hood" be withdrawn from the schools since the work tended to support Communism.

"The Adventures of Huckleberry Finn" by Mark Twain was censored by his own wife, who removed many of the original passages and cut out some profanity.

Theodore Dreiser's wife did the same thing with "Sister Carrie," and even forced her husband to withdraw many of the copies from publication.

Other works which have been banned at some time include "Richard II" by William Shakespeare; "The Rights of Man" by Thomas Paine, Jonathan Swift's "Gulliver's Travels"; and "Leaves of Grass" by Walt Whitman. The works will be on display also at Billings Library during National Library Week.

Dormitory Counselor Positions



By Dave Colburn

Dean of Men Earle Clifford has announced that any male students interested in a dormitory counselor job for the 1958-59 academic year should make application before March 24. Application forms may be obtained from the Dean of Men's office. After submitting these forms the student should make an appointment either with Dean Clifford, Dean Mosher, or Prof. Malcolm Severance for the initial interview.

There are 15 openings for positions four as head counselors and eleven as counselors. Head counselors receive room, board, and $500.00 for the year. Floor counselors, room, board, and $250.00.

Those obtaining these positions would live in the three freshman dorms Wills, Chittenden, and Buckham. They would be responsible for working with students in an effort to resolve personal problems of a social personal or academic nature. They would also be expected to serve as resource aids when a dorm plans a social or group function.

"We are interested," said Dean Clifford, "in a person who is effective in interpersonal relationships and who has had experience as a leader. The person is the fundamental criteria in selection." However, he added that they are also interested in people with a "...relatively sound academic standing..." so that the time involved does not adversely effect their academic progress.

What's doing...

at Pratt & Whitney Aircraft

in the field of Materials Engineering

The development of more advanced, far more powerful aircraft propulsion systems depends to a high degree on the development of new and improved materials and methods of processing them. At Pratt & Whitney Aircraft, the physical, metallurgical, chemical and mechanical properties of many new and exotic materials are studied in minute detail, compared with properties of known materials, then carefully analyzed and evaluated according to their potential usefulness for aircraft propulsion application.

The nuclear physics of reactor materials as well as penetration and effects of radiation on matter are important aspects of the nuclear reactor program. Stress analysis by strain gage and X-ray diffraction is another notable phase of investigation that plays an important part in developing advanced aircraft engine designs.

Development and evaluation of improved high temperature alloys is one of the challenges facing P & W A metallurgists. The materials work in the metallurgical field involves studies of corrosion resistance, high temperature mechanical and physical properties of metals and alloys, and fabrication techniques. Vacuum melting has opened up new horizons, and from the experimental foundry come many new alloys that are cast into test specimens and experimental parts.

Mechanical-testing work delves into design and supervision of test equipment to evaluate fatigue, wear, and elevated-temperature strength of materials. It also involves determination of the influence of part design on these properties. For example, air jets may be used to vibrate a compressor blade at its natural frequency — amplitude being measured with a cathetometer. Similar fatigue tests may use electromagnetic excitation.

In the field of chemistry, investigations are made of fuels, high-temperature lubricants, elastomeric compounds, electrochemical and organic coatings. Inorganic substances must be prepared and their properties determined. Increasing recognition, too, is being given to the importance of investigating the effects of gases on the properties of metals.

While materials engineering assignments, themselves, involve different types of engineering talent, the field is only one of a broadly diversified engineering program at Pratt & Whitney Aircraft. That program — with other far reaching activities in the fields of mechanical design, combustion, instrumentation and aerodynamics — spells out a gratifying future for many of today's engineering students.

The Vermont Cynic
Sour Note

After reading Professor Arthur A. Davis's [illegible] we must disagree with some of his principles. First of all, Mr. Davis chose the method poorly. When one finds fault with the University, this fault should be brought up before the faculty or the trustees. It hurts all of us to see a newspaper outside of our community bring the grievances of a faculty member to the public eye. There are ways to bring out the faults of a university, rather than to plaster it before the public.

We are rated academically low by Professor Davis, but we say it is ridiculous to take a poll of students here at UVM because we have not had the experience of attending other colleges, experience necessary to answer the question to the best of our ability. Therefore, we have to look to other sources for this answer.

The first of these is our new president. He said, "I would not be at this institution if it were not for its high academic standing." This was Mr. Fey's answer when asked about Mr. Davis's remarks. Since he has never been here before, Mr. Fey based his answer solely on our reputation as an institution of higher education, a reputation which has grown for many years.

Another source of evaluation is the success at placing students in positions throughout the United States, a service performed by the office of the Assistant Dean of Men, Bryan Mosher. From Dean Mosher, we learn that our students can compete favorably with other college students for employment. Year after year, the record shows recruiters returning because of the quality of students we have to offer them. Remember these recruiters would not keep returning if our students were poor academically and not capable of living up to expectations. Also, a number of faculty members can tell of letters received from alumni, stating how well they are doing and how their preparation at UVM has helped them in their vocations.

Academically then, we do gain valuable preparation, and with the help of the placement service and Vermont's reputation, our futures can be promising. We are able to compete with other colleges and universities not only in placement, but also in graduate school acceptances. This ability to compete must stem from what we have learned from courses here at UVM and from the faculty that taught us. The individual is the measure of whether a college rates academically high or low. From what we have learned and stated, our University prepares us for the future, a preparation equal to, or surpassing, the other schools which Professor Davis mentioned.

We hope Professor Davis will be happy in his new position, but we are sorry to see him leave on such a sour note. No matter what college one attends, there will always be problems. But with the help of the faculty and students these problems can be solved with the cooperation of all involved.

Milk?

With the present uproar about drinking on, in, or about the UVM campus, I feel compelled to add my two cents concerning a "drinking" situation existing on campus that has, during the past few years, puzzled, irritated, and finally amused this writer.

The drink in question is somewhat less controversial than alcoholic beverages, in that reference is made to the hot chocolate served in the dairy bar that serves as an outlet for some of the products supposedly produced by the fine and modern facilities of the university's dairy plant.

[illegible] it is generally recognized that Vermont is an agricultural and dairy state, in fact, no little publicity has been promulgated over the fact that there are more cows than people in the State. While the question of degree of differentiation used in arriving at this fact, where so many people eat like the cows and vice versa, might be raised, that is another matter.

As such, there is little doubt that The State Agricultural College does, and should have, the utmost in modern facilities for the production and processing of dairy products. However, in a state where there was such a squalling and to-do over the marketing of colored margarine on the grounds that it would hurt the dairy industry, it seems that when such modern methods reach the point where they eliminate the cow, then serious attention should be paid to rectifying the matter.

Should one question that this situation has come to pass, drop over to the dairy bar some fine morning when at peace with the world for a cup of hot chocolate and see what one is served. Not only is the stuff made with hot water, but the final touch comes with the topping, which is the poorest excuse that man has ever developed for whipped cream--canned topping that bears a closer resemblance to cheap shaving cream than it does to anything that ever came from a cow.

It would seem that several courses of action could be taken to meet this matter, either eliminating the topping, if even carrying it so far as to serve real, old fashioned whipped cream, which would not only convince one that he was in a real dairy bar, but would lend further support to that statement and backbone of the Vermont economy, the cow.

I spent an interesting evening last Saturday [illegible] the Liberal Arts Club. The program consisted of four film shorts of the type that aren't likely to be seen at conventional movie theatres. Especially good was one depicting the end of the world. Tomorrow night, an excellent French film, "The Sheep Has Five Legs" starring the inimitable Fernandel is being [illegible] at Dana Museum.

Amid nostalgic tears and fond memories, "[illegible] Your Life", was presented at UVM last weekend.

At the University of Pittsburg a tentative [illegible] to the problem of increasing demand on college [illegible] been presented. The proposed plan is a Trimester program. Each trimester would last about 103 days and the vacation period would be 54 days. The program is designed to reduce the time required of the student and at the same time increase the capacity of the college without increasing physical facilities. Another advantage would be for faculty members now on nine month appointments. They would be able to increase their annual salaries by one-third. The plan seems ideal for Vermont.

Congrats to the men from St. Mike's on a great tourney record. It took a boy from Brooklyn, U.S.A., to finally stop the Michaelmen.

They tried to keep the recent Playboy out of the public eye. However, at the risk of coining a new phrase, "Where there's a will there's a way." This saying of course has many applications.

The economy is still awkwardly stumbling. If it doesn't straighten up soon, I really feel sorry for all of us. I fear that business just overexpanded in the past few years and we're all going to have to sweat it out. It's like eating too much, one gets a tummy ache and has to be satisfied with tea and toast for a while.

Down in beantown there is a place called The Stable. It lies quite close to the Boston Public Library. Herb Pomeroy leads his band there on Tuesday and Thursday and on other nights members of said band play in a less formal manner. Many of you may get to Boston over Easter and a trip to The Stable should be on your list if you are fond of jazz. Herb has his first LP out and it's called Life is a Many-Splendored Gig. It shows the same band you can hear in The Stable under excellent recording conditions. I have been a fan of the Pomeroy outfit since its conception, and it has passed through infancy and childhood and is now in a mature state of development. Not only that, but it's fun to listen to.

I would like to take this opportunity to congratulate a local newspaper on a recent headline. It is in great large headlines and it runs completely across the top of the sports page. A local boy was injured in a recent boxing match. He later died of these injuries. His opponent was charged with poor sportsmanship. The crusading, open-minded newspaper ran their headline as follows: CHARGE NEGRO THREW A SNEAK BLOW. This, I think is a perfect example of how to get in the proper shade of yellow in a paper. The congratulations are in order because the guy who wrote the headline has achieved this so admirably. He has a bright future ahead of him; I understand there is an opening in the publicity department of the Governor of Arkansas.

Some great Long Playing records have been issued recently. In particular, the Jonah Jones outfit playing music from Broadway and a new Ken Nordine album called Son of Word Jazz which is in the tradition of the best seller Word Jazz. You Nordinecophiles will really dig this one up. Nordine delves into the conscious, the unconscious and points between with interesting and [illegible] results. I like Bubble Gum.

Another notable album is Ella Fitzgerald Sings the Duke Ellington Song Book. This consists of four LP's and comes in two volumes which may be purchased separately.

Davis Issue Evaluated

By Judith White

The [illegible] which has swept the UVM campus these few weeks has quieted down somewhat, but a new outburst from the faculty has arisen. Prof. Arthur E. Davis, whose criticism of the university appeared in the Swanton Courier, did not have his teaching contract renewed and there is little doubt that his desire for reform is, in part, responsible for his dismissal.

Briefly, Prof. Davis objects to the low academic level of the undergraduate schools, the "serious gaps and imbalances" in the Arts program, the paternalism and authoritarianism displayed by the administration, and the financial priority extended to certain less essential areas within the university.

Prof. Davis believes that the necessary reforms are primarily the responsibility of the academic deans who must assume a "fresh administrative attitude." As for the imbalances of curriculum, he cites the sociology "department" as an example. In fact, the sociology division cannot be termed a department since Prof. Davis is the only instructor of the nine courses given. Sociology is merely one of the five subdivisions bracketed under the department of philosophy. He attributes this serious understaffing to financial reasons, but also to the priority given to the fields less important than the university's deficient library or the sparsely staffed departments.

As to the insinuation that the professor wrote his article as a means of retaliation, it should be made clear that it was conceived of six months before he received notice of his dismissal. He is a monthly contributor to the Courier.

Formerly holding positions at Harvard, Union College, Columbia, University of Pennsylvania, and Vassar, Dr. Davis objected to the Burlington Free Press' treatment of his criticisms because it unfairly omitted the praise he did give to the University's building programs and public relations.

According to Dr. Davis, who has been teaching at UVM for 2 1/2 years, he is leaving because the administration considers him "out of line" and because he "cannot see eye to eye with the methods and standards of teaching."

Sports Day

On Saturday, March 22 at Skidmore, a sports playday will be held. Students of UVM and other colleges in this area will send representatives to participate in the various proceedings to be held.

Among the sports which will be played are basketball, bowling, and archery for which each school sends a team. Linda Bowman is in charge of the project for UVM.

World News Highlights

by Joan Hahn

For those great students too busy to read the newspapers

It is the intent of this column to serve you by re-capitulating the news of the week on the international and national scenes.

Indications of the deepening recession:

Unemployment--postwar record of 5.2 million unemployed in Feb.

Steel--a basic material in dozens of industries, so a sharp drop in production means cuts in industrial output.

Business Investment--about $7 billion less will be spent this year on new or enlarged manufacturing plants and equipment. High spending preceeded the recession.

Consumer Buying -- and Personal Income--off due to lack of wages for the unemployed.

Remedies:

Increased Federal Spending --but the big question is how much--and for what? The possibilities--housing, defense, farms, and highways.

There definitely will be a tax cut unless employment and retail sales pick up more than seasonally during March. The Administration is thinking in terms of more than a $6 billion reduction, mainly in the rates paid by the individual taxpayer.

Summit Conference:

The U.S. "price of admission" to a summit conference as set by Secretary of State John Foster Dulles, will be agreement by the Russians to discuss these three issues:

1. Unification of Germany
2. Political conditions in the Reds' European satellites
3. Nuclear disarmament under as foolproof an inspection plan as can be devised.

The nuclear question promises to be the big one.

Ike and Nixon

President Eisenhower announced the Vice President Nixon "would act as President during any periods in which the Chief Executive was unable to exercise his "powers and duties", has been the natural outgrowth of several factors--the President's health, his personal trust in the loyalty and capacity of Nixon to publicly perform the duty of the President's constitutional heir, and the [illegible] leader of the Administration, and the failure of the Constitution to specify when, how, and by whom shall be certified the inability of a President to exercise his powers and duties and the termination of that period.

Cuba

A revolt, led by Fidel Castro Ruiz against the dictatorship of Batista, has been gaining followers because of the regime's [illegible] and the torturing and murdering of prisoners. All liberties have been suspended, but Batista intends to go ahead with the presidential election--but how can you have a free vote with liberties suspended?

War in Indonesia

Civil War broke out last Tuesday between the Central Government led by President Sukerno, a nationalist who has been openly collaborating with the Communists, and the revolutionary Government led Sjafruddin Prawiranegara who is staunchly anti-Communist. The prime objective of the moment: the rich oil fields.

War in Algeria

Premier Felix Gaillard of France is being pressured into a tougher and costlier policy in Algeria. Fighting to save his shaky coalition from collapse, Gaillard last week yielded to right wing demands for more troops to send more troops to Algeria. Many Frenchmen believe that only Gen. Charles de Gaulle can end the agony of the Algerian war and bring political order to France. He is awaiting the call to lead.

[illegible] is also [illegible] trying to be friends with Europe and the Greek of her enemies in Africa and Asia.

SEATO

The South East Asia Treaty Organization met and agreed that the danger of Communist military aggression is still serious, but the spread of Communist subversion is now greater than military threat --especially Korea, China and Vietnam.

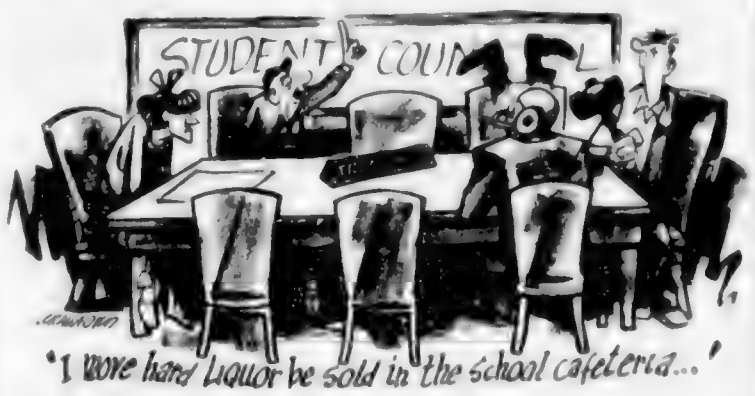
THE STUDENT COUNCIL AND HOW IT GREW



Today let us investigate a phenomenon of American college life laughingly called the student council.

What actually goes on at student council meetings? To answer this burning question, let us reproduce here the minutes of a typical meeting of a typical student council.

WRUV Executes New Expansion Program

This year WRUV, the Radio Station of the University of Vermont, has undertaken a program of expansion which will enable it to provide better coverage for more radio listeners. Three new transmitters (boosting the original number of two to five) of the latest design have been installed and are now operating. This equipment was designed by a Burlington General Electric technician. In addition, a new tape machine has been ordered and the construction of a new studio in the WRUV building is planned for the near future.

Growing and changing every day, WRUV, which is advised by Dr. William J. Lewis, now has transmitters in the following dorms which provide coverage for dorms, sorority, and fraternity houses in their areas: Buckham, Mason, Coolidge, and Acacia. Soon Sigma Phi Epsilon will also have a transmitter. Next year, the radio station hopes to install a transmitter in the dorms at Trinity College.

At the present time, WRUV, together with Trinity, St. Mike's, Middlebury, and the University of New Hampshire, has formed a college radio network which shares programs and advertising. WRUV has a direct wire with St. Mike's and sends tapes to the other members. Representatives from all the above colleges will constitute an executive board for the network and will be an advisory group. In the spring, a network banquet is to be held at which time, staff members from each school will have an opportunity to meet. Two of the daytime programs which are sent to and from the various stations include "Purple Serenade" fed to UVM by St. Mike's on Monday, Wednesday, and Friday from 10:30 to 11; and "Jazz from Studio C" fed to St. Mike's by UVM on Monday, Wednesday and Friday from 10 to 10:30.

Saturday night programs on WRUV were first started last semester and run from 1 until 3 P.M. Other hours include 8 to 9 A.M. Monday through Friday, and 7 to 1 A.M. Sunday through Friday. "Spotlight UVM" is produced through WRUV facilities and is heard over 9 of the 13 radio stations in Vermont. UVM's station has a news service wire from United Press supplied by Teletype service which is supplied by Lucky Strike cigarettes. A direct wire with WJOY, a local radio station is also had.

To undertake such a huge program, many staff workers are needed for the various positions. The station is looking for engineers, traffic personnel, news casters, disk-jockets, announcers, copy writers, record librarians, secretaries, and salesmen. Salesmen are entitled to 10% of whatever they sell in ads. Interested persons may apply at the Radio-TV Center near Pomeroy Hall, extension 369.

Many announcers who started at WRUV have since been employed by the three local radio stations - WJOY, WIDT, and WCAX, also by ABC, NBC, and CBS. Opportunities are unlimited in this expanding field, and will be so for some time to come.

Puzzled couples often ask us
Why is one diamond more beautiful than another?

To determine the true beauty of a diamond you must consider three vital factors. These important factors affect its brilliance and fire, yet none are evident to the naked eye. Our scientific instruments quickly and accurately reveal them to the trained jeweler.

They are 1. CLARITY (How free of imperfections is the stone?) 2. COLOR (How free of distracting yellowish color?) 3. CUTTING (Is the diamond shaped to bring out its full brilliance?) Then after determining Carat Weight we can assure you of the true beauty and value of your diamond.

Come in and let our knowledge as a Registered Jeweler, American Gem Society work for you when you select your glamorous diamond. Prices from $50 $450 and up

Kellogg Representative Visits UVM

Dr. William A. Fowler, professor of physics at the W. K. Kellogg Radiation Laboratory of the California Institute of Technology, visited the University campus from Wednesday through Friday, (Mar 12 to 14) to give lectures, talk with students, and assist faculty members with curriculum and research problems in physics.

His visit to UVM under the auspices of the American Institute of Physics and the American Association of Physics Teachers as part of a nationwide program to stimulate interest in physics.

Dr. Fowler received the B.S. degree in engineering physics from Ohio State University and Ph.D. from the California Institute of Technology. He has been a member of the Caltech faculty since 1936 and a full professor since 1946.

His research is concerned with the studies of nuclear forces, the structure of light nuclei, the thermonuclear sources of stellar energy, and the element synthesis in stars.

During World War II he worked on development of proximity fuses, rocket ordnance and atomic weapons. He supervised research and development at the Naval Ordnance Test Station at Inyokern and from 1951 to 1952 served as Scientific Director of Project Vista for the Defense Department.

During his stay at UVM, Dr. Fowler was the guest of Professor Nelson L. Walbridge, chairman of the department of physics.

Prof. Walbridge said that Dr. Fowler brought a film entitled "X Minus 80 Days," showing the development of the Caltech satellite "Explorer" and its launching by the U.S. Army.

class distinctions, easily come first. Their chief public project is Kake Walk, competitive male dancing done in blackface. Kake Walk is okay, but blackface in this age of sensitive minority relations is poor taste.

Among the 48 State universities in 1956, Vt. charged the third highest tuition. This might be justified if Vt. students were getting anything like the third-best State university training. But what they are getting rates nearer the lower end of the scale than the upper end.

A slightly ghoulish move is afoot to bring to the University the ashes of John Dewey, as part of the celebration of the 100th anniversary of that famous philosopher and Vt. alumnus. Dewey would be better honored, and Vt. too, by practicing some of his ideas on education.

Vt. needs a revised administrative attitude toward students. Present attitudes are paternalistic and authoritarian. But students behave better if treated like adults. Skills for responsible democracy are acquired by practice, not by edict. If the college officials spent less time in gumshoeing and arbitrary rule-making, education and morality at Vt. would improve.

Vt. needs money, buildings and good public relations. Above all, it needs a new educational policy and a fresh administrative attitude, backed by an awakened public-and-student-opinion and by an alert board of trustees.

Dean Hill's Sugar Party

It's "sugar time" again at the University, and that means one thing - the annual Dean Hills' Sugar Party, to be held this Sunday, (March 23) from 2 to 4 p.m. behind Dean Hills Hall.

The annual event had its beginning in 1933 when it originated as a sugar party and dance at the gymnasium. Later the party was moved to the University's Maple Research Farm in Underhill.

Hot maple syrup is poured on snow, and served with doughnuts and coffee, with the added attraction of sour pickles to sharpen the taste.

The program will include contests of log sawing and rolling pin throwing, and winners will receive prizes.

The party is sponsored by Alpha Zeta, agricultural honorary society, with Freeman Buxton, of Jericho, serving as chairman.

Proceeds from the party go to the Hills Loan Fund, established in the name of the late Dean Joseph L. Hills, who served as dean of the UVM College of Agriculture and Home Economics and director of the agricultural experiment station until his retirement in 1942.

Perhaps this was the time that the Rabbi had chosen to teach a little more of both doctrines, so that the understanding and respect for their ideas would develop.

Track Team Shapes Up As Opener Nears

by BOB GOLDMAN

"This year's track team is like the proverbial snowball, the longer it rolls along, the bigger it gets," stated UVM Track Coach Archie Post in a recent interview. Although the team as a whole has only been practicing for a very short time, the boys are working hard and are shaping up fast. The coach feels that by the onset of the season, the squad will be ready for their seven meet schedule.

Senior pole vaulter Neil Hall has been chosen captain of the squad. Coach Post is expecting a lot from Neil, for he is the only man in the vaulting department this season. Neil will also double on the javelin.

Last year's great prospects in the weight department melted away when Carol Lindroos, a foreign student from Finland, left the University. Another great loss was hammer man Pete Hannah, who transferred to the University of Maine. Working hard at the weights this year are sophomores Jim Willard and Bob Roffman on the shot and discuss, while Dave Schultz, Frank Mather and Al Remick are tossing the hammer.

A sizeable batch of runners have turned out, some of which are expected to pull in many points for the squad. Roy Greene should take points in the sprint along with hard working Art Levison, Danny Bianca, Dick McFarlin, and Dick Spodek.

In the middle and long distance divisions there are two miler Ray Allen, middle distance man Howie Cutts, who earned his letter in cross country last year, John Fiddler in the 880, Frank Harrington in the half mile and mile, and miler Fred Kolstrom. Art Keness, Stan Reiter, Dennie Morse, and Dick Spodek will run the quarter, while Bill Mead along with George Trattell will compete in the half mile. Others in the mile and two mile department are cross country captain Larry Seymour, Danny Mossman and George Trattell.

Hurdlers will consist of letter man Bill Hartigan, Gerry Herlihy, "Red" Meserve, Bob Meshel, and Dick Spodek.

Competing in the broad jump will be Dick McFarlin, "Red" Meserve, and Gerry Mason. Charlie Tetziaff is the only man filling the high jump slot.

A few members of the squad travelled to Union College a few weeks ago for the Second Annual Union Relays. The Coach considered the relays a practice session, because the boys did lack sufficient practice. Even though the team faced ten "well-drilled" opponents, they did take a third in the broad jump and a fourth in the mile relay.

The season will open at home against Bowdoin on April 26, followed on May 3 by a Quadrangular Meet. The season will continue on May 7 at Union, May 10 at Trinity, May 14 Norwich, May 17 Yankee Conference at Durham, and May 21 State Meet at home.

The UVM Outing Club and the Catamount Ski Team will jointly sponsor a giant slalom for the entire University Family, to be held Saturday, March 22 at Stowe, on the Main Street Trail.

There will be five men to a team and only the four best times will count. Individuals will also be permitted to compete in this event. A large perpetual trophy will be presented to the winning team and prizes will also be given to the first three individual winners. Don Wallace, Outing Club President and Sam Miller, Ski Coach are in charge of the event.

The first round of the volley ball competition was completed last week and the final standings were:

LEAGUE A

Kappa Sigma	5-0
Delta Psi	4-1
Sigma Phi	2-3
Sigma Nu	2-3
Sigma Phi Epsilon	2-3
Tau Epsilon Phi	0-5

LEAGUE B

Phi Sigma Delta	6-0
Alpha Tau Omega	5-1
Alpha Epsilon Pi	4-2
Sigma Alpha Epsilon	3-3
Lambda Iota	2-4
Phi Delta Theta	1-5

Phi Delt and TEP have been dropped from their respective leagues after not being able to field a team for the second time. The second round started last week with Phi Sig favored to retain their first round position in League B and a tossup between Kappa Sig and Delt Psi in League A.

The gym is a busy place this week as far as the intramural sports program goes. Early in the week both a handball and a badminton tourney got underway with two teams from each house plus independent teams entered.

Friday and Saturday the I.F.C. track meet will be run. At 4:30 on Friday the 440 yd. run, 35 lb. weight throw, and the running broad jump will take place at the gym.

The relays will be run on March 24, 26, and 31 at 4:30. These events should really prove interesting, especially since so many Traynor points are at stake.

THE 1957-58 BASKETBALL SEASON

We look back on the 1957-58 basketball season and we can say that it was a successful one. The team's final record was 15-10 and they placed second in the Yankee Conference competition.

The team started out with a couple of tough breaks, namely the loss of Charlie Isles and Stan Lefkowitz. This should have knocked the foundation right out from under them but the Cats really came through. They played a full schedule of Yankee Conference games and the largest number of games ever played by a UVM basketball team. Last year we played twenty games and had a record of 15-5. At first glance it would seem that we did far better last year than this, but on closer inspection we find that the extra games, especially those with the University of Connecticut and Rhode Island, made a more difficult season for the team. The fact that the record shows us five games ahead in the win column and the excellent showings against a big time basketball team like UConn makes the season a successful one.

In the category of personal accomplishments we find Captain Clyde Lord on top in average points per game with 18.9. Following Clyde and close on his heels is Bob Kuchar with a 17.0 average which is 1.3 jump from last year for 1958 UVM Most Valuable Player. Frank Giordano averaged 11.0 per game in his first year on the Catamount varsity, Arnie Branch averaged 9.7 in his first full season with the team, and the much improved Bob Gallagher averaged 9.4. Clyde Lord broke the record again which he set last year for total points with 473. Kuchar also broke last year's record with 426 points. Clyde also scored the most points in a single game against Clarkson with thirty-two. Kuchar scored the most field goals in one game with twelve against UConn.

Some of the outstanding events of the season were: Kuchar's phenomenal shooting percentage against UConn, the double overtime at Kake Walk against Clark, the selection of Kuchar for the small college All-East team, the battles to the final buzzer with UConn, the performance of Clyde Lord against Clarkson, the election of Bob Kuchar as Most Valuable Player, and the selection of Coach "Fuzzy" Evans as assistant coach of the New England College Senior All Stars.

You don't need a crystal ball to predict the future of next year's team. There is not one senior on the ball club so this year was just another good year of experience. It meant the maturing of several ball players and a chance for Coach Evans to build a team that will be at peak strength next year. In addition to this, Charlie Isles and Ray Wiener will be returning to the squad and we can look forward to an even more successful season than this year's.

Women Skiers Have Successful Season

by JOHN KIRK

The University of Vermont ski team finished the 1957-58 ski season with two second places and one third in their meets. It was quite unusual that they did so well, as they had only one varsity skier returning from the previous year's team. The team lost, via the cap and gown, Janice Bailey who was a top grade skier. Another blow to the team was the loss of Martha Scott who chose matrimony over competition on the slopes. The one returning member from last year was Mary Cox, a senior in Home Economics from Port Leyden, New York. Miss Cox was the captain of this year's squad. The other members of the team are all freshmen. One of these is Lynda Foley, a nursing student from Burlington. A second member is Pat Freel, a liberal arts major, from Gaylord, Michigan. A third member is Debbie Kieth who is another nursing student from Braintree, Mass. Last but not least is Linda Kittle from Jeffersonville, Vt., who is enrolled in the College of Agriculture.

Midd. Winter Carnival is High Point of Season - - - - - - - - - -

The high point of the season came at Middlebury, Feb. 12-14, the E.I.S.A. championship. Mary Cox beat her sister to capture a first in the slalom. Mary was also second in the combined downhill and slalom. Pat Freel finished fourth in the combined. The slalom team finished second, but the downhill team finished fifth. The final result was victory for the Middlebury "A" team and UVM placed second.

At the McGill Winter Carnival, Feb. 20-21, UVM again finished second. Mary Cox led the team with a second in the slalom and a third in the downhill to finish second in the combined. Pat Freel placed fourth in the downhill and fifth in the combined. The slalom and the downhill teams finished second. Middlebury again took the first place.

The third and last meet of the year was the UVM woman's ski meet at Stowe. At this engagement Pat Freel took first place in both the slalom and the combined. The downhill team finished second and the slalom team placed third. Middlebury was first in the meet totals, McGill was second, and UVM took a third.

This was a good season for the woman's ski team and they are looking forward to even bigger and better ones.

Faculty Handball

by ALAN SILVERMAN

This year a unique intramural sport has been established on the UVM campus, Faculty Handball. The idea was formulated by Archie T. Post, chairman of the Physical Education department.

The tournament has a nucleus of eight two man teams. Each team plays two out of three twenty-one point games. The teams line up as follows: Ben Murdock and Fuzzy Evans, Sam MacDonald and Bert Wingate, Morris Simon and Lyman Gould, Bob Babcock and Bill Steele, Ralph Lapointe and Earle Clifford, Maj. Nelson and Lt. Davis, Norm Straussburg and Harry Sawyer, and Capt. Johns and Archie Post.

The pre-tournament choice is the team of Capt. Johns and Archie Post. So far they have supported that contention by beating Morris Simon and Lyman Gould. When we interviewed Norm Straussburg about his chances he said, "We are not counted out yet. We expect to meet Capt. Johns and Archie Post in the finals."

The other results that we have to date are: Sam MacDonald and Bert Wingate beat Maj. Nelson and Lt. Davis, Norm Straussburg and Harry Sawyer lost to Ralph Lapointe and Earle Clifford, Bert Murdock and Fuzzy Evans beat Bill Steele and Bob Babcock. The tournament continues throughout this week, with Capt. Johns and Archie Post as the twosome to beat.

No Vacancy at First - - - -

[illegible] first baseman for the [illegible] straight year is Bucky [illegible] Shumway. Bill is a native Vermonter from Saxons River. He attended Vermont Academy where he participated in football, baseball, and basketball. Like [illegible] was football and baseball at UVM. Bill was a standout at fullback last Fall, and [illegible] a real stick for Coach Lapointe in the Spring. In Agriculture and Economics, this [illegible] senior sees no reason why UVM won't take a first in the Yankee Conference.

Zysk, Murphy, and Wood vie for Second

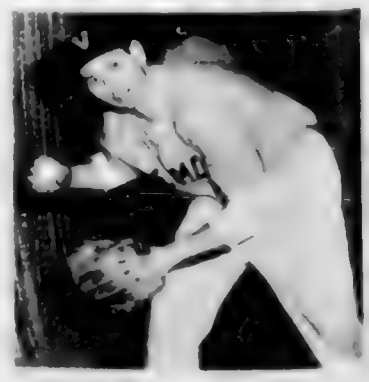
When dust flies around second this year, you can be sure that Chuck Zysk is in the thick of it. This junior from Meriden, Conn., can be depended upon to play any position on the diamond. The "Baron" can pitch, play outfield, or infield to perfection, and he has been used in all three places by the Cats. During the summer Chuck plays outfield for the Meriden Knights. He is undecided about his future plans, but sees Cats first in YC.

Two other boys that will see plenty of action around the second sack are Chuck Murphy and Dave Wood. Chuck, a senior from Plattsburg, NY, has been on the squad three years. In his soph-

Tough Competition at Short

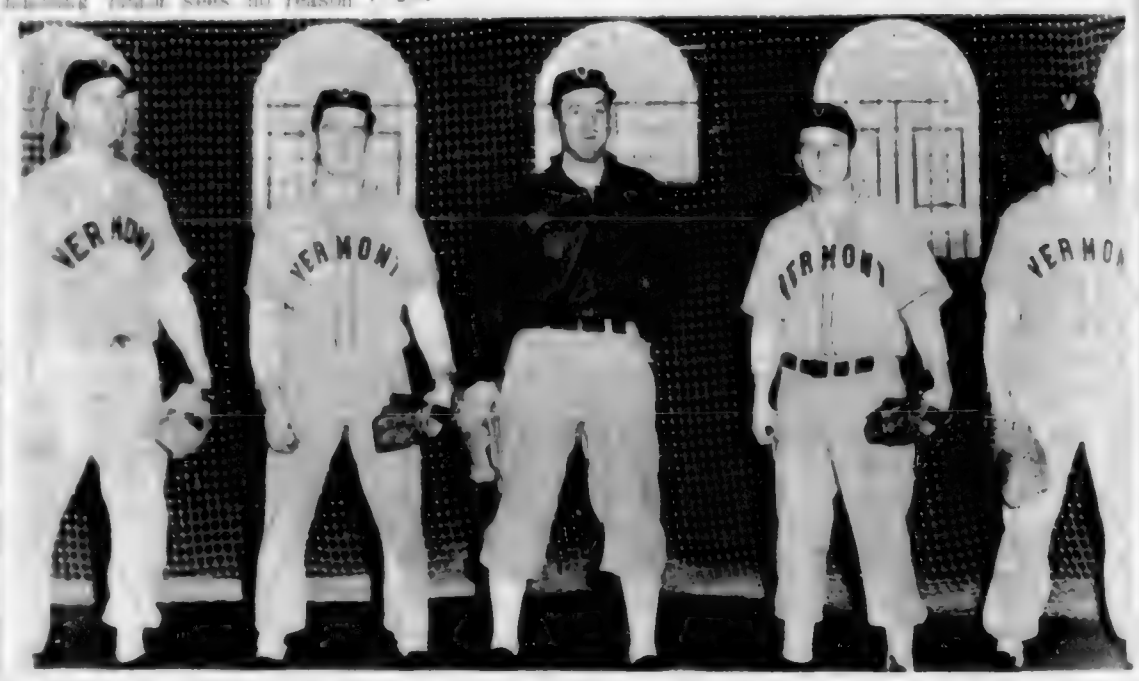
Two flashy sophomores, Gerry Cassidy and Howie Hall, are battling it out for the shortstop position, with Cassidy given the inside nod. Gerry played outfield for the frosh last year swinging a hot bat at a .394 clip. From Hopkinton, Mass., "Cass" participated in football, baseball, and basketball. In baseball he said he played every position except catcher. Gerry has played Jr. Legion ball and two summers on the Milford Town Team, and thinks that the Conference will be tough --especially UConn and UMass --but he has confidence that the Cats will win it. Upon graduation he hopes to go into the business field, but if he has a chance to sign, he'll take it.

Howie is from Dundee, N.Y., and is in Dairy Management at the University. Last year on the Frosh team he played outfield and a couple of games at third. He has played for the last five summers with the Jr. Legion team in Dundee. Looking toward the future, Howie said he'd like to give coaching a try. If the hitting and pitching holds out, which he's sure will, and with the expert coaching the Cats receive, they are bound to win the YC.



The "General" Handles the Hot Corner - - - - - - - -

Another veteran of many campaigns holds down the "hot corner" for the Cats. This is none other than the "General," Captain Tom Tierney. Tom is a senior from Staten Island, N.Y., where he participated in football, basketball, and baseball. Tom has been a standout in all four years at UVM. In football he was a triple threat at halfback and in baseball he's got power to spare. This Social Science major has played summer ball in Nova Scotia and says there is a possibility he might sign in June. Tom says that if the pitching holds up, the expert coaching will pull them through with a first in the YC, and an improvement over last year's 15-7 record.



Two boys ably back up Tom at third. They are Maynard Bust, a junior, and Bill Grey, a soph. Maynard is a Vermonter from Newfane, but attended Brattleboro High where he took part in baseball, basketball and football. He was a standout last Fall as a tackle on the Cat's football squad. This is his first stab at baseball in a Vermont uniform, but he has played right field for Newfane in the West River Valley League since he was fifteen. In Commerce and Economics, Maynard is undecided about his future plans, possibly in Industrial Management. With the team spirit the way it is now, he says they're sure to take the Yankee Conference.

Bill plans also to give the outfield a try along with third base. As a Frosh, he was the regular third sacker and showed fair power from the left side of the plate. Bill also was a star halfback on the Cat's football team last Fall. From Grahamsville, N.Y., Bill's future is centered around the US Air Force. In Commerce and Economics, he says that if the pitching comes along as it is now, the Cats will be the Yankon winners.

The Catamount infield, and the rest of the team, is sharp, and there is an excellent bench to back up the regulars.

Mantovani's Program Gets Colorful Review

By Yechoshel Kastel

The 45 best of all possible piece orchestra offered us a genuinely touching, thrilling, exciting, breath-taking glorious finish. In sight and sound there was more sight than sound, but as it was the most resplendent of all possible sights, we applauded to this year's Lane Series.

Not only was it the final event of this year, but for this reviewer it also was the very last one, and therefore, these lines are the last opportunity for someone who dabbles with nonsense WORDS supposedly, about MUSIC, to attack me with somewhat sharper, stronger pins, or, if he wants to guarantee success, he could use leaches. I shall say that I became a martyr, for the sake of Music (no words).

Maestro Mantovani put on the stage the best of all possible shows. He danced, posed, gyrated, rocked and rolled himself, twisted his body and drew the best of all curves in the air with his magic baton. He also entertained us with the best of all possible jokes - direct from London and Venice.

Every note, every phrase, every shade of variation of intensity or emotion was seen very clearly in the new Mantovani Style, for the benefit of those in the audience who were not blessed with keen ears: they could at least watch the show, and eventually, watch the music too. Maestro Mantovani made every beat clear to the audience, every cue and sign, and I had the strong impression that we, in the auditorium, knew what was coming, and what the Maestro desired from his great ers, before they did. One ingredient was absent: sportsmanship, which is quite a thing anyway.

We saw Claire de Lune, beautifully arranged and brilliantly interpreted, with all the glory of the shining sun; we were taken to China, to watch (hear) the best of all possible Russian Gypsy Mood Music with all splendor; even the Swan Lake was on the program, and it was, to be sure, full of music which poured on my ears, to compensate for the dryness of the Water Fall.

There was indeed something very new and modern in the new mucis of Maestro Mantovani, the sweetness of saccharine which is the best of all possible sweetnesses, since it lacks calories and heat, and, to be sure, the New Music was real cool, with the general taste of coffee ice cream, topped with tasty, freshly whipped shaving cream. The sound balance was excellent, magnificent and majestic everything which came out blurred and masked was balanced most effectively with an elegant, neat, gracious gesture and a twist of the body.

The best part of the show was provided by the percussion sections. He was walking around the stage as if it were a poisoned rat - to the enjoyment of the happy spectators, while playing on approximately 68 different instruments, and carrying his music sheets with him.

A very dear friend of mine, whose word I have had no reason to doubt, communicated to me the fact that one of the best of all possible players in the in the best of all possible bands branded the audience as being " a bunch of farmers" (He must have visited the WJOY den the night before). I intend to agree with that great player. We, the poor little provincials do not deserve the Honour of watching the greatest of all possible Mantanovis'; we should not climb that high - let's stick where we belong - the Chicago Symphony and the like, and the receptions might be mutual. In fact, we cannot blame that great musician for calling us "farmers" - after all, we applauded, did we not?

A Campus-to-Career Case History

"Growth makes opportunities in the telephone company"

In October 1957, only four years after graduation, Stanley W. Smith was appointed District Plant Engineer in Northwestern Bell Telephone Company. Here Stan tells what his responsibilities are and how his promotion came about.

"I'm responsible for outside plant engineering in a district which includes about one-third of all Bell telephones in Nebraska outside of Omaha," Stan says. "That's about 300,000 phones and the number is growing every day.

"The most important part of my job is to plan for growth and have facilities ready when needed. This means planning for pole lines, aerial and underground cable, and conduit lines to the central office. I also make cost estimates for all planned construction so that money can be budgeted for it.

"This is the kind of job I really like—one which combines engineering and management. And it was the continuing growth of the business," Stan points out, "that opened up this new assignment for me. My predecessor was appointed to a newly created position and I was selected to replace him.

"What the future holds for me depends on a lot of things. But I can see from my present job that growth will keep opening opportunities for myself and other engineers like me. I'm more convinced than ever that the telephone company is the place to get started in an interesting and challenging career."

Stan Smith graduated from the University of Nebraska in 1953 with a B.S. in E.E. degree. He is one of many young men who are finding rewarding careers in the Bell Telephone Companies. Find out about opportunities for you. Talk with the Bell interviewer when he visits your campus, and read the Bell Telephone booklet on file in your Placement Office.

Fellowship Open For Language Major

[illegible] was established through the bequest of Frederick M. [illegible] of the Class of 1886, [illegible] awarded annually to a [illegible] of The University of [illegible] holding the Bachelor [illegible] degree. The fellowship may be awarded to a [illegible] senior or to a [illegible] with the proper [illegible] qualifications.

In the words of the donor, the candidate for this fellowship shall be a young man or woman who has displayed exceptional ability during his or her college course and [illegible] promise of being able to acquire a liberal education. He or she should have shown during the college years ability to do independent, honest thinking, and should have displayed through character strength and independence of [illegible]

To be eligible for this fellowship the applicant must have completed an undergraduate major or honors in a classical language, or two of the foreign languages, and must be preparing for a career in college or university teaching in one of these disciplines. In the case of an English major, the profession of journalism is acceptable as a career goal.

The fellowship will normally be awarded to a candidate who has majored in English; candidates with majors in the other languages will be considered when there is no suitable candidate in English.

Applicants must present to the awarding committee an acceptable program for the use of the fellowship. Normally, it is expected that [illegible] graduate work consist of advanced study at an institution other than The University of Vermont, but exceptions may be considered.

The holder of the fellowship is eligible to apply for reappointment, but the fellowship will not be granted to the same person for more than three years.

Further information concerning the interpretation of eligibility may be secured from the chairmen of the language department concerned or from Dean John H. Kent. Application blanks may be secured from Dean John H. Kent, 107 Waterman Building, The University of Vermont and must be submitted to him not later than April 15. Announcement of the award will be made on May 1.

seen in "Othello". Carol Brown is a transfer student from Boston University and appeared in several productions there. The remaining members of the cast are making their first appearance with the Players.

The production is under the direction of Greg [illegible], Associate Professor of Speech.

In their performance, the Players will present only three of the four original acts of the play. The third act is traditionally omitted because of its length and because it is a repetition of material brought out in other portions of the play. This act, the dream sequence or "Don Juan in Hell" scene, will, however, soon be on view to local audiences. The Players will present it as part of the Fine Arts Festival to be held during April.

A recent release of the University Players said, "Levels of interpretation of Man and Superman to be taken as serious art, serious entertainment; startling social commentary or snappy drawing room repartee. The play is great fun and at the same time challenging to the mind (even in 1958) and has a universality common certainly to Western Man."

The Outing Club has one more ski trip planned for March 30th, to Jeffereenville and anybody who wishes to come along, meet at Waterman at 9 a.m. where transportation will be arranged. Girls living at Redstone who wish to come along, will be called for at Redstone if they notify Don Wallace at 8-6921.

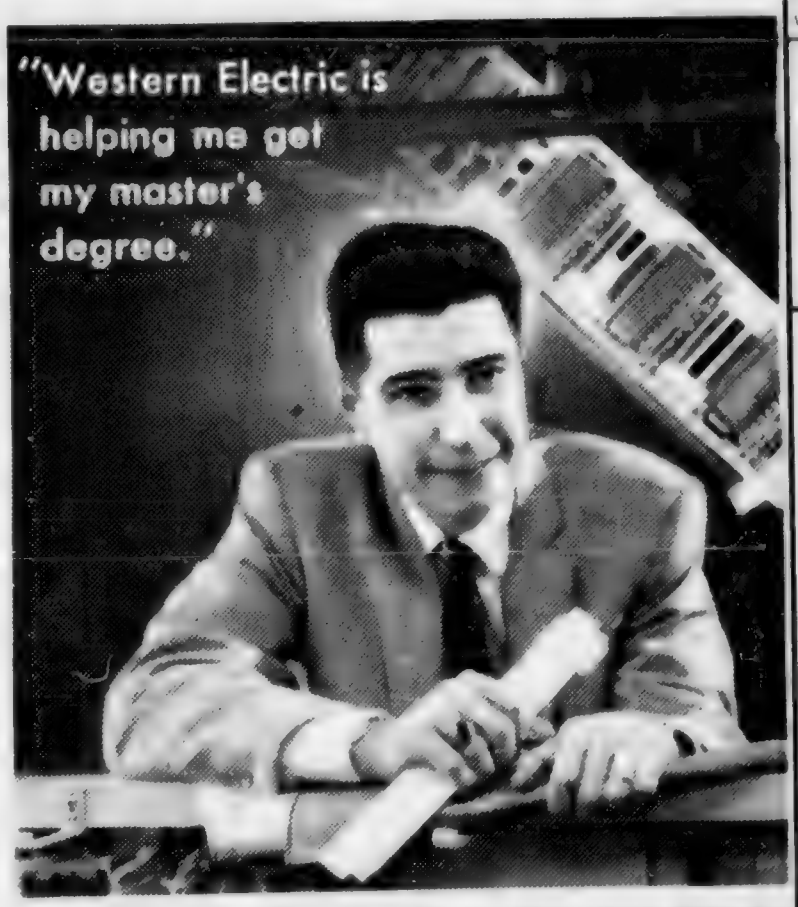
Western Electric's new TUITION REFUND PLAN can help you continue your studies while launching an exciting career



Under the new plan, Western Electric will refund tuition costs for after-hours study at graduate or undergraduate level, to a maximum of $250 each year.

Say, for example, that you qualify for a career at Western Electric in one of many rewarding phases of telephony — electronics, development engineering, design, manufacturing production, plant engineering, or some other. You may be eligible for financial assistance to help defray the cost of graduate or other study from the very first day. Choose engineering, science or any course that is appropriate to your job or that adds to your ability to accept greater responsibility, and the Company will refund to you up to $250 a year for tuition.

Plus values, like the new Tuition Refund Plan, give Western Electric engineers many opportunities that others never have. There's specialized training both in the classroom and on the job . . . a formal program of advanced engineering study that includes full-time, off-job courses of up to 10 weeks' duration . . . a retirement and benefit program that's one of the best known and most liberal in industry . . . low-cost life insurance that would appeal to any man with his eye on the future. And of paramount importance is the chance to work alongside top men in the field of communications.

There's a good deal more for which there isn't space here. Why not write us or contact your placement office to schedule an interview when Bell System representatives visit your campus.

As one of us, you'd help engineer the manufacture, distribution or installation of the equipment needed for the nationwide communications network of 49 million Bell telephones.

JOHN MORAN, who joined Western Electric's engineering staff at the Kearny, N. J. Works recently, is now studying for his M.S.M.E. under the new Tuition Refund Plan. Western Electric expects to refund the tuition for John's graduate study at the Newark College of Engineering this year.

Here — where transistors were first developed for production; where repeaters for the new transatlantic telephone cable were tailor-made — there's a constant need for new products and new processes. Two-thirds of the equipment we make today for the Bell telephone companies is of types that have been developed since World War II.

Besides telephone work, Western Electric over the years has been responsible for a continuous flow of defense jobs for the government such as the Nike guided missile system and the DEW Line.

There's plenty of room for advancement . . . whatever your field of specialization. So — whether you'd be helping with our telephone job, or working on a major defense project like guided missile systems—with Western Electric you can expect to grow!

For your copy of our College Tuition Refund Plan booklet and additional information about Western Electric write College Relations, Room 1111F, Western Electric Company, 195 Broadway, New York 7, N. Y.

The Vermont Cynic

Participation

Webster's Dictionary defines participation as "An act or state of sharing in common with others." Is it your intention to share the responsibility tomorrow with the other students at UVM in the interest of voting? Back in 1955, only 1225 students shared the responsibility to vote for the Student Association candidates for president. Three years have passed and new life and spirit has entered UVM.

Let us remember that the Student Association depends on student support and thrives on student interest. Also, you, the student of this University, keep SA functioning with your semester fees. Your money is spent in your interest, in your organizations, and the money is used to benefit you.

The latter point brings to mind the five dollar increase that SA is asking you to vote upon tomorrow. We believe this is necessary and would like to see a vote of confidence given. Five dollars may seem to be a great increase, but SA needs money because student organizations need larger sums. Seven dollars and fifty cents per semester was the price that the students paid two years ago. The cost of living has gone up, but the fee has remained the same. Any new organizations that try to begin here at UVM are hampered because SA has allotted all the funds and can find no new income to support a new club.

To see the problem in another light, let us look at this organization, your student newspaper. We have the material, time, and help to put out a fourteen-page paper, but our budget does not always allows us to publish fourteen pages. Even when the money from advertisements is considered we still need more money, as costs continue to rise.

With this in mind, therefore, we hope you will go to the polls Friday, and support your student organizations by raising the activity fee. Remember, the controversy about student rights which the drinking issue fostered. Well, here is a right, the right to support your organizations and elect candidates who will lead us on campus.

A college can be only as good as its students. Participation will add spirit, leadership, cooperation, and interest to this University. Friday is your opportunity to participate, so please vote.

Mr. Leader

[illegible] Mr. Leader [illegible]

It is not very obvious to me "professional reasons" as an excuse for firing a valued employee, especially at such a critical time, a time as the PTA's [illegible] at Mr. Leader's statements regarding [illegible] schools. It would seem that if "professional reasons" were the REAL reason for Mr. Leader's dismissal, that he would not have waited it to become [illegible]. In addition, Dr. Borgmann has had eighteen months to evaluate this employee; why did he wait so long, and choose this particular moment, to fire someone as obviously valued, skilled and needed, as Mr. Leader?

In conclusion, one can only "rashly generalize" that Mr. Leader's case is one of wanton usurpation, in favor of those outspoken critics who are skilled in having Borgmann bend to their public-pressure demands. Let's hope the UVM students and faculty will protest more vehemently at this added evidence of administrative politicking.

Your SA President

Dear Fellow Students

This is probably the last letter I shall write as Student Association President. The past year has been a most interesting and educational one for me. One realizes after such an experience that there are many things about college life one fails to grasp in four years.

There is a big chunk of your education in the extra curricular field. One learns how to handle himself in many different situations. He develops a keen sense of responsibility and awareness of his duties. Many problems seemed insurmountable at times. However, by working hand with the COSA and administration personnel, more improvements in problem areas. Solutions were sought and found.

Our Council has a difficult job to perform. What we are elected we assume that we represent the student body. This is a logical assumption to make, but this is not the case in all situations. Many student problems never reach our attention due in part, to the multiplicity of other representative groups. In a sense our attempt to support because of a duplication of representation. We find ourselves in a competitive position, which is as [illegible]

Words And Music

By Ed Needham

According to the current issue of Variety the five best selling LPs in the country are Sinatra's Come Fly With Me: The original cast recording of Music Man; Warm by Johnny Mathis; My Fair Lady by the original cast and the soundtrack recording from Around the World in Eighty Days. The buyer of the long playing record is, on the average a much more discriminating customer than the person who purchases a single recording.

The sale of LPs has gone up as the sale of single records has dropped. Slowly the listening public is being exposed to more and more decent music; and they are enjoying it. What is more important from the record makers point of view is the saleability of discs which are musically literate. Very nearly all the new LPs released are in this category. As the buying continues to increase the amount of records increases also.

The fuzzy faced, leather jacketed, saggy sweatered bobby-soxed set which makes up the majority of single record fans makes up a minority of the buying power. However they make the most noise about the musical they enjoy so much. They write to the stations and call on the phone. The fact which seems to escape programmers is this; the teen-ager is only a portion

I had a very enjoyable weekend at university sponsored affairs. I caught the early show of Fernandel in "The Sheep Has Five Legs" before taking off for one of Burlingtons licensed establishments. The funny French flick was a delightful change from the Hollywood produced affair. The story and scenes were highly original and extremely humorous. The film was an authentic laugh a minute jobbie and the Cinema Arts Club is to be congratulated on their excellent choice.

Saturday evening I marveled at the showmanship of Mantavoni. The selection of the "Master" for a Saturday presentation was in very good taste. His music was good entertainment for a guy and his doll. Actually Mantavoni was a bit too commercialized but he was fun to listen to anyway. Be sure to check the review on another page.

Y'know there are two kinds of people who never [illegible] success:

Those who can never do what their told,
And those who can do nothing else'

At UVM the emphasis seems to be on trying to develop the latter.

Everyone be sure to see "Man and Superman" presented by the University Players. It's a terrific play, one of Shaw's most amusing and provocative comedies. The advance notices say that the presentation is splendid.

After some thought I have decided to comment on Professor Davis' article. I didn't exactly appreciate the method which Mr. Davis used to slander the name of the University. He overstated his case and created unnecessary antagonism to himself and disrespect and reputation to the University. HOWEVER, we must healthy one to be in for any SA Council.

Recent events concerning Student Rights' threw some light on the subject of the scope of SA functions. With questions such as - Why doesn't the Council do something? - or Who protects our rights? - the word Student Council found its way into the minds of an upset student body. Initiative has been taken by the students, a good sign of things to come. Now that we have kindled this spark, let it continue to burn. Let us not smother this infant flame with lack of enthusiasm and leave student government in an anemonic form. We have our work cut out for us if we sincerely want better government.

We students must be a special breed, because we seem to run hot and cold. This, of course, increases the difficulties in determining the student pulse. We as a Council, can never really place our fingers on the beat of the pulse. When we are certain a beat exists we try to find it, but, alas, it gets obscured by its scattered characteristic.

Responsibility is a word we sometimes run away from. Authority is a word which denotes and connotes power, but power can be misused and misguided. If we, as students, wish to accept the responsibility to govern ourselves, we will have the authority to enact final legislation within the accepted limits of student self- government. I am sure that the Administration would be more than happy to have us accept these responsibilities. We are always a problem for them when it comes to administering regulations. It might be ideal to administrate ourselves, but this would make the job of your student leaders nearly impossible due to a full time schedule of daily activities. At the present time, I find myself wearing seven different "hats". In my opinion, we are ready for much a big jump as this. However, if we work twice as hard in the next year we can come closer to a happy medium, with more joint groups with student voting privileges.

The whole contingency is our willingness to carry through such a program. I do not think we can afford to sit around and wait for a concatenation of fortuitous circumstances before we act.

In conclusion, I am asking all of you to vote favorably for the raise in the student activity fee. In order to further develop all existing organizations and to allow for new ones to grow, we simply need more money. The cost of living has jumped tremendously, increasing our operating expenses beyond the point of efficient or sufficient student organizational financial support. Tomorrow when you cast your ballots, think of your individual roles as students in a community relationship and of the educational values inherent in extra-curricular activities.

It has been a real pleasure to serve such a wonderful group of people as you, students. I thank each and everyone of you for allowing me the opportunity to work for your interests.

Respectfully yours,
William Pickens, III
SA President

admit that there was a heck of a lot of truth in his statements. Truth is sometimes a bitter pill to swallow, especially when those involved aren't used to it.

How do you cut off a cat's tail? Beposaens his Jaguar.

At the U. of Nebraska the IFC voted to fine Theta Chi and deprive it of social and initiation privileges as a result of a pledge hazing incident.

This column goes to press on Tuesday and therefore I shall make a prediction; that the University Council in voting on the demands of the Student Rights Committee will not make more than token concession if that much, of course, I'd like to be pleasantly surprised.

This year the Vermont Conference is being brought back to life. The speakers for this year's conference are excellent and the topic is stimulating and interesting. Don't anyone make other plans for April 23 or 24. I'll guarantee that the conference will be the best event of any kind held at the University in years.

MALE-STROM

There's a growing acceptance of tweed cloth suits of the type introduced to us by Harrison in "My Fair Lady" with Perry Como, to have already helped popularize the cardigan sweater... Speaking of cardigan sweaters, this Spring will see the take over of the bulky knit mercerized cotton cardigan. It has the lustrous sheen of silk at a cotton price and in clear colors. Of course, it's washable... Not important but growing, are formal socks and cuff links made of satin or grosgrain to match the tuxedo's lapels.

Thanks to Brown and Roland, Inc., for keeping us up to date on the latest fashions. You will be seeing more of their suggestions in the succeeding columns.

Spanish Club Reinstated

By Judy Gerber

At the beginning of this year, "El Circulo Espanol" was re-instituted at UVM. The Spanish Club, which had been disbanded because of lack of interest, funds and proper organization, has been re-organized through the efforts and perseverance of a few interested spanish students.

With the ever-increasing demands for bi-lingual students, the importance of "after-class" participation has grown and so the new Spanish Club provides an outlet for students to use the language on a social basis and to become better acquainted with the culture and customs of Spain and South America.

The Club has no limitations for membership. Anyone interested in the Spanish language and traditions is encouraged to participate in its activities. Two meetings have already been held at which there was entertainment by the Boleros, a well-known group, and an introduction to Latin American dances and songs. One of these meetings was a traditional Latin American Christmas party which was attended not only by UVM students, but also by students from St. Michael's College and Trinity College who have been extended social privileges.

At the next meeting, slated for Friday, March 28, there will be an informal lecture given by Dr. and Mrs. Midgley who have recently returned from Bolivia where they were sent to participate in the Point 4 Program. They will show slides and various articles which they have collected. This lecture will be supplemented in April by an exhibit of Mrs. Midgley's collection in the Bookstore window in Lower Waterman. The meeting will be held in the North Lounge at Southwick at 7:30 P.M.

Future plans include a joint meeting with Round Table and a movie open to the entire University with such top stars as Arturo de Cordova, Dolores del Rio, Pedro Armendarez and Cantinflas.

Mr. Pollack of the Language Department is faculty advisor to the club. Its officers are: Orlando Romero, President, Rhona Bayer, Vice-President, Carol Chapman, Secretary, Pio Tretter, Treasurer.

the radio audience. Because they are the loudest most people have tended to think they are the largest and this is one of the reasons their music dominates the airwaves.

The teen-ager's monetary contribution on the record industry is via the juke box. Each juke box has an indicator on it which tells the number of times a disc has been played. When the guy comes around to service the juke box he leaves the records which are getting good plays. Who plays the music machines most? The teen-ager. This is why, when an adult strolls up to a juke box to play a record he is usually faced with a barrage of noises by Presley, Sands, The Crickets, The Four Nose bleeds, etc. etc.

The DJs have always been aware of the preceding information and most of them would like to change their program formats. They also enjoy three squares a day and a roof to keep away the elements so they play what they are told to play.

Just a couple of weeks ago the first annual Disc Jockey convention was held.

Hundreds of Jocks attended and uttered a hue and a cry and were listened to. They objected to the enforcement by management of a rigid "Top Forty" format for record shows. As a result of this convention many stations across the country are taking a second look at their programs. In many instances they are changing their formats to allow for more of the good music which has been sitting in the record libraries gathering dust.

When you listen to a show which plays music you enjoy and when you are allowed a breather from the horrible sounds which dominate radio today, write a letter to the people running the station. You don't have to tell the DJ that his music is decent because he knows that. (Although he doesn't mind hearing it now and then.) The person to whom you should show your gratitude is the station manager for allowing the DJ to play the sort of music you enjoy. Most DJs want to play good music; their problem is that they can't. Until the person who enjoys decent sounds lets managers hear about it the teen-ager will continue to dominate the radio shows.

Student Government Progress Report

Student Association Executive Committee, consisting of the President, Vice-President, Treasurer and Secretary, would like at this time, to summarize the achievements of the outgoing Student Association Council. Many new areas have been explored this year, some with a great deal of success and others with a minimum of success. It is our hope that the accomplishments of this year have been representative of student opinion. We often found ourselves in the position of not knowing where to turn due to the lack of communication and need for clarification present in many instances. We feel that the whole area of student representation and responsibility could benefit from more evaluation and a program of expansion. We also believe that the present discussion of the concept of student self-government may lead to a wider acceptance of responsibilities on the part of the administration and the student body. We appreciate this opportunity to present our accomplishments to you for your consideration and judgement.

As a result of an investigative by the Student Association Curriculum Committee, the problem of library hours was brought to the attention of the Council. It was investigated with the director of the library. It resulted in an extension of the closing hours to 11 P.M., thus providing extra time for the students to utilize the library facilities.

Following the ruling by the University Council regarding drinking, S.A. Council went on record in the form of the following motion: "Student Association Council opposes the recent University Council action in regards to the use of alcoholic beverages on the grounds that it is an unnecessary infringement on the privileges of the students at UVM over 21 and in particular we oppose the use of the word "may" in article 4 section 3." We then sought advise from qualified persons as to the legal aspect involved. We found that this regulation was well within the province of the administration, therefore we turned to the administration. A committee selected from the Council met with Dr. Bergmann, Dean Harris, and Dean Clifford immediately following the announcement of the ruling. It was determined after discussing that if the students would accept the responsibility of enforcing and administering legislation in this area, modification could logically follow. This is the point at which we find ourselves at the present time. Bill Pickens, in expressing the consensus of opinion of the 6 Council members who are working with the Emergency Committee on Student's Rights, feels that now that the initiative has been taken by students there will be a resultant strengthening of student government.

In conclusion, the council saw the need for an increase in our student activity fee due to the rise in operating costs for all organizations and the increasing number of active student organizations needing financial aid. Realizing that this is but one of many rising costs, we nevertheless feel that it is justified, for we believe it is essential for the continued growth of our student community.

In the ensuing weeks we plan to present, to the best of our ability, other major accomplishments and aims of this present Council along with proposals for action for the future.

Vending Machine Profits

The profits from all the vending machines on campus are used by UVM student organizations. The vending Machine Committee which distributes this money is a standing subcommittee of Student Association. The Vice President of S.A. is Chairman of the committee and other members represent various administrative and student organizations.

On April 1, information on a printed memoranda will be distributed to the various student organizations and UVM departments. Requests for financial assistance for worthy projects or undertakings must be mailed to Michael Zanetti, Sigma Phi Epsilon, 371 Main Street, or deposited in the Student Association Committee mail box in CUSA office on or before April 20th. The memoranda will be distributed on the 1st and 10th of the month so that all organizations will have ample reminder before the 20th.

The work of the committee will be done over a period of three or four meetings. The committee is responsible for evaluating each request and exploring the possible uses for which the vending machine funds may be applied.

Interviews will be conducted in connection with each request. After the final selection by the members of the committee, a report will be prepared and sent to the President of the University, University Treasurer, Dean of Administration, Superintendent of Buildings and Grounds, and the President of Student Association. The allocations become official upon the approval of the President of the University.

Sticklers!

SMOKE RINGS come in all shapes and sizes. Like 4-sided smoke rings for squares. Sturdy smoke rings for windy days. Even invisible smoke rings for people who aren't ostentatious. As any competent smoke ringer (Vapor Shaper in Stickliese!) will tell you, the best way to start one is to light up a Lucky. It's best mostly because a Lucky tastes best. A Lucky gives you naturally light, wonderfully good-tasting tobacco, toasted to taste even better. Why settle for less? You'll say a light smoke's the right smoke for you.

DON'T JUST STAND THERE...
STICKLE! MAKE $25

Stickers are simple riddles with two word rhyming answers. Both words must have the same number of letters. No drawings, please! We'll shell out $25 for all we use—and for hundreds that never see print. So send stacks of 'em with your name, address, college and class to: Happy-Go-Lucky, Box 67A, Mount Vernon, New York.

Round Table Discussion

In the evening, on March 15, a group of students, faculty and administration engaged in an animated discussion on a debatable topic, UVM Family or Free society? Following a buffet dinner these members of the "University Family" heard the matter presented by a well chosen panel of Mr. Jack Little, Director of Resident Instruction, Mr. Paul Hilberg, Professor of Political Science, Mr. Peter Schaffstall, Editor of The Centaur, and Mr. Donald Keller, Chairman of the Emergency Committee for Students' Rights.

Questions, answers, charges, and retaliis followed, to the enjoyment and enlightenment of all present.

Among the debatable questions is Student Association a farce? Are constitutional rights of individuals being violated at UVM? Is there a lack of communication between students in groups and the administration, and if so, how shall we bridge this gap?

Among the debatable statements

UVM is heading in the direction of a totalitarian state. Let us abolish all regulations which govern us. But first, we must abolish all fraternities, sororities and clubs... Only then can we start anew. The faculty is, at present, subsidizing the education of the students. Women students at UVM are comparatively free; it is the men who have no freedom to govern themselves.

Among the debatable decisions:

Students are satisfied with the academic policy and regulations of the administration, but are dissatisfied with the social restrictions imposed upon them.

Before it can be decided 'who' must make and change University policy, the extent and direction of the changes in this policy must be determined.

Each was happy to have this opportunity to express his own feelings and to better understand those of others.

Cats Open Wed. Against Upsala

Outfield - Hyman, Johnson, Castagner

BALL HAWKS

by FRED ROBINSON

With less than a week before the cars head south, Coach Lapointe has the task of selecting the final sixteen men who will make the trip this year. A sophomore, a junior, and a senior will probably make up the starting outfield for the Cats.

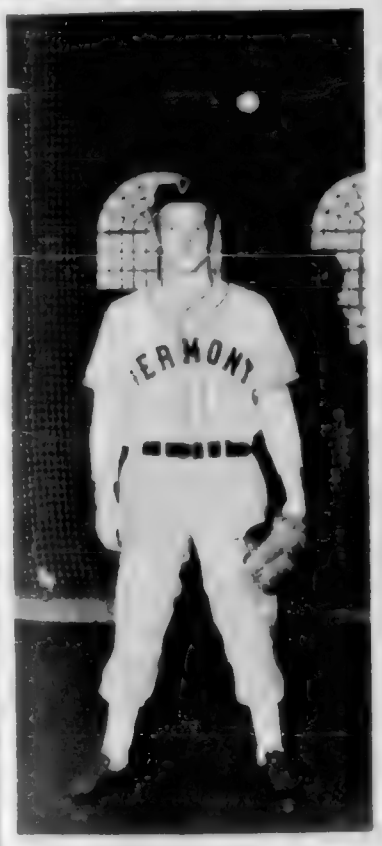
The first is Morris Castagner, a junior from Tunbridge, Vermont. "Mo" will either roam left or right field depending upon how his previously injured knee comes around. So far in the cage he has looked in great shape, but the Southern trip will tell the story. After attending South Royalton (Vt.) High, where he participated in baseball as a pitcher and catcher and in basketball, he served a four year stretch in the U.S. Air Force, where he played service ball. Upon entering UVM, he filled center field for the frosh and has remained in the outfield ever since. Barring injuries, "Mo" thinks the Cats, with the hustle and spirit they have shown, will take a first in the Yankee Conference.

Another southpaw hitter is soph, Frank Hyman. This is Frank's first year in a UVM uniform as he played no frosh ball last season at the university. However, Frank had plenty of experience in the outfield playing four years of varsity baseball in high school at Jamaica, Long Island, N.Y. his hometown. He also took part in football and basketball. When asked about the Vermont coaching, Frank said that UVM has provided him with "the best personal instruction" that he has ever received. This, incidentally, is a feeling expressed by every member of the ball club. As a pre-law student, he plans to go to law school upon graduation. Frank is looking forward to the Southern trip and feels that if the pitching and hitting holds up, the Cats will take the Yankon title.

Holding down the center field spot for the third year in a row is senior, Marty Johnson. This hustler can make all the plays and comes through to win when the chips are down. "Swede," from Montclair, N.J. participated in football, baseball, and basketball in high school, continuing both football and baseball into UVM. He devoted his junior year entirely to baseball, ending the season hitting at a .311 clip. Marty, who can also be used as a catcher, has played summer ball in Nova Scotia and for the Paterson, N.J., Uncle Sams in a semi-pro league since high school. A pre-law student and a member of the GOLD KEY, "Swede" might possibly play pro ball upon graduation. He has an "optimistic outlook," but thinks the Y.C. road will be a rough one; a toss-up between UVM and UConn.

Three other boys that will probably see some outfield assignments are Bob Fiance, Bill Grey, and Chuck Murphy. Bob is also a pitcher and both Bill and Chuck work in the infield.

UVM will field a fast, [illegible] squad (only four seniors.) The Southern trip will serve the purpose of experimenting different men at various positions so that when the Cats come north again, the starting club will be a well rounded unit.



by BRETT LAZAR

The Vermont counterpart of the Florida spring training season of the major league clubs is well under way here at UVM, though with the notable exception of the Florida sun. Our baseball team has been working out in the artificial light of the cage in preparation for the season which begins next Wednesday when we play Upsala College of New Jersey in the first game of our annual southern trip.

This year's edition of the Catamounts will be playing without the services of last year's catcher and captain, John Galasicione, as well as Joe Martin, Charlie Isles, Johnny Brewster, and Frank Wall, all of whom were instrumental in compiling a good 15-7 record last spring. However, Coach Ralph Lapointe feels that such sophomores as Frank Hyman, Gerry Cassidy, Steve Cooper and Marty Katz will plug the holes left by these departees and do their part in the fight for the Yankee Conference crown. The starting lineup will consist of Bill Simonds at first base, Chuck Zysk at second, Captain Tom Tierney at third, Gerry Cassidy at shortstop, Frank Hyman in right field, Marty Johnson in center, "Mo" Castagner in left, and either "Ace" Santa Croce or Bob Davis behind the plate. The pitching staff will be headed by three of last year's starters, Ross Artus, Russ Henrichs, and Carl Carlson, and they'll get plenty of able support from Bob Koones, Steve Cooper, Marty Katz, Bob Fiance, Karl Ashline and Bob Chapman. Maynard Rust, Bill Grey, Charlie Murphy, Howie Hall and Dave Wood round out the team.

In the hitting department, the Catamounts will depend mainly on Tierney and Johnson, who have proved that they can hit college pitching. Simonds is off to a better start than last year and should come through with many key hits. Hyman and Cassidy, though unproved, have been very impressive in practice and should supply added punch to the lineup.

The southern trip is designed mainly to give the coach a chance to get the feel of his team, especially the pitching staff. It usually isn't too indicative of the rest of the season, for we are playing teams with a few games under their belts, the recent snows not withstanding. For this reason the trip is considered successful if we break even. Plans for this year's trip are in the hands of Manager John Elwell. The team leaves here after classes Tuesday, April 1, stays overnight in Elizabeth, New Jersey, and then plays Upsala Wednesday. After that it's on to Washington, D.C., where we play Georgetown on the 3rd and George Washington on the 4th. Philadelphia is the next stop and Villanova is our opponent on the 5th, and then the team moves on to New York, where the trip winds up with the game against Adelphi on Monday, the 7th. If any of these games fall in your area, go out and give the guys the support they deserve.

Faculty Handball

by ALAN SILVERMAN

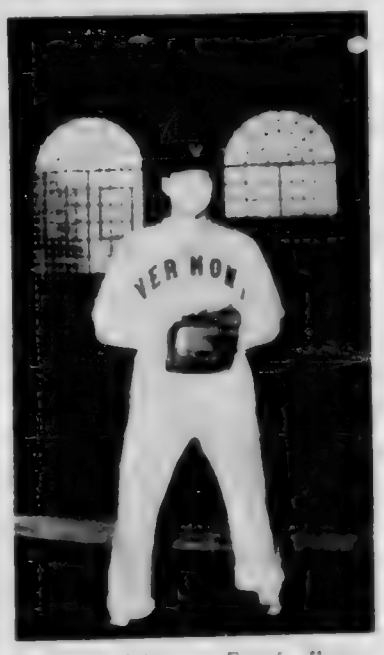
The Faculty Handball Tournament has completed its second week of competition. As we noted last week Capt. Johns and Archie Post were the solid favorites to win the tournament. On the basis of their performance during this past week we continue to hold this same contention.

The results of last weeks play are: Sam MacDonald and Bert Wingate beat Ralph Lapointe and Earle Clifford and Ben Murdock and Fuzzy Evans lost to Capt. Johns and Archie Post. This means that Sam MacDonald and Bert Wingate will play Capt. Johns and Archie Post in the semi-finals. The winner of this match will then engage another twosome in the finals. The team that emerges victorious from this game will win the tournament. This coming week's competition will provide us with the two finalists.

SKI TEAM: SUCCESSFUL

by LEE LOVENHEIM

The UVM Ski team placed well this winter in the various meets in which they participated including the Dartmouth Winter Carnival, Williams Winter Carnival, Middlebury Snow Bowl, and the McGill Winter Carnival.



In the Middlebury College Snow Bowl, UVM placed fifth out of 10 participating teams. The results of this meet are as follows: Dartmouth-583.13, Middlebury-576.36, St. Lawrence-[illegible].66, U. of N.H.-519.66, Vermont-515.20, Williams-496.28, Norwich-466.62, Yale-435.56, Maine-416.17, Syracuse-387.08.

In the Williams Winter Carnival, Vermont placed fifth again of nine other competitors. In the Dartmouth Winter Carnival, the UVMers placed sixth, with eight starters. Dartmouth was first with 584.6, St. Lawrence-[illegible]3, Norwich-525.6, Williams-[illegible]4, New Hampshire-486.9, Vermont-456.2, Harvard-455.9, Yale-431.5.

In the Canadian Meet, Vermont took first place with 568.9 points, Dartmouth-568.8, McGill-[illegible]6, University of Montreal-[illegible].5.

There were seven Vermont men who were the recipients of awards, and they are Hugh Sinclair, Bart Larrow, Jake Stewart, Frank Brown, Dan Mosman, Bob Turner, Josh Edgerly. Frankie Brown served as the Captain for the season. Larrow will definitely not return next year, and, as for Sinclair, he will be working with the team next year.

There were several Frosh who received their numerals and who, undoubtedly, will be skiing next year. Tom Hacket, Burlington, Duff Wheeler, Chester, Tom Amidon, Montpelier, Bill Adams, Montpelier, and Steve Berry of Burlington.

Spring Grid Practice Finds QB Slot Vacant
Thirty Eight Men Try For Squad
Three New Teams On Schedule

The Spectator By Jerry Heller

[illegible]

As I could not find a controversial topic of discussion or even a piece of current news that I wanted to quote I have decided to just dump a few bits of information and comment.

Item No. 1 - The baseball team is going on its annual southern trip which in some cases is not very far south. In fact, [illegible] New Jersey and Hempstead, Long Island is definitely in the middle eastern regions of this country. The point that I would like to make at this time is that if you do live near any of the locations where the team is playing you should try to attend the games. It means a lot to a visiting team when they see somebody from the alma mater in the stands and cheering them on.

Item No. 2 - The spring football practice has ended and Coach Donnelly seems to have an abundant number of candidates. This is something of a miracle considering what this school offers athletes. Let's hope that the academic toll will not be too high. If the majority of the candidates can come through this semester safely, then it's a good possibility that we'll have a top flight football team in the Fall.

Item No. 3 - I happened to be reading the Collegiate Baseball Digest the other day when I came across an entertaining little story that I thought my readers might like.

HOW THE SEVENTH INNING STRETCH WAS INVENTED

WHERE DID the famous seventh inning stretch come from? It came from collegiate baseball.

Jim McSweeney, sports publicity director for Manhattan College in New York, comes up with the story of how the seventh inning stretch was invented.

"Brother Jasper, the Prefect of Discipline for Manhattan College in the 1880's, had the care and responsibility of the student body during hours of recreation and play. Whenever the Manhattan baseball team had a home game, Brother Jasper marched the entire student body to the field and seated them in a section of the stands.

"He sharply admonished them not to leave their seats or move about until the game was over and they were ready to return to the college for the evening meal.

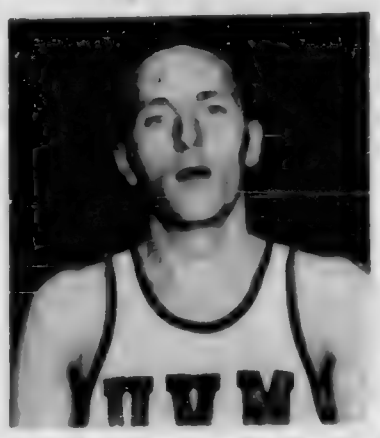
"Meanwhile Brother Jasper went down to the bench to direct the play of the Manhattan baseball team.

"Kindly man that he was, but iron-handed disciplinarian, his orders were never challenged. His eagle eyes shifted from the playing field to the stands and the students never moved.

"It happened on a sultry day in 1882. Manhattan was playing the Metropolitans, a semi-pro club, at 107th Street between Sixth and Seventh Avenues in New York. The game was a long and drawn out affair.

"As the game passed the mid-way mark, Brother Jasper noticed the youngsters in the stands were getting restless and uneasy. So as his team came to bat in the seventh inning, he went over to the stands and told the student spectators to stand, stretch and move about for a minute or two. The move eased the tension and unrest and Brother Jasper repeated this in the next few games.

"Soon the student body made it a practice "to give it the old seventh inning stretch." And since Manhattan played many of its games in the old Polo Grounds, the seventh inning stretch was passed along to Giant fans and eventually throughout the world of baseball."



GOOD LUCK

"KUCH"

by STAN MESSINGER

BURLINGTON, VT - Robert Kuchar, Jersey City, N.J., has been elected to captain the 1958-59 basketball Catamounts. The election of the sharp-shooting, 6-4, junior was approved by members of the Athletic Council which met this week.

Kuchar scored 426 points for a per-game average of 17 in the season just completed. The scrappy Catamount has been a varsity starter since the first game of his sophomore year and has a two-year point total of 739.

He is the team's most improved defensive player, despite his lack of height, and is Vermont's deadliest shot from 15 to 35 feet out.

Varsity Award Winners

Varsity award winners were also approved by the council at its meeting. The following will receive varsity "V" awards for the season just completed:

Peter Beck, Burlington; Ronald Bouchard, Burlington; Arnold Branch, Brooklyn, N.Y.; Robert Gallagher, Lyndhurst, N.J.; Frank Giordano, Collingswood, N.J.; Martin Katz, Hicksville, N.Y.; Robert Kuchar, Jersey City, N.J.; Clyde Lord, captain, NYC; Denton Morse, Burlington; and Terry Scribner, manager, Island Pond.

The Catamounts will open the season at Hanover against Dartmouth on Dec. 3.

The year's first Yankee Conference contest will be a home game with the University of New Hampshire on Saturday of that week.

The three remaining games before Christmas vacation will be at Norwich Dec. 10 and a two-game Bean Pot encounter at the University of Maine on Dec. 12 and 13.

The Evansmen will open the New Year with two home games against Rhode Island Jan. 2 and 3. The remainder of January games will be at Middlebury Jan. 7, at New Hampshire Jan. 8, Union here the 14th and the all-[illegible] contest at Connecticut Jan. 17. The Cats will play at Massachusetts on Jan. 31.

Vermont will close out the season with Middlebury here Feb. 26.

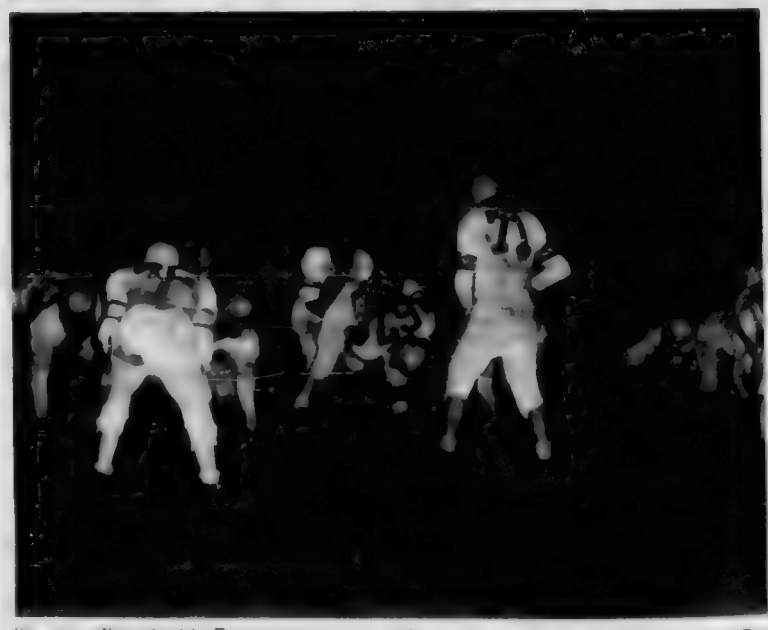
by PAUL STANTON

With the arrival of Spring and good weather, the average person's mind turns to thoughts of baseball and other activities usually associated with high temperatures, but this is not so with J. Edward Donnelly, the University of Vermont's head football coach, who has since March 17 been holding Spring Football Practice Drills for non-varsity and frosh hopefuls. The sessions have been held in the cage each evening from seven to ten with tonight's drill the last.

Thirty-eight potential candidates have responded to the call, and this coupled with twenty varsity players returning next fall, will comprise the 1958 gridiron catamounts.

Quarterback? ? ? - - - - - - - -

With Dick White graduating this year, the quarterback spot will be vacant and there is already heated competition going on for the starting berth. John Ryan, the outstanding frosh signal caller, Phil Burbo, another freshman who didn't play ball last year, and sophomore Bob Flance are the three players competing for the spot, all three showing good potential and quick reflexes.



The Line Shines.

Moving now to center, returning Captain Phil (The Tank) Chalifoux will be converted into a guard, with John Marino, Joe Ecclesine and Frank Brown the returning guards. Two good freshmen, Fred Branch and Bill Wester will be competing for center. Other men trying out for guard positions include Al Peterson, Bill Carrigan, Jim Harwell, Francis Dillon, Al Wagda, and freshman Dave Fifield.

Tackle candidates include Gerry Mason, a returning veteran, Fred Halterman, Ed Thorn, Ira Effron and Al McDurfee. Steve Alpert, George Cady and Lou Hroneky are right behind them. Big Bill Mooza is also a hopeful tackle candidate. Effron has been especially effective in the spring practice.

Experience on the Ends.

Returning ends include Maynard Bush, Bill Grey, Bob Meshel and Ed Rockett. Pete Lyford has been switched to an end from quarterback. Frosh hopefuls Pete Cochran and Bill Burke and Hans Vannes, Ralph Peterson, Harry Sanderson and Al Williams are also all after end berths.

UVM Loses "Triple Threat"- - -

Triple threat, Tom Tierney, outstanding left halfback of last fall's team will also be leaving via the cap and gown route, but Lou Petronaci and John Babic will be coming back, and with the addition of Pete Nelson, the frosh left halfback and Gerry Cassidy, who was ineligible last year, the spot will be well taken care of, for any one of the four is capable of filling the position.

Right halfback Roy Greene will be coming back and Coach Donnelly expects him to have an outstanding year. Other candidates include Hugh Weiss, the freshman RHB, Jerry Herlihy an ex-serviceman, and Al Delorenzo, a former end who is being shifted into the halfback slot.

Bill Simonds, last year's fine fullback is returning, with big Rock Fournier, the frosh fullback right behind him, who will be pushing Bill for his job. Don Nimphius, and Joe Dye, who had a cartilage operation last fall and couldn't play, are the other fullback candidates.

Purpose of Practice.

For those persons unfamiliar with Spring football practice, there are ten indoor sessions, which give the students an opportunity to come out and the coaches to then evaluate their abilities. The Varsity award winners are excluded from participation and the coaches are then able to select their 1958 pre-season football squad.

After the end of Spring practice, the choice returning group is selected and invitations are mailed out July 1 to the above mentioned to report to summer camp in August.

Donnelly said, "Hobart will be stronger than Union whom they are replacing. They went undefeated last fall and have won 3 out of their last 35 games. For some comparison, they beat Rochester last year and Rochester beat us. The Coast Guard is far superior to Dartmouth B and will undoubtedly give us a good battle. St. Lawrence will be replacing Massachusetts and it is hard to tell just what they will have. They have been steadily rebuilding and will be tough

Council Answers Student Proposals

The members of the University Council have received and discussed the proposals of March 18, 1958, submitted by Donald Keller, George Shearer and Linda Waraksa, students at the University of Vermont. The University as a matter of policy has always encouraged students either as individuals or in groups to present ideas to appropriate bodies within the University for review discussion and possible action. The members of the University Council believe that the provisions for student government, joint-student-faculty-administration action and delegation of authority and responsibility in student activities should be continuously open to evaluation and possible change. The best interests of the University are served by the development of student awareness of and interest in the objectives of the academic and extra-curricular programs of the institution.

The University Council has studied with interest the proposals of the AD HOC committee. The Council cannot accept the proposal for a permanent committee for students' Rights which would "serve as a 'watch dog' committee" and which would "operate independently of but in cooperation with all existing or future campus organizations -- administrative, faculty and student." The recognition of such a vigilante type committee, lacking authority other than that of mass action and responsible to no one for its actions would establish a dangerous precedent for the proliferation of such committees each time a group of students found themselves in disagreement with the administration or Student Association or any other existing students' rights committees. Student Association exists on the campus because of the desire of students to share the management of their affairs. This privilege was extended by University Council recognition of Student Association Council as the official representative body of the University of Vermont students within limits established by a constitution and by-laws defining its authority and responsibility. The acceptance of the first proposal of the memorandum of March 18 would circumvent Student Association Council as the authorized representative body of the University students.

The second proposal of the

Welcome To High School Day

By LINDA SACK

Approximately 900 Vermont juniors will be on campus this Saturday, April 19, to participate in the sixth annual High School Day. They will be the guests of UVM faculty members and students.

The guidance program has been planned to acquaint them with the possibilities that any college education affords them. The high school juniors need not plan to attend UVM. From special meetings, actual class observations, exhibits, demonstrations of career areas, and tours, they will be able to formulate their own after-high-school plans.

Though seniors have been invited in the past, because of the popularity of this program, it was necessary to limit this year's attendance to high school juniors. Posters, programs, and cards were also sent to teachers, parents, and friends who are interested in accompanying them. Only advance registration was required.

Activities for the day have been planned so that each attending student will have [illegible] to acquaint [illegible] learn about two college curricula. For this purpose, each of the academic divisions at UVM will participate in presenting special programs of interest. Students may attend any of the general career meetings sponsored by the Colleges of Arts and Sciences, Agriculture and Home Economics, Technology, Education and Nursing, Medicine, the School of Dental Hygiene, and the Air and Army ROTC programs. Five special college classes will be held to give the visitors a better view of college life. There also will be exhibits, demonstrations and performances by many of the UVM departments.

The day will begin at 9:30 a.m. when each will begin registration in Waterman. The formal program opening is scheduled for 10:20 a.m. in the Ballroom. President Carl W. Borgmann and UVM student leaders will welcome the

IFC Presents Annual Sing

By Jerry Edelstein

On Friday, April 18th, at 7:30 p.m., at Memorial Auditorium, the Inter-fraternity Council will present its annual sing. Both fraternities and sororities will take part in this well-known event.

The fraternities will each present the fraternity song and one other song, while the sororities will just present one song, for the judging. The judges, which will be people who are not a part of the university family, will judge on tone, quality, diction, dynamics and part singing. A trophy for first, second and third place awards for the fraternities and sororities will be presented. Besides the trophies, the fraternities are also competing for trainer cup points, which is the cup presented to the fraternity which shows the best results in athletics, scholarship and singing ability.

This year's I.F.C. sing promises to be one of the big fraternity events of the year. Right now, several fraternities are close in the competition for the trainer award. The points gained by the winner of the sing are considerable. The winner of last year's sing was Delta Psi. This year's sing promises to be an outstanding event seeing that Delta Psi is a strong contender for the trainer trophy. Admission for this event, which promises to be an enjoyable evening is only $1.00.

guests and speak briefly on college life. Lunch will be served in the Waterman dining hall to all those registered, from 11:15 a.m. to 1:30 p.m. The closing session of the day-long event will be a concert in the Chapel by the UVM band. This has become a traditional part of the High School program.

Careers In Ed. And Nursing

Thomas C. King, dean of UVM's College of Education and Nursing, will introduce the meeting on educational opportunities, one of the many career opportunity gatherings scheduled throughout the day. Following this, interested students will be shown a moving picture in color entitled "Not By Chance," a film documentation of the college educational curriculum.

In addition to this morning activity, a panel of four UVM students representing the curricula of business, elementary, secondary and music education will give their reactions to the films and discuss the different phases in teacher education.

In the afternoon, Professor Herbert L. Stultz of the music faculty will give an informal talk about the music college curriculum and the various opportunities available in this field. Music students will act as hosts for the open house at the Music Building.

The college nursing curriculum and nursing profession will be discussed also in the afternoon. Four UVM students will participate in a panel which will describe the four years in the course. Each student will outline one college year. Taking part will be Susan Young, Perkinsville, Marcella Webbe, Springfield; Ruth Lambert, Middlebury; and Nancy Arnold, Gettysburg, Pa. Miss Faye Crabbe, Chairman of the nursing department, will act as moderator for the panel. She will also speak about nursing in general.

Following this meeting, UVM student nurses will conduct a guided tour of the Mary Fletcher Hospital. Arrangements have also been made for a tour of the DeGoesbriand Memorial Hospital.

Richard J. Hopp, Associate Professor of Horticulture, attended the International Horticultural Congress in Nice, France, April 11 to 15. He was one of 1,500 persons representing 70 nations.

Dental Hygiene

The two-year program in dental hygiene at the University will be explained and demonstrated during the morning. After a talk by Miss Phyllis M. Quinby, assistant director of the school, freshman students will demonstrate their work on the dentech, including the artificial mouth. Instrumentation techniques, polishing of teeth, carving of individual teeth out of wax and drawing of all teeth, drawing of tissues for courses in histology and embryology will also be shown.

Senior students in dental hygiene will demonstrate an actual "prophylaxis" treatment with a patient which includes scaling, polishing, and examination of the teeth and mouth, taking an X-ray and developing and processing an X-ray film; giving a typical flouride treatment in the clinic, and plaster pouring and model making.

A tour of the dental hygiene school and its facilities will be conducted by senior students following these demonstrations. Students also will see displays of educational materials, models for teaching purposes and textbooks used by the hygienists.

Sciences

The departments of chemistry, physics, zoology, and mathematics will hold a joint meeting for the high school interested in science and mathematics in the afternoon. A panel will be made up of Professors Reuben Torch from the zoology department, Albert Crowell from the physics department, Clinton Cook from the chemistry department, and Julius Dwork from the mathematics department. Each faculty member will give a 15-minute talk on the opportunities in his particular field, followed by a question period.

Opportunities In Engineering

For those juniors interested in engineering, the civil, electrical, management and mechanical phases of this career will be discussed in the afternoon meeting. Edd R. McKee, dean of the College of Technology, will give a short introduction and talk about the highlights, training, and opportunities in this field. A movie further explaining the various possibilities will be shown and bulletins will be distributed.

Tours of UVM's engineering facilities will be held after this general meeting. Students will see the laboratories of the departments of civil, electrical, and mechanical engineering.

Open Classes

Among the special college classes that will be open during this High School Day are Spanish, mathematics, English, physics, and animal and dairy husbandry.

Special topics will be taken up in these classes, including Mark Twain's "Life on the Mississippi" in the English class; the "test for divisibility" in mathematics; and "dairy cattle selection" in animal and dairy husbandry. The question, "What is an electron?" will be the subject of the physics class.

The Spanish and mathematics classes will be held from 11 to 11:50 a.m., whereas English, physics, and animal and dairy husbandry will meet from 12 to 12:50 p.m. This is to enable a student to witness more than one class.

Military Display

Another featured exhibit will be in the Gymnasium where there will be the largest display of army-air equipment and weapons ever assembled on campus.

Center of the display is to be the U.S. Army Progress Exhibit furnished by the Department of the Army Office of Public Information. Included in the exhibit is the latest Army surface-to-air missile, the Hawk, and three-dimensional presentations of the latest in Army equipment.

The indoor display in the Gymnasium will also feature a small-arms display, a miniature artillery range which spectators will be invited to operate and a film presentation of the rugged training of Army Rangers.

Weapons and equipment scheduled for the outdoor display include a 75mm radar-controlled antiaircraft gun, an Army tank and various tracked and amphibious vehicles of the Vermont National Guard.

A platoon of mortars complete with the fire direction center will be in simulated operation on the campus south of the Gymnasium and Army helicopters are planned for on-the-ground inspection.

Not only will the Army display be opened to the guests at High School Day, but also to the public of the Burlington area on Friday and Saturday from 10:00 a.m. until 3:00 p.m.

Campus Tour

The Women's physical education department will present demonstrations in dance, fencing, and lacross. High school students will be able to learn what is done in the physical education field on the college level and to find out about the opportunities in health, physical education, and recreation. A tour of the facilities in Southwick will also be given.

"Open house" will be held by departments in the fields of chemistry, agriculture, medicine, and political science. The laboratories in Science Hall will be in operation for this purpose and questions will be answered by student guides.

The greenhouse, poultry plant, agricultural engineering building, and dairy and research barns will be open for inspection, in addition to the dairy building. Here students will be able to observe milk-processing and cheese-making.

The departments of medical technology, radiology, and physical therapy of the Mary Fletcher Hospital will be available to students. Also the World Affairs Information Center and the Government Clearing House in the Old Mill will be open.

There will be an exhibit of animal and poultry diseases and artificial breeding in the Hills Building, and a display of mathematic instruments and models on the second floor of Waterman to further supplement the meetings and tours.

There will be many more exhibits, demonstrations, and open houses during the day. The staff of Billings Library has planned an all-day display in career-planning in library science. This exhibit will feature catalogues from library schools, available librarianships, posters, photographs of librarians at work, and careers available in library science. The staff will be available throughout this time to answer questions.

Liberal Arts?

One more feature on the agenda of the college day is a discussion entitled "What do we mean by liberal arts?" by George V. Kidder, dean of the College of Arts and Sciences. All students interested in the liberal arts curriculum will hear Dean Kidder explain the set-up of the program, including the general and the pre-professional curricula. A question period will follow his talk.

Planning Committee

The planning committee responsible for setting up the High School Day is headed by Dean Lyman Rowell. The committee members include representatives from the various colleges. These included Reuben Torch, from Arts and Science, Steve Knight, from the College of Technology, Marguerite McNeil, from the College of Education, Joan Reid, from the College of Home Economics, Walter Stultz and James Bates from the College of Medicine, Freda Phillips, from the Women's Physical Education department, Capt. Thos. H. Johns and Lt. Graham C. Davis, from Air and Military Science departments, Albert M. Smith, from Agriculture, Larry Van Benthuysen, from Public Relations, John Monk, Food Service, Phyllis Quinby, Dental Hygiene, Morrison Haviland, Library, Norma L. Woodruff, Nursing, Harold Collins, Admissions, and Howard Bennett, Music.

memorandum considers suggestions for improving communications between the several segments of the University. The University Council recognizes the problem of communications between different groups within the University as a critical one in the effective operation of the University, but considers the proposal as presented not practical in its present structure. Although the proposal seems not to be practical in its present form the University Council has agreed to undertake a study to clarify and resolve this problem. The Personnel Deans of the University Council have been assigned the responsibility to work jointly with Student Association Council on this project.

The third proposal of the memorandum concerns modification of the policy adopted by the University Council on February 20 1958. Several alternative policies on the use of alcoholic beverages were considered while the existing policy statement was being developed for submission to the University Council for action. The third proposal presented by the AP (MW) committee is identical to an alternative plan considered and rejected. The members of the University Council are unanimous in their conviction that the philosophy upon which the current policy is based is educationally sound for this University. They are equally convinced that the policy now in force sets the standards and defines the social climate which are in the best interests of the University community. Therefore, the third proposal submitted in the memorandum cannot be accepted.

Classroom Classics

It was one of those blistering days. I had called on a student to read aloud a brief paragraph from an essay. This he did, laboriously. When he finished, I asked him to comment on the significance of the passage which he had just read. His earnest reply brought even the sleepiest student to an hilarious awakening. For he said, "I am sorry, sir, but I wasn't listening."

Education

Russia's winning of the space satellite race may be only a reflection of a race the United States has been losing for some time. The race is the one for education and progress in general. High schools throughout the country are overcrowded and understaffed, but the colleges are also inadequate, buried under archaic and unwise planning. A survey taken by students at Iowa University showed that schools in the Middle East as well as Europe require their students to take three to four years of science and math courses. In the United States the requirement is two years of a science and a math course.

Each year a large number of teachers leave the profession; each year the number of children increases. Some communities are interested in obtaining the best possible education for their children and do raise teachers' salaries. Even in Texas, the educators are experimenting with television training for teaching, but they get teachers who are unacquainted with educational techniques. The term "dedicated man" can be applied to teachers just as it is applied to the research scientist, the struggling artist or the writer with a vision to give to other men's minds. But teachers attracted to the field cannot continue to live on dedication and devotion alone. Prestige and pride in one's work are powerful aids to vocational happiness, but will not help the pocketbook if we find this pocketbook TOO slim.

In New Mexico, the state spent eight million dollars on a new penitentiary and twenty-seven million on roads, but cut the University of New Mexico's budget by more than $300,000. No wonder the relative value of high education is low when it has to take a back seat to highway projects and state penitentiaries. Education is the bulwark of democracy, yet we take it lightly.

To you high school students visiting this campus, colleges have the same problems. The increase in enrollments, the rising cost of living and the inadequate teaching facilities are all manifestations of the problem. We are students and the proverbial leaders of tomorrow; we can see errors and we can change them for the future. But the majority of us are content to sit on our comfortable rear-end in class all morning and not to stir any of the cells of our brains. We would rather search for the memorized fact, for the already digested and neatly-outlined opinion, instead of the truth. This idea of the status quo is a terrible threat to modern politics and to modern living.

Our warning to you high school students is to attend a college of your choice and to stir your brain cells. Go to college with the intent and willingness to learn and to apply your knowledge, because you can be the key to the problems of education whether it is grammar school, high school, or college. Our school systems need some radical changes, both in curriculum and size. School reorganization is a step in the right direction, but it is a step that should have been taken long ago. Let's not wait until the Russians settle Mars before we make a move to revamp our schools.

Progress Report

[illegible] is the result of a meeting of students from the [illegible] colleges of [illegible] that [illegible] the universities [illegible] that we believe that a better informed student body can better appreciate the problems and possibilities involved in student government. We would also like to present views of students for their comment and approval with the hope that this will stimulate student interest and initiative, and in the long run, improve student-government relations.

The Council is supporting the revitalization of Vermont Conference this spring. This conference is one of the most rewarding events sponsored by student groups on this campus. Speakers of renown speak to the campus and discuss matters of world and national importance. Students thereby have the opportunity to hear and to judge these comments. This year the conference will be held on the weekend of April 24 through 26. We encourage the entire student body to attend this year's Vermont Conference.

The Council cannot overemphasize the fact that student action is needed if the student association is to be effective. The problem of communication between students and the combined administration and faculty is a serious one. If any member of the student body has any suggestions or questions pertaining to student life on the UVM campus see a council member and ask his help or advice. He has the resources, experience and the established framework of Student Association to help you, or he can refer you directly to someone who will be in the position to "get things done". Give us the opportunity to help you to initiate action. We will do our best.

Another area of S.A. support which is coming up very shortly is Junior Week. It is our policy to give our wholehearted support to all classes in any of their class projects. Junior Week has a fine tradition behind it which is, in a sense, a unifying force for the Junior Class. It is our hope that we shall witness the growth and expansion of this event and that other class projects, such as February Freshman Weekend, will receive a greater amount of student interest and support. These activities accompanied by class spirit should be, and we hope will be, an important phase of your collegiate life. Support your class!

May we remind you that almost anything you would like to know about student life here at Vermont can be found in the "Info for Wheels" booklet which is available in the COSA Office.

This has been the second in a series of articles by your executive committee. It is our hope that these articles are informative and valuable to you, and that they will help you to a better knowledge of and a greater interest in your student government and its job.

Campus Snooper

by Bob Krauser

After a short vacation and a week of recuperating, I return to the printed page.

Life at Vermont goes on as usual, without any major changes. It's funny that we think we have it bad; yet at Brooklyn College both the editorial board and the faculty advisory committee to the student newspaper resigned in protest against the University President's high-handed and arbitrary methods. Now is an appropriate time for a quote from the late Supreme Court Justice Murphy, "From time immemorial despots have used real or imagined threats to the public welfare as an excuse for needlessly abbrogating human rights."

From the Mississippian comes a terrible tale: the little chap was sitting on the curb with a cigarette in his mouth and a V.O. bottle in his hand when an elderly lady came by to him. "Sonny, why aren't you in school?" she asked. "Ma'am, I'm only three!"

On April 24th and 25th an extremely enlightening and stimulating affair is going to be held at UVM. The affairs is the Vermont Conference; a truly terrific event. The conference is being held again this year after a lapse of three years. The topic for this year, "Our Values, Transformation or Degeneration?" is a very timely subject. Our present generation has been called everything from "beat" to "lost" to "wild" and our contemporary American society has been praised for its accomplishments and knocked for its failings. The Vermont Conference will bring to UVM, men of knowledge and experience who can intelligently analyze and discuss the America in which we live.

In the keynote speech, Thursday evening, Ashley Montagu, a world famous anthropologist and sociologist, will discuss the values by which human beings have lived and analyze man's needs and why they are or are not being satisfied. Dr. Montagu will present a thorough explanation of man's basic nature and show how we as members of the Western World have developed our value system in response to demands of present day life.

It is against the background of this opening speech that the two panel discussions will be held on Friday.

The Friday afternoon panel will feature Jerome Davis and Hillary Putnam. Dr. Davis, a widely respected figure in education and sociology will discuss our present foreign policy, questioning whether we are building or retarding peace. Are we exploiting peaceful means to the fullest in our dealings with Russia? Are we perhaps putting too much emphasis on potential on actual force instead of negotiation? Are we being moral in our dealings in world affairs?

Dr. Putnam, a man of stature in the field of the philosophy of science, will discuss the objective and subjective attitudes in science and the humanities. The objectivity of scientific developments vs. the subjectivity of its applications. Is science being wisely used or is it being prostituted to satisfy the selfish desires of ambitious men? Do our values themselves need to be changed or must we only be more selective in applying them?

The Friday evening panel has the makings of a real humdinger. The panelists are Peter Vierich, Lewis Hartz, and Ernest van den Haag.

Dr. Vierich believes in a new conservatism for America. There has been, in overabundance by the conformists and non-conformists in American life, have we, in a desire to keep up with our fast moving civilization, overadjusted to the point of fatalism and perhaps cast off the dee, end?

Committee Finds Fault With Homecoming Plans

At the November 8th meeting of the Student Advisory committee, a special committee was formed to evaluate the true situation with reference to the nature, extent and causes of the adverse criticism of the Vermont Varieties and of the nature and extent of the difficulties arising from the coordination and scheduling of the Homecoming program. It's aim was to investigate the Vermont Varieties as to quality of performance and of their behaviour within the pattern of Homecoming weekend. The study was divided into two aspects: to determine the nature and extent of the objections to the Varieties, and examine the processes associated with the coordination and scheduling of the student activities in the recent Homecoming program.

The reactions to the "Varieties" of a heterogenous audience consisting of parents, alumni, faculty and students are found to be either favorable or unfavorable. The unfavorable criticism centered around three areas: the satirical element failed to materialize rendering the performance unsatisfactory, the performance, in parts, was "raunchy," and certain aspects were in bad taste. The material presented was unsuited to a homecoming audience whereby if it was presented to a homogeneous audience of students might have met with completely favorable reactions.

The responsibility of coordinating and scheduling student-sponsored activities was charged to the Homecoming Committee consisting of members of the Junior honoraries. It was found that no special effort had been made by the committee to concern themselves with the plans of groups scheduling activities during Homecoming Weekend with reference to integrating them into the program. When the university players requested that its performance be scheduled for an additional evening performance, no formal agreement could be reached due to personality conflicts and the laissez-faire attitude assumed by the committee as long as no conflicts in scheduling arose.

The above findings indicated a failure on the part of both groups to take into consideration the general benefit of the University community in the total Homecoming program. They indicated a weakness of the Homecoming Committee and a lack of general interpretation of role and formation of procedure in the area of Homecoming Committee planning.

It was also the judgement of the committee that the Vermont Variety group failed in its responsibility to consider the production in total context of a Homecoming program. The results of the investigation concerning scheduling and coordination are being taken into consideration by the Junior Honoraries in regard to the future plans and programs for a Homecoming Committee.

Round Table Presents Speeches

By EDITH KAPLAN

"Life in the Communist Shadow" will be the next discussion presented by the Round Table. Professor Doane of the Romance Language department, who travelled through U.S.S.R. two years ago and Colonel White of the Military Science department, who worked as liason with the Communists in East Germany, will provide, what should prove to be, a very informative and interesting evening on this general subject.

The speeches will be presented in the Klifa Room of the Klifa Club, which is located on Pearl Street on Saturday, April 26. Dinner will be served at 6 P.M. and the discussion at 7:15. Dinner reservations must be made in advance and can be done so through Pete Snow or CeCe Meloney.

Keep this Saturday night open and be prepared for an interesting and enjoyable evening.

Sir King-Hall

partook in war's violent forms (as a naval officer), for the present when he preaches the abolition of nuclear weapons.

Sir Stephan feels that in this age, with its new means of waging war we must change our ideas to meet these changes more directly. For King-Hall the object of war is "to change the enemy's mind," and violence is merely a last resort. Therefore, he recommends that the free world change its policy, so that we may take the offensive rather than sit back and wait until the western world can swing to the defense.

The speaker, of course, wants the free nations to take the offensive and overcome the communist dominated countries by non-violent means. Because of the biological problems involved, the use of nuclear weapons must be strictly controlled, and King-Hall felt that a unilateral renunciation of atomic weapons on Britain's part would be a successful offensive, and yet defensive measure. The lecturer also suggested that no countries in addition to those presently possessing nuclear weapons, be allowed to develop such armaments, and that the U.N. form an inspection committee to operate in all countries, except the United States and the U.S.S.R., not only to limit further development and more extensive testing, but also as a means of testing the feasibility of such an investigating team, so that later it might be extended over the world.

The lecture was thought-provoking and enlightening in our present day situation and yet many observers felt Sir Stephan to be basically naive. The idea that one nation will be able to remain peace with a warlike nation at its borders is not only naive, but perhaps foolish. He may also be criticized on the basis of his being self-contradictory. At one point he criticized England's defense department's White Paper and later allowed his own remarks to fall prey to the same fallacious reasoning that he censored in this Paper.

In closing, it must be noted that the attendance at this event might be rated from poor to disgraceful. Are there only fifty people on a campus of 3,000 interested not necessarily in international relations but in the moral affairs of this devastating age? Perhaps this statistic will be of use to the next critic of UVM.

UVM Represented At Engineering Conference

Host this year to the annual Region 1 American Society of Mechanical Engineers Student Branch Conference was Massachusetts Institute of Technology. The Conference was held April 11 and 12 at Cambridge.

The main purpose of the Conference was to provide for the presentation of technical papers by mechanical and management engineering students. These papers were based on any pertinent original work in the mechanical or management engineering field.

Robert B. Brown, South Burlington, received fourth prize in the student paper presentation contest for his paper entitled "Some Aspects of Modern Management Techniques." A total of 15 papers were entered in the contest.

In addition, the University of Vermont section received: a $25 prize for having the second largest delegation in attendance at the conference; a certificate for having enrolled in their student section, the largest percentage of eligible students at their school; and the "man-mile" trophy for having the largest product of number of men in delegation, times the number of miles traveled to the conference.

Besides the presentation of papers, the activities at the Conference were many and varied. Banquets and luncheons were given at which awards were made and speakers prominent in the field of science and engineering were heard. Student officers from colleges and universities in New England and New [illegible] and host MIT provided an [illegible] of the [illegible] activities. All of these activities added to a very busy and enjoyable two days and contributed immensely to the professional development of the student engineers.

Those who attended from UVM were: John R. Fly, Jericho; Bernard Smith, Milton; Roger A. Rivers, Burlington; James L. Benson, Essex Junction; Eric A. Young, Perkinsville; Marshall J. Armstrong, Burlington; Frederick Rutter, Burlington; Malcolm I. Rosen[illegible], Springfield; Rodney D. Hardy, Fairfax; Wilder T. Pray, Burlington; Stanley Smyrski, Rutland; Frank Reickert, Burlington; John Breed, Burlington and Robert L. Merrill, Burlington.

Sigma XI Lecture

by Dick Penn

On April 16, at the Hills Building Auditorium, the Vermont Chapter of Sigma Xi presented a lecture by Dr. Albert C. Zettlemoyer. The lecture was entitled "Molecular Interactions With the Surfaces of Solids."

Dr. Zettlemoyer is presently professor of chemistry at Lehigh University and is director of National Printing Ink Research Institute. He holds a B.S. Degree in Chemical Engineering, a M.S. in Organic Chemistry and a Ph.D. in Physical Chemistry. Dr. Zettlemoyer has published over 70 publications in the fields of surface chemistry, rheology and dispersions.

The Society of the Sigma Xi is an honorary scientific society. It is primarily concerned with scientific research. There are two forms of membership in the society. One form of membership is associate membership, which is open to seniors who show an ability to do scientific research and have maintained a full membership which is usually for Ph.D.'s who have published research in scientific journals.

Dr. Hartz, an author of renown, is concerned with the liberal tradition in our culture. Our heritage and the development of liberalism. Is the liberalism for which America has always been known living on in our present society or is it being stymied and strangled by an insecure people?

Dr. Van den Haag, a famous economist and sociologist, is a sharp and entertaining speaker who greatly enlivened the last Vermont Conference. His sometimes outspoken statements, though shocking at first, are acknowledged to contain a great amount of truth. He will examine our mass culture and system of mass production. Are we sacrificing too much in our cultural values to satisfy our wish to do and have everything in mass amounts? Do the means justify the end? Exactly, what ends are we striving for? Do we know what we're doing or are we just existing and groping?

The moderator for the conference will be C. Leonard Hoag, Professor of Contemporary Civilization at Middlebury College.

As you can see from the above, the speakers will give our culture, as we know it, the proverbial, "once-over" and not lightly. I have interpreted many question under the main topics of the various participants. They are questions which we often ask ourselves but seldom answer. Admittedly there are no concrete answers and the conference does not exist to produce them. The purpose of the conference is to provide substantiated and intelligent views on these vexing and complicated problems.

Program Cover Is Work Of Art

Students with a tasteful eye will be sure to notice the design on the cover of the Fine Arts Festival program which was recently released. This design was drawn by Elaine Schneider; it was chosen as the best of a number of compositions submitted by students in the Festival design contest.

The drawing, an abstract in black and white, was selected on the basis of "simplicity, directness, originality, dignity, and appropriateness of theme."

Elaine Schnedier, a junior majoring in speech, has been active during her years at U.V.M. A member of Alpha Epsilon Phi sorority, she is presently involved in WRUV and the University Players -- she was recently seen in the production of Man and Superman -- in addition to being art editor of Centaur. She was recently chosen as one of three UVM students who will be represented on Mademoiselle's National College Board.

This is not the first time she has won in competition with her art work. When she was a freshman, she won the Junior Week poster contest. Her dramatic experience is also extensive. In the past she has been in summer stock.

Miss Schneider, who comes from Bronx, New York, plans to make a career of fashion design when she graduates from college.

Fashion Board

Three UVM girls will be represented this year on Mademoiselle's national College Board: Elaine W. Schneider, '59, Arts and Science; Sue Thomas, '58, Ag; and Judith Watson, '58, Ag. They are among the 760 students who competed with applicants from colleges all over the country to win places on the Board, according to Mademoiselle.

As College Board members, they will represent their campuses and report to Mademoiselle on college life and the college scene. Each girl will complete two assignments that will help her explore her interests and abilities in writing, editing, fashion, advertising or art, in competition for the twenty Guest Editorships to be awarded by the magazine at the end of May.

The Guest Editors will be brought to New York for four weeks next June to help write, edit and illustrate Mademoiselle's 1958 August College issue. Their transportation will be paid to and from New York and they will receive a regular salary for their work.

In addition to their work on the magazine, Guest Editors will interview outstanding men and women in their chosen fields to help clarify their career aims, will visit fashion showrooms, publishing houses and advertising agencies and will be Mademoiselle's guests at a round of party and theatre-going.

Orientation Elections

The Student Association committee to take charge of this fall's Freshman Orientation Week was chosen at a recent meeting. Co-chairmen of the committee are Bette Samson and Charles Hines.

Co-chairmen of the various sub-committees are as follows: Banquet committee, Doris McCaine and Peter Rabinovitch; picnic committee, Joe Nichols and Janet Ledbury; Freshman Mixer committee, Sandra Trotman and Avery Smith; men's registration, Al Smith; women's registration, Jean Robbins; publicity committee, Sue Graf and Al Peterson; varieties committee, Nancy Agosta and Paul O'Conner; handbook committee, Betty McDonald and Ed Olson; treasurer, Fred Mandell.

Anyone interested in working on any of the various committees may sign up in the COSA office.

Student National Education Association meeting has been postponed because of conflict with I.F.C. Sing. Watch the bulletin boards for further notice as to date, time and place for this month's meeting.

Judy Flick Wins Campus Glamour Contest

Out of a group of eleven contestants, the Interfraternity Council chose Judy Flick to represent UVM in Glamour magazine's "Best Dressed Girl Contest." The other selected contestants were: Paula Morin, Mary Cox, Mary Lee Morrill, Karen Larsen, Barbara Crocker, Nanette Gros-Daillon, Nancy Reimer, Anita Scheman, and Doree McCain.

Judy is a twenty-one year old senior from Valley Stream, Long Island. After a trip to Europe this summer, Judy plans to become an elementary school teacher. As a senior, Judy may recall four successful and happy years at the University of Vermont. Campus affairs have absorbed her attention as she has been active in the Republican Club, Kake Walk Ticket Committee, Senior Class Committee, and also House President. A member of Delta Delta Delta sorority, Judy was an excellent treasurer this year.

Her appearance, which helped her to win the title, is sparked by an individuality and freshness that makes her outstanding. A vivacious smile and a poised manner further increases Judy's excellent chance of winning the national contest.

Conference

[illegible] shall also consider the [illegible] system under which we in the Western world live.

After the address, coffee will be served in the Waterman Lounge where interested persons may meet and talk with Dr. Montagu.

The first of the two panel discussions which will be held in the Chapel is to be Friday afternoon April 25 at 4:00. The panelists will be Dr. Jerome Davis and Dr. Hilary Putnum.

Dr. Davis is a well known educator and writer who has been called one of America's greatest sociologists. He will talk on the subject of "Are We Building or Retarding Peace?" Dr. Davis feels we can not change others by force, and that we should make greater use of morals in foreign affairs. He would like to see religion in action as applied to our foreign affairs.

Dr. Putnum is an outstanding figure widely known for his work on the topic of "Philosophy of Science." He will discuss the objective and subjective attitudes in science and the humanities in connection with our values. Dr. Putnum feels that when considering the present values of society it is not always a question of change but rather one of selection.

The Friday evening panel will begin at eight o'clock. The members of the panel are Dr. Peter Vierich, Dr. Louis Hartz and Dr. Ernest Van den Haag.

Dr. Vierich is a highly regarded educator and writer who has won the Pulitzer prize. He has been recognized as the leader of a new conservatism in America. Dr. Vierich will speak about overadjustment by the conformist and non-conformist in American life.

Dr. Hartz, a recent addition to the Conference, is currently Professor of Government and Chairman of the Committee on Higher Degress in the History of American Civilization at Harvard. He is the author of Economic Policy and Democratic Thought and The Liberal Tradition in America. Dr. Hartz will speak on the liberal tradition in our culture.

Dr. Van den Haag is a famous economist and sociologist who has written extensively about our culture. He shall speak about the erosion of cultural values by mass production and mass culture. This will include the rising power of consumers and such topics as the adulteration of past culture by mass media, as well as the psychological effects and the economic causes of the above.

A get-together will be held in the Waterman Lounge after the panel discussion at which time the students may question and talk with the individual speakers.

The moderator for the conference will be C. Leonard Hoag who is currently Professor of Contemporary Civilization at Middlebury College.

The Conference promises to be a stimulating and thought provoking affair.

Miss Bogan Discusses Modern Poetry

By Tanya Lehman

Miss Louise Bogan expressed optimism on the state of contemporary poetry as she spoke Tuesday evening, March 17, to the Vermont Chapter of Phi Beta Kappa, the Research Club, and guests. Entitled "American Poets at Mid-Century", the lecture took place in the Waterman Faculty Lounge, which was crowded for the occasion. The talk climaxed Miss Bogan's two day visit to UVM. During this time she also spoke to classes in the English Department and held an informal discussion of poetry.

Her directness and simplicity of wording the talent which has won her awards time and time again, Miss Bogan traced the background and development of contemporary poetry. She also spoke of the change in the new criticism; now that it is no longer necessary to defend poetry against charges of obscurity and noncommitment, material written ten years ago is obsolete.

Rid of this burden of defense, Miss Bogan was free to explain modern poetry, which she termed "organic poetry growing out of the poet the way a tree grows from the soil". This is opposed to views prominent at the end of the nineteenth century of poetry as a tool, a weapon, or a game. At that time poets mistook their poems for their lives and their lives for their poetry. Today, there is a confrontation of reality in poetry which is "dramatic and symbolic within the compass of lyric form".

Because of excesses stemming from the New Criricism the poem became "a child kidnapped from its mother and removed from its native land". To fully experience a poem the reader must in some way resemble the poet, though he may not be able to share the poet's ability as a seer.

Miss Bogan explained that this primitive feeling for the poet as a seer and one who "articulates human nature" is returning. Poets are once more becoming aware of their responsibilities in this capacity and "blindness to exceptional poetic talent has disappeared". As advice to young poets, Miss Bogan discouraged the attempt to be original, for this often leads to affectation. True originality comes only after study and open imitation of the works and methods used by previous authors.

In elaborating the signs of health in contemparary poetry, Miss Bogan said that it embodies "freedom accompanying proficiency and skill from experiment". There is a growing tendency to help and hear poets. The audience is widening. Poetry is getting from the printed page to its "rightful place as sound to be listened to". Poets are "unashamed to glory in song" and they observe with new sensativity.

Miss Bogan's fine sense of humor was an integral part of the talk. Discussing the future roots modern poetry has given, she said, "A sure sign of recognition and acceptance is that it (modern poetry) has begun to produce cliches."

THE PROBLEM CORNER

Referring to last week's problem, Anne's present age is 18 years. When Mary was Anne's present age, six years ago, Anne was 12 years old, which is just half of Mary's present age.

Correct solutions to this problem were submitted by Allan Greenfield, Ann [illegible], Prof. J.A. Newlander and Paul Trudell.

Problem:

A sponge contained 70% water. After the sponge was given a slight squeeze it contained 60% water. Exactly what per cent of the original water was removed?

Leave solutions to these problems at the office of Professor Schoonmaker, Room 141, Waterman, no later than Monday of the week following publication of theproblem.

Full-time, off-the-job GRADUATE ENGINEERING TRAINING helps speed careers at Western Electric

RIGHT NOW, Western Electric engineers are back "on campus" in a unique new Graduate Engineering Training Program. They're attending courses at special study centers established by the company in Chicago, New York and Winston-Salem, N. C. It's a rare chance to study advanced engineering and get full pay at the same time.

These "students" are guided by a teaching staff of top Western Electric engineers, outside experts and professors from leading universities. They're learning the latest technical developments — boning up on everything from manufacturing processes to computer applications.

When the program reaches its peak, some 2,000 to 3,000 Western Electric engineers will attend each year . . . studying in an atmosphere as close to a university graduate school as is practical for industry.

This engineering "university" was born because of the ever-increasing complexity of Western Electric's job as the manufacturing and supply unit of the Bell Telephone System. Today W. E. engineers are right in the middle of exciting fields like microwave radio relay, electronic switching and automation. Graduate engineering training is designed to spur their development and advancement throughout their careers.

Besides taking part in the Graduate Engineering Training Program, engineers are eligible for our Tuition Refund Plan for after hours study at nearby colleges.

In short, there's a unique opportunity at Western Electric to develop a professional career and work in the exciting world of communications.

STUDY CENTER. New York's Coliseum Tower houses one of three study centers set aside for W E's Graduate Engineering Training Program. Other centers are in Chicago and Winston Salem, N. C. The engineers above are talking over product design principles, one of many subjects covered in Introduction to Western Electric Engineering.

HOW GRADUATE ENGINEERING TRAINING WOULD WORK FOR YOU

The program gets under way after approximately six months on-the-job experience. First off:

1. A nine-week Introduction to Western Electric Engineering helps you learn about your W E engineering field, sharpens your skills in getting ideas across. Technical subjects include communications systems, product design principles, military electronic systems.

2. Another nine-week program, General Development, held after your first year with us, helps broaden and strengthen your engineering background. Besides technical subjects, you receive grounding in human relations and the socio-economic importance of engineering.

3. To meet continuing needs for formalized technical training, Advanced Development offers four-week courses tailored to the individual needs of the engineers selected to attend. These courses are designed to help develop creative engineering abilities. Computer applications, switching theory, feedback control systems, and semiconductor devices and circuits are sample topics covered in this phase.

"Players" Catch Humor Of Shaw's Comedy

by Arnold D. Berliner

[illegible] March 27th and [illegible] IV a [illegible] Shaw's "Man and Superman," Shaw's comedy of the battle of the sexes, as [illegible] the University [illegible] evening [illegible] high comedy and philosophy [illegible] audience [illegible] this [illegible] and philosophy is an [illegible] Don Juan in [illegible] adventurer [illegible] treated as a [illegible] refuses to [illegible] society's laws and regulations. He is, though completely aware of the consequences involved. They are however, quite amusing and revealing as to the hopelessness of Man's situation when confronting Woman. This is brought about by the characterization of Tanner when in the presence of his agressor, Ann.

From the beginning of the play, Tanner's fate is evident; he is bound to fall into the clutches of Ann despite the individuality he maintains by following his instincts. Man's outlook remains hopeless throughout the entire action.

Steve Solomon is to be commended for his portrayal of the individualistic, yet doomed, Tanner. His performance was colorful and humorous, yet gave, at the same time, to the audience initiative to ponder over his words, thoughts and actions. Unfortunately, the same cannot be said for his leading lady. Dorothy DeCecio, although very attractive from the stage, did not fulfill the possibilities the part held. Perhaps, the character's control of the situations was written form of the play [illegible] to the young actress's [illegible] for she made no obvious [illegible] to control the actions on stage.

Michael Solby as [illegible] almost stole the show with [illegible] mouthed expressions [illegible] astonishment brought about [illegible] the open discussion of [illegible] Roger Madon performed [illegible] thusiastically; Art [illegible] with dignity; the chaufeur [illegible] the touch of the [illegible] and the remainder quite competently. The sets were [illegible] and extremely effective. As told, it was a most [illegible] evening of Shaw.

most recent work has been [illegible] Desk Set, Bus Stop, and Time is All. Dr. Bogorad is [illegible] chairman and a member of the English department. He has appeared in summer Shakespearian plays and also in both previous University reading productions of Awake and Sing and Our Town. [illegible] the history department. Professor Pooley is a member of the Neighbors Club and has appeared in many operettas.

The "Don Juan" scene will be performed as a reading with slight action, no scenery, and only the technical aids of lighting and sound system. It was cut out of the presentation which was given a few weeks ago because of its length and repetition of material brought out in the play proper.

As a dream sequence, this act serves to redevelop the central theme of the whole play - that of the evolution of man and superman. It concerns heaven and hell. In it Shaw emphasizes the importance of the brain, and he felt that physical perfection was measured by intellectual capacity. He believed in a purpose and not in romanticism. As he wrote, "Marriage proper combines the maximum of temptation with the maximum of opportunity." Thus he has portrayed Don Juan as the artist-man fanatically searching for a mother-woman who will build up his intellectual consciousness rather than fulfill her own natural cause.

Charles Laughton directed this scene in the early '[illegible] with a road company, and produced by Paul Gregory, the play had overwhelming success.

Industrial Trip

Trips to industrial companies in Vermont, New York, Canada, and Connecticut were on the agenda for 69 University of Vermont junior engineering students during the spring vacation. The four-day trips which began March 31, were required for graduation in the engineering field. The departments of civil, electrical, and mechanical engineering made different tours, each group led by a faculty member of the department.

N.E. Championships To Be Held At Burlington C.C.

by FRED ROBINSON

When the UVM golf team starts driving out golf balls in expectation of sunny days and warm weather, this is a sure sign that spring has "sprung" once again on Vermont. Coach Donnelly has been looking over his returning lettermen and prospects that will make up the nucleus of the team which opens its season in Amherst, Mass. against Rhode Island and UMass on May 2.

Returning Veterans

Returning from last year's squad are two seniors and two juniors. Bob Edelstein is the Captain and he and Bob Botsford will be playing their last season for the Cats. Brett Lazar, the individual Vermont State Champion in 1957, and Alan Crosby, each have another year of golf. These four men will be the big guns for Vermont this season. All are experienced veterans and can produce when the chips are down.

Sparkling New Prospect

A real good prospect for the Cats is sophomore John Harvey from Bennington, Vermont. John represented Vermont in the Junior Chamber of Commerce Championships last year and should greatly aid the Cats in the '58 campaign. Two fine men, Ed Walker and Brian King were lost by graduation.

N.E. Championships at Burlington C.C.

The highlight of UVM's season is the New England Championships which are being held at the Burlington Country Club, May 8-11. Last year the tournament took place at Williams College, Williamstown, Mass., and this year marks the first time that the championships will be played outside of the Massachusetts border! Thirty-two colleges take part in this event including UConn, Dartmouth, Boston College, Yale, Boston University, Holy Cross, Middlebury, and the always powerful, Williams College. This is a big occasion for the college golfers of New England and the UVM campus should be hopping during this event.

Seven Man Squad in N. E., - - Six Man Squad in N. Y.

Coach Donnelly stated that he will carry a seven man squad in all the New England meets and a six man team in all meets in New York State. Besides the New Englands, the Cats encounter ten other teams. Their season ends May 19 when they oppose Clarkson and St. Lawrence at Potsdam.

Fraternity Fracas

Phi Delta Theta captured the I.F.C. track meet by taking a total of 38 points of the 120 possible points. Delta Psi with a total of 26.5 points was second, and Sig Nu with 17.5 points was third. Kappa Sig, Phi Sig, and SAE, and TEP finished in that order.

The outstanding event of the meet was the tying of the IFC record by Roy Greene in the 220 yard dash. His time was a speedy 26.5 seconds. Dan Bianca, also of Phi Delt, placed first in the 30 yard dash, and second in both the broad jump and the 220 to cop individual honors in the meet. The mile run was captured by Dick Newton of Sig Phi in 5:23.6.

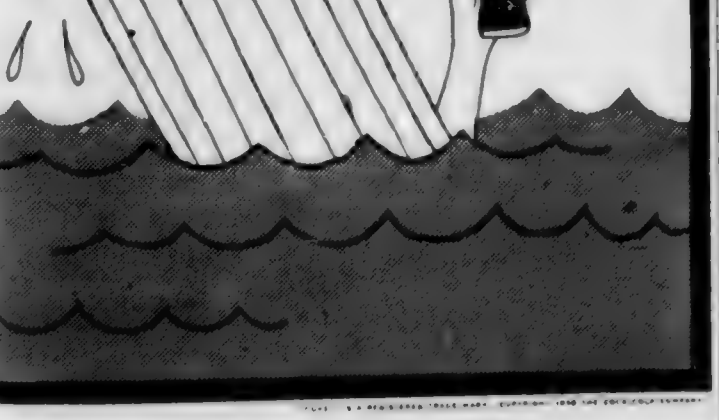
The relay was also won by Phi Delt. The time of Bianca, Greene, Petronacci and Fiddler was 2:56.6. Sig Nu was second, Phi Sig third, and Delt Psi fourth in this event.

In winning the meet Phi Delt took 5 first places, Sig Nu captured 3, and Delt Psi 2 first places. The other places in the meet were fairly evenly distributed among the first four teams.

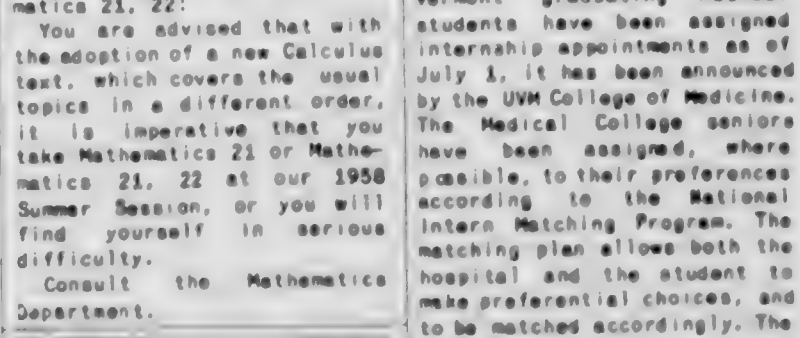
Faculty Handball

by ALAN SILVERMAN

The team of Capt. Johns and Archie Post are the winners of the Handball Tournament. As we predicted from the very onset, this twosome outclassed all other opposition. In their very first match they defeated Morris Simon and Lyman Gould; in subsequent matches they continued their winning ways by beating Ben Murdock and Fuzzy Evans and Sam MacDonald and Bert Wingate.



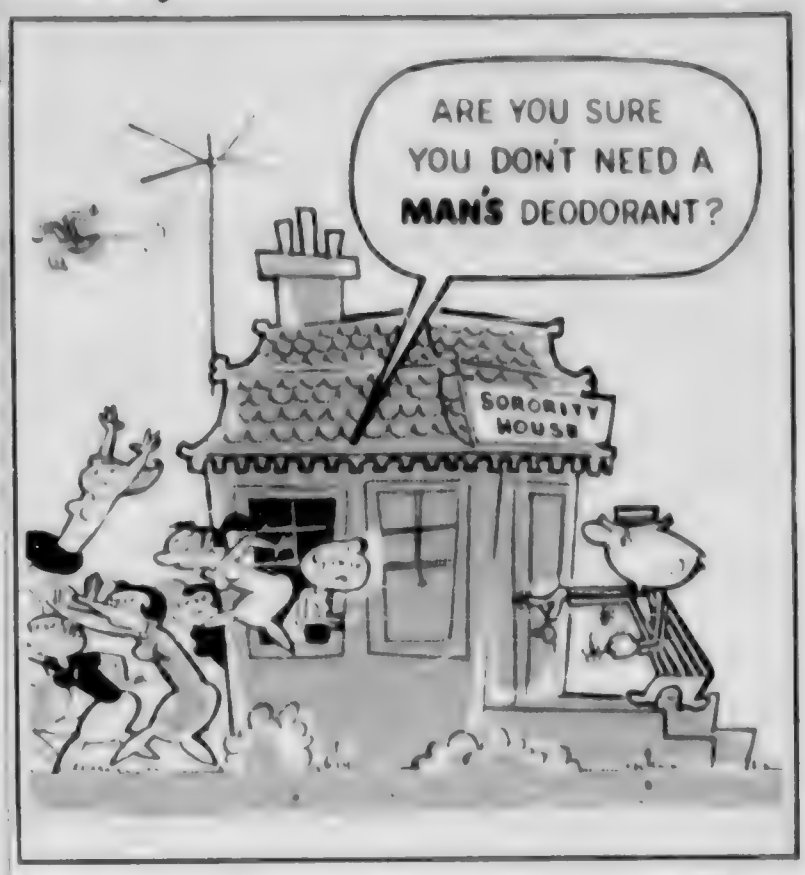
As Norm Strassburg, one of the participants in the tournament, put it, "Experience won over inexperience." Norm also felt that the tournament has created a lot of interest among other faculty members who did not participate this year. It is felt that next year the tournament will be more highly competitive, due to the gain of interest that has been developed these past couple of weeks.



VARSITY CLUB RAFFLE

During the past few days, many students have been stopping to gaze in awe at the 17" portable Admiral Television set, valued at $180 now on display in the University Store window in lower Waterman.

The set has been put there by the Varsity Club, and will be awarded to the winning raffle number holder at the Norwich-UVM baseball game on Monday, May 26. This is the first such contest sponsored by the V-Club and the money obtained from the raffle sales will be used to buy blankets for the club's senior athletes, and also to pay the remainder on the Stan Lefkowitz Memorial Trophy, which will be awarded at tonight's Lettermen's Dinner to the athlete best displaying proficiency in scholarship and extra-curricular activities.



The raffles are being sold for 50¢ each, and 3 for $1.00. They can be purchased from any Varsity Club member.

NOTICES

Several graduate research assistantships worth $2100 plus tuition are available in a new University of Vermont program leading to the degree of Ph.D. in Biochemistry.

The program is believed to be unique in that the departments in biochemistry in the University's medical and agricultural colleges are combining to offer the Ph.D. program. The result, according to spokesmen, is that "each candidate has an opportunity for an unusually broad experience in biochemistry."

The Admission Test for Graduate Study in Business, required for entrance by a number of graduate business schools or divisions throughout the country, will be offered on April 19 and July 26 of this year. Sample question and information regarding registration for and administration of the test are given in a Bulletin of Information.

Application and fees must be filed with the Admission Test for Graduate Study in Business, Educational Testing Service, 20 Nassau Street, Princeton, New Jersey, at least two weeks before the testing date desired.

Thirty-six University of Vermont graduating medical students have been assigned internship appointments as of July 1, it has been announced by the UVM College of Medicine. The Medical College seniors have been assigned, where possible, to their preferences according to the National Intern Matching Program. The matching plan allows both the hospital and the student to make preferential choices, and to be matched accordingly. The "new M.D.s" will be serving their internships in 12 different states, as a result of their assignments.

A change of date for the Cinema Art Club was announced today by Dr. Eugene Lepeschkin.

Because of his absence from the city the Club program will take place Saturday and Sunday nights at 8 p.m. at 75 Bilodeau Court instead of on Friday and Saturday nights.

Cats Victorious On March Through Dixie Beat Upsala & Georgetown; Split With GWU

The Spectator By Jerry Heller

Approximately midway in the Spring semester, the majority of the students at UVM cast aside their books and go home for a week's vacation. This year was no different from any other and everybody seemed to have enjoyed themselves immensely. If the university decided to take away this vacation I'm sure there would be great protest and the Student Rights Committee would be making demands far into the night. There is, however, a breed of students at this school who voluntarily sacrifice their Spring vacation every year. This particular breed is the baseball player who would rather participate in the national sport than relax at home with his parents, etc. . To get on a more serious note though, I would like to pay tribute at this time to people who not only sacrificed their Spring vacations but made a record that I'm sure everybody at the University of Vermont is proud of.

There were some unique characteristics to the 47th Annual Southern Trip. Some of these were:

The weather was extremely good for three of the four games. The team is usually plagued with bad weather on this trip but this year was a different story in more than one way.

At the Upsala game there was an excellent turnout of Vermont fans, students and alumni. In fact, the Vermont fans outnumbered the Upsala fans and cheered the team on to its first victory of the year. I'm sure that there would have been an even larger turnout at the Adelphi game which, unfortunately, was rained out. We should continue giving the team this fine support as they resoundingly proved their value on this trip.

Each team that UVM played had already played at least five games. This definitely magnifies the success of the trip as Vermont never had a chance to play outdoors until they reached Upsala for the first game. It seems that the batting and pitching practice, which was carried on intensively in the Cage, paid off as the team did extremely well in these departments. Naturally there was no chance to work on defense in these quarters and some defensive flaws were brought out.

Another unique feature of the tour was the appearance of the newly appointed president of UVM at one of the ball games. Mr. Fey made his appearance during the second inning of the first George Washington game. He introduced himself to Coach Ralph Lapointe who subsequently introduced the new president to the team. It seems that Mr. Fey took time out from his job to attend the game which was a fine gesture in itself. He stayed four innings and appeared to be quite interested in the team. The squad and Coach Lapointe were honored at his presence and proceeded to beat George Washington soundly. There isn't very much you can say when a person does something like that. This just seems to be another example of the fine type of man that we are getting for our president.

The players had a fair amount of time to themselves which they put to good use. On Saturday, following the second George Washington game which was held in the morning, there was an opportunity to see the historical spots of our nation's capital. The following day, Easter Sunday, those men who were from the New York area were lucky enough to get home for the day. Incidentally, there are two other morning games scheduled for this season which is something new. At the next one the team will have the opportunity to see a major league ball game in the afternoon.

This trip was obviously very successful and Coach Lapointe says that the squad had "wonderful spirit." Players like Russ Henrichs, Tom Tierney, and Marty Johnson who have quite a bit of baseball experience and are seniors had an excellent influence on the team and were a major factor on the trip. I, personally, have an even more optimistic attitude toward the coming season because of the results and I'm looking forward to seeing the Cats duplicate their excellent showing during the regularly scheduled season.

Perfect Weather, Perfect Performance

by PAUL STANTON

Each team this Spring, the Cats went on their 47th annual "Swing through Dixie," and once more sported an impressive win - loss mark, their best in recent years. The Lapointemen, picked as the "team to beat" in the Yankee Conference ahead of a vast array of power in every department, and ranked fourth in every contest.

UVM 9, Upsala 3.

Taking the field for the first time this Spring, Coach Lapointe gave the starting nod to Russ Artus, a veteran of last year's fine nine. Pete Carlson, who beat the Cats a year ago was the first chucker of three to face Vermont's batting bats.

Jerry Cassidy, sophomore shortstop combined with Artus to easily reduce the Garden Staters, by banging out three hits including a booming triple. Artus twirled a lofty four hitter to record the victory.

Bill Simonds, Cat first baseman who clouted two home runs in one game last year, continued to look good at the plate with two safeties in five trips.

The hosts drew first blood and took a first inning one run lead. UVM came back with one in the third, another in the fourth and a tally in the sixth to go ahead, 3-1. The Cats roared again in the eighth frame, with five runs scooting across the plate. Upsala pushed two runs through in their half of the inning; Vermont added another in the ninth to take it, 9-3.

UVM 8, Georgetown 2.

With concentrated hitting power and some fine pitching by sophomore lefthander Steve Cooper and junior southpaw Bob Koones, the Catamounts flattened Georgetown University, 8-2. Although leading from the fifth inning on, it was a ninth inning three run assault, featuring doubles by Marty Johnson and Capt. Tom Tierney that sent the Catamounts on to sew up the decision.

"Ace" Santa Croce set the batting pace by having a perfect day, with three-for-three, including a double and two walks, also driving two runs home and scoring another. Also contributing to the fourteen hit Vermont barrage was Tierney with three blows in four trips and Johnson with two doubles in four trips.

Steve Cooper displayed fine control, spacing six hits over the eight frames in which he worked. He struck out six with his blazing fast ball, while showing unusual early season control by issuing just two walks. Koones gave up two singles in the ninth inning but got out of it with two strikeouts and a fly ball to center.

Vermont registered in the first when Cassidy walked, moved to third on successive infield outs and rode home on Tierney's single. Georgetown tied it in the third when Hargaden, Stevens and Smith all touched Cooper for singles. A pair of runs in both the fifth and sixth gave UVM a 5-2 lead that Georgetown was never able to close. The big three run ninth settled the outcome.

The clouting Catamounts added their third victory in as many games by virtue of a ten hit, 11-8 win over George Washington University.

The starting nod went to Russ Henrichs who went six stanzas, gave up but five hits, struck out five and passed six. He left the game in favor of Marty Katz with a 10-3 lead. Katz was touched for five runs on seven hits and two walks as the Generals made an effort to catch up. Katz kept up his strikeouts though, fanning seven, and he turned back the Generals in the final frame after they had scored three times by getting a pair of pinch hitters on infield grounders.

Marty Johnson was the big gun in the Vermont attack as he went four for five. The Cats broke a 3-3 tie in the fourth with a four run outburst. The attack was featured with triples by Johnson and Jerry Cassidy. In the sixth Frank Hyman tripled home a run and scored another a minute later. From then on the Cats had little trouble in notching their third straight win.

GWU 8, UVM 7.

Coach Lapointe, after learning that the Villanova field would not be ready in time for the scheduled game, huddled with the GWU officials, and decided on another clash with the Generals.

The Catamounts had a 7-5 lead going into the last of the ninth. The Generals then proceeded to get to relief hurler Bob Flance for three hits, combined with two errors, for the three runs that gave GWU an even break in the two-game series.

Bob Knisley, a thorn in the side of the Cats in both games, broke it up with a two-out single. All three Generals' runs in the ninth were unearned.

Jerry Cassidy and Marty Johnson continued their sensational hitting, Cassidy having three for four, including two doubles and Johnson two singles in three trips to the plate.

Flance, who hit for starting pitcher Carl Carlson in the seventh, singled and scored one of the Cats' five runs in this frame that sent them to a 7-5 lead. UVM trailed, 2-5, going into the inning.

Flance later had another single but the Cats couldn't capitalize on their scoring chance in the top of the eighth. Vermont outhit the Generals 12-11, to continue hitting at a near .300 pace for the trip.

The scheduled game on Monday, April 7 against Adelphi was rained out, and so the sharp looking Catamounts returned from the South, 3-1. Coach Ralph Lapointe was pleased with the hitting and pitching, but still must "straighten out the infield." All in all, the entire team played solid ball throughout the trip.

Founders Day To Honor Many For Achievements

By Linda Sack

Alumnus of the University of Vermont's Class of 1951 and currently the municipal judge of Rutlenden County will be the speaker for Founders' Day, Thursday, May 1.

Judge Edward Costello is no stranger familiar with the event, which is also known as Honors' Day ceremony is held in the Ira Allen Chapel. At the 1948 morning program, he was inaugurated president of the Student Government. In other years at UVM, he was named to the Gold Key, Key and Serpent, and Boulder honorary societies at this same event.

The main purpose of the convocations, then, was to recognize the founders of the University. This year, as in the past few years, the program's aim is to recognize the academic achievements of the students. The Roll of Honor for high scholarship, awards, prizes, and honors are announced publicly for the first time. The new president of Student Association is also inaugurated at this time.

The academic procession of UVM faculty and senior students in dress will assemble at 10:00 A.M. and the ceremony, which the entire student body is invited to attend, will begin at 10:30 A.M. President Borgmann will preside.

A new feature on this year's program will be the awarding of a prize given by the Vermont Society for Certified Public Accountants.

The convocation speaker is a native of Rutland, Vermont. Before attending the University he was graduated for Mount St. Joseph Academy. In 1951 he completed his studies in law at Boston University Law School and passed his Vermont bar exams.

Besides being a judge, Costello is affilliated with the Smith and Yandell law firm in Burlington. He was the 1954 Republican State Campaign director and has also been named the Vermont chairman of citizens for Eisenhower group.

Costello resides in Burlington with his wife, the former Dorothy Wimett, UVM '44. They have four children.

Professor Nuquist, chairman of the Political Science Department, is in charge of the Honors' ceremony.

All classes from 10-12 a.m. on Thursday have been cancelled for this event.

Vermont Conference Offers Outstanding Educational Format

Dr. Peter Vierich

Speakers Are Well Known

by Helen Marcus

On Thursday evening, April 24th, at 8:00 P.M. the Vermont Conference will begin with a keynote address by Dr. Ashley Montagu in the Ira Allen Chapel. Two panel discussions will follow, one to be held on Friday afternoon, April 25th at 4:00 P.M. and the other on Friday evening at 8:00 P.M. both are to be conducted in the chapel. The topic under discussion for this year's Vermont Conference is to be "Our Values, Transformation or Degeneration?"

Dr. Ashley Montagu, one of the main speakers, is a versatile American scientist "who enjoys an international reputation as an anthropologist." His principal interest lies in bridging the gap between the biological and social sciences with a great emphasis on understanding the welfare of man. He is now a lecturer at the New School for Social Research in New York. English born, he was educated at the University of London and earned his doctorate in anthropology at Columbia University. He has held many professorships at various Universities. He has also served as Curator of physical anthropology at the Wellcome Historical Medical Museum in London and did extensive research in natural history at the British Museum. He has been the author of many books, including, "Immortality of Life" and "Man's Most Dangerous Myth: The Fallacy of Race." He is currently writing a book on the subject of world peace.

Dr. Montagu's address will prove most interesting and provocative. He shall consider the values by which human beings have everywhere lived and show that most of the troubles of man originate in the original sin against his nature, namely, in the failure to understand what man's needs in fact are, and the consequent violence that has been

Delt Psi And Pi Phi Win Top Honors At IFC Sing

By Jerry Edelstein

The Inter-Fraternity sing, which was held on Friday evening, April 18, proved to be one of the outstanding fraternity and sorority events of the years. All of the sororities and twelve of the fraternities presented songs for the competition. Before the start of the sing, a new cup donated by Alpha Epsilon Phi sorority in the memory of a sister was to be awarded to the leader of the sorority which won first place in the sing.

The program started out with Lambda Iota singing "Cramantoli" and "Deep River." This was followed by Alpha Delta Pi who sang "Ride the Chariot", Delta Psi with the "Delta Psi Ode," and "Good Night Ladies", Gamma Phi Beta with "A-round the Corner", Sigma Phi with "A Cadence Soft and Low" and "Wade in the Water", Kappa Alpha Theta with "Lullaby of Broadway", Alpha Tau Omega with "Old Alpha" and "Malaguena," Tri-Delta with "It Might as Well Be Spring" and Alpha Epsilon Pi with "Gold and Blue" and "Sentimental Journey".

Following intermission, Phi Beta Phi presented "Blue Skies", followed by Theta Chi with "Dear Little Girl of Theta Chi" and "Yona, from Arizona," Sigma Nu with the "White Star" and "Lil' Liza Jane," Alpha Epsilon Phi with "Madame Jeanette," Alpha Chi Omega with "Spring Medley," and Acacia with "Beneath Our Jeweled Pin" and "John Peel". Sigma Alpha Epsilon was next on the program and they presented "Song to the Flag of S.A.E." and "Feudin' and a Fightin'". They were followed by Phi Delta Theta with "Always This Song" and "Grandfather Clock", Tau Epsilon Phi with "Lamp and Sword" and "Rodger Young" Sigma Phi Epsilon with the "Fraternity Anthem" and "Song of the Vagabond." This concluded the fraternities and sororities that were presenting songs for the competition.

After the completition of the songs, the judges were faced with difficult decisions. In the fraternity division, Delta Psi for the second year in a row won first place. Tau Epsilon Phi won second place and Sigma Nu third. In the sorority division Phi Beta Phi, Kappa Alpha Theta, and Delta Delta Delta won first, second and third places respectively. Due to the keen competition, as promised, this year's sing

Junior Week Returns After Year Of Absence

The Class of 1959 is reviving the tradition of Junior Week, which will start officially on April 28th with the elections for Junior Beauties. Approximately thirty-five girls are running and the five who win the contest will ride on the Peerade floats, later in the week.

On Tuesday, Barbershop quartets from six fraternities and three sororities will participate in a contest to be held at Southwick. The winners of the beauty contest will be announced at this event.

Junior Peerade, the central event of the week, will take place on Wednesday at 6:30 P.M. Floats constructed by the fraternities and sororities will line up along College Row and proceed down Main Street. This is a revision of the old path, which used to advance down Pearl Street. The entries will pass by the judges' stand, in front of City Hall. This year the theme of Peerade is "UVM's Contribution to the World's Fair." There are three winning places in both the sorority and fraternity divisions with one trophy for the best over-all float. In order that the two divisions be on equal footing for the trophy, the Junior Week committee has decided that sororities can spend the same amount as the fraternities, if they wish.

The Sophomore Class is bringing the Dartmouth Chiefs to campus as an extra attraction. This seven-piece Dixieland band has appeared at several other events on campus, always drawing a large crowd. During the intermission, the winners of Peerade will be announced and the trophies awarded.

Ross Artus, as the President ex-officio of the Junior Class, is head of the committee which is responsible for the program for this week. Assisting him are: Sally Humphrey, Helen Kruk, Carolyn Morin, Diane Morse, Jerry Heller, and Al Overton.

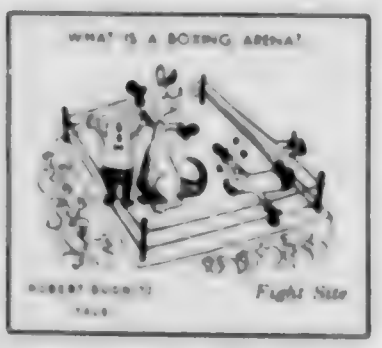
Sticklers!



IN THE TWENTIES, up-to-date college gals wore raccoon coats, danced the Charleston and smoked Luckies. What's the rage on campus today? Raccoon coats. The Charleston. And Luckies! The conclusions are obvious: 1. Luckies were tops for taste in the Twenties and still are. 2. Smart smokers knew it and still do. So any gal who takes Luckies to a Roaring 20's party is a Dapper Flapper! And by George, the boy friend who sports 'em, too, is a Couth Youth! Prediction: In the 1980's, raccoon coats, the Charleston and light, good-tasting tobacco will still be in style!

New England Newman Club Conventions Successful

by Michel J. Charbonnier

Twenty-one New England [illegible] were represented at the New England Province Newman Club Convention held here April 11, 12 and 13. The Vermont delegation included representatives from Champlain College, Norwich University, Middlebury College, Johnson and Lyndon Teachers Colleges and the University of Vermont.

Following registration on Friday evening, April 11, Miss Joyce gave the keynote address. Bishop Joyce stressed the importance of Newmanism on the college campus, said Miss Joyce, "The Newman Club helps to round off the Catholic student's education."

Miss Joyce concluded his address in saying, "Make sure Christ will not walk alone on your campus!"

Later in the evening a "get-acquainted" party was held in which the conventionists got to know one another and joined together in singing and dancing.

On Saturday the delegates attended seminars given by prominent Catholic educators. The seminars were followed by a question period in which the delegates presented questions to the individual speakers.

A business meeting was held later in the afternoon and the officers elected were:

Miss Katherine Gleason of Mt. Holyoke College, province chairman; Edward Doherty of the University of New Hampshire, first vice chairman; Miss Jeanne Shanahan of UVM second vice chairman; Jack Daley of Norwich University, treasurer, and Miss Joan Cavanaugh of the University of Connecticut, secretary.

The Rev. William Nolan of Dartmouth College succeeded Rev. David J. Power of Amherst, Mass., as province chaplain.

The second day of the convention came to a close with the holding of the Convention Ball.

Barbershop Sing New Addition To Junior Week

by Fred Sharff

On Tuesday, April 29, at Southwick Auditorium, a new addition to Junior Week will be inaugurated this year -- the Barbershop Quartet Contest. This contest will be jointly sponsored by the Burlington Chapter of the Barbershop Singing Society, the Inter-fraternity Council, and the Junior Week Committee.

Those groups singing on Tuesday evening will be Phi Delta Theta, Sigma Alpha Epsilon, Sigma Nu, and Theta Chi representing the fraternities on campus; while Gamma Phi Beta and Kappa Alpha Theta will participate for the sororities. Each group will sing two songs, which will be judged by members of the Burlington Chapter of the Barbershop Singing Society.

The program will be highlighted by the awarding of two trophies to the men's division and one trophy to the woman's division. The presentation of trophies to the five winners of the Junior Beauty Competition will be a part of Tuesday's program.

Dick Kitchen, a Burlington resident and member of the Barbershop Singing Society, will serve as master of ceremonies, while the Burlington Chapter's Quartet and Chorus will serenade part of the evening.

Fred Harper, Class of '59 and a member of the Burlington Chapter of the Barbershop Singing Society, who suggested the idea to the Junior Class, is organizing the program with Jerry Gray and Dan DeWolfe among other members of the Junior Class. The Inter-fraternity Council will supply the publicity.

It is intended that this type of program will be instituted in future Junior Weeks, if warmly accepted by the student body.

NOTICE

There will be a student discount price of admission to "The Bridge On The River Kwai" which opens on April 30, at Flynn Theater for an extended run.

Tickets will be distributed for presentation at the box office. The regular rate is $1.25, the discount rate for the evening show is $.90, and the rate for the afternoon show will be reduced from $.90 to $.75.

Giddings Wins Fulbright

The University of Grenoble in Grenoble, France, will be the destination of UVM senior Clifford Giddings as a result of winning a Fulbright Scholarship.

Giddings, the son of Mr. and Mrs. Frederick Giddings of East Dorset, is the second University of Vermont student to win the Fulbright award this year. He will leave in September to take up graduate study in French language and literature at the University of Grenoble.

Enrolled in the liberal arts curriculum and majoring in languages, she is including education courses to qualify him for teaching. He is presently practice teaching at Burr and Burton Seminary in Manchester, teaching English and French.

Grenoble was Giddings' choice because of its location. "It is not so near Paris, where there are so many English-speaking people. I'm going to speak French entirely," he noted.

Aside from English and French, he also speaks Spanish. He is a member of the French Club, the Spanish Club, and has worked for the University's educational testing service. In addition, Giddings has been on the Dean's List since the beginning of his sophomore year.

Following his year of foreign study, he will enter the teaching profession on the high school or the college level.

"GUT" Courses

By Judy White

The uninitiated person may call to mind a part of the stomach when he is confronted with the term gut, but all UVM students are aware of a second, and perhaps for them, more important definition of this word. The gut course has become a campus tradition. Proof of this may be discovered at the beginning of each semester when many students eagerly search the pages of the college catalogue in pursuit of courses which are rewarding grade-wise and which require a minimum of work.

Recently, Dr. Sadler of the religion department asked his students for their ideas concerning these "snap" courses. It was generally agreed that multiple choice, short-answer exams were characteristic of these "snap" courses and that any course which required few papers, little or no outside reading, few exams, and complete memorization of the lectures presented, was sure to be so designated. There was also mention made of the instructor's attitude toward his subject. It was felt that an instructor who displays little enthusiasm, who lectures strictly according to the textbook, and who habitually arrives late and dismisses the class early, is guilty of turning his course into a gut.

This reporter also interviewed several other students who expressed their opinions on the subject. One student in the College of Technology candidly admitted that he only takes courses which are easy because he is interested in maintaining a high average. (He has made Dean's List in the 3 semesters which he has spent at UVM).

Another student believes that gut courses have been intentionally offered by the university in order to "get people through college and to present them with a degree at the end of 4 years." He thinks that in this sense such classes are advantageous because they "keep the student happy" and therefore assure the university of a steady enroll - ment rate. However, he stated that in his opinion gut courses will eventually disappear because of the imminent problem of over-crowded schools which will necessitate a more selective group of students and therefore an over-all improvement of academic standards. He once dropped a course because it was "too easy."

Still another person suggested that many of our so-called "snap" courses are included in the requirements of certain curriculums and that therefore they cannot be avoided. Because of an already heavy schedule he enrolled in what he believed to be an easy course so as to be able to concentrate on his more difficult subjects and still carry the necessary amount of credits.

It is true that the over-emphasis on grades and the often ridiculously long and detailed required outside readings have forced many a student to seek out courses which will lighten his burden. Unfortunately these courses prove to be almost worthless.

Judging from my own experience, there are but a few such courses offered at UVM and it is almost impossible to determine which ones are easy because of the difference in students' abilities. Short answer exams in contrast to the essay type exams can be just as difficult and thought provoking so this appears to be a poor criteria. The problem seems to concern the individual student rather than the university as a whole -- he may choose the easier and quicker shortcut or he may conscientiously pursue the courses which most interest him and will be most valuable to him in view of future plans.

Donald Gannon To Succeed Borgman As Board Chairman

by Dick Penn

On Saturday, April 19, 1958, University President Carl W. Borgmann presided over his last meeting of the University's Board of Trustees. President Borgmann will assume new duties as Director of the Ford Foundation Division of Science and Engineering on July 1.

The Board elected Donald A. Gannon, an executive in the Stop and Shop firm, to succeed to the Board Chairmanship vacated by President Borgmann. Mr. Gannon who will preside as chairman at the Board's next meeting on June 13, was elected to the Board in March 1954 for a six year term.

Albert L. Gutterson, who represented the University and the United States in the 1912 Olympics, was named as vice-chairman of the Board. Chester B. Eaton, of Rutland, Vt., was named secretary with Anna Smith, secretary to the University's President, named assistant Board Secretary. Eaton and Miss Smith are both graduates of the University.

The Board announced the appointment of four faculty members to the College of Arts and Sciences and three to the College of Medicine. Those appointed to the college of Arts and Sciences are: Thomas D. S. Bassett will be Wilbur Librarian and associate professor of history, effective August, 1958; Stephen D. Condon will assume duties of assistant professor of romance languages in September; Robert V. Daniels will begin teaching history in September as assistant professor; Richard W. Glade will join the zoology department as assistant professor in September.

The appointments to the college of Medicine are: Dr. Ronald C. Munkittrick will be assistant professor of pathology in September; William D. Washington is clinical instructor of pediatrics; Dr. Martin B. Williams will assume duties of assistant professor of pharmacology in July.

The Board also accepted a faculty resolution asking that "all salaries be increased immediately to the maximum compatible with the continued functioning of the University." The resolution passed by the University Senate cited the report of President Eisenhower's committee on Education beyond the High School which urged immediate action to increase faculty salaries all across the country.

The architectual firm of Freeman, French, Freeman of Burlington was named by the Board to provide preliminary plans for a new men's dormitory to house 400 men and a new women's dormitory to house from 150 to 200 students. Freeman, French and Freeman were selected from 15 firms submitting applications.

In adherance to an approved recommendation of the Board it will be necessary for all out-of-state applicants to pay a non refundable application fee of $10 beginning in 1958-59. The fee will be necessary because of the added expenses due to the increase in the number of applicants.

The meetings of the Board of Trustees are held in the University's Memorial Lounge, on the first floor of Waterman Building. The walls of the Memorial Lounge are decorated with pictures of distinguished faculty and alumni of the Uni

Parking Problems

Are you the car owner who has trouble parking at school? The parking facilities at UVM are very poor and inadequate. This the University officials agree upon. But nothing has been done. If one arrives on campus after eight o'clock, he finds no space on campus and has to park on the main street quite a distance from campus. Can you image the chaos which would result if girls or freshmen had cars?

The student who has to drive from class to class creates another problem. The student who has to take his car across campus from Waterman to East Hall or to drive three or four blocks to school to avoid any walking whatsoever contributes greatly to this situation. Another problem is the yellow and blue stickers. The teachers and administrators are entitled to spaces, but these places are the ones most often left vacant.

What has been done to change this situation? Dean Rowell stated that this project "has not been forgotten, it is part of the plan for new development projects." A number of ideas have been talked over and none have been adopted. One possibility is to tear down East Hall, leaving us new space to build a parking area. There are plans for new men's dorms plus a new gymnasium, with parking space around the dorms and the gym. Another idea is to utilize the space around the present men's dorms. The trouble lies with the cost, as it takes from $1,000 to $1,500 per car to build and maintain an asphalt parking lot. There is also an aesthetic objection: asphalt is not as pleasing as grass and it would be worse to destroy our campus greens. We feel that it would be better to have special parking lots, and students should walk to classes and from building to building. The University of Connecticut, which has quite a large campus, has eliminated this problem as they give students one designated parking space. Therefore, students have only one place to park and have to walk from class to class. Our situation is further complicated by the fact that there are throughfares through the center of campus.

The problem is still unanswered as room to build upon is hard to find without destroying the lawns. We have stated the problems involved in this project and feel the situation can be alleviated, with student cooperation. In the near future there will have to be new parking lots as the situation becomes worse each year. Parking lots on the outskirts of the campus will be far better than the parking on campus streets. This would leave the present parking spaces for visitors, faculty, and administration. Our campus is small enough to allow students to walk to and from classes.

Dance Program Planed For Saturday

The Fine Arts Festival will present as their Dance Program a concert performed by the University of Vermont Dance Workshop. This will be presented in conjunction with the student directed play " Hello out there " by William Saroyan at Southwick on Saturday April 28 at 7:30 p.m.

The Dance Workshop production titled titled " Pulse " is based on the intellectual emotional and spiritual aspects of the lives of the University students. "Pulse" is an expression and interpretation of life in our college campus.

The dancers will dance a tribute to the museum, the fascinating rhythm of the coffee shop; the mechanical performance of an engineering lab; a tribute to a dissolved tradition; the Chapel, and other vital aspects of our lives in campus.

The student concert dancers will be: Homer Bailey, Diana Jordan, Sally Bradley, Garry Shippee, Jane Lee, Joan Beveridge, Sandy Smolnik, J. Hale, Elaine Margolin, Bette Post, Miriam Portnoy, Phyllis Babbitt, Linda Ward, Julie Cass, Miriam Reiner, Nanette Gross-Muller, Julie Hall, and Diane Landry.

Choreography for the Fine Arts Festival Dance Workshop production is being done by Homer Bailey, Diana Jordan, Phyllis Babbitt and Nanette Gross-Muller. Miss Marilyn Nass faculty advisor to the Dance Workshop, is working with the students on the choreography.

Officers of the Dance Workshop are: President - David Brock; Secretary - Lynette Muller; Production Manager - Homer Bailey; Student Production Director - Diana Jordan.

"Pulse" and its performance promises to be a fine evening of entertainment in this year's well-planned Fine Arts Festival.

Words And Music

By Ed Needham

Well, the almighty powers here at UVM have come up with another in their series of endless answers to the desires of students to have any sort of effective voice in governing their affairs. In a pat statement issued last week it was made known that the higher offices would pay no attention whatsoever to the demands of students. This was to be expected. In an institution already top-heavy with a plethora of rules and regulations, it was only natural that the administration would uphold their most recent dictorial decision. I, for one, am sick of the whole mess. Each year the rules governing students grow more numerous. We are told what to eat, where to eat, where to sleep and in the case of female students when to sleep. You may study this, you must study that. If you don't attend classes faithfully you can't possibly become aware of the subject. UVM is beginning to be nothing more than a web of committees for this and committees for that. Associations for one thing and another, most of which are meaningless messes of obsequious students and/or faculty members trying to out argue one another so that someone will gain the oftentimes dubious distinction of keeping things just the way they are here at good old tradition-bound UVM. I'm surprised they don't have a course called The University Family.

A few guys want to dig up what is left of John Dewey and bring it here. By all means let's do that. It will help the tradition. Maybe we could divide the ashes up and give a little to each college so they won't feel slighted.

More and more buildings going up for one thing and another while we struggle along with a library which

I sat there twiddling my thumbs, contemplating the situation, and weighing the alternatives. The tension held us tightly in its grip. She sat before me trembling with excitement. I got up slowly; the sweat poured from my brow. I walked over to my desk and opened the drawer. Impulsively I ~~reached~~ in, took it out, and walked back to where she sat. She looked up, her lips smiling, and her eyes wide with anticipation. I swore her to secrecy and handed her an advanced copy of the Vermont Conference program. Gwendolyn sighed, ... I sighed, ... She left, I sighed again.

Later

Here I am at George's (where the elite meet). The topic of conversation is uniform at all the tables. Everybody is talking about the Vermont Conference. In George, everyone discussing, 'Our Values, Transformation or Degeneration?''

Just what is this Vermont Conference that's got everyone so excited? (For detail see page 1). The Vermont Conference is a terrific affair that was lacking at UVM and S.A.C. for three years. This year's topic is of interest to the entire university; faculty, students, and staff. How good are our values? Are we reactionary, conservative, liberal, or radical? Is our value system O.K. the way it is or could we use a slight adjustment, better selection, or change? The above questions will be answered by a host of distinguished speakers. The conference will be a stimulating and exciting affair. I must say that the conference will probably contribute more to the students understanding of the society in which he done to those needs, with the resulting disorder produced in man as a functioning human being.

He will try to show that when considered from the evolutionary and biological viewpoints it is possible to discover a value system which is already built into the organism as its most highly adaptive valuable trait. He shall also consider the value system under which we in the western world live.

After his address, Dr. Montagu may be met in the Waterman Lounge, where coffee will be served. Any interested persons will then have the opportunity to talk with him.

The panelists of the first discussion, to be held on Friday afternoon, will be Dr. Jerome Davis and Dr. Hilary Putnam. Dr. Davis, a former President of the American Federation of teachers, will talk on the subject of ''Are We Building or Retarding Peace?'' He is at present the executive director of the Promoting Enduring Peace Incorporated Foundation and is the author of ''Peace, War and You'' and ''Religion in Action.'' He believes that we should have faith not in the righteousness of power but in the power of righteousness. We should try to have peaceful co-existence with Russia and should help the U. N. in everyway to build peace. Finally, we should encourage cultural interchange with Russia and China. This means we will substitute for materialism, selfishness and militarism, idealism, altruism and unselfish, constructive cooperation. He also believes that God is calling us to love our enemies and to translate our love into our foreign policy

Dr. Hilary Putnam is widely known for his work on the topic of ''Philosophy of Science.'' He has been an Instructor in philosophy at Northwestern University and is now Assistant Professor in philosophy at Princeton University. He will discuss the objective and subjective attitudes in science and the humanities in connection with our values. He feels that when considering the present values of society it is not always a question of change but rather one of selection. In the field of philosophy Dr. Putnam has written such articles as. ''Psychological Concepts, Explication and Ordinary Language,'' and ''The Analytic and Synthetic.'' He has also written numerous articles in the field of Mathematical Logic.

The members of the Friday evening panel will be Dr. Peter Vierich, Dr. Louis Hartz and Dr. Ernest Van den Haag

Dr. Vierich is at present a professor of History at Mt Holyoke College. He is a highly regarded educator and writer who has won various awards, such as the Gugenheim Fellowship in 1949 and the Pulitzer Prize for poetry for TERROR AND DECORUM. He has been recognized as the leader of a new conservatism in America. He will speak about overadjustment by the conformist and non-conformist in American life. He is the author of many books among them, ''Conservatism: From John Adams to Churchill'' and ''Unadjusted Man: A New Hero for Americans.''

Dr. Hartz is currently Professor of Government and Chairman of the Committee on Higher Degrees in the History of American Civilization at Harvard. He is the author of ''Economic Policy of Democratic Thought'' and ''The Liberal Tradition in America.'' He will speak on the liberal tradition in our culture

Dr. Van den Haag is a famous economist and sociologist who has written extensively about our culture. He is a lecturer in the social sciences at the New School for Social Research and is associate professor at New York University. He wrote ''Education as and Industry'' and with Ralph Ross ''The Fabric of Society.'' He will speak about the erosion of cultural values by mass production and mass culture. This will include the rising power of consumers and such topics as the adulteration of past culture by mass media, as well as the psychological effects and the economic causes of the above.

The students will be able to meet and discuss with the speakers in the Waterman Lounge after the panel discussion.

Mr. C. Leonard Haag, who is currently Professor of Contemporary Civilization at Middlebury College, will be moderator for the conference. He is a specialist in Public Opinion in the Office of War Information and in the Department of State. He is the author of ''Preface to Preparedness: American Opinion on the Navy and the Washington Disarmament Conference.''

The Vermont Conference of 1958 is sure to prove worthwhile and valuable to the students and faculty members. It is hoped that many will show the same enthusiasm as those who have helped to organize the conference, by attending as many of these discussions as possible. We know that it will prove to be an interesting and provocative affair and one which we will all enjoy and gain much from.

Big Sister Program

by Marsha Eisen

The Big Sister Program for 1958-59 is now being organized. The tradition of the University and all that it means to a freshman girl is begun with her introduction to UVM through her Big Sister. From the applications received, approximately two hundred girls will be chosen as Big Sisters.

The precedent initiated last year, of one or two little sisters for each Big Sister, will be continued this year. Previously, each Big Sister had had from two to four little sisters. This prevented some Big Sisters from devoting a fair amount of time to each Little Sister.

Before school resumes in September, the Big Sisters are given the opportunity of writing to the freshman girls who have been assigned as their Little Sisters.

During the first month of school, and througnout the entire year, Big Sisters have the opportunity to introduce their Little Sisters to college life.

Any girl who is interested in becoming a Big Sister should give her name to her House President. Town girls may send their names to Marsha Eisen, Hamilton Hall. Those girls chosen will be notified before the close of this academic year.

lives than many of the dry courses through which many of the students sit for a semester.

The Vermont Conference should be an annual event at UVM. It will be if it has the backing of the student body. Vermont has been criticized as being a third rate institution; a pure party school; a place for rejects and farmers. UVM has the potential for being a top institution. A successful Vermont Conference will be a step in the right direction. The times are Thursday at 8 P.M., Friday at 4 P.M. and 8:30 P.M.; the place Ira Allen Memorial; the purpose to evaluate the goals and aims of our society and the value system we are using to arrive at these goals. The effect of the conference will be to stimulate and motivate the grey matter of the University family. Let's get out and attend en masse. Those of you who claim you are in attendance in an institution of higher learning and seriously want to get something for your money and effort may stand up and be counted April 24th and 25th.

The luggage-laden husband stared miserably down the platform at the departing train. "If you hadn't taken so long getting ready," he admonished his wife, "we would have caught it."

"Yes," the little woman rejoined, "and if you hadn't hurried me so, we wouldn't have so long to wait for the next one!"

Profile On Mr. Fletcher

by Judith White

Mr. Willard Fletcher Photo - Stan Everett, '4

Mr. Fletcher, who is a graduate of UVM and has taught here since [illegible] the position at the University of Vermont has put [illegible] his studies and obtain his Ph.D.

Although he is generally satisfied with UVM's educational standards and teaching methods, Mr. Fletcher would like to see more emphasis placed upon smaller classes these "seminar type" classes would stimulate the student to develop the ability to express himself through the media of critical writing and speech. As the student could concentrate on a specific field of interest and pursue it in terms. Lectures would be presented one would be held responsible for designated readings in his chosen area. The result would be a more "creative" method of teaching and a more thoroughly informed student.

This reporter has always wondered whether an instructor to some degree loses interest in his subject when he must repeat similar lectures several times a day for many years. When asked about this Mr. Fletcher offered a decisive "no!" He feels that in history, particularly, there is a vast amount of information and that new interpretations of the available material are arrived at easily. Because history's broad scope and tremendous variety, the instructor's opinions are constantly undergoing change and thus, different areas are emphasized from year to year.

Educated in Europe before he came to UVM, the history professor remarked about the comparatively rigid European educational system. He enjoys hiking and of course reading but doesn't really consider it a hobby since it is an integral part of his professional training.

Mr. Fletcher expressed the hope that his students, through the study of history, have gained a sense of tolerance, have shed some of their prejudices, and have developed an awareness of the change in institutions.

THE PROBLEM CORNER

Referring to last week's problem the per cent of water removed by squeezing the sponge was 55 5/7%.

Correct solutions to this problem were submitted by Gil Gagne, Allan Greenfield Prof. Glen M. Wood, and Prof. J.A. Newlander, who also proposed the problem.

Problem:

A college student is paying $300 of his tuition in grapefruit. He had planned on the amount of fruit to have shipped for payment, but then found that the price had risen 5 cents per grapefruit, so that he needed to ship 1000 less fruit than he had expected. What was the original price of one grapefruit?

Leave solutions to these problems at the office of Professor Schoonmaker, Room 341, Waterman, no later than Monday of the week following publication of the problem.

1000 Juniors Visit UVM

Sunny skies and warm temperatures aided in making the very successful'' sixth annual High School Day at the University as close to 1000 high school juniors turned out to learn about colleges and careers.

The opening meeting was highlighted by a welcoming speech by Dr. John T. Fey, president-elect of UVM, his first ''official act'' at the University. The six top prizes in the state mathematics contest were presented also at the meeting.

Following the opening get-together, high school students went to career meetings of their choice, including education, agriculture, health services, dental hygiene, liberal arts, secretarial studies, nursing, business, home economics, engineering, and science and mathematics.

The students were invited to turn in ''report cards'' of the career meetings they attended, including any comments they wished to make.

Also available to the students were tours, open houses and exhibits, and a lunch as guests of the University.

Baseball Kittens Open On April 29

by STEVE COOPER

The Freshman baseball team might be below par this season due to the ineligibility of two star pitchers, Richard Hakey and Harry Zingg." This is the way "Pudge" Evans, coach of the freshman baseball nine summed up the current squad. He continued, "of course, I haven't had much time to look the team over, and they might develop into a pretty good combine."

"My catcher, Ron Fine, looks like a good prospect if he can overcome arm trouble which has plagued him since the season began."

The current pitching staff will be headed by Burlington right-hander, Fred Robinson, who has looked good in early practice sessions. Other members of the staff include Bob Hobbie, Walter Bene and Bob Egal.

The infield poses some problems and coach Evans will do a little experimenting before the first scheduled game. Presently, it looks like Bob McBride, third base, Charlie Spenser, shortstop, Dave McGurk, second base, first base will be two platooned between Fred Branch and Pete Nelson.

The outfield too will need some experimenting and lots of work. At present, coach Evans plans to use Roy Tuggy in left field, Bill Morrison in center field; and John Gilmore in right field. Other outfielders are Fred Dugal and Fred Brant.

The Yearlings will open their season April 29 against Johnson Teachers. This will allow coach Evans about ten days to find the right combination to start the season.

Here is the frosh schedule for the coming season:

CENTENIAL FIELDHOUSE IMPROVED

by STAN MESSINGER

Recently there has been a change in the physical structure of the campus due to the recent improvements of the field house at Centennial Field. The University allocated money to repaint and refinish the entire interior of it, which will enhance its appearance. Up until now it was in dire need of these repairs. The estimations of the costs for refinishing were around one-thousand dollars as reported by the athletic department. The ceiling which had not been finished but is now finished and painted, the walls which were bare were also done. Plans to hard-top the driveway were not put into effect, but it is hoped that in the near future it will be accomplished.

When the field house was originally built it proved to be inadequate because there was no provision for lockers and other necessary equipment. Due to the help of the alumni these improvements including lockers and showers were added. It created a healthier situation and also preserved the very expensive equipment. The field house, as you may or may not know, consists of two rooms; one for the Varsity team made up of 45 lockers and a visiting team room consisting of 72 lockers. The freshman teams are now using the facilities of the latter room due to the inadequate space for the members of the sports teams.

In the spring three varsity teams create more than a crowded situation in the field house. The tennis team, for example, has moved into the coaches' office due to the lack of space. The freshman baseball team must use the facilities of the gym for the accommodations do not permit to use the limited facilities at Centennial Field.

Mr. Donnelly, Director of Athletics, has expressed the desire to make some further improvements such as the tiling of the showers, but finds that funds are insufficient at this time.

The recent improvements have bettered the appearance of the field house, but further steps need to be taken in the future in order to correct the inadequate facilities. We hope that these new improvements are only a beginning to bring about even greater construction of athletic facilities.

Tolman, Borgmann Receive Awards At Lettermen's Banquet

The Athletic Council of the University of Vermont tonight presented special awards to Neil Tolman '28, and University President Carl W. Borgmann at its annual Lettermen's Banquet, honoring UVM's athletes.

Tolman, who is President of the UVM Alumni Council and recently was elected to the University Board of Trustees, received the Varsity Club's Annual Award, presented to the man who has won his "Varsity Letter" in life. Governor Joseph B. Johnson, last year's award winner, made the presentation.

Dr. Borgmann, who has resigned as President to accept a position as Program Director of the Ford Foundation's newly formed Department of Science and Engineering, was awarded a varsity blanket by Loren Palmer, representing the Athletic Council.

Lawrence F. Killick, Director of Alumni Relations at the University, acted as Toastmaster at the banquet, where nearly 100 varsity awards were presented to UVM athletes who had participated in inter-collegiate competition over the past year.

Varsity Trounces Kittens, 13-1

by PAUL STANTON

Playing in a short five inning scrimmage against the Kittens last Thursday afternoon, the Varsity nine easily rolled over their lowerclass counterparts, 13-1, before a smattering of fans at sun drenched Centennial Field. The Lapointemen managed to score in the first four stanzas, but were stopped (or perhaps were worn out from running the bases too many times) in the fifth, and ironically, that is the inning in which the Frosh pushed across their lone tally.

Seven Run First

After southpaw Bob Koones had easily set down the Kittens in the first frame, the Cats showed their superiority as they sent twelve men to the plate before being retired by Fred Robinson, the helpless victim of their booming barrage.

Marty Katz led off by popping out to first base, Chuck Zysk was passed, and Marty Johnson reached base via the shortstop's error. Tom Tierney then doubled to left, scoring Zysk and sending Johnson racing to third. Bill Simonds connected with a fast ball, and sent it far into right field, good for a three bagger, Johnson and Tierney scoring. Jerry Cassidy walked, and he and Simonds cast moved up on a perfectly executed double steal. Don Santa Croce went to second on a fielder's choice, as Cassidy crossed the plate.

Hyman Homers

Right fielder Frank Hyman sent a screaming shot 350 feet into his home territory and sped home far in front of the throw.

The score now read, Varsity 7, Frosh 0.

Fine and Tuggy each touched Koones for singles to start the second, but the lanky hurler then settled down. He whiffed Nelson on three fastballs. Bence then walked on a full count to load the bases, but the crafty Koones got to Gilmore to hit into a doubleplay, ending the inning.

The Varsity went down in relatively quick order in the second, Jerry Cassidy being the only Cat to hit--but what a hit. Cassidy, with two down, blasted one far over the right fielder's head, and crossed the plate just as the throw came back to the infield.

For the third straight inning, Koones toyed with the Kittens, relaxing behind an eight run lead, but bearing down when the pressure was on. Once again, nothing for the Frosh.

Cats Add Three More

With Jarrett now doing the twirling chores for the Frosh, the Varsity nine sent three more runs across the plate, and onto the scoreboard. Hyman grounded out to open the inning, but that was all the joy for Jarrett. Bush, batting for Koones, walked and moved to third on Katz's single. Zysk then singled, sending Bush home, and Katz to third, himself taking second on the throw home. Marty Johnson then added his single to the bunch, Katz and Zysk both scoring. Tierney and Simonds then flew out to end the threat.

Steve Cooper, sophomore fastball ace, took over the pitching job for the Varsity, and quickly set down the Frosh in order, all three batters grounding out.

Jerry Cassidy reached first via the misjudgement of the Kittens' centerfielder. After Santa Croce had flied out, Frank Hyman singled, sending Cassidy to third. Cooper sent a long fly ball to right field, Cassidy tagging up and home after the catch while Hyman moved to second. Marty Katz sent a routine fly ball to center, but Schwartz again misjudged it, while Hyman scooted around and scored on the misplay. Zysk flied out to end the inning.

The weary Frosh finally pushed their single score across in the fifth when Fred Branch tripled, and crossed the plate on Dave Magurk's Texas Leaguer single. Darkness then entered the scene causing termination of the game, the Lapointemen secretly thinking, "If only we can play this way the rest of the season."

Cats Travel To Beantown Area; Face B.U., C.G., And Brandeis

by FRED ROBINSON

The Cats, after their [illegible]-day lay-off since the Southern trip, will be putting their 3-1 record on the line today when they face Boston University in Beantown. Coach Lapointe has been carrying on intensive workouts in an effort to sharpen the unsteady infield and to continue the sensational hitting and pitching which UVM so far this season has demonstrated.

Preview on B. U.

Last night, after a light workout, the Cats traveled to Boston and stayed at the Hotel Kenmore. At 3:30 this afternoon the Green and Gold played BU. So far this season Boston has compiled a 2-0 record behind a big righthander, and also an All-American hockey standout, Bill McCleod. UVM-BU weren't scheduled last season, but two years ago the Cats were victorious, 2-1. Vermont will go with Ross Artus, a fireballing righthander from Enosburg Falls, Vermont. With both teams off to a fine early-season start, this game should be close if the UVM infield holds up.

Preview On Coast Guard

Tonight Lapointe and Company will travel to New London, Connecticut, where they will stay and tomorrow afternoon at [illegible]:00 face Coast Guard. Vermont, who defeated CG last season, will send either Soph Steve Cooper, a southpaw from Manchester, Conn., or Russ Henrichs, a husky righthanded senior from College Point, N.Y., depending upon whether Coast Guard displays lefthanded or righthanded power. After the game UVM returns to Boston and the Kenmore for the night.

Preview On Brandeis

At 10:00 a.m. on Saturday the Cats will oppose Brandeis at Waltham. Either Cooper or Henrichs, whoever doesn't work the Coast Guard game, will get the starting nod from Coach Lapointe. Three years ago, the last time UVM played Brandeis, the Cats overwhelmed them, 11-3. Upon completion of the game, the Vermont 15-man squad will return to Boston once again to watch the Red Sox and Washington tangle at Fenway Park. After the game, the Cats will leave for Burlington and arrive home sometime Saturday night.

Coach Lapointe stated that the starting lineup will be the same except in right field where depending upon lefthanded or righthanded pitching, either Frank Hyman or Marty Katz will roam.

Vermont Conference Hailed Successful

By S.J. Alesica and Tanya Lehman

The 24th Vermont conference held Thursday and Friday April 24 and 25, saw the reawakening of the tradition of [illegible] in this form at UVM. The topic under consideration was two values: Transformation or Degeneration. On Thursday evening, the eminent American anthropologist, Dr. Ashley Montagu delivered the keynote address of the conference. His subject was The Value System of the Western World.

Dr. Montagu spoke mostly of the American system and contended our dominant value to be success, the only failure we realize is face of success. He felt that a great deal of the psychological troubles of our times are due to diametrically opposed principles of the Judeo-Christian tradition and that of conspicuous consumption with which children are brought up from their earliest days. In spite of the fact that the United States leads the world in many crime rates, Dr. Montagu was optimistic. He believes that people are born oriented towards the good and evil for him is the difference between what a human being has potential to become and what actually happens to him. If an individual is allowed to give and receive the love he needs, he will develop in line with his greatest potentials.

After studying the relationships between mothers and unborn children, Dr. Montagu has come to the conclusion that what happens to the mother during pregnancy does influence the developing child. The child is in a "Nirvana-like" existence out of which birth is a cruel shock. To attain the highest possible achievements, life after birth should be like living in a "womb with a view." The individual will then be healthy, as health is "the ability to love and work."

In conclusion, Dr. Montagu asked everyone to consider whether we are going to continue to be part of the problem of our dual standard or part of the solution to it.

On the following afternoon, Dr. Jerome Davis and Dr. Hilary Putnam comprised a panel discussing the relationship of faith and ethics to the general subject of values. Professor of Philosophy at Princeton University Dr. Putnam spoke about the [illegible] and objectivity of Ethics. He believes that the old categorization of objective science and subjective ethics is not accurate. Ethics is as objective as science 'though' its aims are different. He used the term "moral principles," which is generally out of vogue today. In a time when small concepts are changing, we should use the tradition of ethics to choose our basic principles and attempt to settle our confusions by becoming sympathetic and using reason to benefit society.

Dr. Jerome Davis Executive Director of Promoting Enduring Peace Inc., Federation and former head of the Peace Mission to Europe, stressed the aspect of international sympathy brought up by Dr Putnam. In answer to the question, Are We Building or Retarding Peace, Dr. Davis elaborated the degeneration and stagnation of our foreign policy. He cited many instances to prove that we have not advanced much beyond the Middle Ages in our international relations. To build peace, militarism is not the answer. Idealism, unselfish cooperation, and the imaginative use of reason and intelligence are the methods of achieving peace. "We must have faith in the power of righteousness and not in the righteousness of power." Each firing of a weapon is a theft from the poor and underfed.

As solution to the spiritual sickness of the world, Dr. Davis enumerated the following eight actions:

1. People of the free world must put themselves in the place of Russia who has had war on her own soil and who has never known a standard of living comparable to that of the Western world.

2. We must accept the Russian proposal to end all testing of nuclear weapons, because, as few people realize, it does provide for adequate inspection on both sides of the Iron Curtain.

3. We must agree to remove arms from West Germany and to cease arms shipments to our allies.

4. We must lift trade bar-

Mr. Thomas To Speak On The Negro In American Society

On Wednesday, May 7, Mr. Julius A. Thomas will speak on the Negro in Contemporary American Society at 7:15 p.m. in the Student Lounge.

Julius A. Thomas has been engaged in social work for thirty-three years as a staff member of the Urban League. He has served as Executive Secretary of local affiliates in Atlanta, Georgia; Jacksonville, Florida; and Louisville, Kentucky. He was appointed Director of the Department of Industrial Relations for the national organization in 1943.

In June 1952, he was appointed consultant to the President's Committee on Government Contract Compliance.

In addition to a varied and successful experience in community organization for social welfare, he has been closely identified with progressive interracial programs and activities throughout the nation. He is a frequent contributor to several magazines and newspapers and has written pamphlets and articles on various aspects of Negro life in America. He is a popular speaker and lecturer on social and economic problems, particularly as they affect race relations and the Negro population.

During the past ten years, hundreds of Negro engineers, scientists, and business specialists have obtained employment as a result of the Urban League's industrial relations activities.

Mr. Thomas' work in his field has been recognized by many organizations concerned with race relations and industrial relations problems. In 1947, he received the Congressional Selective Service Award for his efforts on behalf of Negro veterans; in 1949, the National Technical Association Award; in 1950, the "Chicago Defender" Award and the Russwurm Award in 1954, he was a recipient of Howard University's Annual Alumni Award for distinguished post-graduate achievement.

Thanks Expressed By Sigma Nu

by Bob Klenowitz

On Thursday evening, April 17, a passer-by saw smoke coming from the roof of the Sigma Nu Fraternity house. Within a short time, city fire trucks, and firemen were fighting the fire that ran through the attic, and down the stairwell, leading to the third floor.

There is no way of detecting its origin exactly, but whatever the case, the fire had much kindling material, since the attic stored extra mattresses and bureaus. There was almost no structural damage done, though a hole had to be cut in the roof. The main trouble may be attributed to water damage, which was most definite on the third floor, but which damaged the whole house, even the ground floor.

Thursday night, half of those normally sleeping in the house had to leave, because of the smoke and water. These brothers stayed at friend's apartments and in the Men's Residence Halls. Within a day, or so, most of the Sig Nu's returned to the house, with only two rooms still requiring vacancy. The carpenters are working in these and soon will be finished.

It is expected that all the work aside from painting, will be finished this week. Fortunately, the house was adequately covered by insurance.

Doug McDonald, president of the fraternity, wished again "to thank all who offered and gave us assistance that night."

LOHMAN HEADS CENTAUR

By Linda Sack

Tanya Lohman is the newly-elected editor of the "Centaur," UVM's literary magazine. A junior in the College of Arts and Science, she has in the past contributed poetry and prose to the publication. She has also written for the CYNIC and has a teaching position at the Fleming Museum.

Assisting Tanya will be the new associate editor, David Watson. Presently the fiction editor, he is a sophomore also in the arts and science curriculum.

This past year's editor, Peter Schoffstall, will assume duties as fiction editor beginning in September. He too is in the liberal arts course and a member of the Class of '59.

All three of these students are from Burlington.

Other officers for 1958-59 are Robert deForest, from Troy, New York, and a junior in the College of Technology - poetry editor; Benson Snaider, New Haven, Connecticut, - business and advertising manager; and Lloyd Tamarin, Staten Island, New York - circulation and exchange manager. Both Snaider and Tamarin are juniors in the arts and science course.

The second edition of the "Centaur," written by the outgoing staff, will be distributed in the very near future.

Junior Week Story

By LUCI DODD

Time was running out as to whether or not Junior Week would be held. It was a large undertaking and after the incident of a few years ago, it could be termed risky. It could be a "jolly" time for one and all, but.... Yet a few brave juniors decided that it would be worthwhile to erase past errors with some fabulous scheme, plus a few of the old traditions that everyone like to see. So Ross Artus, backed up with the officers and a committee elite, approached I.F.C. with the idea of at least holding the PEERADE, if probation must still be enforced. I.F.C. stroked their long grey beards and gave verdict ... it was on!

Ross and the others carefully put forth a few speculative ideas that might be okayed by the Junior Class, en masse, and then the class meeting was called. Perhaps it was because they wanted to prove that they could have frivolity without mishap that the class voted to continue the joys of Junior Week. And naturally they wanted a week of fun and culture. The class ventured sly hints about the JR. BEAUTIES (voting Monday) and the I.F.C. FORMALS that would cover Friday and Saturday nights. And how about something new?

The president of the Sophomore Class, Joseph Lakovitch, offered the services of a Jazz Concert for one of the nights (Thursday nite) as the Class of '60 hadn't done too much during the past year. Fine ..! One more idea. And Ross figured another draw might be the baseball games that were going to be held on Monday (UVM vs. St. Mike's) and Friday and Saturday (UVM vs. Rhode Island.) "And they deserve the plug since they're gonna win!" Ross added.

What about Wednesday for the Peerade and the trophies could be awarded at the Jazz Concert to get a few more people there. Everybody loves a Peerade ... but Tuesday? Help came from the outside.

Jerry Gray of the Burlington Association asked the class if they would be interested in having a Barber Shop Quartet that could be continued each year hereafter. It sounded like a great idea, so Tuesday night would be filled after all. Four sororities and five fraternities will be competing for the three trophies, one for the best sorority and 1st and 2nd places for the frats.

Every day had been filled; the class set to work. In talking to Ross Artus, we found that the class seemed to really want to work, and much effort was honestly put forth. The Jazz Concert and the Barber Shop Quartets will be new ideas, and from first impression, excellent entertainment to carry on. And Elaine Schnieder came through with a delightful poster that you may read for a written schedule of the Week's activities. She will be awarded a trophy at the Barber Shop Sing on Tuesday night. They got Mayor Cairns to be one of the judges at the PEERADE. Girls such as Diane Morse (Coolidge), Sally Humphries (Pi Beta Phi), and Helen Kruk (Alpha Epsilon Phi) worked with the JR. BEAUTIES and there are twenty-two girls that will vie for the five top place winners.

So Junior Week will be held, April 28 - May 2, and for those of you who missed it last year, it will more than enough be made up for this year with the agenda thus far presented.

The Vermont Cynic

DEGENERATION?

It was quite an experience to hear the prominent speakers that the Vermont Conference offered to UVM this year. The conference received a great deal of support from the faculty and students. The chapel was full because many realized what a wonderful opportunity this conference offered to the University. An institution such as this gives the college student some intellectual stimuli which might not be received in the classrooms. Those who did not attend are the losers thereby.

When we inquired as to why some students did not go, we found their replies to be: They were too busy; it was too intellectual for them; or they were just plain lazy. First of all, the lectures were stimulating to everyone, whether they were scientists, philosophers, faculty members, or the average students, as long as they care to think about situations that this world is facing today. We are never too busy to go out on dates, but we are too lazy to attend lectures to which we merely sit and listen. Instead of laughing and having fun. Remember, life is not all fun in the outside world.

It seems students are afraid of exposing themselves to something intellectual. We are at a University to learn and to be taught, not just for a degree. Our parents are spending money for us to gain knowledge, not to spend four years just getting by. It should be the purpose of those in such a community to take advantage of stimulating extras such as this conference. Let us realize that just one talk, an hour and a half in length, can and did promote certain lines of thought that many may not follow in years of study. It is truly a shame that to a few, the idea of learning can produce such an "avoidance reaction."

The University should be proud to sponsor this event, as it not only affords an opportunity for increased learning, which is in keeping with the spirit of an institution of higher education, but it gives students the privilege of meeting some of the outstanding intellects of our era. This should be part of our educational process - to indulge in thought provoking activity - and the reactivation of this conference did produce this result.

Therefore, we offer our congratulations to the faculty and students who planned this week-end and who had the initiative to bring this fine educational program to UVM. To those who missed it, we feel sorry that you did not take advantage of this outstanding opportunity.

Budget Problems

This letter is written to you in regards the financial situation of Student Association in regards to next year's budgets. I hope that throughout the coming year, I will be able to give you brief reports on the picture of S.A. finances, so let us consider this the first in a series.

At the present time, I have received about $44,000 worth of requests from about 30 organizations. I estimate that there will be about $1,500 more that I have not yet received. This brings the total requested to about $46,000. The income, on the other hand will be only $37,500. This means that somewhere along the line, S.A. will have to cut more than $8,000 from the requests.

There are two ways which I can see to do this. One, to cut the bulk of this from the budgets of the smaller organizations. The other, to cut the bulk of it from the ARIEL's budget. This is the plan which I favor.

It has many advantages, I feel, over the other one. The main one is that this plan will more or less "spread the wealth around". In this way, the smaller organizations would receive enough money so that they can carry on their activities. Under this plan, the Seniors would receive their yearbook from the activity fee and any underclassmen who wanted one could buy it. This is much more equitable, first, because if someone does not particularly want an ARIEL, he doesn't just take one because he gets it for free, and second, because the smaller organizations' activities are not curtailed or sometimes even cut out completely because of lack of funds.

As I said earlier, I feel that if we let underclassmen buy their ARIELS and distribute the money saved to other organizations, the campus as a whole will benefit. However, I would like you tell your S.A. representative what you think of the subject so that he will be able to vote the way you want him to.

Photography Issues

There are two separate agencies on campus from which photographic services may be obtained. These are the Student Photographic Staff, supported by funds from Student Association, and the Audio-Visual Services, supported by funds from the University. I would like to review briefly the nature of these two organizations and then state the problem which currently exists. The Audio-Visual Service was set up by the University to service the high schools of the state as a film pool distributing agency. It was, also, instituted to provide photographic services for the academic departments of the under-graduate colleges, as well as the administrative offices, such as that of Public Relations, the Summer Session, and the Dean of Administration, in connection with their function of publication of the University Bulletins. In constituting this Audio-Visual Service it was further understood that if prints of pictures desired by student publications were available, they could be obtained through Audio-Visual. It was not the intent, however, that the photographer in Audio-Visual Service would complete assign-

Words And Music

By Ed Needham

There is a great deal of controversy in the radio industry concerning the adherence by stations to a "Top Forty" format. This essentially means that the station selects the top forty records from a popularity poll taken from one of the trade papers, such as Billboard or Variety. These discs are then played day after day, on show after show. Because the records stay on these polls for many weeks the listening public is subject to a barrage of this "popular" music.

In spite of the arguments in favor of this sort of thing, some stations are getting away from it. One of the biggest independent stations in the country recently severed relations with one of their top DJ's because he advocated this sort of thing. Art Ford of WNEW in New York was let go partly because of his difference of opinion about the records he played on his show. The powers at WNEW had this to say about the matter, "WNEW's program policy has always been to play the best and broadest range of popular music. Art Ford's most recent recommendation on programming ideas to fulfill this aim on the Make Believe Ballroom was to take from the 'popularity lists' the top ten single records, the top ten album selections, and another ten tunes as fill-ins.

"This narrow musical concept, repeated day after day, week after week, month after month during the same time periods could hardly be called proper programming for WNEW. Management here would be embarrassed to present such a musical menu.

"We have always been cognizant of teen-age tastes, but cannot believe that these tastes alone should dictate a program concept to the exclusion of America's broad range of musical wealth. We will play the best of all popular music, be it rock and roll, ballad, Broadway musical, motion picture scores, Latin-American tunes or what have you".

So there are some stations which do not treat the listener as if he were a musical illiterate. When a station bows in deference to ratings constantly it drags all programming down to the level of a theoretical average. This makes no allowance for the tastes of people who are not theoretical.

For a sample of top forty format and its awful sound, watch one of the local independent stations beginning May 6. It won't be long before you'll begin to gag and keep your dial away from that spot permanently.

To feed you a "Top Forty" format is to call you an idiot incapable of any taste of your own. It insults the listener and cheats him of his share of radio, which exists, after all, for the listener.

When you are limited to "Top Forty" fare by a station you are cheated out of "America's broad range of musical wealth" are given only what a dictatorial management says you ought to hear. You are forced to listen to only one kind of music if you keep tuned to such a station. I predict that this will be a beautiful flop, because fortunately for the radio audience here in Burlington, other fare is available.

riers with Soviet nations as many of our allies have done.

5. We must endorse universal membership in the United Nations. This includes Red China.

6. We must prove to backward peoples of the world that we can be of more help to them than can Russia.

7. We must have peaceful coexistence with Russia, engage in genuine negotiations rather than propaganda, and must wholeheartedly support the United Nations.

8. We must encourage cultural, economic, religious, and scientific exchange with the Communist world.

As a closing plea before a resounding ovation from the audience, Dr. Davis emphasized that peace is based only on a genuine willingness to share.

Participating with Dr. Davis and Dr Putnam in the summary panel on Friday evening were Dr. Louis Hartz, Dr. Ernest van den Haag, and Dr. Peter Viereck.

Dr. Viereck, Pulitzer Prize Poet and professor of modern, European, and Russian history at Mount Holyoke College, spoke on the topic of the Private Life in contemporary American society. Every age has its fight; ours is the fight for the private life. The idol of our times is the overadjusted man but the hero is the unadjusted man. The artist is no longer the prophet and seer of the external world. Science now fulfils these functions. The artist is now the prophet of inner reality.

On the subject of conformity, Dr. Viereck emphasized the necessity for conforming to something. The British, in direct contrast to the French, have retained a stable government through their deep-rooted faith and confidence in it. They have "preserved the inefficiently wayward" and maintain "external vigilence for inner liberties." The French, on the other hand, are the epitome of instability in government because they do not have roots in the democratic tradition. In citing British resistance to all undemocratic regimes, Dr. Viereck said that we must have the vertical strength of a tree to resist the horizontal threat of a storm.

The most important effect of the industrial revolution was to upset the moral archetypes that had existed. We must adjust to the ages; not to the age. To find the valid private life, the individual must discover the values of the ages that will enable him to develop his potentialities to the utmost and to better society.

Dr. Ernest van den Haag, associate professor at New York University, spoke on Values in a Mass Society. Mass production, he stressed, works only when there is mass consumption. There has been a tremendous rise in the power of the poor man whose fortune has been greatly increased by mass production. However, getting accustomed to standardized products makes one a standardized person. "We are not interested in selling the works of T.S. Eliot or Edgar Guest as long as we sell a great deal of it." From kindergarten, people are taught that approval of the group is the most important thing; not right and wrong. New values are not likely to be created especially on a mass scale.

Integration between work and leisure has been lost. Leisure should be fun, but today most people are condemned to pleasure. One of the activities of the new leisure is indulgence in mass media such as movies, television and less provocative literature. Mass media produces moral isolation, by alienating people from personal experience. It also produces diversion or pseudo-art - "destruction from destruction by destruction." The dream keeps the sleeper sleeping; true art awakens the dreamer to experience.

The last speaker of the evening was Dr. Louis Hartz, Chairman of the Committee on Higher Degrees in the History of American Civilization at Harvard University, who spoke on Liberal Tradition in American Values. He defined liberalism as "a way of life built around individualism, equality, rationalism, and faith in popular will." The liberal way was transplanted from Europe and flourished well during the time of Jefferson when the farmers were alike in land ownership and respect for each others beliefs, similar or varying. As the United States developed, relatively sufficient unto itself, the ideal deteriorated inward due to the lack of external peril.

At the time of World War I, the impact of the outer world on our country disturbed the happy subjectivity in which we lived. People could no longer get along in the placid isolationism of the Eighteenth and Nineteenth Centuries. Conformity and Individualism first developed after World War I. Now these concepts are coupled with the hysterical fear of differing political movements. Where evil is seen every day, it does not cause such fear. We must not remain in ignorance.

In summing up the conference, Dr. Hartz expressed confidence. Though we are now in a trend of conformity, the stress on the terms "individualism" and "conformity" is awakening an interest in the development of higher and more personal values.

Throughout the conference, Dr. C. Leonard Hoag of Middlebury College served as moderator. In addition to the formal talks in the Ira Allen Memorial, there were informal discussions in the Waterman Student Lounge following the evening sessions. The attendance at all meetings was greatly encouraging to the continuation of the Vermont Conference.

Plannings "do."

Spring-time in Vermont - memorable moments - and a perfect time for "plannings, etc." The Pi Phi's have contributed ample to the mood with Kay Lou Moore's engagement to Ray Tomlinson, West Point and Abigail Russell's pinning to Peter Perry, a former Chi Psi at Williams, who is presently doing graduate work at Columbia University. Pat Burns and John Durant, a UVM alumnus in Sigma Nu were married, too.

Sigma Nu has also had two plannings. Tony Crovo, '59, pinned Heidi Bettsch of the class of '60. John Tracy, past-president of Sigma Nu, pinned Claire Tully, a junior transfer student from Centenary College.

The number of green cards in Miss Martin' office must be steadily increasing. Judy Flick, a Tri-Delta in the Class of '58, became pinned to Larry Bullis, '58, at West Point. Last week-end, Anita Hermann, AEPhi, and Richard Reitman, a Tau Delta Phi at the University of Pennsylvania, became pinned, as were Caryanne Whitmore and Norman Kear, a Sigma Nu, at Gettysburg College. Last Saturday, eleven Alpha Chis drove to Windsor Vermont, to attend the wedding of Colleen Coxon, Alpha Chi, '58, to Bruce Blanchard, a Lambda Chi Alpha at Colby College.

Kurt Handloser, an SAE, pinned Julie Watts, a Tri Delta pledge in the Class of '61. Dick MacLean, SAE, pinned Judy Matrick, Alpha Chi. Another Alpha Chi, Mary Noonan, '58, became engaged to Robert Pinecker of Glens Falls, New York.

Best Wishes and Congratulations to all of you!

ALPHA CHI OMEGA

Amanda Davidson and Edie Lawson were elected to Omicron Nu. Miss Reed of the Home Economics department spoke on etiquette during the last cultural meeting.

While Mrs. Bartlett attended a convention in Washington, the Alpha Chi's were pleased to have Miss Frost as their substitute housemother.

ALPHA EPSILON PHI

Evie Kruger was the overall chairman for the AEPhi's annual Car Wash. Amidst shouts and laughter, a lot of cars were cleaned and polished.

This week-end, the AO's are taking a trip to Boston, where they will participate in the regional conclave. Their chapter is responsible for the business meeting for the area.

Deedee Weiss was pledged last week to Omicron Nu and Elaine Schneider won both the Junior Week Poster Contest and the program cover contest for the Fine Arts Festival.

ALPHA TAU OMEGA

Last Saturday with the cooperation of all the members, spring clean-up was held in preparation for the "Playboy" sponsored spring formal. It will be held at the house on May 9th.

In accordance with ATO tradition, all the Tau's will donate a day of their time working for a local charity organization. This year their project is the orphanage on Shelburne Road.

Dick Baraw, '60; Bob Bryan, '61; and John Shannon, '61, were pledged.

DELTA DELTA DELTA

The annual Butterfly Breakfast will be held this coming Sunday morning from 9 to 11 at the Tri-Delta house. Everyone is invited to attend. On the menu will be orange juice, waffles with syrup, and coffee with seconds for anyone who wishes! The breakfast is held each year to raise money for Tri-Delta's Scholarship program. Eta chapter awards a local scholarship at various times and also takes part in a national scholarship program. Awards are made to deserving women students, irrespective of fraternity affiliation.

With the alum's support, the rooms of our housemother, Miss Rowles, were redecorated. The Tri-Deltas are very excited too about the proposed plans to redecorate the rest of the house over the summer.

As one of the projects, the pledges had an inside-outside clean-up session last Sunday. Even with the chilly weather, a lot of work was accomplished.

DELTA PSI

Pledging ceremonies were held for "Chuck" Adams of Middlebury, Vermont.

Due to the efforts of the Woman's Auxiliary and the Delta Psi Corporation, the library of the chapter house was redecorated.

Bill Miller was elected to represent Delta Psi on the I.F.C. council. Bill is a sophomore from Clinton, New York.

GAMMA PHI DETA

Last Friday night, the Gamma Phi's held their annual Undersea Party. Couples were costumed in "seatogs" for the occasion, and danced to the music of the Sig Ep Jazz

THE PROBLEM CORNER

Referring to last week's problem the original price of the grapefruit was 10 cents. Correct solutions to this problem were submitted by Gil Gagne, Allen Greenfield, Ben Kaufman, Thomas R. Pennell, Bob Murphy, Prof. J. A. Newlander and Spike Sylvester.

PROBLEM:

A map is made on a scale of 4 inches to 1 mile. How many acres will be enclosed within a rectangular area which on the map measures 2 3/8 inches by 3 5/8 inches. (1 acre equals 4840 square yards.)

Leave solutions to these problems at the office of Professor Schoonmaker, Room 341, Waterman, no later than Monday of the week following publication of the problem.

The Gamma Phi's and their guests drank seafoam punch and nibbled on sandwiches and cookies. Everyone looks forward to next year, when once again Davy Jones' invitations to the sea party will be issued.

LAMBDA IOTA

The Owls gave a "Li'l Abner" theme party with appropriate character costumes. Everyone enjoyed himself.

Some of the Owls are now at work building an Owl car. They are converting a sedan to a convertible, and are going to paint it with the fraternity colors.

An old Owl, now residing in England, is sending us a Horned Owl from the old Lancaster estate. This stuffed bird is reported to be over 100 years old, and has quite a history behind it.

PI BETA PHI

Parents week-end at the Pi Phi house was quite a success. The entertainment had an excellent beginning with the I.F.C. Sing Friday night. The following afternoon the girls held an informal gathering at the house, which was high-lighted by the Pi Phi jazz band and dancing girls. The week-end festivities were climaxed with a banquet given at the Hotel Vermont on Saturday evening. A delicious dinner, a fine dramatic presentation by Mrs. Taggert, and lots of songs resulted in a wonderful time for the parents as well as the Pi Phis.

Marilyn Jenson was initiated into Kappa Kelta Pi, the scholastic honorary for the College of Education.

SIGMA ALPHA EPSILON

The Sig Alpha will hold their spring formal this year at Sunny Hollow. Al Peterson is in charge of arrangements. At this time a trophy will be presented to the sweetheart of SAE.

COLLEGE OF TECHNOLOGY
Pre-enrollment for the 1958 Fall Semester

Pre-enrollment for the next semester will be held during the week beginning Monday, May 5, and students should determine the times and places for pre-enrollment by referring to the schedule which is posted in the Waterman and other buildings on the campus.

It is very important that each student pre-enroll, and failure to do so may be serious.

Those who are in doubt about returning for the fall semester should pre-enroll and notify the Dean's office later if they do not expect to return.

SWEENEY IN THE TREES

Spring is here - the season of tree-sitting contests. This I applaud. Tree-sitting is healthful and jolly and as American as apple pie. Also it keeps you off the streets.

Tree-sitting is not, however, without its hazards. Take, for example, the dread and chilling case of Manuel Sigafoos and Ed Sweeney, both sophomores at the Nashville College of Folk Music and Woodworking, and both madly in love with a beautiful alto named Ursula Thing, who won their hearts singing that fine old folk song, I Strangled My True Love with Her Own Yellow Braids, and I'll Never Eat Her Sorghum Any More.

Both Manuel and Ed pressed Ursula to go steady, but she could not choose between them, and finally it was decided that the boys would have a tree-sitting contest, and Ursula would belong to the victor. So Manuel and Ed clambered up adjoining aspens, taking with them the following necessaries: food, clothing, bedding, reading matter, and — most essential of all — plenty of Marlboro Cigarettes.

We who live on the ground know how much you get to like with a Marlboro. Think how much more important they must be to the lonely tree-dweller - how much more welcome their fine, mild tobacco; how much more gratifying their free-drawing filters; how much more comforting their sturdy, crushproof flip-top box. Climb a tree and see for yourselves.

"A TREE SITTING CONTEST"

Well supplied with Marlboros, our heroes began their tree-sitting contest. Manuel with good heart, Ed with evil cunning. The shocking fact is that crafty Ed, all unbeknownst to Manuel, was one of three identical triplets. Each night while Manuel dozed on his bough, one of Ed's brothers - Fred or Jed - would sneak up the tree and replace him. "How can I lose?" said Ed with a fiendish giggle to his brother Fred or Jed.

But Ed had a big surprise coming. For Manuel, though he did not know it himself, was a druid! He had been abandoned as an infant at the hut of a poor and humble woodcutter named Cornelius Whitney Sigafoos III, who had raised the child as his own. So when Manuel got into the tree, he found much to his surprise that he had never in all his life felt so at home and happy. He had absolutely no intention of ever leaving.

After seven or eight years Ed and his brothers wearied of the contest and conceded. Ursula Thing came to Manuel's tree and cried, "I am yours! Come down and pin me!"

But Manuel declined. Instead he asked Ursula to join him in the tree. This she could not do, being subject to mopery (a morbid allergy to woodpeckers), so she ended up with Ed after all.

Only she made a mistake—a very natural mistake. It was Jed, not Ed, with whom she ended up.

Ed, heartbroken at being tricked by his own brother, took up metallurgy to forget.

Crime does not pay.

Lafayette Slept Here

by Jane Peters

Was the young sons of Ver- must show in their studies the same order and perseverance which characterize the inhabitants of the green Mountains." These were the words of Marquis de Lafayette as he and the committee of the Old Mill on June 20 1825. The honored guests who were burlighted that morning where to was greeted by a huge crowd and was then ushered to Grassmount where a ball was given in his honor that night. The grounds were lighted with hundreds of candles and the interior glowed with light from the chandeliers. The next morning he left for Whitehall, New York.

Grassmount one of the finest examples of Georgian architecture, was built in 1804 the land originally belonged to Ira Allen founder of the University. In 1824, it was sold to Cornelius Van Ness, the eighth governor of Vermont, and a few years later the building was named Grasse Mounte in honor of Count de Grasse a friend of Lafayette. The mansion changed hands two more times before it was sold to the university in 1894. In the fall of 1895 Grassmount opened as a dormitory.

In this beautiful and historic setting, the girls of Grassmount are holding an open house on Sunday, May 4, 1958 from 3:00 to 5:00 p.m. Everyone is cordially invited to attend and revisit the period when "Lafayette slept here."

Junior Week 1957 Lost?

By Shelly Weiner

At the present time UVM [illegible] of the most [illegible] Junior Week. The activities began on April 28 and will terminate May 3. It will be interesting to see the degree of success that Junior Week will encounter since it did not occur last year. The reasons for its absence last year are apparent, specifically social problems, the underlying facts are slightly more complex.

It was felt by the officers of the class of 1958 that a sophomore beach party would augment the spirit of the class. After submitting a request to COSA the plans were finally approved. It was the opinion of the COSA office, however that the employment of policemen for the affair would be desirable as a precaution against drinking. This suggestion was accepted by the class officers and chaperones were assigned to the function.

The party took place in mid-May of 1956. It was a gala affair, consisting of many events, including drinking. The actual drinking that did occur was not excessive, but enough for the chaperones to submit an unfavorable report.

At a trial of the Student Court the class officers were relieved of responsibility for the drinking that did occur. It was still felt by the administration that some action should be taken. As a result of the meeting of the President and Deans, the Class of '58 was placed on one year's social probation. This accounts for the absence of Junior Week last year.

part of the group originally set up the Photographic Staff and in working out the institution under which rated. It is my understanding of this organization return for support in way of equipment and graphic supplies, that members would work on assts from the CYNIC, ARIEL, other student organizato cover University ities and provide photoof these. The use of room and of the equipof the Student Photo- Staff was intended primarily for use on University assignments. It was understood, however, that in the process of developing films and prints that members of the staff might also on occasion develop pictures of their own and make prints for their own use. However, supplies, such as paper and film for personal use would be paid for by the individual. Early in the process it was discovered that many times students would wish to obtain extra copies of the pictures made by members of the Student Photographic Staff and therefore arrangements were made whereby orders could be placed and extra prints made. The staff members making these prints would then receive a part of the charge for them while the balance of the charge would go to Student Association in payment of use of materials and space. This was considered to be a fair procedure since to make extra copies whether 2 or 3 or a dozen requires a considerable amount of the person's time. To ask them to do this free of charge would be similar to saying to the editor of the CYNIC that one was pleased with his editorial and would like to have him type off a personal copy. This he would consider an infringement on his time unless paid for doing so.

After the establishment of the University Audio-Visual Photographic Service more and more demands have been made on Mr. Eldred for prints of pictures and at present a considerable number of the pictures used in the CYNIC are credited to him. He has also been asked for quite a number of prints for the ARIEL. On more than one occasion I have had a student group remark that there was no point in asking SPS for pictures since then were engrossed in their own activities and did not seem to have time to provide what was asked of them, therefore, the request would be made of Mr. Eldred for such prints as were available. This has led to the situation where Mr. Eldred finds it necessary to take on additional staff members if he is to continue to supply as many pictures as are requested by student groups. We have denied him this additional staff member in the budget for the coming year, arguing on the grounds that student services should be supplied by the Student Photographic Staff which receives money for doing so and that if Student Organizations are to get a major share of their pictures from Mr. Eldred, then it would be proper for the University to ask for an allotment of Student Association Funds to provide the additional help needed to provide these pictures that are to be used in publications such as ARIEL and CYNIC.

I have offered this explanation in order to raise the question at this time as to whether the Student Photographic Staff is giving the kind of service needed and whether this operation is meeting the needs of CYNIC and ARIEL. On the other hand, I think the practices of the CYNIC staff and ARIEL staff in asking for assignments of Student Photographic Staff members to take pictures should be inquired into since in order to meet their needs, the Student Photographic Staff must be kept informed of what they are.

I hope that we may have the opportunity of discussing with your group the implications of this memorandum. Mr. Eldred would like to oblige, I am informing him that he must not spend the major part of his time in assignments for ARIEL and CYNIC since this means that he is unable to complete assignments for other University departments. I do not wish to fall on him for being unable to accommodate each demand. On the other hand, I would like to make sure that good coverage of all University activities is assured through one or the other of our existing agencies.

Conf. Com. Meets

by Marsha Eisen

The annual meeting of the Joint Conference Committee will take place on May 7 at 7:00 in Southwick. As in the past, this year's meeting will consist of an open forum which all women students are invited to attend. The main topic to be discussed is the evaluation of the women student government regulations by which we live.

On May 7th

The faculty members of the Joint Conference Committee of Women's Student Government Association are Miss Anne Rankin Harris, Miss Margaret Wing, Mrs. Viva Stoddard, Mrs. Lou Eddy and Miss Lucille Wakefield. The WSGA student representatives are Pat Penn, president; Sara Godfrey, chief justice; Priscilla Roberts, house chairman; Judy Baker, scholarship chairman, Claire Sheft and Jackie Sheehan, junior members of Judiciary; and senior, junior, and sophomore representatives who will be elected by the WSGA Council at its next meeting.

At the open forum the faculty members and the WSGA Council will be available for any questions which a woman student may have concerning our government. The basis for any needed changes in the WSGA handbook for the forthcoming year are those suggestions brought to light by women students at this meeting.

Cindermen Drop First Meet To Bowdoin

Meserve, Hall, Russel, Win

by PAUL STANTON

Powerful Bowdoin College of Brunswick, Maine swept to a decisive 89-45 victory over Coach Archie Post's thinclads at chilly Centennial Field, Saturday, as the Polar Bears iced the Cats' chances, taking all but three firsts.

Led by triple-event winners, Olympian Bill McWilliams and sprinter Larry Wilkins, the fast-moving visitors took a lead in the first event and gradually widened it as the afternoon wore on. The inexperienced Cats didn't even pose a threat to their classy counterparts.

Bianca Displays Stamina.

Danny Bianca, UVM football sentback, out for track for the first time, gave Wilkins plenty of competition in the 100 and 200 yard dashes. However, the Bowdoin ace was fast off the blocks for an early lead and had enough left to hold off the fast closing Bianca in the 100. The Vermonter trailed a Bowdoin pair in the 220. In the 220 yard low hurdles Wilkins held off Red Meserve, Vermont high hurdle victor in the final 20 yards to win by a yard.

In a two man finish in the high hurdles, Meserve outlasted Whittlesey of the visitors for a two yard victory. Other Vermont wins came in field events.

UVM captain, Neil Hall, won his specialty, the pole vault, with a vault of 12 feet. Vermont's other first place went to Mal Russel who tossed the javelin 178 feet, 3 inches.

Meserve was Vermont's leading point getter, in addition to his victory, he placed second in both the low hurdles and the broad jump, getting 11 out of the Cats' 45 points.

The Cats will host the annual two state, Maine-Vermont quadrangular meet Saturday at Centennial Field. Bates and Colby will be the Pine Tree representatives, with Middlebury and the Cats going for the Green Mountain State.

Frosh Cindermen Lose

by STAN MESSINGER

In the first outing of the season the freshman track team was beaten by Lyndon Institute 65-52. The men from Lyndon Center were able to win due to the depth in several places and the combination of six first places by three men. This was due to the efforts of Heath, Simpson and Devereaux who won not only in the running events but also copped the field events. Even though the Kittens went down to defeat, Bill Perkins, Dick Gomez and John Bister, did very well. Perkins from Beverly, Mass. took the half mile and the mile with Gomez taking a first in the high jump and a tie in the pole vault. Bister won the 220 and was second in the 100.

One of the reasons for the Kittens' defeat was the lack of depth. Up until last week the team had only ten men, but this week it had increased its members to a remarkable thirteen. How can a team be expected to do well, yet doesn't have enough men to compete in all the events. Mr. Strassburg said that the team was strong in the distance and very weak in the short events. It was estimated that approximately twenty-five men were needed in order to compete against anyone effectively. It is indeed a very sad situation when a team from this university cannot muster even enough men to participate in a sport effectively.

The prospects for this coming Wednesday's meet against St. Johnsbury seems very cloudy. The coach hoped that the Kittens would do better in their next appearance.

Varsity Club Weekend

This weekend, high school students from all over New England will visit the UVM campus. These students are potential Catamounts and all are good athletes.

They will attend the quadrangular track meet on Saturday and will also see the UVM-Rhode Island baseball game.

On Sunday morning, the Varsity Club will sponsor a brunch for these boys. Those in charge are: Pres. Tom Tierney, Treasurer, Clyde Lord, and Evan Salmore.

Frosh Nine Open Season

by STEVE COOPER

The 1958 edition of the UVM freshman baseball team opened this past Tuesday, April 29, against the Johnson Teachers at Centennial Field. As the season began, Coach "Fuzzy" Evans looked at his team's chances with pure optimism. "If my pitching comes through, we'll be alright," said the good-natured mentor. Coach Evans hopes to use three of his moundsmen in the first game, each for three innings. They are Bob Hobbie, Fred Robinson and Walter Bone.

The opening day lineup appears to be Pete Nelson, first base; Dave McGurk, second base; Charles Spencer, shortstop; Bob McBride, third base; Fred Brant, left field; Bob Egal, center field and Mike Jarrett, right field and Ron Fine, catcher. The next frosh game is Friday, May 2 against Fort Ethan Allen at the flyer's home field.

UVM's Wasson Infirmary once again reminds the University's students, faculty and staff that free polio shots are available at the infirmary from 8 a.m. to 8 p.m. Monday through Saturday.

Dr. R. W. Amidon, director of student health at UVM, reports that "we feel it is important that all students be immunized," and urges "early attention, as the so-called polio season begins in June."

The age requirements should be noted. Students under 21 must present written parental consent in order to be given the shots, while shots are available to faculty and staff who are under 60 years of age.

Fraternity Fracas

by LARRY ALBERT

Not much action at the gym last week except for the continuation of the intramural softball competition. Monday's slate was postponed due to rain and on Tuesday Kappa Sig beat Lambda Iota 9-6 and Phi Sig topped Sig Phi by forfeit.

In the rest of the week's competition SAE topped Sig Phi 16-12, ATO squeezed by Sig Phi 14-13, and TEP topped AEPi 10-5. This week softball continues, with TEP, Kappa Sig & Delta Psi, and Phi Sig the teams to beat.

In September, 1958, a new publication will be introduced on the UVM Campus - a "Freshmen Record."

This book will be published annually, and will include pictures, names, hometowns, high school attended and activities of all the incoming Freshmen. It will be available for distribution to all Freshmen at registration and perhaps be placed on sale for any upperclassmen desiring copies.

The "Ariel" staff will take charge of editing this book, and is looking for some interested individuals who would like to work on it, preferably some people who will be enrolled in the UVM Summer Session or who are Burlington residents. Those interested, please contact George Shearer, Room 212, Waterman or at Sigma Phi, UN 8-4865.

The Spectator By Jerry Heller

WHAT HAS HAPPENED TO SPORTS? How could everything that sports stood for fade with time? We look around and find the world of sports so greatly commercialized that the collegiate sports alone have remained "clean." The Greeks of ancient times loved their sport and made it part of their daily existence, but if the Greek athletes should return today they would be shocked at the changes which have taken place in the world of sports. The rules generally do not change but the conniving promoters of sports have squeezed the last drop of sincere devotion to sport out of the fan and athlete. We all feel strongly about the "mighty dollar" but hasn't the time come when our enjoyment of sports is shaded by their cost?

Let us look around at the present deals in the world of sport. Business and baseball are synonymous as is the former with most other present day sports. The baseball teams pay their players extravagant salaries, they change their home towns to squeeze out an extra buck from the propagandized public, they buy tremendous stadiums (the L.A. Coliseum can hold 94,000) so that the man in the stands needs binoculars to see home plate unless he is sitting right next to it in a seat that costs him four dollars, they invade the college campus robbing a boy of a decent future unless he has real potential and then he'll still probably end up endorsing sports equipment, cigarettes, shaving cream etc. They do not even have compunctions about having a sport field in their home stadiums so as to attract the fan to watch their players hit Chinese Homers (such as the left field in the L.A.Coliseum). The parking prices around the field drain all your peanut, hotdog and beer money. How can the baseball club owners wonder why people would rather watch a ballgame on T.V. than attend one?

Let's take golf as another example of commercialism. Here was a sport of relaxation. It used to be easy to just go to the club and play a few rounds. Today appearance is the most important part of golfing. The man who goes to play must first ask himself before stepping out of the clubhouse. "Am I wearing the right hat, jacket, pants, shoes, etc.? Do I have a good brand of clubs, how much should I tip the caddy, etc.?" Of course the woman has invaded the links on a larger scale than ever before. How could she play golf with the girls without a new permanent?

Each sport of the present era could be criticized in the same manner for their nauseating commercialism. Have the people of the U.S. become so lazy that they will allow sports events to be made into circuses? What has happened to the days when you could get a seat at a ballgame for a reasonable price and still be able to see the game? What happened to the extra change that you could buy beer, hotdogs and peanuts with? (the parking lot attendant has it). Where are the days when you could root for your home team and not worry if they would be the home town team of the next year? Where are the times when a home run was a home run? Where are the times when a prospective professional ball player could finish his education without being suckered out of school by a bonus? And where are the times when you could just park your car in a vacant lot when you went to a ball game and not have it cost two bucks.

These times have passed. Sports have moved along with the "progress" of the 20th century.

I am not against sports of these times. I'm just opposed to what people are doing to them and I would rather watch my alma mater play than sit in the 4000th row in a stadium of 94,000 seats squinting at home plate.

Henrichs, Koones Winning Hurlers

by FRED ROBINSON

After Boston University pinned an 8-5 loss on the University of Vermont, opening their three-day jaunt to the Boston area, the Lapointemen rebounded to knock off Coast Guard, 6-4, and pound Brandeis University, 7-2, thus winning five of the seven games played to date.

On Thursday against BU, the Cats jumped off to a quick five-run lead over the first three innings behind junior righthander Ross Artus. However, in the bottom of the third the Terrier's bats caught a spark of life as a three-runner homer made it 5-3. Costly errors by Vermont in the sixth, set up two more runs, and the score stood UVM-5, BU-5. Boston added a single run in the sixth and two more in the bottom of the eighth as Coach Lapointe sent Bob Koones and Carl Carlson to the mound in an effort to put out the fire. UVM failed to overcome the three-run cushion in the ninth and BU picked up the chips. Vermont had a tough day at the plate collecting only six safeties over the nine inning stretch.

It took eleven innings for the Cats to beat the Coast Guard on Friday afternoon in New London, Conn., 6-4, and it took the little guy in left, "Moe" Castagner, to come through with a clutch single, driving in "Ace" Santa Croce and Gerry Cassidy for the deciding runs.

In the second frame, the Cats hopped out to a 4-1 lead when Santa Croce's booming bat sent a CG serving over the fence good for two runs. As in the previous game, Coast Guard pecked away at the margin until a two-out two-run blast in the eighth tied it up, 4-4. Bob Flance relieved the big soph southpaw, Steve Cooper, who started the game, and in the ninth was replaced by Bob Koones, who went the rest of the way giving up only one hit and picking up the win. Leading the Vermont twelve-hit barrage was Cassidy with three hits including a double, Capt. Tom Tierney with two safeties also including a double, Bill Simonds, with two singles, and Santa Croce with two, including a homer. Santa Croce and Castagner each had two RBI's.

Rounding off their trip Saturday morning, the Cats, behind the fourhit pitching of Senior Russ Henrichs, clobbered Brandeis University, 7-2, in Waltham. This husky righthander went the nine frames striking out twelve big men.

A timely base hit by Marty Katz in the first, drove home "Swede" Johnson and Gerry Cassidy to give UVM a lead it would never relinquish. The Cats struck again when "Ace" Santa Croce scored on Johnson's fly to right. Katz doubled home Bill Simonds in the third inning, and scored himself minutes later when "Moe" Castagner came through with a single; this made the score 5-1, UVM.

Brandeis scored their second run in the fourth, but the Green and Gold bounced back with a run in the sixth on Cassidy's triple and an infield out, and in the eighth when Tom Tierney walked, stole second and third, and crossed the plate on an overthrow at third. Castagner's three hits, Cassidy, Katz, and Zysk's two hits apiece paced the Cats 12-hit attack. Katz also powered home three runs.

Coach Lapointe experimented in the infield during the trip switching Tom Tierney from third to shortstop, Gerry Cassidy from short to right field (Gerry's originally an outfielder), and moved Marty Katz to third. All these boys can hit the ball with authority, but how they will progress at their new positions remains to be seen. However, it worked fairly well on the trip and there is no reason why it shouldn't keep clicking.

Netmen Open Tomorrow Against R.P.I.

by BOB GOLDMAN

On Friday morning May 2, the UVM tennis team will travel to Troy, N.Y. for the opening match of the season against R.P.I. The Rensselear men beat us badly last year, by a victory of 8-1, with Pete Snow scoring UVM's only win. The return of three very good seniors, and number one man Chuck Brukl, makes R.P.I. appear very strong this year. Tennis Coach Fred Marston hopes the squad will improve greatly on last year's loss, but whether or not we are going to take them is still questionable.

Union College will be the next stop for the UVM net men on the following Saturday afternoon. Union won the match against the Catamounts last year by a narrow margin. This was a great surprise because Union had not been strong in the previous years. This season, the Union squad consists mainly of sophomores, due to the graduation of most of their better players. Mr. Marston feels that the meet will be a close one.

The Vermont squad consists of a crew of lettermen, who have returned from last season. At present the number one man is Evan Salmore. Evan is backed up by last year's captain, Chuck Hirsch, along with juniors Pete Snow, Clem Pease, Bob Feinberg, Larry Freedman, and Jack Howard. The only sophomore to break into the lineup is Frank Diller.

Coach Marston, a professor in the English Department, has been playing tennis for 30 odd years. Throughout his tennis career Mr. Marston has played in a number of tournaments. Last year, he won the Central Maine Singles Championship, and reached the quarter finals of the Vermont State Championships.

Every year the coaches of the Yankee Conference squads get together and have a little tournament of their own. Although Mr. Marston claims it is not to be taken seriously, he is at present the champion of the Yankee Conference Coaches.

Last summer he coached the

UVM Judiciary Reviewed; Committee Revamps System

President Borgmann Addresses University

To the editor of the CYNIC:

For many months a committee of students and staff members has worked hard to review, untangle and revise the authorities and jurisdictions of those offices and groups which deal with student violations of regulations. They have submitted for consideration the attached report.

Before this is presented to the University Council for action I hope that all members of the university will have read it carefully. If there are constructive suggestions on the report they may be presented in writing to the chairman of the committees or to my office.

When final action in taken I trust the result will be a clearer definition of responbility and authority for all the university community. I am grateful to the CYNIC for space to present the report, and I wish to express appreciation to the members of the committee for the service they have rendered.

May 1 and once again the traditional gathering of the honored students under one roof to receive their ''Rewards'' from the faculty of UVM. The crowd was small and unattentive most of the program. Various members of the honored were absent and for some reason the lineup of presentation was changed from one group to another. It was a very good Founder's Day presentation.

At twenty minutes past ten the program started (it had been scheduled for ten o'clock) with stragglers still sauntering down to their seats. Then

Sig Ep And A E Phi Place First In Peerade Floats

by Linda Sack

Sigma Phi Epsilon contributed the ''Spirit of Education'' as UVM's Contribution to the World's Fair, the theme of the Junior Week Peerade, Wednesday, April 30. For this gift they received first place in the fraternity division. The flag-bedecked float which portrayed the three phases of education - moral, social and formal - was also judged the best all-around work from the entries of the eight fraternities and three sororities. For this they received the rotating Dramatic Club trophy.

Sigma Phi's ''Fraternal Spirit'' was judged second in the fraternity division, losing the first place spot by only 5 points. Their theme was portrayed by a Russian bear and a Kake Walker shaking hands on top of a two-story high globe of crepe paper roosettes.

In the sorority division, the contest was even closer. ''A Fair to Remember,'' which was made by Alpha Epsilon Phi and which consisted of a carousel representing art, literature, music and science, was judged first. Only three points separated them from the second place entry by Delta Delta Delta, ''UVM's Aggie Takes the Cake.'' This was a brown and white, high kicking, spotted cow which drew chuckles from the large crowd that lined the streets of Burlington at 6:30 p.m. to watch the Peerade.

Also in the procession which was headed by a police escort, the Catamount, and the UVM band, were the five reigning queens of Junior Week, each riding in a convertible between the floats. Another feature was a car advertising Grassmount's Open House, decorated to recall the fact that Lafayette had once stayed at the historic old mansion. The Student Association wagon ended the Peerade with an advertisement for WRUV.

The judges, Mayor Cairns, Professor Malcolm Daggett, Professor Schultz, and Dean Clifford awarded the prizes for the event on the basis of the following point system: workmanship - 40 points; originality - 35 points; and over-all effect - 25 points. Rules of the contest stated that each house could spend no more than $75.00 on a float which had to be between 1 1/2 and 16 feet in height, and all work had to be done by students affiliated with the sponsoring group. Sig Ep's winning entry was 14 1/2 feet high and was decorated in the United Nation's blue color.

After forming on University Place the Peerade proceded down Main Street, up Church and Pearl Streets and past Waterman, then back to their respective fraternity and sorority houses. Each float was halted briefly in front of the judges' stand on the steps of City Hall so that they could be viewed. Winners were announced and trophies were presented Thursday, May 1, at the Jazz Concert in Waterman's

Students And Faculty Urged To Comment

To: President Carl W. Borgmann
From: Committee on Juriadiction of Student Court and Related Matters Subject: Final report

INTRODUCTION

Since its first meeting on March 20, 1957, the committee has met a total of 22 times for about 36 hours of deliberation.

Our investigation brought the following problems to light.

1. Communication and cooperation among faculty, students, and administration was found to be badly needed.

2. It was not clear in many cases which, if any, judicial group had jurisdiction. Jurisdictional overlap occurred especially in cases of misconduct in the following areas: housing units, social events, academic performance, and others. In a recent case involving fraternity men, jurisdiction was in doubt.

3. Responsibility for enforcing judicial conclusions was not clear.

4. While some considered plagiarism a purely academic matter to be dealt with by faculty alone, others felt the opinion of students would be helpful in judging guilt or innocence and penalty.

5. In general, Student Court was not respected, especially by faculty.

6. The quasi-legal nature of Student Court tended to impede justice rather than promote it.

7. The size of the court, plus its complicated rules of procedure, decreased its efficiency.

8. Student Court was not allowed to levy sufficiently severe penalties, but could only make recommendations to the University Council.

9. The Student Court counselor system, considered to be worthwhile, was dormant.

RECOMMENDATIONS

1. Standing Committee on Jurisdiction--The committee, recognizing the impossibility of so clearly defining jurisdiction that there would be no jurisdictional disputes, recommends the establishment of a Standing Committee on Jurisdiction

A. The committee shall be appointed at the beginning of each school year.

B. Composition.
 1. Dean of Women and Dean Men.
 2. Faculty member to be chosen by Policy Committee of University Senate.
 3. Three students.

 b. A member of Student Court chosen by the justices. A man student shall be chosen in even-numbered years, a woman student in odd-numbered years.
 c. One (man or woman) chosen by Student Association Council, but not necessarily a member of that group.

C. Responsibilities.
 1. Temporary
 a. To serve in an advisory capacity to the Dean of Women and Dean of Men in implementing the recommendations of this report.
 b. To explain the recommendations of this report to appropriate student groups.
 2. Continuing.
 a. To decide what group shall have jurisdiction in cases of questionable or overlapping jurisdiction.
 b. To decide questions of protest on jurisdiction.
 c. To hear appeals from jurisdictional bodies. After hearing the appeal, the committee may either

THE ENGINEERS HAVE HAIRY EARS

[illegible] engineering graduates are wooed and [illegible] great industries [illegible] and selected by the Bell Test Electrical Engineer who finished at the head of the class at M.I.T., [illegible] position [illegible] offers to accept employment as a [illegible] engineer at the Acme Ice Company at a salary of $20 a week with a [illegible] week and only fifteen minutes for lunch.

I know what you are thinking. "Cheer Art is former." You are thinking that Mr. Acme, head of the Acme Ice Company, has a beautiful daughter with whom Rimbaud is madly in love and he took the job only to be near her.

Friends, you are wrong. It is true that Mr. Acme does have a daughter, a large, torpid lass named Claudia who spends all her waking hours scraping marzipan out of a bucket and staring at a television set which has not worked in some years. Rimbaud has not the slightest interest in Claudia, nor, indeed, does any other man, excepting possibly John Ringling North.

Then why does Rimbaud keep working for the Acme Ice Company? Can it be that they provide him with free Marlboro Cigarettes, and all day long he enjoys that filter, that flavor, that flip-top box?

No, friends, no. Rimbaud is not allowed to smoke on the job, and when he finishes his long, miserable day, he has to buy his own Marlboros, even as you and I, in order to enjoy that estimable filter, that incomparable flavor, that crazy flip-top box.

Well, friends, you might as well give up because you'll never in a million years guess why Rimbaud works for the Acme Ice Company. The reason is simply this: Rimbaud is a seal!

He started as a performing seal in vaudeville. One night on the way to the Ed Sullivan show, he took the wrong subway. All night the poor mammal rode the B.M.T., seeking a helping hand. Finally a kindly fisherman named Ernest Thompson Seaton rescued the hapless Rimbaud.

He took Rimbaud home and raised him as his own, and Rimbaud, to show his appreciation, studied hard and got excellent marks and finished a distinguished academic career as valedictorian of M.I.T.

Rimbaud never complained to his kindly foster father, but through all those years of grammar school and high school and college he dare not cheat! He dare not! A seal, you must remember, is by nature a denizen of the Arctic, so you can imagine how poor Rimbaud must have suffered in subtropical New York and Boston, especially in those tight Ivy League suits.

But today at the Acme Ice Company, Rimbaud has finally found a temperature to his liking. He is very happy and sends greetings to his many friends.

Dance Workshop And Players Production Recieve Excellent Review

by Peter Schottelail

The eighth and next to last program of the 1958 Fine Arts Festival scored another success for the series. Last Saturday evening at Southwick gave us a split program supplied by the University's Dance Workshop and a University Players production of a one act play. The play, Soroyan's Hello Out There was sandwiched between two sections of dancing and our only disappointment here was that this spread the dancing a little thin and caused some loss of the play's impact, even if it did make a rather tidy looking format.

Dance Workshop is composed of 18 young women and each of these young women is herself composed and not without the degree of ability necessary for the choreography performed. Most of the compositions were kept within the scope of the performer's talents and capacities and several times we were delighted by near professional work. "Debate," a somewhat misnamed (we thought) writing, danced by its creator, Jo Hale and Linda Ward was clear, not trite, with simply sustained movement, pure inspiration, pertinent and unusually unique and knowing. It was, perhaps, the most meaningful piece of the evening. Unique also was Diana Jordan's "Tea Bags" which held totally charming wit and scathing satire, and was a welcomed trip into the world of Woman's generalized skill at pretense and sham and Her propensity to be hood-winked by "high fashion." A later solo number by Miss Jordan, not on the printed program, and inaudibly announced, revealed her as an amazingly gifted interpreter of dance communication and technique. These were the stellar points of the dance program.

The remainder of the program was far from failure, indeed maintained what we would consider a high degree of professionalism, but lacked the polish and approach to "genius" which the above mentioned three seemed to have been born with. "Air Age," was an imaginative use of a garbled musical narrative recording; "Study of the Orient," missed and was just short of being something more than movement in time to music tempo; "Abstractions," was an enigmatic round of square mechanical symbolism, curious, but not a communication, interesting in an educational sense; "Our Faith," contained an intriguing utilization of hand movement; "Topic: the segregation issue" utilized an interesting lighting plot, rather too simply stylized, dance on a theme, pushed, long ago, to the ground.

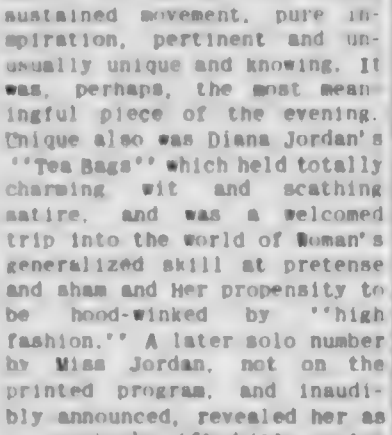
"Spiritual Life, (In Honor of Chapel)" was an artfully conceived though unnecessary editorial comment with music (arrangement?) by "Faith!" "Coffee Shop," the last offering, seemed badly motivated but proved an interesting exercise in jazz idiom.

Music was on record except for Bill Pickens' bongos which overtured the "Coffee Shop" number. Using recorded music is not at all disturbing, but our familiarity with most of the music deleted a freshness that could have been attained with less familiar selections. The effect is similar to trying to chew gum and eat popcorn at the same time. Otherwise Dance Workshop may take several bows for all the unfortunates who missed their truly remarkable work on Saturday evening.

William Soroyan's Hello Out There is the brief story of a human being caught in the small world of a small town (Texas jail cell. The human [illegible] happens to be a gambler [illegible] has most recently gambled against the "law" of a [illegible] by town with the gamic [illegible] of one of the local "gentry." This all comes out in a conversation the gambler has with the jail's 17 year old [illegible] scrub girl and during a [illegible] mentably brief one sided [illegible] with the husband. A lynch [illegible] Southern fried, nears with the husband's entrance and [illegible] after the gambler is [illegible] dead. The husband brought a brave gun to shoot. The [illegible] gambler is dragged off for the mob to strip, kick and [illegible] not and the scrub girl is left speaking "Hello out there" at the empty cell, the empty jail, the empty town and the curtain comes down on an empty State of affairs. It is a startling understated piece of stagecraft, sometimes poignant, sometimes bathetic, but none-the-less cruel and diamond hard in its message. We would like to see more of Mr. Soroyan's work played at UVM.

Lowell Harris portrayed the gambler at times with tortured beingness and too many times with play shattering inaudibility, but his performance was consistant and honest and therefore somewhat excellent for a first appearance. Some of his mechanical technique went awry, but this is one of those incalculable elements of a one night stand.

As the young girl, Antoinette Feola also new to UVM theater-goers, created a joyously real, bewildered and bewitched Texas child, complete with dialect, and more of a perfect characterization than we have ever witnessed for review purposes. David Montague, Arthur Monaghan and June Brown as the husband, another man and the wife, in that order, maintained as much consistency of character as their short stay on stage demanded. Sadly some of Mr. Montague's Death of A Salesman roll, as Willy, leaked through and Mr. Montague left the stage, a little damp at the edges, but not having hurt the play in the least. More harmful was the accidental moving of the prisoner's cot which would have caused less stir in the audience had the actors not been so visibly shaken.



Hello Out There was directed with restraint by Dick Young. Mr. Young seemed hesitant to put the settings (effectively executed by Bruce Bugbee) to their full use. This is not true of Mr. Harris's role, but does pertain to Miss Feola's. On the other hand, Mr. Young's concept of the play as an idea was brilliantly clear and uncluttered and more than compensates for any movement inadequacies. He brought the actors to achievement of a quality of delicateness and violence unexpected of an initiate in the Theater director's chair. This was Mr. Young's first; may it not be his last!

The final offering on the Fine Arts Festival Program will be an orchestral concert this evening at Southwick.

Photography Issue Evaluated; Solution Lies With Cooperation

[illegible] large organization, we are bound to find much overlapping, and duplication of services, but with judicious [illegible] a system should be worked out, so that this doesn't present any problem. This, to my mind, was the object of a letter (perhaps of recommendation), written by the Board of Administration about the student Photography Staff, and its function. "I am raising a question about SPS, but I wish very much not to have it look like I am criticizing them for I am not."

The problem revolves about a situation perhaps to be termed "spheres of duty." There are two sources for photographic work on campus. One is sponsored by the Student Association for use by student organizations the Student Photography Staff. The other is a department of the University, responsible to the university and its component departments, the Audio-Visual Service. Mr. Eldred, director of this department is an experienced photographer, whose job it is to take pictures whenever requested by any University Department. Though Mr. Eldred is never requisitioned to take pictures for the CYNIC, it is evident that if he is on hand taking pictures, at the request of the University, this newspaper's editors won't requisition SPS, but rather use Audio-Visual's duplicate pictures, which are known to be of consistantly good quality.

Interviews were held with Bennett Woll, Mr. H. Eldred, and Dean L.S. Rowell, and though the problem will have to be worked out by these people, some conclusions were reached.

In speaking with Bennett Woll, president of the Student Photography Staff, it became quite evident that his group was not wholly at fault. He did agree that "SPS can be improved by better cooperation from campus groups. When they're having something, we should be informed." This is certainly valid, but his blame went only outside of the staff, and omitted answering the most serious claims. Though Mr. Woll sights many incidents where his staff excelled and remarked that "the quality of our group is as good as, or superior to, any photographic work done on any other college campus," he forgets that presently, SPS is almost in competition with the Audio-Visual Service on this campus. Throughout my investigation, it was made quite clear that though SPS did some excellent work, the quality was not consistant. This is quite understandable, for SPS photographers run from near beginners to advanced hobbyists and it has been stated that no discrimination in awarding assignments is made. Another constructive criticism and explanation lies in the fact that SPS has no file system. When an editor needs a special picture, it is most convenient when he can go to the Audio-Visual Department, look through the organized file, and pick out the desired shot. This is the reason that so many pictures in our campus publications are done by Mr. Eldred rather than the Student Photography Staff.

The question now arises, why have SPS? Why not allow the Audio-Visual to carry the load? This, however, is most impractical, for though Mr. Eldred said, "I am willing to let these groups have my pictures, when I have the ones they need," it is realized that he is one man with many duties, and can't be expected to cover all events. Surely, we couldn't expect that the CYNIC request him to give up

A Report: Pro Or Con?

In today's CYNIC is the complete report of the Committee on Jurisdiction of Student Court and Related Matters. This report is being presented to you, the student body and faculty, so that you will have the opportunity to survey the issues in this report and comment on the current ones or the problems that arise. The committee, which has met for over one year, will then review the suggestions before submitting this report to the University Council. Therefore, by printing this report, the CYNIC is giving the University family a chance to air their ideas and opinions concerning this issue.

The report is a step forward in helping the students to gain a fair system of judiciary. Tremendous enthusiasm was shown by the committee members as they compiled information from all the judiciary bodies, and heard various sides of issues, finally submitting a report that has many benefits for UVM students. The committee has a great deal of cross-representations, (SA, WSGA, Student Court, Deans, and faculty members), thus, all fields of University activity were covered and everyone had the opportunity to express his ideas concerning these new plans.

In the first place, the Standing Committee on Jurisdiction is the key to this whole problem. There have been many cases where the Student Court was in doubt, concerning the overlapping of jurisdiction, and the court had to refer the case to the University Council. Many different types of cases arise, causing difficulty in deciding who has jurisdiction in a case. This new committee will decide who has the responsibility to channel the cases to the proper court.

The Dean of Men and the Dean of Women are responsible to the students that they represent, therefore, part two of this report is justifiable in allowing them the referring power and the responsibility of the special cases that do arise. Also, setting up the academic dishonesty problems in an informal atmosphere with faculty, students, and administration working together is a fine idea, thereby preventing the distorted views which have arisen during former Student Court sessions.

The final issue is allowing the faculty to have a voice in nominating candidates for the Student Court. This helps to, somewhat, eliminate the concept of a popularity election, and helps to increase the prestige of the Court in the eyes of the faculty. There will also be a greater flexability in the process of nomination than in the past, and the 75 average qualification will not be the sole determining factor for consideration by this committee. As a result of these modifications the Court will not lose any power, but will gain prestige and the right to issue probation as a punishment.

After reading this report, we think you might find some statements that are disagreeable to you. Thus we offer you the opportunity to write to the CYNIC and express your ideas which we will be glad to forward to President Borgmann or Mr. Lewis, if you do not want it printed. It took an interested committee of faculty, students, and administration to renew communication between these three groups. It took a cooperative venture by these people, a venture which we hope will continue in the future for the betterment of the University of Vermont.

Conference Attraction

It is significant that on Friday evening in the Student Lounge Dr. Peter Viereck and Dr. Provost Van Den Haag should have chosen John P. Marquand as representative of what they as members of a cultural elite object to in contemporary literature.

Prominent among the minor characters in several of Marquand's novels is the Brahmin--usually brilliant--young man and scholar. Like Van den Haag, he is a social scientist who "has all the answers." The man who has all the answers believes truth in human affairs can be arrived at purely by intellect and without reference to honest feeling and genuine human sympathy.

Dr. Van den Haag seemed surprised when Mr. Markson, a man of good will, withdrew the term. However, I am sure that most of us in attendance will agree that Dr. Van den Haag was and is intolerant of any opinion not in agreement with his own. I think particularly of the position so ably expressed and defended by Dr. Louis Hartz. Dr. Van den Haag's is a wonderfully attractive because beautifully disciplined mind, but he is to revert to a very old-fashioned term, guilty of a peculiarly human failing--the sin of Pride.

If we were as quick-witted and as mentally adept as Dr. Van den Haag, we would in all probability also fall into this trap. But surely some of his responses on Friday night were not to be trusted -- precisely because his pride would not permit him to admit that he might be wrong in even one of his many highly subjective judgements.

It is a curious thing that men who have all the answers characteristically regard themselves as candid cameras, entirely free from the distortion of the personal lens.

May I add at the risk of sounding sanctimonious that this was our second opportunity to see and hear Dr. Van den Haag as a participant in the Vermont Conference, and that I for one favor an attempt to sign him to a long-term contract.

By Peter Schoffstall

An introduction to the intentions, purposes, manner of attack and manner of retreat of a new and carefully thought out series of publishings in The Vermont Cynic to be entitled the Clearinghouse and to appear as many times as there are issues of the above mentioned newspaper for the next months of the year 1958 and even onward into the year 1959 (1st five months... no further) with no other motive than to seriously, or not so seriously, or even less seriously, call to the attention of the readers of The Cynic certain items, events, discoveries, insights, trends, instructions, constructions and destructions of which they should be informed; the manner of attack being that all letters answered somehow (if not anonymous) and the manner of retreat remaining a secret; the intentions honorable; the purposes debatable; the beginning here:

Good afternoon!

NOTE: (To soap box orators from an unsuccessful heckler).

We see no point in trying to attack a dead bull. Granted the bull appeared dangerous then...we're speaking of the rotting Vermont Varieties bull ...But to explain: There seems to be a petition going the rounds which is aimed at censuring the censure made by the Student Association. Its inception was announced at one of those conversations-on-the-green "speech labs" which have been troubling Mr. Dempsky's grass growers. Monday, Wednesday and Fridays (when it hasn't rained...in other words there have been two that we know of). We think that such petitions are useless and begging the question. We talked with one of its sponsors...and they know why -- what we think. We just wanted to go on record publicly.

It was pointed out to us by a "friend" that in New York the statutes allow such "public rally" only if the speaker is raised six inches off the ground and is holding ...now get this...an American flag in his hand!!! Not so in Burlington...or "backward" Vermont. We have the word of the Burlington police department. We guess it's up to the University to make the ruling here if there is to be one. We wonder what will be cooked up...and doubt that anything will, because these "off the box" chats just don't have any umph. If you've missed them you haven't missed a thing.

We'd also like to note that the people in charge of this are very distressed by [illegible] ling. And this is certain[illegible] switch from the cry of "[illegible] alienable rights ... [illegible] LIBERTIES!"

A close friend, on a particularly busy evening some time ago made a comment on the number and impressiveness of the several "entertainments" available that evening: "... and when I was a freshman I wanted to leave this place because (education in interest ... is what I expected out of college. Now there are so many things going on I can't possibly get to everything." We could not help emphasizing with his position. In that week there were five lectures or panels, an SA movie and the week was framed by two theatre productions and a dance program. It was a challenging week, and not really too unusual, and such weeks are becoming more numerous... and more interesting.

It occurred to us that such extras could interfere with the regularly scheduled class sessions by becoming increasingly better, flashier and more purposeful than many classes. Even on its present basis the extra-curricular program competes with scholastic interest, but what happens when the extras supply better [illegible] Eventually we are all going to catch on, and what is the matter with a course with something on the same subject outside of class is more inspiring?

During the fantastic and symptomatic week we spoke of above, we had another conversation, and this with a member of the faculty of the College of Arts and Science. It went like this:

He: X told us that [illegible] (a noted and authoritative columnist for the Washington Bureau of The New York Times was in college with [illegible] Roomies.

We: Dash it all! We should know that!

He: Yes. And do you know that Herman never went to a [illegible]

We: Golly-o-sis!

He: Never went to a single class! All he did was read lectures and discussion panels. Ate 'em up. Didn't miss a book!

We: And look at [illegible]

He: Well. That's why the lecture business is good, furthermore...

This seems to substan[illegible]

... committee becomes the ...ing house for all juris... al questions.

Faculty, students, and ...istration work jointly. ... members are so se... that they have suffi... varied knowledge ... background to deal with ... from all judicial ... below the University ...el.

If the recommendations of ... committee are adopted, ... Standing Committee on ...isdiction would be es... to putting them into ...tice.

II. Jurisdiction in non-acade... cases--To prevent over...ing jurisdiction insofar ... ssible, the committee ...mends the following:

A. The Dean of Women and the ... of Men should be re...sible for handling all ... of misconduct in non...demic areas. These include:

1. All cases of misconduct ... university residences, i.e., all places where uni...sity students live.

2. Misconduct of individuals ... groups of individuals at ...ial events. Social events ... any organized student ...ents which are neither academic nor athletic (university sponsored), and include, but are not limited ... such events as dances, parties, dinners, benefits, Penny Carnival, jazz concerts, and Kake Walk.

B. General recommendations.

1. In carrying out their ...ties, the Dean of Women and the Dean of Men should ...are their responsibilities, and delegate requisite ...thority to appropriate student groups.

2. The Joint Social Activi...ies Board should be re...sible for regulations ...cerning the planning, ...sponsoring, and conducting ... social events, and shall ...t in such areas as scheduling in advance, limiting ...ers, providing chaperones, ...c. It should have no jur...diction over conduct of ...ividuals or groups of ...ividuals at social events.

4. Cases of misconduct by ...ividuals or groups of in...viduals in connection with ...ternity or sorority func...

5. It general it is recommended that students subject to disciplinary action receive counseling from an appropriate faculty member or student chosen by the judicial body involved. This counseling service shall be under the general direction of the Dean of Women and the Dean of Men.

COMMENT

The above plan seems to have these advantages:

1. It defines, insofar as possible, jurisdiction over the most common campus conduct problems.

2. The offices of the Dean of Women and the Dean of Men will be a central agency from which authority may be delegated.

3. It is expected the Dean of Women and the Dean of Men will send many cases to the Student Court for adjudication.

III. Academic dishonesty--It is recommended that cases of academic dishonesty be dealt with according to the following procedure:

A. When an instructor judges that cases of academic dishonesty has occurred, he shall report this to his department chairman and to the dean of the college in which the student is enrolled.

B. The Dean shall then arrange a hearing before a committee to be known as a "Committee on Academic Dishonesty," which shall be composed as follows:

1. The Dean, who shall serve as chairman of the committee.
2. The Dean of Women or the Dean of Men, according to the sex of the student.
3. A faculty member, chosen by the Dean.
4. Three members of the Student Court, selected by a system to be established by the Court.

C. The Instructor and student(s) involved shall be present at the hearing.

D. The committee shall informally review the facts as presented by the instructor and the student(s). At the conclusion of the discussion, the instructor and student(s) shall withdraw while the committee reaches a decision as to guilt or innocence and fixes the penalty, if any.

E. The chairman shall be responsible for reporting the committee's decision to those involved and for administering the penalty.

F. If the committee is unable to reach a decision, the matter shall be referred to the Standing Committee or Jurisdiction for reassignment.

COMMENT

The above procedure seems to have these advantages:

1. Faculty, students, and administration work jointly to solve a problem.

2. The informal nature of the hearing avoids a stiff, quasi-legalistic approach to the problem.

3. Both faculty member and student are heard by their peers.

4. The presence of either the Dean of Women or the Dean of Men makes available the previous record of the student.

IV. Student Court--The committee recommends that the following be substituted for the present Student Court Constitution:

A. Student Court shall have nine members, two from each college and one member-at-large, to be selected as follows:

1. Nominations--Students in their sophomore year who are interested in serving as justices shall make application to the Student Court. The applications from students in each college shall then be reviewed by a committee consisting of the two current justices from that college, and two faculty members from that college appointed by the dean. The committee shall select three students as official nominees.

2. Elections--From the students thus nominated, the student body, voting by colleges for a representative of their own college only, shall elect justices to serve for a two year term. This election shall be held in the spring of each year and the justices elected shall take office at the beginning of the fall semester.

B. Vacancies--The Student Court shall determine when vacancies exist. In filling vacancies, a procedure of nomination and election similar to that outlined above shall be followed. Each vacancy must be filled by a student from the same class and college as that of the withdrawing incumbent.

C. Membership-at-large--The eight justices shall select a member-at-large, for a one year term, from those nominated in accordance with paragraph A-1, but not elected.

D. Officers.

1. Chief Justice--The members of the Court shall elect one of their number to serve as Chief Justice for one year.

2. Assistant Chief Justice --The Chief Justice shall appoint an Assistant Chief Justice from the Court to serve in the event of his absence or inability to serve.

3. Clerk--The Chief Justice shall appoint a member of the Court to serve as Clerk, who shall keep accurate records of the meetings and all Court proceedings.

E. Organization--A meeting for organization shall be held as soon as possible after the election of justices, and before the close of the academic year. At this meeting, the Court shall elect its Chief Justice and its representative to the Standing Committee on Jurisdiction, nominate a faculty advisor, and provide a system for representation on the Committees on Academic Dishonesty. The new officers shall take office at the beginning of the academic year.

F. Jurisdiction.

1. Exclusive jurisdiction --The Student Court shall have exclusive jurisdiction in all cases concerning the interpretation of the Constitution and Bylaws of the Student Association and legislation enacted in pursuance thereof.

2. Referral jurisdiction--Student Court shall hear cases referred to it by the Dean of Women, Dean of Men, or the Standing Committee on Jurisdiction.

G. Decisions, penalties, reports, appeals, and enforcement.

1. Decisions--Decisions shall be by a two-thirds majority vote of the justices participating.

2. Penalties.

a. The Court may impose any or all of the following:

(1) Court warning

(2) Athletic restriction, that is, exclusion from participation in intercollegiate and intramural sports activity.

(3) Social restriction, that is, exclusion from participation in student social functions, as defined in "University Regulations for Students."

(4) Probation.

b. The Court may recommend to the University Council the penalty of suspension or dismissal.

3. Reports--The Clerk shall report the action on each case to the Dean of Women or the Dean of Men within twenty-four hours of the decision, and shall submit summary reports of the action to those directly involved.

4. Appeals--Decisions of

PeopleBehind Successful Junior Week

Junior Week of 1958 was a great success. Each event was [illegible] of perfection and Junior Week was brought back to renew a fine tradition at the University of Vermont. Working in the background were eight students who planned the festivities and received some recognition for their work. At this time we would like to take the opportunity to thank these people for a job well done.

Ryan Artus, as the president of the Junior Class coordinated the Week. He was the man who called the meetings and made sure that all the various chairmen were doing their job. Three chairmen handled the election of the Junior Beauties they were Sally Humphrey, Helen Artus and Dianne Byrne. A new addition to the Week was the Barbershop Quartet Contest and this was handled through the committee by Fred Harper who was the M.C. for the affair. At this contest the awards were awarded to the Junior Beauty winners of 1958. The Peerade, which was the main event of the Week was handled by Jerry Heller and was a great success. The next event, the Jazz Concert was sponsored by the Sophomore Class as their contribution to the Week. This was warmly accepted by a good crowd and at this event, Jerry Heller made the presentations to the winners of the Peerade. These events were the only ones that the Junior Week committee were in direct contact but we must not leave out a few people who did their jobs even farther in the background. Carolyn Byrne and A. Overton did an excellent job in the publicity for the Week and Joanne Henderson made sure that each dinner would receive his shirt was taught as well as being in charge of finances.

[illegible] time in order to take a special photograph. It [illegible] becomes evident that both [illegible] the setting & [illegible] are important and valuable.

The [illegible] in this area [illegible] of course, lies in the hands of a. the organization that have a need for photographs [illegible] Campus and b. Mr. Eldred and SPS. Both [illegible] the Student Photographic Staff knows that they can produce quality work as they can take it and when they are able to [illegible] a wide variety of [illegible] a wide spring where they almost [illegible] to be [illegible] Eldred. It will be the responsibility of those publications to use the services [illegible] S.A. For those who need to [illegible] about their results and use as a secondary source the Audio-Visual service.

However we must not accept without any qualification that the SPS is being a very good [illegible] for this is not the case. We are not [illegible] with those who are trying to be a good [illegible] and are doing a very good job.

Let's not have SPS [illegible] stopped at it" said Dean Rowell.

With all these facts at hand this writer feels that it would be most beneficial if all those involved (CYNIC Staff, Dean Rowell, SPS, and Audio-Visual) could get together and see if some concrete mechanism could be worked out.

Mr. Wall said "I don't think this is as big as people are making it out to be." but we must disagree, for this is an inefficient system that should with regard to this University be worked out.

EDITOR'S NOTE:

To clarify this issue, the CYNIC does not make picture assignments to Mr. Eldred. However, we do use his picture files. We assign pictures to SPS, but sometimes we cannot foresee certain events. Mr. Eldred, as a professional photographer, does get to events and usually has these shots for our use.

[illegible] processional with all the professors and students looking very proper entered the dining hall. After they had been seated, the program was opened with a prayer from Father [illegible] and then with the introduction from president Borgmann of the guest speaker, Judge Edward J. Costello, the meal of the program began. Naturally the subject was of the historical Allen family, Ethan in particular. The speech, though interesting in parts was basically the same thing we've been hearing for years. Judge Costello, a tall handsome man with horn-rimmed glasses, spoke in a soothing, low voice that did much for the man's subject.

When he had finished, President Borgmann again spoke for a few minutes. And after everyone had sung the National Anthem, the inauguration of the president of the Student Association was performed by Mr. Downer. Our new president, Charles Hines, looked rather lost on the platform, but he made up for this by his booming oath-of-office. He took his seat and President Borgmann announced the elections to the Honorary Societies. As last week's CYNIC contained the new members for the Mortar Board, the Gold Key, the Boulder, the Staff and Sandal, the Key and Serpent, the Sophomore Ladies, the Commerce and Economics Honorary Society, the Alpha Lambda Delta, the National Collegiate Players, the Nu Beta Pi, Omicron Nu, Phi Delta Pi, the Ethan Allen Rifles, and the Alpha Zetas, this article will merely mention few remaining societies and the rewards that were given.

Next, in the long line of deserving young students were the Highest Scholastic Achievements during the first semester, and President Borgmann mentioned that the Athletic Awards had been presented at the 1958 Annual Lettermen's Dinner, so we weren't allowed to see the few members that might have been present to receive their prizes.

With the end of the presentations, President Borgmann announced that everyone should rise and sing the stirring "Champlain." When the song was finished, Father Branon gave the Benediction and the Recession began. Most of the viewers, however, didn't wait for the Recession before leaving. Everything was behind schedule and classes must be attended, so politeness was swiftly dismissed.

Again, one more tradition taken care of with the time-old carefulness of UVM. Yes, it was a very lovely Founder's Day program. We must do it again sometime.

Dental Hygiene Caps Fifteen

by Mary Bellomo

This year the ninth annual capping of the Freshman Class of the School of Dental Hygiene will be held Sunday, May 11th, at the Bertha M. Terrill Home Economics Building from 3-5 p.m. Light refreshments will be served after the capping ceremonies.

This year's class consists of the following students: Leola Amena, Leigh Rae Andelmann, Morene Baslow, Wanda Cox, Grayce Darling, Lorraine Dill, Joan Dyer, Judith Faulkner, Nancy Getchell, Ruth Morse, Barbara Schneider, Julie Watts, Constance White, Lois Wilder, and Eleanor Wilson.

The School of Dental Hygiene was established in the fall of 1949 on the UVM campus. It has recently been accredited by the Council on Dental Education of the American Dental Association. It offers a two-year course leading to a Certificate in Dental Hygiene.

Graduates of this school are qualified to give oral prophylactic treatment, to chart the mouth, and to carry dental education into the private dental practice, hospital, public institutions and industrial clinics.

The School of Dental Hygiene operates a ten-chair clinic and offers its service for examination and charting of the teeth, prophylaxix treatments and the teaching of dental health to students, employees and faculty members of the University, in addition to the school children in surrounding areas.

Enrollment is limited to women between the ages of seventeen and thirty-five who are high school graduates or otherwise eligible to enter the Freshman Class of the University.

In presenting their series of free classes for UVM married couples, "We're Betting Your Budget is Best!", the University of Vermont Home Economics Education seniors will explore the areas of Clothing, Food and Furnishings for ways to save money. The classes, to be held May 13, 20, 27 from 7:30-9:00 p.m. at the UVM Home Economics Bldg., will include demonstration, lectures and class participation.

The seniors, under the direction of Miss Brown, UVM Home Economics Dept., request that all interested parties register early for the classes due to the large number of requests anticipated. Write or call the Home Management House, Summit St., Burlington, Vt., for registration forms.

The Psychology Club of UVM will present it's first program on Tuesday, May 13, at 7:30 p.m. in a room to be announced. The movie will be "Client Centered Therapy" starring the eminent Psychologist Carl Rogers. A discussion will follow.

THE PROBLEM CORNER

Referring to last week's problem the number of acres enclosed by the rectangular area on the map was 344 3/8

Correct solutions to this problem were submitted by Gil Gagne, Allan Greenfield and Duane Tangue.

Problem AB and CD are interesting diameters of circle O, which has a radius of 10 inches. Angle AOD is 60°. A circle is drawn on chord AD as diameter. Find the area of that portion of the smaller circle which lies outside of circle O. (Give the exact area by leaving answer in terms of π and radicals, if either occurs.)

Leave solutions to these problems at the office of Professor Schoonmaker Room 341, Waterman, no later than Monday of the week following publication of the problem the Court may be appealed to the Standing Committee on Jurisdiction.

5. Enforcement.
 a. The offices of the Dean of Women and Dean of Men shall be responsible for administering penalties imposed by the Court.
 b. In general, students subject to disciplinary action should receive counseling from an appropriate faculty member or student chosen by the Court.

H. Procedure--Cases to be brought before the Student Court shall be reported to the Chief Justice. He shall convene the Court as soon as possible. The Court shall then informally review the facts as presented by the complainant and the student(s) charged. After completion of this presentation, those directly involved shall withdraw, and the Court shall reach a decision as to guilt or innocence and the penalty to be imposed.

COMMENT

The above revision seems to have these advantages:

1. The number of justices is reduced from 12 to 9, a more workable group.
2. Equal representation from each college is simpler than the former complex arrangement.
3. Careful screening of applicants will mean better candidates, and faculty participation in this screening will help increase faculty respect for the court.
4. The simplified procedure will make the Court more efficient.
5. The Court Counselor system will be revived.
6. The Court is given the increased power to put a student on probation.
7. The informal hearing will replace the quasi-legalistic procedures.
8. The responsibility for enforcement is clearly defined.

CONCLUSION

In addition to those now serving on the committee, the following former members participated in the deliberations: Wallace Lovejoy, Samuel Bogorad, John Burgess, Charles Wilkie, and Arnold Blackstone. Special credit should be given to Wallace Lovejoy and Irene Fleischman who acted as secretaries during the committee's existence.

Dr. Potash Receives Research Grants

by Marc Packer

Professor Milton Potash, University of Vermont Zoology professor will receive a grant of $10,000 over a two year period in addition to $13,000 already received from the United States Public Health Service to carry out his research project entitled "The Nutritional Requirements of Kirchneriella Subsolitaria."

Professor Potash's experiment deals with the life and death cycle of the primitive plant life algae, Kirchneriella Subsolitaria a species found in fresh water ponds and lakes is the specific organism with which he is experimenting. It is his objective to "develop a biological assay method for measuring the ability of natural water to support growth of plant life and ultimately fish life," "to find out exactly what this one species needs for growth and reproduction, and what combination of chemicals are needed to produce and influence growth."

The ultimate possibilities of Professor Potash's experiments are enormous. Plant life is the basic link of the aquatic food chain. By knowing the optimum conditions of the plant life, man could control its growth. This could ultimately lead to increased fish development and an additional source of human food.

Doctor Potash's interest in science stems back to his early youth. He feels that a greater scientific interest could be instilled in American youth by better trained elementary school teachers with a good scientific background. "Teachers with lack of training can actually discourage scientific enthusiasm" states Potash. Specialized schools for youngsters demonstrating abnormal capabilities is a possible answer to our problem of the shortage of scientifically trained personnel. These schools could stimulate students to their maximum abilities.

Doctor Potash received his B.A. from the University of Louisville and his M.A. from Indiana University. He received his Ph.D. from Cornell University where his doctoral study was concerned with a similar study.

IF SILENCE WERE REALLY GOLDEN, fishermen would be up to their hip boots in cash. They're so noiseless, they won't even wear loud shirts. But when they (Groan!) run out of Luckies, they almost lose control. They rant, rave and blow their stacks—all in sign language, of course! Result? The unusual phenomenon called a Quiet Riot! Lucky's popularity, after all, is no fluke. A Lucky is the best-tasting cigarette you can buy—and for good reason. It's made of naturally light, good-tasting tobacco, toasted to taste even better. So why flounder around? Get Luckies yourself!

Thinclads Defeated By Bates; Top Middlebury And Colby

by FRED ROBINSON

A handful of rainsoaked, chilled spectators watched the UVM thinclads garner a meager 27 points in the mud and wind here Saturday against the 97½ points piled up by Bates College of Lewiston, Maine, who completely overwhelmed UVM and their other two opponents, Middlebury College and Colby College of Waterville, Maine, in the quadrangular meet at Centennial Field. Bates took 12 out of 16 first places, with Middlebury copping the other four.

UVM Takes Four Seconds

Vermont's best were four seconds, Fred Kolstrom in the mile, Mal Russell in the javelin, Dick McFarlin in the 100 yard dash, and Capt. Neil Hall in the pole vault. Two other Catamounts, Ron Bouchard and Charlie Tetzlaff, ended in a four-way tie for second in the high jump. The indoor track meets that Bates sponscored during the winter months really put them in midseason form as they literally ran away with the 220 and 440 yard dash events.

A new record was set in the hammer throw by Fred Fresina of Bates with a toss of 161 feet 3½ inches — 11 feet better than his old mark. Remick's throw placed fourth for the Cats in this event.

McFarlin Competes Following Injury

For Dick McFarlin this was his first dash event this season. Because of an injured heel, Dick had only been going through light workouts and throwing the javelin on the side. He lost the 100 in a close race, with Danny Bianca speeding across for a fourth in the event. The winning time was 10.6 seconds — not exceptionally fast, but a good time considering the muddy, puddle-splattered track upon which the race was run.

"Red" Meserve, greatly hampered by an injured leg, managed two thirds, one in the broad jump (winning jump was 21 feet 6¼ inches), and the other in the 120 high hurdles which was run in 16 seconds.

Fred Kolstrom, in addition to his second in the mile, the winning time being 4:39.4, took a third in the two mile jaunt. 10:37.7 was the winning time in that event. UVM's Picard galloped across the fintah line behind Kolstrom to take a fourth.

Neil Hall's javelin heave gave him a fourth in that event (winning was 160 feet 8½ inches) along with his second in the pole vault, which was won at 11 feet 6 inches. Vermont's only place in the discus was a fourth behind the heave of Sophomore Jim Willard. The winning toss was 124 feet 7 inches. The final count showed Bates 97½, Middlebury 37½, UVM 27, and Colby 3.

Injuries Hamper Team

So far this season injuries have greatly hampered UVM's track successes. However with McFarlin's heel on the upswing, and if Meserve can get his leg back into shape, and Denny Morse, his ankle, things will look much brighter for Coach Post's thinclad Catamounts.

Netmen Lose To Engineers 2-7

by BOB GOLDMAN

The afternoon of May 7 saw the UVM netmen dropping their first match to RPI, by a score of 7-2. The Rensselear squad and number one man Chuck Brukl, proved to be as strong as Coach Fred Marston had predicted early last week.

Diller and Pease Win

In the singles department, Diller defeated McConkey (6-4, 7-5), and Pease defeated Kaiman (6-1, 6-4) for UVM's only victories of the day. The two number 1 men, Brukl and Salmore, played their match with Brukl coming out on top by a (6-2, 6-3) victory. Coach Marston feels that Brukl is as tough a man as Salmore will be up against for the remainder of the season.

In the other singles matches, Galias defeated Hirsch (6-2, 6-1), Camhi defeated Snow (6-4, 6-2), and Jed lowe beat Freedman (6-2, 6-2).

Lose All Doubles

The Catamounts dropped all three doubles matches. Brukl and Galias topped Salmore and Snow (6-1, 7-5). Camhi and Jedlowe defeated Diller and Pease (6-3, 6-3), and Rubsamen and Tompkins took Hirsch and Feinberg by a score of (6-0, 6-3).

Saturday's feature against Union was rained out, and will most likely be rescheduled for Saturday, May 24.

The Cats also saw action against Middlebury yesterday (May 7) afternoon, but the results were not obtained in time to be printed in this issue. Coach Marston stated before yesterday's match that he felt Middlebury was quite a strong squad. The Middlebury team has already defeated the University of Massachusetts by a margin of 6-3.

Yankon Prospects Look Good

The chances of winning the Yankee Conference to be held at Durham, New Hampshire, tomorrow and Saturday, look very promising according to Coach Marston. He expects that our biggest rival at the Conference will be the University of Mass. who will be featuring a line up consisting of three very promising sophomores, that may give the UVM squad a lot of trouble.

On the 28th, the three featured games between Phi Sig, ATO, SAE, TEP, and Buckham-Chittenden were all rained out. The next day however, we found Delta Psi slipping over Theta Chi in a forfeited game, 9-0. Likewise, Kappa Sig edged out a win over Sigma Nu, as they defeated them by a score of 11-7.

Also the final score more like a football one, Phi Sig-ma Delta was victorious over Alpha when they defeated 31-1. Converse Hall also tasted victory as they trounced Buckham 16-14.

TEP scored over Sigma Phi Epsilon, 8-3.

Linkmen Lose Opener To Mass. & R.I.

by LARRY ALBERT

Last Friday the seven man Vermont golf team played their first match of the season at Amherst, Mass. The match was a triangular one with the Univ. of Mass. and Rhode Island furnishing the opposition. This was the fourth match of the season for both Mass. and Rhody and the fact that Vermont had been out on the links for only a week certainly hampered the team. Rhode Island topped the Catamounts 4-3 and Mass. beat the Vermonters 5-P. Against Rhode IslandBrett Lazar, John Harvey, and Pete Castopolous were victorious.

Lazar and Botsford Win

On Saturday the team traveled to Troy to play RPI. The match was played in the pouring rain and the only Vermonters to come out on top were Bret Lazar and Bob Botsford. The final score of the match was RPI 5½ to Vermont's 3½ points. Botsford had a par 36 for the first nine holes and Lazar had a two over par for the same to be the only bright spots over the weekend.

N.E. Championships at Burlington C. C. this Weekend.

This week-end (Friday, Sat. and Sun.) the New England Intercollegiate Golf Championships will be at the Burlington Country Club with Vermont the host team. The Yankee Conference Championships will also be held at this time. Some twenty-five New England colleges will be represented at the tourney. This is the first time the competition is being held in Vermont and students are welcome to attend the matches. A large turnout of students would not only give our players a boost but would show the other New England teams that the students at Vermont support their teams.

Bob Botsford and Brett Lazar, the number 1 and 2 men respectively for the host team, have an excellent chance to place in the tourney which will have the top college golfers in New England. Williams, last year's winner is favored again this year and UMass. is the favorite in the Yankee Conference competition.

Cats Win 1, Lose 2 Yankon Games
Defeat UNH 7-3 Drop 2 To RI 4-3,3-1

Drop First R.I. Tilt In Extra Frame

by PAUL STANTON

During the past week, baseball continued to provide Vermont sports fans with two more victories for the Vermont nine, while also handing a conference opponent its first defeat. The Cats, now 2 wins and 2 losses in conference play, will be back in action Monday against Union at home, only to be rained out by both yesterday. The Rams edged the Cats Friday, as they won 3-2, and then swept the twinbill Saturday, 3-1.

UVM 7, UNH 3

Starting pitcher Jerry Artus and the starting ball from coach Ralph Lapointe, and gave UNH six hits as he went the route for Vermont's opening Yankee Conference victory. Artus received plenty of support as his teammates tooled four Wildcat pitchers thirteen hits in gaining a 7-3 decision.

Concentrating its blows in three innings, the Cats led from the third inning on.

Jerry Cassidy's double and Marty Johnson's single started the scoring parade. In the fourth, UVM scored five times, with Artus slamming a triple as one of the big blows. In the sixth, Johnson pounded a homer out of the park for his first four bagger of the year.

Bill Simonds had a perfect day at the plate with four for four, three singles and a double. Johnson had three hits and three RBI's, while Chuck Zysk and Artus had two safeties each. Artus fanned ten in gaining his second win of the season.

Last Friday afternoon at Bray Centennial Field, the Rams from Rhode Island gave a select Vermont crowd a 1-0 lead with a run scoring 4-3 win over the home forces.

Both teams had starters in with it in regulation time. But pair of capable pitchers and the visit have rallied and it into overtime. Pitcher have shut Rams batted single off Bob Koones in the tenth frame post the winning run across. A pinch runner was out trier at the plate. Russ Arius that relieved Pearson and retired the Rams in a quick jiff.

Dick Pearson, co-captain of the Rams, got credit for the victory but he had to have relief from Tom Rao in the 10th. The following then ensued. Jerry Cassidy was hit by a pitched ball and Tom Tierney beat out a bunt. Both advanced on Simond's long fly to right. Don Santa Croce rounded one at the short-stop who held the runners and threw to first. With the throw, Cassidy ran for home. Santa Croce was out by three steps at first, but ran out of the base line to run into the first baseman, preventing him from throwing it to the plate. Interference was called and Cassidy was automatically out at plate, retiring the Cats and giving the Rams the win.

Steve Cooper, Catamount starter, trailed all the way. When he got into a jam in the eighth, Pfance relieved and got out of the inning, with Rhode Island scoring but once to take a 3-1 lead. The Cats scored twice in the final half of that frame to tie it up, Cassidy and Simonds driving their runs home. However, some wierd base running cost the Cats a run with the runner thrown out at the plate. Earlier, the same thing had cost Vermont a run.

The usual heavy hitting Cats were held to three hits over the first seven innings but picked up five in the final three. The Rams tagged three UVM hurlers for ten safeties including three doubles.

In the return match played Saturday morning, the red hot Rams once again took the Cats, 3-1, to sweep their two game series.

For the first six innings, Russ Henrichs had set the visitors on their ears as the Cat starter worked on a no hitter. Dave Como had gotten on base via Simond's error in the fifth, and Howie Levine had drawn a pass in the sixth.

To start off the seventh, URI's Roger Pearson sent a single into left field for the first hit off Henrichs. He stole second and remained there as Bob Peltier was passed. After Como fanned, Jim Wilcox walked to load the bases. Tony Verdi then lined a double to right center which gave the Rams a 2-0 lead.

In the bottom of the seventh, Santa Croce led off with his second hit of the game. Katz singled him to second. Zysk then bunted, Tom Harrington, the Rhody pitcher, throwing it into right field, allowing Santa Croce to score and leaving runners on second and third. When Henrichs failed to bunt, Katz was retired in a rundown and the only Vermont threat was halted.

In the eighth, the Rams picked up an insurance run off Bob Koones on a single by Harrington, a sacrifice, and an error.

Frosh Nine Loses To Johnson Teachers, 6-4

by STEVE COOPER

The Johnson Teachers nipped the UVM freshman baseball club, 6-4, last Wednesday, April 30, at the formers' home field. A trio of hurlers held the yearlings to but four hits. The Kittens bunched all of their runs in the third inning off starting Johnson pitcher, Jim McLarn, who filled the bases via walks to Bob Hobbie, Dave Magurk and Charles Spenser. Mike Jarrett, the visitor's right fielder, then proceeded to clear the bases with a homer. That was all the scoring Vermont was to do all afternoon.

On the other hand, the home club continued to peck away at the lead after scoring a run in the second inning. In the bottom half of the third, the Teachers picked up two more markers to make the score 4-3, UVM. They finally went ahead permanently by pushing two runs across in the fifth. The scoring ended for the day as Johnson added a single score in the seventh inning.

Bob Hobbie started on the hill for the Evans coached nine and pitched the first five innings giving up five runs on five hits and Burlington righthander, Fred Rob[illegible] pitched the final three frames allowing one run on only two hits for an excellent showing. Offensively, Jarrett got two of the Kittens' four hits.

The frosh have four [illegible] this week; a Wednesday [illegible] with Norwich, a Friday [illegible] bleheader with St. Law[illegible] beginning at 3 p.m., and a single game Saturday with the Plattsburg Air Force [illegible] All games will be home [illegible] counters.

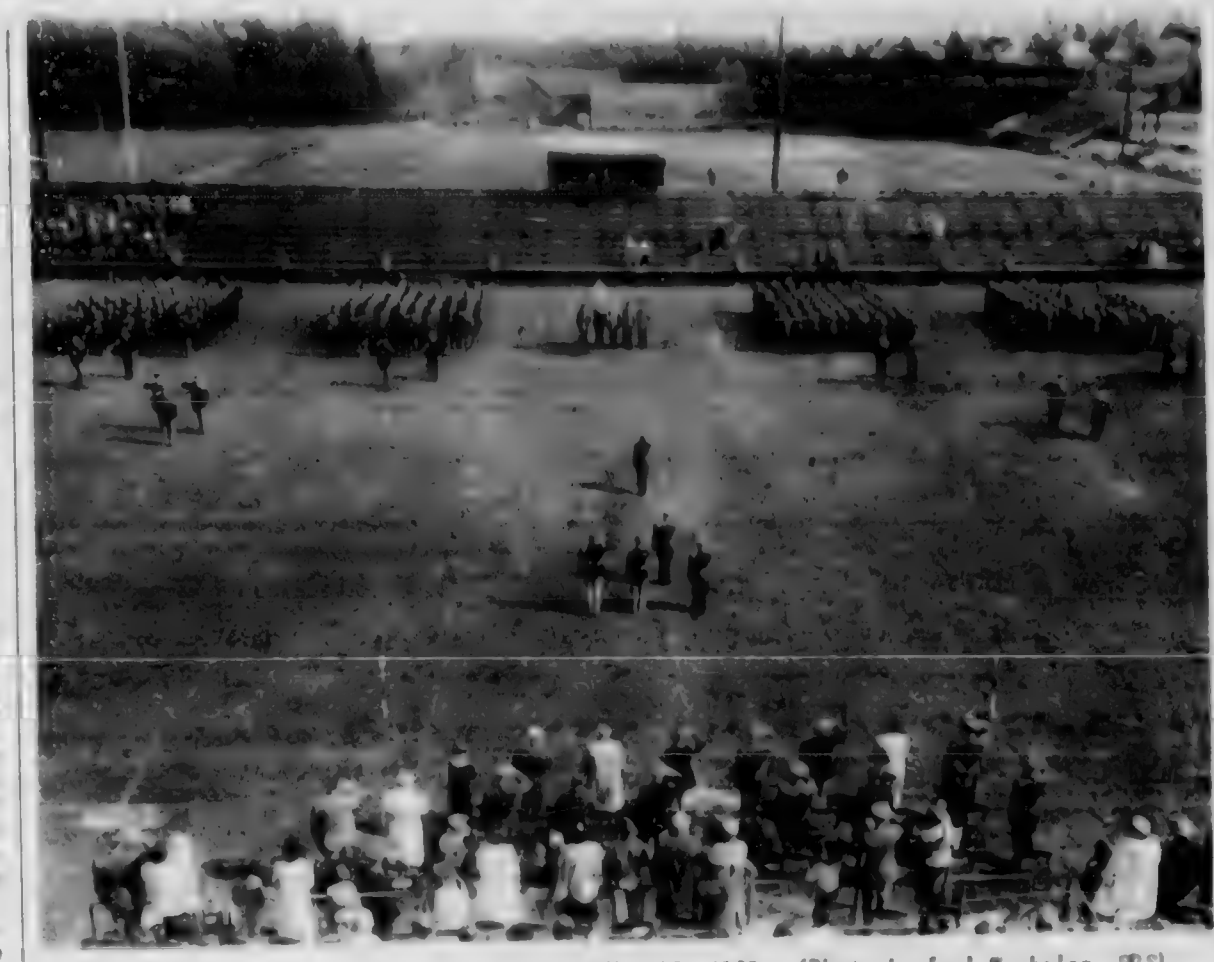
LANE SERIES SIGNS JAZZ, DRAMA, OPERA, ORCHESTRAS, DANCE, OTHER ATTRACTIONS

By R. Kajmowitz

At the Spring Advisory Committee Meeting, Roger Lerner, Chairman of the Working Committee of the George Bishop Lane Series, discussed plans for next year's program. Mr. Lerner explained that due to the insufficient seating capacity of Memorial Auditorium, the Lane Series was scheduling two series, one labelled ''Red'', the other ''Blue'' Series. Because all fourteen programs haven't been booked and dates set, however, the announcement of the separate series was impossible.

The 1958-1959 Series will open on October 1, with a one man performance featuring Sir John Gielgud, in ''The Ages of Man,'' consisting of a group of exerpts from the poems and plays of William Shakespeare. Star of the Old Vic Company, Gielgud is generally considered the greatest living actor in the English-speaking theater. Balanced against Sir John on the other Series is a similar one-man or woman dramatic presentation, which is in the process of being chosen.



The leading symphony orchestras of the United States and Europe, will be presented next. On one Series, the Danish National Orchestra from Copenhagen will appear. Twin conductors of this distinguished ensemble will be John Frandsen and Thomas Jensen. The program will include numbers from the standard orchestra repetoire, and also numbers by Scandinavian composers. Next year's tour, it was said, is under the patronage of King Frederik IX.

The other Series will be host to one of the finest national orchestras, the Chicago Symphony, under the very able direction of Fritz Reiner. This is the orchestra's first major tour in over five years. Following their performance in Burlington, the 105-player group will proceed to Symphony Hall in Boston.

In October 16th, UVM will hear Benny Goodman, the king of swing, and his orchestra. World renowned, Goodman and ensemble will play a program of Goodman's standard jazz repetoire. The other series will offer the internationally famed Stuttgart Chamber Orchestra. Conducted by Karl Muenchinger, the

1000 To March In Annual Military Review Friday

This Friday UVM will celebrate its 90th Military Day when the Annual Review will be conducted at Centennial Field at 3:40 in the afternoon.

More than 1000 Army and Air Force ROTC Cadets and the UVM Band will take part in the traditional military ceremonies which involves the largest combined cadet corps in the State.

The program begins with precision drill demonstrations by both the Army and Air Force ROTC Drill Teams. These exhibitions will be followed by the formation of the Cadet Corps on the parade ground.

The traditional presentation of the Army and Air Force ROTC Colors to the cadet corps will be made by Miss Heidi Wettach, a sophomore from Putney, Vermont. Miss Wettach, who was elected Queen of the Military Ball earlier this year, holds the title of Honorary Cadet Colonel of the Joint Army and Air Force ROTC Cadet Corps.

The next part of the program will include the presentation of awards to outstanding cadets who have excelled in leadership, character, military scholastic achievement, and proficiency in drill. The awards will be presented by University officials and other civilians as well as representatives of both the Army and the Air Force. The Cadet Corps will then be inspected by the Reviewing Party and Army and Air Force Cadet Officers. Taking part in the inspection will be President Carl W. Borgmann, Colonel Richard D. Smith, Vt. Sector, Colonel William J. Hoyde, Ethan Allen Air Force Base, Lt. Colonel Paton T. White, Professor of Military Science and Tactics, Lt. Colonel Charles C. Fishburne, Professor of Air Science, Cadet Colonel Norman P. Fortin, Commander of Troops, and the joint cadet staff. Members of the

by Linda Sack

Dr Carl W Borgmann, soon to be retiring from his present position as President of the University of Vermont, will be the speaker at Commencement exercises to be held Sunday, June 15, at 3:00 p.m. on the College Green.

Professor Alan W Watts, an authority on comparative philosophy and religion, will deliver the Baccalaureate address, ''Faith Beyond Belief,'' at 10:00 that morning in the same place.

These speeches will be the culminating event of Senior Week which begins Friday, June 13, and is being planned by co-chairmen Elizabeth Beck and Dan Pezolle.

Speakers

President Borgmann is a familiar figure and speaker to all of us. Since April 11, 1953 when he was formally installed as UVM's 16th president, his accomplishments have been many and varied. As he put it, though, ''It is easy to see the material evidence such as the new building and dormitories. It is too early, however, to evaluate the effects on the prime purpose of the college - education. It is these in reality that will have enduring values.''

After June 30, in his new job as program director for the Ford Foundation's new division of science and engineering, President Borgmann will be better able to evaluate his meritous program.

The Baccalaureate speaker, Professor Watts, was born in Chislehurst, England, and is now a naturalized citizen of the United States. Ordained as a clergyman in the Episcopal Church, he received his master's degree in Sacred Theology from Seabury Western Theological Seminary in 1948. After serving as Chaplan at Northwestern University from 1945-1950, he resigned to further his studies in Asiatic religions.

From 1951-1953, Mr Watts

THE GREAT CAP AND GOWN CONTROVERSY

Let us take up the Vexing Question:

There is a growing body of opinion which holds that the tassel should be worn on the right side so you keep your Marlboro cigarettes on. Then a quick glance will show you where your Marlboros are and save much time and fumbling.

This makes a good deal of sense because when one wants a Marlboro, one wants one with a minimum of delay. One does not relish being kept even for a second from the lungs of joy, the bursts of pleasure, the seeds of content, the loads of glee, the Lungs of Ecstasy that one gets from that filter, that flavor, that flip-top box.

There is another group, small but vocal, which insists the tassel should hang over the back of the cap. The tassel, they say, is a symbol like the bullfighter's pigtail, signifying honor and courage.

They are wrong. Bullfighters wear pigtails for only one reason, to keep the backs of their necks warm. Do you have any idea what a draft a bull makes when he rushes past you? A ghastly thing one, very may be sure.

In fact, upper respiratory infections, contracted in the wake of passing bulls, is the largest single cause of bull-ring fatalities. I have this interesting statistic from the Bullfighters Mutual Insurance Company of Hartford, Connecticut. Incidentally, Hartford, the insurance capital of America, is a delightful city and well worth a visit if you are ever in New England, as northeastern United States is hauntingly called. Try to make your visit coincide with the autumn foliage.

But I digress. We were talking about what side to wear the tassel on. An ingenious solution to this problem was proposed not long ago by Humboldt Signafoos, perhaps better known as "The Quiet King of Delaware." An early forbear of Mr. Signafoos was granted a monopoly by King George III, on all quoits manufactured in Delaware. Somehow the royal intent was never rescinded and from that day to this every quoit made in Delaware has been a Signafoos Quoit.

Well sir, Mr. Signafoos suggested that the way to solve the great tassel controversy was to starch the tassel so it stood upright and hung on no side of the cap at all. But I'm afraid that sly Mr. Signafoos was only seeking to broaden his market because after graduation what can you do with an upright tassel except hurl quoits at it?

The makers of Marlboro have no opinion about what side to hang your tassel on. But with cigarettes, they say firmly: Stay on the light, mild, tasty side . . . with Marlboro, of course!

President Borgman Gives Final Farwell To University

Dr. Carl W. Borgmann ... ly views the Vermont ... so familiar and dear to his (Photo by H.B. Eldred ...

... UVM students and ... :

I am particularly pleased to accept the ... of your ... editor in offering space for a "farewell" message, because it gives me an opportunity to express my very deep appreciation for the many kindnesses I have received from the members of UVM's family. The past six years have been very happy ones for me - and the memories will long be cherished.

The next several years will be crucial ones for American education. It must thrive and continue to grow better. If it is to thrive, then it must have all the help that each of us can concentrate on the total effort.

Each of us connected with UVM can take pride, I believe, in the traditions and the stature of our institution. As students, you should know that you were chosen carefully from many seeking admission, and that the increasing numbers seeking admission to UVM and other colleges and universities will make future admissions even more selective.

In short, you should consider yourselves fortunate to have a college opportunity, and dedicate yourselves to an earnest effort to make the most of that opportunity.

You should also know that the quality of your education depends not only on your individual effort, but very much upon the quality of your teachers. Like most institutions of high quality, UVM has on its faculty teachers who have gone through not only the undergraduate studies which you now are experiencing, but ... special interest and ... motivate them ... many more years ... additional graduate education ... that, as teachers, their salaries are often less than the ... parts of careers in business and industry who often have far less education and training for their jobs.

Perhaps you also know that the salaries your UVM teachers receive are very much related to the tuition you pay as students. Under the circumstances, I think it is realistic for you to expect that UVM's base tuitions need to be increased again, not arbitrarily, but as an honest reflection of the moral and practical need. Whether Vermont students will be affected by tuition increases will depend, of course, upon legislative appropriations which make possible the lower tuition Vermonters pay at UVM.

Our nation's teachers have demonstrated that they do not abandon their dedication to teaching careers simply because they are underpaid. Many continue teaching at real expense to themselves and to their families. I suppose, if we wanted to gamble, we might assume that we will always attract dedicated people to the teaching profession even if we deliberately ignore their real value to us. But I do not believe that any of us would wish to require this ... sacrifice.

UVM cannot afford this ... of gamble nor would its ... dition honorably permit ... do so.

Your University is presently moving forward in many ways which signify its stature ... I believe that its future ... promise worthy of its past. To guarantee that UVM's education continues to be ... highest quality, UVM must ... able to reward its present faculty and attract talented and dedicated new faculty.

I should like to say that I feel deeply privileged to have been a member of the UVM tradition. As an "alumnus" ... UVM, and as a prospective "out-of-state" parent of a future UVM student, I shall always be interested in our University of the Green Mountains, and in doing everything I can to assure its continuing quality.

Sincerely,
Carl W. Borgmann

Economic's Class Offered This Summer On Wall Street

"The only course of its kind" will go into its eighth annual session this summer when the University of Vermont and the New York financial community will offer "The Economics of Capital Formation" in New York City from June 16 through July 25.

Aimed at college seniors and graduate students, the six-week's course deals with the nature and operation of securities markets and security analysis. Director is Philipp H. Lohman, Converse Professor and chairman of the department of Commerce and Economics at the University.

Staff - almost literally - is made up of some of the top ranking business and financial leaders in the country, and campus, for the course is New York's Wall Street.

Several special sessions of the unique offering will be taken up with visits to institutions such as the National Quotation Bureau, Inc., the New York Stock Exchange, the American Stock Exchange, the Federal Reserve Bank of New York, the Fairless Works of U.S. Steel Corp., in New Jersey, the IBM Corporation, and Standard Oil Co., of New Jersey. Lecture sessions will be held in a conference room provided by the Chase-Manhattan Bank.

The course has been designed according to Prof. Lohman "to give students a better understanding of the social and economic functions of the institutions which constitute the financial industry."

Since the inception of the course in 1950, students of the University of Vermont as well as students representing many other institutions have participated, and many are now working in financial institutions.

All those who are interested please contact Professor Lohman.

string ensemble will play works of the great master, from the Baroque period until Mozart, and the Viennese classics.

The third-return engagement of the New York City Opera Company will be heard November 17th, and 18th. The group which last year presented "La Boheme," under the general direction of Julius Rudel, will perform in Verdi's "La Traviata," and Puccinni's "Madama Butterfly," one of each Series.

Both Series will boast a fine recitalist. On one Series, the gifted and lovely coluratura soprano star of the Metropolitan Opera, Roberta Peters, will appear. The brilliant violin virtuoso, Isaac Stern, claimed by many to be one of the finest violinists alive, will represent the other Series.

Dance will be represented by the National Ballet of Canada, which will appear in different programs on each of the two Series. It is expected that the company will present in place of the usual one-act ballets, and ballet excerpts, some of the full-length ballets which are a part of its repetoire, such as Giselle, Sleeping Beauty and Swan Lake.

The usual difficulty in negotiating long-range bookings for plays, is again being encountered by Prof. J. Trevithick, Executive Secretary of the Lane Series. However, negotiations are being considered for the engagements of both "Auntie Mame," the hilarious comedy which starred Rusalind Russell on Broadway, and "The Diary of Anne Frank," the Pulitzer Prize, and Drama Critics' Award winning play.

In addition to expanding the Artist Series, so that more people will be able to partake in the numerous concerts, and recitals, the reactions of the Advisory Committee made it apparent that they felt, this heretofore wonderful Series, had been enhanced and developed magnificently.

The 1958-1959 George Bishop Lane Series promises two of the finest Artist series, programmed in any University in the country.

El Circulo Espanol, UVM's spanish club, will present a special program on Wednesday, May 21, at the Fleming Museum auditorium.

The program will begin at 8 p.m. with Latin American music played by members of the club. The entertainment will be followed by the highlight of the evening, Los Olvidados (The Young and The Damned.) The eighty minute spanish film will have english sub-titles and from the reviews with it received promises to be a most worthwhile movie.

Directed by Luis Bunuel, it stars, Estele Inda, Alfonso Mejia, Roberto Cabo, Jesus Navarro, Miguel Inclan and Alma Fuentes.

"Los Olvidados" is a savage drama of juvenile delinquency filmed with stunning realism in Mexico. It is a tight, penetrating treatment of desperate, poverty-haunted youth with nothing softened and no cruel outcome avoided. The film received excellent ratings from all critics and it was awarded the Grand Prize for direction at the Cannes International Film Festival.

Admission is fifty cents for all.

The Vermont Cynic

"FAREWELL TO ARMS!"

The year is coming to an end, and for many seniors this is the last issue of the CYNIC. We feel there are a few loose ends that need clearing up as well as summing up.

TO PRESIDENT BOARMAN: We owe thanks for the work that he has accomplished during his stay at UVM. The most important are the development projects, which not only provided more dormitories and classrooms, but the dream of a new medical school, and a gymnasium-auditorium. You have brought understanding, dreams, ideas, accomplishments, and the will to succeed to this campus. To you, we wish the best of luck with the Ford foundation.

TO THE SENIORS: We send our sincere hope that you will achieve success in your chosen field at the culmination of your formal association with UVM on June 15. It is with pleasure that we extend our congratulations. But hope in some way you will remember that college now and form a strong alumni section.

TO A SOAP-BOX ORATOR: When one takes it uponhimself to criticize a fault, it is appropriate to give the true facts. To you students who are concerned over the past SA election, where there might have been an error in the counting of the ballots, there was a recount and the results were verified. Also, let us instill in the minds of people who find fault, bring these errors first before those at fault, and thereby try to clarify them with the people concerned. This way you can help to improve the situation; the bit of advice goes to faculty members, also.

TO FOUNDERS' DAY: Classes are called off, so that students and faculty members can attend this function. Seniors are suppose to march "en masse", but where were they? Where were the students and faculty? The coffee-shop had more people in it then the chapel, yet there was a ceremony honoring not only the founders of this institution, but those who have received honors for the past year. Perhaps the administration should close buildings, or take other drastic measures, to insure student and faculty attendance, perhaps even compel seniors to go. Otherwise, let us stop this fine tradition if no one has any interest in it.

TO THE STUDENTS WHO VOTED DOWN THE FIVE DOLLAR RAISE: It is easy to turn away money during an election, but it will cost you five dollars any way when you buy your 1959 ARIEL. So, in the end you lose out. Also SA had to cut other budgets because of lack of funds. Cost of living rises, but UVM's activity rates stay the same for ten years and everyone suffers.

STUDENTS' RIGHT COMMITTEE: What happened? We have not heard from you in quite a while, but I guess the University Council's decision hurt your plans. Your organization and ideas were good, but -----.

TO ALL UVM: Have a nice summer and we will see everyone back in the fall. This is the 75th year that the CYNIC has served this campus. We intend, with your support, to maintain high journalistic aims. Again to the future alumni, including the president, best of luck for your future years and our warmest congratulations.

LETTERS

Letter to Women Students

During the past week or so, I have heard gripes of all types from the women students who have made their "choice" of rooms for next year. Innumerable complaints of [illegible] and raw deals have come to me for the most part from upperclassmen. Many seniors feel that after four years at UVM they are entitled to some sort of seniority in regard to room choosing.

This is a plea to all you dissatisfied women to make your views heard through the proper channels. Your opinions and ideas can be beneficial and constructive only if you are organized. You must realize that the Dean cannot treat your complaints individually due to their variety.

I suggest that any interested students see the President of WSGA about setting up a committee to deal with the problem. This is the only democratic way in which we can expect any rights to be granted to us.

Judy Gerber

Judiciary Criticized

Letter to the Editor:

I have just read with interest and regrettable disgust the report from the Committee on Jurisdiction of Student Court and Related Matters. The recommendations are definitely a change, but regression, not progress is proposed. The report is a document of bad faith in the student body of UVM and paternalistic despotism.

Section 1 was encouraging. A committee composed of administration, faculty and students to decide jurisdiction in overlapping or questionable jurisdiction. Good show. But, Sections II, III, and IV make Section I a paper farce. Section II strips the student court of its real purpose: TO ALLOW STUDENTS TO JUDGE THE MISCONDUCT OF THEIR FELLOWS! The proposal states that in ALL cases of misconduct the Dean of Women and Dean of Men have original, and if they so desire, absolute jurisdiction. Some people erroneously feel that the Deans of Men and Women are responsible to the students. Let's be realistic; the Dean of Women and the Dean of Men are responsible to themselves, the Dean of Administration, and the President of the University. In no way are they responsible to the students. The recent drinking episode proves this more conclusively than any mere words which I might put on paper.

The Student Court has only referral jurisdiction in cases of misconduct if the Deans want to share or refer the case. The Deans have become Czars and the students puppets. No credit is given to the student as regards his ability for responsible action. No faith, no credit, no freedom, no responsibility. The report is a negative statement of negative minds.

I simply don't think its fair to give a Dean absolute power over the conduct of students. Some people claim that the Dean of Men and Dean of Women are fair and reasonable people. Assuming that they are, the last year has seen the change of 3 Deans and a President. Who's to say what the next Dean of Men or Women will be like? The report puts a misguided faith in the future. The last Dean of Men was poorly inadequate; who's to say what the coming years will bring? Dealing solely with the Deans in cases of misconduct puts the student at a disadvantage. Often times if you try to [illegible] discuss your case or perhaps cherish the thought) argue

by Bob Krauser

Farewell sweet reader. This is the last "Campus Snooper". I hope that in the past two and one half years I've tickled a few funny bones and imparted a touch of wisdom between the lines. For those of you who saw me walking around with "holey" sneakers I'm not affected just infected around the big toe. As long as I'm on the subject I'd like to give thanks to a group of people who have really seen me through my four years at Vermont. This group is the staff of the Wasson Infirmary. Although I have criticized them informally on occasion I must say that the nurses, doctors and others are a fine and capable staff who deserve the utmost faith and recognition for their excellent service.

My years at UVM have been pleasant, interesting and stimulating. However, I can't say that I am satisfied that I used them to the optimum. I had a very full extra-curricular program and I can't complain about UVM's social life. When I look back upon the four years I can't help but realize that I let down my parents, myself and my profs for not coming close to my scholastic potential. For this reason I can't be satisfied because I know that in this respect I did a minimum type of job. Procrastinating and cramming may at times allow for good marks but they don't produce

By Ed Needham

This is the last column I'll be writing for this newspaper and so rather than beginning by knocking something I am going to throw a few bouquets....First to the women who work in the many offices in the Waterman Building (and probably the other University buildings as well). As a group, or individually, they are the nicest, most helpful and all round good-natured people I have met here. The library staff also deserves a rose for patience and fortitude. Thanks to the office of the Treasurer for moments of understanding and also to the folks who work for Saga for smiling faces at ridiculous hours of the morning....I am grateful to former CYNIC Editor Don Karp and the present Editor Stan Israel for allowing me complete freedom in the views expressed in this column in the past and also for stretching a deadline now and then.

Since the nominal, primary purpose of a University is education I want to name a few of the people connected with this end of UVM to whom I am grateful. My debt to them transcends tuition. They are: George Kidder, Jean Trevithick, Arthur Davis, Dorothy Van Ghent, Al Ettinger, William Steele andSpaulding Rogers.

For those of you who are curious, I am headed for two years in the School of Journalism at Boston University. The CYNIC has agreed to accept a note occasionally from me as a foreign correspondent. When you hit Boston in your travels, twist the dial on your radio around and conceivably you may find a familiar voice jabbering away.

That's it, short and sweet for a change.
Goodbye.

with a Dean he feels that you're trying to brow beat, pressure and disrespect him. Plead, be humble, admit your "crime" and put yourself at the mercy of someone's sympathy. Perhaps I'm queer, but I'd rather be judged by a jury of my peers in court fashion.

The next section: Academic Dishonesty. A committee has been set up composed of Deans, faculty and students. Trust the students to decide a case by themselves? NEVER!!

Section IV: The prospective members of the court shall be nominated by 2 students and 2 faculty members, to be appointed by the Deans. Even in nominating the justices the Deans have to pull a few strings.

The Student Court shall have exclusive jurisdiction in all cases of interpreting the Constitution and by-laws of S.A. What a tremendous grant of freedom. Liberty for all Pure TRIPE!

The court has referral jurisdiction:

1. If the Deans want to give them an occasional case.
2. If a student has possibly done something that overlaps between academic dishonesty and S.A. rules, or, overlaps between misconduct and S.A. rules. Even then the court gets the case only if the committee on jurisdiction decides to give it to them.

I recommend that the Standing Committee on Jurisdiction have appellate jurisdiction both from the individual student and from jurisdictional bodies.

I recommend that the Student Court have original jurisdiction in cases of student misconduct where probation, suspension, or expulsion may result.

If the Dean of Men or Women comes into contact with a case which he or she thinks will warrant probation, suspension or expulsion he must refer the case to Student Court.

If the student feels that he would rather be judged by the Dean he may appeal to the Standing Committee on Jurisdiction.

I recommend that the right of appeal as regards the final punishment, be given to the Joint Appellate Court as outlined in the present regulations.

I honestly feel that Dean Clifford is a morally honest and fair man. I just don't think that any one person (rather 2) should be set up as a Czar over student misconduct.

They took away our beer. O.K. It's a State U. and state laws have to be respected (but not enlarged upon.) Now they want to take away our court, pat us on our heads and say FAITH. The elders of the University Family do not care to guide us. No, they would like to force their thoughts upon us. They breast feed us through our young adult years. They have assumed the role of overly strict "Parents away from home." They grossly infringe upon our right to live a private life and now they want to grossly infringe upon our right to think for ourselves. Democracy at UVM is becoming a living hypocracy. Let's be realistic, honest and firm and break away from this CREEPING DESPOTISM. They tell us as the leaders of tomorrow we must think for ourselves today. Educators lament the conformity and lack of individualism of our times. Yet, they actually and knowingly encourage it. They tell us we must think for ourselves and then try to force their thoughts down our throats. I happen to have a narrow esophagus and so I can't help but gag at this forced feeding. In addition I no longer like warm milk.

I respect the elders for the wisdom that has accrued to them over the years. They are men of above-average intelligence, education and character. I do question their sense of realism when they try to force

CLEARING HOUSE

By Peter Schoffstall

Good afternoon!

A few last issue items, Comments and Addenda

Item: Burlington Daily News hits the pressmen with reasonably fair reporting and a sensationally slanted headline on "soap box" talks.

Comment: Yellowish journalism appears occasionally in Burlington but never reaches a really deep yellow because its purveyor is usually so behind with the "news" that the actuality must be sensationalized by headlines. It is enough to say that sensationalism has never won any Pulitzer Prizes, only sold newspapers, and that Post-McCarthy attempts at name smearing has only served to call attention to the possibility that the name caller is much too emotional to be paid much attention to.

Addendum: Our last reference to these talks on these pages seems to have had a meaning we did not intend. We were not condemning. We like the idea of a daily student forum. WE WANT IT TO CONTINUE. We did think that the first two speeches were a mockery; the first because it was a waste of time, the second because we disagreed with the reasoning and purpose which the speaking was trying to sell. Both were poor speeches, but we do realize that a start to be made somewhere.

Item: Cynic runs full findings and recommendations of the Committee-to-Investigate-the-Student-Judicial System.

Comment: We hope you read it. A great deal of our "trouble" as students here at UVM is ignorance of the correct manner of going about something.

Suggestion: To somebody with the power to make it a suggestion to the Committee: A pool of pre-law students or others interested in the like, to act as lawyers before the Student Court for offenders, or accused offenders. We are informed that the majority of students coming before the court are totally ignorant of their rights and legalistics envolved in a Student Court trial.

Suggestion and Item: Something for next year's Freshmen and "lower campus" dwellers: Why don't some or one of the Honorary Societies open the Coffee Shop Friday, Saturday and Sunday evenings. Profits from coffee and doughnuts could pay for janitorial services and show some profit for a general project kitty.

This would be a real service. We suggest the week end first and then if there is need, and we are sure the need exists, the program could be expanded. One rule: Clean your own table off. MORTAR BOARD - BOULDER - take it from there. We will hint at this again. WE WOULD MORE THAN LIKE TO SEE IT HAPPEN!

Item: Good news from the theater department. Plans are beyond the blueprint stage for an arena theater in Fleming Museum. The Theater will be finished for next Fall.

Comment: THE THEATER WILL HAVE COMFORTABLE SEATS!!! This will fill only a section of the need at UVM for a proper theater for concerts, recitals, lectures and plays. Southwick will just not do. The success of a performance is entirely dependent on the physical comfort of the audience.

Addendum: ONE OF THE MOST UNCOMFORTABLE EVENINGS WE HAVE SPENT WAS DURING THE LAST PROGRAM OF THE FINE ARTS FESTIVAL. THOSE SQUEAKING CHAIRS! N.B. President Fey.

Item: Vermont Varieties this next Fall will have two performances in the Homecoming Weekend Program. There has been a meeting of all parties concerned with the weekend and an understanding has been reached. All can and will communicate. There will be full cooperation. The unfortunate events of last Fall will not repeat themselves nor will there be a question of censorship. The University Players understand their responsibility as a production organization and have nothing whatever to do with the petition which was circulated some days ago and presented to the Student Association. The University Players, to our knowledge, did not pass on the petition. The petition would seem to have come from a badly motivated bunch of sour grapes and is on the wrong road, in the wrong vehicle, at the wrong time.

Summer is acumen in...sing lud, don't drown and have a nice one.... Remember June 8th is the beginning of National Truth Week. We predict is everybody tells the truth during that period the Third World War will start and all those exams will go out the window. (Grab that, Daily News! It's subversive!)

John J. Teal, Jr., of Huntington Center, Vt., will give an address on Tuesday evening, May 20, at 8:00, in the Fleming Museum Auditorium. The subject of his address is "The Artic in World Affairs." This event is sponsored by the University Lecture Committee with the assistance of the International Relations Club. Mr. Teal will present to the university community and the public, information on a major geographic area of the world which is currently in the news. He gives a weekly lecture series called "Geography Behind the News" at UVM this semester and also teaches geographic backgrounds. The lecture is open to the public.

That evening a banquet was given for the new initiates and sisters at the Lincoln Inn. Pat Penn and Marty Lawton received outstanding pledge awards, and scholarship guards were presented to Marilyn Jensen and Roberta Clauss.

The Pi Phi's and the Owls held an exchange dinner which was certainly enlivened by the unexpected arrival of a white mouse.

SIGMA PHI

Sigma Phi held its annual Spring Formal May 9. The evening's festivities commenced with a buffet at the Olde Board. The Sigs, their dates, and guests then returned to the Sigma Phi place where they danced to the music of Burt Sisco and his band. The chaperons were Mr. and Mrs. Brady B. Gilliland, Mr. Glenn Dewey, and Mrs. Charles Lord.

Sunday, May 11, a Sig Sister initiation was held. The two new members of the Sig Sister Society are: Virginia Boch from the University of Pennsylvania, who is pinned to Barney B. Bus, and Lee Hovey, wife of Roger S. Hovey.

SIGMA PHI EPSILON

Seven members of Sig Ep were just initiated. They are: David E. Hungerford '61, Orange, Conn.; Allyn J. Foss '60, Morrisville, Harold R. Bennett '60, Cape Elizabeth, Maine; Robert A. Mitchell '60, Springfield; Louis G. Provost '59 and Roger E. Frenette '59, both of Winooski and Gerald C. Mason '59, Pawlet.

The Sig Ep's had their Sweetheart's Ball on May 9th at the house. Music was provided by Pete Davis and his band, who also played at the informal dance on Saturday. The climax of the evening was the crowning of Sig Ep Sweetheart. Saturday, a barbecue party was held in back of the house with entertainment furnished by the Sig Ep Jazz Band.

In preparation for a Spring party room, all the Sig Eps are helping to lay a cement cellar. Renovation work is also being done on the bar behind the house.

With finals just around the corner, let's take our minds off the current problems and look forward to summer vacation. Even though most of us plan to be gainfully employed there are weekends, holidays and those wonderfully relaxing days prior to and after the job.

A national news magazine (Time) recently came up with the world shattering prediction that your female fashion companions may be wearing chemise bathing suits. However, there is nothing so radical in men's beach wear. Cabana sets in Hawaiian prints will be seen on the more cavalier types, but the majority will continue to favor the terry cloth pull-o-vers with piping matching the short trunk shorts. There are some sets that will feature the deep "V" cardigan sweater effect. Small checks, and regimental stripes will remain the most popular designs with Indian madras prints winning the second place in popularity.

Summertime is also slacks time. Here, the new cotton wash 'n wear items are a real blessing. Most slacks are currently being cut in the "Ivy" "University" manner. The big news is color. Although the favorites will undoubtedly be tan, olive and charcoal, more and more startling colors will be seen. Look out for the vivid reds, Kelley greens and a flock of other shockers. There will also be fabric interest in the new lines with cavalry twills. It should be a colorful summer on the golf courses.

Sport shirts will remain conservative. Pastels will dominate. Most men engaged in spectator sports will stock with the Bi-Way white numbers. This will enable them to sit with an open collar all day and then put on a tie and look proper for dinner that evening. Button down collars will be extremely popular with the active males. Calm checks and hairline stripes in sport shirts will be very popular items. The overall look in shirts will be about the same as last summer, casual, with emphasis on subtle design and color.

Bermuda shorts did you say? Yes, they too will be seen. They, like slacks, will be available in wash 'n wear fabrics. The most popular shade will be the solid colors, tan and beige, but many will be wearing madras. Back straps are now optional. Incidentally, dark grey shorts are fine with a dinner jacket and good-looking too.

In short, the summer will be casual, with gay splashes of color for the more val[illegible] tinued this work through the Bollingen Foundation Research Fellowship awarded to him. Upon completion of this, he joined the faculty of the American Academy of Asian Studies which is a branch of the College of Pacific in Stockton, California. He served as dean of this college from 1953-1956.

In order to devote all of his time to writing books and lecturing on Oriental philosophy and religion, especially Zenbuddhism, Mr. Watts resigned from this position. At the present, his list of books is impressive. It includes the following: Behold the Spirit, The Spirit of Zen, The Supreme Identity, The Way of Zen, Easter: Its Story and Meaning, The Legacy of Asia, Myth and Ritual in Christianity, and Wisdom of Insecurity.

Mr. Watts is married and has five children. His selection by the Ceremonies Committee was made on recognition of the fact that knowledge of non-western culture is greatly needed.

WHAT HAPPENS WHEN A BANK OFFICIAL IS DEPRIVED OF HIS LUCKIES ?
(SEE PARAGRAPH AT RIGHT)

BANK ROBBERS often try to get rich through no vault of their own. So often, in fact, that bank officials rarely get rattled by ordinary hold-ups. But sometimes the gangsters go too far. Sometimes (Curses!) they lift the officials' Luckies! That dastardly act is bound to cause real Banker Rancor! Why? Simple. Every Lucky (You can bank on this!) tastes like a million bucks. Every Lucky is made of fine tobacco . . . naturally light, good-tasting tobacco, toasted to taste even better. But don't accept our account—check it yourself. Get Luckies right now!

TIME'S RUNNING OUT! Better get your Sticklers in fast! (You haven't lived if you haven't Stickled!) Sticklers are simple riddles with two-word rhyming answers. fessional but rather in the hope that others in the lower terms under similar circumstances realize that when graduation rolls around they might very well have similar thoughts.

I'd like to utter a few words about some of my other impressions of UVM.

Cuts: I think that there is nothing wrong with occasional cuts and that for some courses classroom attendance should definitely be optional. However, I must admit that excessive cutting in many courses is wrong and unnecessary. As a guilty party I apologize to certain professors.

Profs: The majority of the profs that I have had at UVM have been good. Some have been outstanding and a couple of others putrid. To those profs who have conducted intelligent, interesting courses and/or have worked hard on extra activities and have been fair and above the table in their dealings I say thanks. To those profs who teach boring, ridiculous courses and or who have hypocritical, overly subjective, unfair and sneaky in their actions I say thanks also. Thanks for adding to my realization that life is not perfection.

Courses: The majority offered at UVM are interesting, enriching courses of which the University may be proud. I regret that I haven't had the time to take more of them and due to my poor habits I haven't participated more fully in those that I have taken.

Bull Sessions: Bull sessions as differentiated from intelligent discussions are the rationale of procrastinators and the delight of "Bull Throwers". An occasional session with the boys is fine; but actually more time is wasted, more reputations both male and female are untruthfully tarnished, more false tales are told, more worthless topics are dwelt upon, and less knowledge is gained than from any other collegiate activity. Basically, bull sessions are exactly what they are called; pure, unadulterated manure.

Honoraries: Honoraries are nice and their members should feel proud of themselves. In reality, honoraries are exactly what they appear to be; much pomp and cir-their wisdom upon younger minds who have the choice of either obeying or giving up their college education.

This paternalism, this living hypocracy sickens my sense of fair play. Don't let them substitute themselves for a Student Court. In short; let's take a big stick NOW and kill it before it multiplies.

Sincerely yours,

"Faux Pas"

Editor, THE CYNIC
University of Vermont

Sir:

Once again the CYNIC is to be commended for shifting to a new staff with a minimum of confusion. The recent issues have maintained the high standards with regard to proofreading, accurate headlining, and breadth of news coverage which recent years' issues have developed. It seemed to me that the first two news pages of the issue which carried a photograph of the east campus on the cover were an admirable picture of an admirable university week.

One story only has disturbed me in recent issues -- the news report of the Founders' Day exercises, carried on your front page last week. I note from the student directory that the young lady who reported this event is apparently a first-year student. I wonder, therefore, on what she based her comment that the speech was "basically the same thing we've been hearing for years." If my memory serves me correctly, few Founders' Day speeches in recent years have dealt primarily or even in passing with the Allens. To my certain knowledge, no Founders' Day speaker in the eleven years that I have been at UVM has discussed the complicated and interesting war over land-grants which was a major topic of Judge Costello's speech. I find myself also unable to understand the reporter's comment that the speaker dwelt on Ethan Allen, since, unless my ears deceived me, Judge Costello somewhat naturally devoted most of his attention to that Allen brother - Ira - who was a prime mover in persuading the State of Vermont to found the University of Vermont.

Generally one sends a reporter who knows and likes baseball to cover a baseball game, and a reporter who knows and likes music to cover a symphony concert. Why not, in future, send a reporter to cover Founders' Day who knows and likes history, considers academic achievement exciting, and enjoys feeling a part of the twentieth oldest college in America?

Yours sincerely,

lasting knowledge. I write this not as a public confirmation of little actual value beyond the sweaters or baskets received and more a tool of politics and subjective opinion than of honest appraisal. Campus esteem of honoraries can probably be very easily judged by the "interest" in the recent Founders Day.

Before I forget, heartiest congratulations to the tennis team for bringing back UVM's first Yankee Conference championship!

The trend at UVM seems to be more and more paternalism and despotism. (Please read my letter to the editor. If I sound annoyed, I am, but my nose is unstained and my conscience is clear). UVM is now a State University. I think that this is good for the State but bad for the University. Unfortunately, standards will inevitably suffer. It may not be any easier to attain A's but respect for the graduating diploma will decline as it becomes easier to complete minimum graduation requirements.

I strongly feel that every student at UVM should be active in at least two or three worth while extra-curricular activities. Too many people at UVM are conscientious movie and TV reviewers. Those of you who sit back and let others carry the ball may think that you can't even begin to realize how much you are missing until you become involved in these activities. Those whose life at UVM has been void of extra-curricular activity will really have that empty feeling when and if graduation rolls around for them.

The aims of college should be education, enlightenment and adjustment. In the four years of college the student makes a transition from teen-ager to young man (or woman). He should develop an insight into himself, others and the world in which he lives. He should acquire knowledge necessary for the successful pursuit of a career and intelligent fruitful living.

Many friends, numerous acquaintances and some dislikes are made at college. I've shared many wonderful, worth while experiences and gained a lot from people I have met at UVM. I regret, however, that I haven't had a closer relationship with more of the University's capable faculty.

It's been very nice going to college in a New England town surrounded by such beautiful scenery. To those who stay on at UVM good luck with the development and best wishes for continued success in the future.

Cindermen Lose Meet To Union

by BOB GOLDMAN

It was a rainy, muddy field that the UVM track squad had to contend with at Union on Wednesday, May 8. Even with this weather, all the track events were held outside. All the field events, except the javelin, took place inside the new Union Field House. The final score was Union eighty, Vermont forty-six.

UVM Captain Neil Hall captured a new pole vaulting record for the Field House. Neil went over the bar at a height of 12'3". He also took first place in the javelin event with a toss of 179 feet, 1½ inches.

The Cats also took two other first places. Red Meserve won the 120 yard high hurdles, with a time of 16.6 seconds, and Denny Morse took the high jump with a leap of 5'7".

On Saturday, May 10, the Cindermen journeyed to Hartford, Conn. to take on Trinity. Once again UVM was the underdog with Trinity ringing up a total of 73 points to our 53.

Red Meserve turned out to be high scorer, with 13 points. He placed first in the low hurdles and broad jump, and second in the high hurdles. McFarlin scored ten points with a first place in both the 100 and 220 yard dashes. Captain Neil Hall again came through to win the pole vault and the javelin.

Fraternity racas

by STAN MESSINGER

On the inter-fraternity scene last week many teams were inactive due to the weather conditions. However, some games were played and the standings changed in the respective leagues. On Monday May 5, Lambda Iota lost to Sigma Alpha Epsilon 11 to 4, while Sigma Nu lost to Tau Epsilon Phi, 15 to 14. Phi Sigma Delta continued its winning streak as they beat Phi Delt 6 to 1. On Wednesday and Friday all the games were rained out and are acheduled for later this week. Mr. Strassburg said that on the completion of these games the winners of the respective leagues will meet on a playoff.

Baseball: St. Michael's

by LEE LOVESPRING

In the season's opener against another Vermont team, the UVM Catamounts edged out a win over St. Mikes by a close score of 4-3. Much of the credit for the win goes to Bob Koones, a junior, who took over in the sixth for starter Ross Artus. Until this inning, Artus had allowed only 3 runs, however, the UVM lead was being threatened when Koones came in. Zysk, the Vermont second sacker led both teams in the hitting department with 3, and thus contributed also to the win.

St. Mikes started the game off early with a first inning run as the lead-off hitter Smyerski hit a single, got to second on Artus' first wild pitch, took third on a single by St. Peter, and advanced home when the UVM hurler committed another wild pitch. The Cats came back to life in the opening inning when Gerry Cassidy walked, stole second, and advanced to third when he and Tom Tierney, who have been walked, attempted a double steal, which proved very successful for the Catamounts. When De Roches, the St. Mikes catcher fired to Smyerski to pick off Tierney, Cassidy took off for home scoring the first run of the game for UVM.

Both teams were idle in the second inning, as they progressed down the batting order, but in the third inning Michaud walked, and St. Peter, one of St. Mikes high hitters for the game teed-off for a triple, thus scoring Michaud. The clean-up hitter, Tessier, then singled to drive in the third and final St. Mikes run.

After Chuck Zysk singled and was forced at second as a result of a fielder's choice by Flance, both Cassidy and Johnson walked. Clean-up hitter and Captain Tom Tierney singled scoring two, and Tessier delivered a wild pitch, which brought Johnson in from third.

After 1 down in the sixth and a little trouble brewing for Ross Artus, Bob Koones came in to relieve him and save a very fine relief performance as he only allowed two men to reach base for the remainder of the game and these were walks.

The Purple Knights from across the river made more threatening attempts in the remaining innings, however, UVM was able to sustain their goals.

Aside from the third inning, St. Mikes pitcher, Tessier did a creditable job, as did the Vermont's winning pitcher Ross Artus, who was aided by relief hurler Koones.

Frosh Track

by ALAN SILVERMAN

Last Wednesday the Freshman Track Team lost their meet to Burlington High School by a score of 69 to 48. The only bright spot for the UVM Frosh was the fine running of John Bister. Bister took three firsts, and a third in the Broad Jump. His triumphs included: 440-53.3 sec., 100 yard dash-10.4 sec., and the 220 - 23.6 sec. Bill Perkins won the Mile event with a time of 4 minutes and 44 seconds.

However the main source of difficulty lies in the fact that there are not enough men on the Track Team.

by LARRY ALBERT

In the New England Intercollegiate Golf Championships held over the week-end at the Burlington Country Club, favored Williams won the New England title and underdog New Hampshire won the Yankee Conference Championship. The individual honors were won by Pete Boatwick of Middlebury in a 2 and 1 victory over Ronnie Mattson of A.I.C. The individual medalist honors went to Bob Rosenfeld of M.I.T. whose score of 73 topped a field of 156 golfers in Friday's opening competition.

Vermont places 6th in Tourney, 4th in Yankon

Host Vermont came in a very respectable sixth out of 26 New England colleges in the New England competition and 4th in Yankee Conference competition. The winning score of Williams top 4 was 319 and Middlebury was second with a score of 326. Third place went to U.N.H., 4th to UConn., fifth to UMass, and Vermont was 6th with a score of 333.

Two of the sixteen golfers to get into the championship round play were from the host Vermont Squad. Bob Edelstein, whose 77 tied him for 4th, and Bob Botsford, who captured one of the two remaining spots in a playoff, were the Catamount representatives. Botsford defeated Halligan of Williams in the opening round of play but was defeated in the quaterfinals by LeClaire, 6 and 5. Bob Edelstein was turned back in the opening round of play by Tom La Vigne 4 and 3.

In the semi-final round Ronnie Mattson of AIC defeated Tom La Vigne of Colby, 2 and 1, and Pete Boatwick topped Maine's Ronnie Le Claire 1 up to gain the final berths. In the Sunday afternoon championships, played in the pouring rain Pete Boatwick edged Mattson for the championship 2 and 1. Boatwick won the match with steady par golf in contrast to Mattson's erratic play.

All in all the tourney was a great success and tourney director Ed Donnelly said that everything went smoothly. The turnouts were only fair but none better could have been expected with the poor weather.

Kitten Nine Wins 2, Lose 1

by STEVE COOPER

After being rained out of a Wednesday encounter with Norwich, the UVM Kittens took a Friday doubleheader from the St. Lawrence yearlings by scores of 1-0 and 5-4. However, they lost a tough one Saturday afternoon against a veteran Plattsburg AFB ballclub.

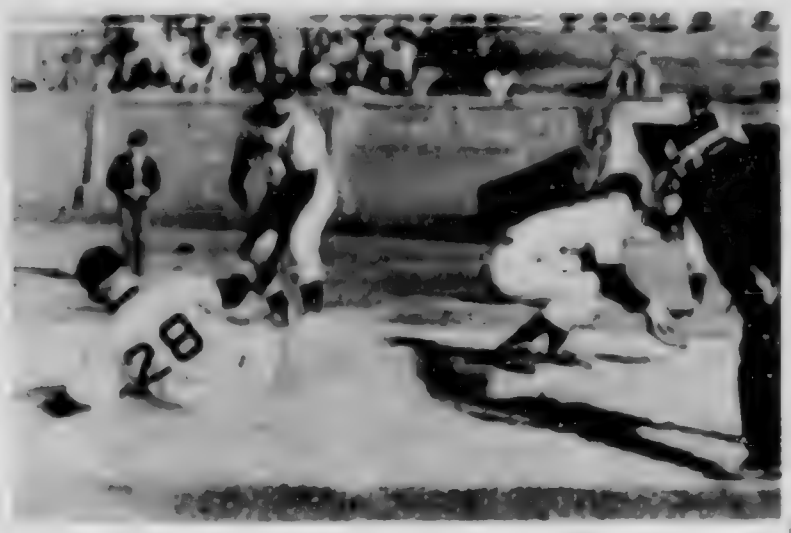
Friday's Doubleheader

Bob Hobbie pitched a 1-0 two hitter in the first game for UVM. The only run of the game was scored in the home half of the second inning when Vermont outfielder Bob Agel walked and stole second. Then Bob McBride singled to center to score the only marker.

The nightcap was a battle all the way. Walt Bone pitched the distance for the Kittens, who won the game in the seventh and last inning of the game. With the score tied at 4-4, Spike Jarrett opened the bottom half of the seventh with a single and took second on a sacrifice bunt. On an attempted pickoff play, the St. Lawrence catcher threw the ball into center field and Jarrett moved to third. The visitors decided to load the bases hoping for a double play. However, the strategy backfired as Fred Branch blasted a pitch to the shortstop who bobbled the ball as the winning run scored.

Flyers Edge Frosh

A veteran Plattsburg AFB club came up with three runs in the ninth inning to edge the frosh 15-12 Saturday afternoon. The Flyers scored seven unearned runs in the first frame off Burlington righthander Fred Robinson, who deserved a much better fate than the score indicated. Robinson gave up only three earned runs as his teammates backed him with shoddy support.



The frosh, coached by John C. (Fuzzy) Evans, now have a 2-2 record. They play three games this week; a Wednesday home game with Ethan Allen Air Force Base and a road doubleheader Saturday against the Dartmouth frosh.

The Spectator By Jerry Heller

ON SECOND THOUGHT

This sports editor was going to wind up this semester with a harsh criticism on the weak sports participation and support at UVM. I had written this editorial one week ago today. My inspiration came from the poor performances of the Vermont teams the week before last. To refresh your memories, the baseball, tennis, and golf teams lost while the track team took a not very close third place. This seemed to me to be the saddest example of athletics at this school as long as I could remember. At that time I felt that I had every right to fire away on the subject of lack of school spirit. I wasn't going to attack it in the familiar way by remarking on the empty grandstands, but my remarks were to be aimed at the "high school" heros who talk of their days of victory in their youth but fail to come out for a sport at college, and those who are constantly griping about UVM losses but fail to even attend the home games of the teams. I was prepared to further my argument by discussing how a small school like ourselves will never really assert itself in athletics because the student body has that perpetual apathetic attitude toward sports. I was going to sum up by saying that we have a nerve asking for athletic scholarships, field houses, etc., because as a student body we just don't deserve it. However, I feel that I might not be justified in saying these things so I wrote a new editorial because there is something besides sports participation and support that makes the teams win. I don't know what it is and therefore I can't comment on it.

The weekend before last we lost in practically every spring sport and last weekend there was a complete reversal with victories galore and the competition was even rougher.

I think that as long as I remember sports at this school, I will picture small diehard teams who, without help of student support, athletic scholarships, and proper facilities, went out onto the fields and never disgraced their school.

There is no need for those of you who do not care to give any support to these men to feel ashamed, however, I feel sorry for you because some time in the future you'll look back and remember.....nothing! There always has to be somebody waving a flag, you might say, and I guess I'm the guy. This week I wave my flag of congratulations to the UVM tennis team for its winning of the Yankee crown, the baseball team for its victories, and the golf team for its fine showing.

Have a good summer, best of luck to the seniors in the future, and I'll be thinking of you all in Greenville, Mississippi!

by PAUL STANTON

Paced by Captain Pete Snow, who garnered six out of Vermont's nineteen points, UVM's unbeatable netmen easily swept to the Yankee Conference Net Crown May 9-10, in matches held at the University of New Hampshire in Durham.

Coach Fred Marston's determined charges encountered little opposition as they successfully rolled over last year's champion, UMass., with eleven points, in addition to thoroughly swamping third place Maine, UConn, New Hampshire and Rhode Island in that order.

Vermont was the only team to place all six singles players into the semi-finals, three of whom went on to win their respective titles, as well as three doubles teams into the semis, the top tandem of Pete Snow-Evan Salmore emerging victorious.

Cats Gain Early Lead.....

An overcast day and strong winds combined to threaten opening day play, but this did not hinder Vermont as all Friday morning entries swept to victory. In the top singles match, Evan Salmore rolled over Kaminski, the UMass ace, 6-2, 6-3. Pete Snow clobbered Maine's Khoury, 6-2, 6-2, and Chuck Hirsch topped the Bear's Chase, 6-4, 7-5. Clem Pease whipped UNH's Allotti, 6-1, 9-7, as Vermont's Frank Diller and Larry Freedman received byes (first round passes).

The singles semi-finals played Friday afternoon, saw Salmore drop a close decision to UConn's top seeded Bill Foster, 6-2, 14-12. Snow continued on his winning ways by beating Rhode Island's Peckham, 6-3, 6-1. Chuck Hirsch was topped by UNH's Sycamore but Frank Diller, Clem Pease and Larry Freedman all triumphed to aid the Catamount cause.

In the opening round of the doubles matches, UVM's top duo of Salmore-Snow beat their Maine opponents, McKown-Chase, 6-2, 6-2. Hirsch-Bob Feinberg set back their Rhode Island counterparts, Haut-Noble, 6-2, 8-6, and Pease-Diller drew a bye.

Vermont Surges Ahead

Clear skies prevailed over Saturday's matches but an unusually strong wind made playing difficult for even the best players. In the finals of the singles competition, Pete Snow easily won the second player title, defeating URI's Peckham, 6-1, 6-2. In the fifth bracket, Clem Pease was triumphant, edging Maine's Sterritt, 6-4, 6-3. Larry Freedman took sixth bracket crown with an 8-6, 6-1 win over UConn's Baker.

In the doubles, Salmore-Snow took the semi-final win from U-Mass' Kaminski-Nyman, 3-6, 6-2, 6-0, while the Pease-Diller duo set down the UConn tendem of Goldberg-Selman, 6-1, 6-0.

The finals saw Salmore-Snow go three sets to defeat UConn's favored Foster-Fagan, 2-6, 6-4, 6-1. Maine's Sterritt-White topped UVM's Pease-Diller in a close two setter, 9-7, 7-5.

Baseball: U Mass

by FRED ROBINSON

After being rained out of a Dartmouth tilt last Thursday, the "Lapointed" Catamounts traveled to Amherst, Mass. and trampled the University of Massachusetts, the defending Yankee Conference champions, on Friday and Saturday by identical scores, 3-2. Both games were marked by clutch pitching and air-tight fielding as Vermont made only one miscue, a bobbled ball, in the two games.

Henrichs Hurls Team To Victory

Friday's game saw some timely hitting and sharp pitching click together to produce the Vermont win over a stubborn UMass nine. Senior Russ Henrichs, from College Point, NY, went all the way to register his third win of the season. His pinpoint control and assortment of pitches whiffed eight men, allowed but two free passes, and yielded only eight hits. Vermont dented the plate twice in the fourth inning when Bill Simonds blasted a triple to score Capt. Tom Tierney, and then [illegible] home on "Ace" Santa Croce's single. With two out in the sixth frame, UVM scored again. This time it was Chuck Zysk who came through. The "Bear" clubbed a single that sent Tierney rocketing over the plate for the second time and the dependable third run. UMass registered their two in the bottom of the sixth when a two-out single plated two across. Tierney went two-for-two and Santa Croce, two-for-four to lead the Catamount seven-hit attack.

Cats Score Late But Not Too Late

In Saturday's game, the Cats scored all their runs in the eighth frame, after UMass had drawn first blood in the third. Chuck Zysk reached on an error, advanced on singles by Mark Katz and Gerry Cassidy, and scored as did Katz, on another Mass. error. Tom Tierney pinch-ed in Cassidy for the final run. The Redmen threatened again in the bottom of the eighth when, with the bases loaded, Ross Artus came through with a strikeout and a ground out to end the inning.

The ninth frame also saw U-Mass putting a scare into the Green Mountain combo, but with two on and two out, Bob Koones came on to throw two pitches and retire the side and hand the Cats the victory. For Artus, a junior from Enosburg Falls, Vt., this was his fourth victory, giving up only six hits and striking out seven big Redmen. Ross also added the only extra-base blow of the game—a booming triple in the second frame. Credit has to be given to chucker Bob Koones who came on to retire a tough sticker with the pressure on him in the ninth. It looks as if Coach Lapointe has picked up a good "fireman."

With the infield improving tremendously, and with the clutch hitting and pitching that was displayed on the Mass. trip, the future Cat opponents will find the going bumpy when they tangle with Vermont. The next home game is on May 20 against the University of New Hampshire.

Hundreds Of Freshmen Initiate Fall Semester

Week To Include Tests, Picnic, Banquet, Dance

Card Please (Photo by H.B. Eldred, AVS)

by Judy Gerber

As the Freshman Class of 1962 descended upon the campus today, they were welcomed by the Freshman Week Committee and many interested upper classmen. The arrival of the frosh marked the beginning of freshman week and the initiation of another academic year at the University of Vermont.

This week will be a busy one for the newcomers and the committee workers and will include a picnic, a banquet, a dance, informal gatherings, movies and tests.

All non-academic activities of freshman week are handled by the Freshman Week Committee of the Student Association under the co-chairmenship of Bette Samson,'60 and Charles Hines, '60. Tomorrow, the activity will get underway with placement examinations and a welcoming banquet followed by "The Beanie Hop," a freshman mixer.

The welcoming banquet will start at 6 p.m. tomorrow night in the UVM cafeteria in the Waterman building. Doris McCain, '60 and Peter Rabinovitch, '60 are co-chairmen of the Banquet Committee.

Featured guest speaker of the evening will be Professor Samuel N. Bogorad of UVM's English Department. The Invocation will be delivered by Reverend Branon.

Next on the agenda is "The Frosh Mixer," the first social event of the season. The purpose of the mixer is to afford members of the freshman class an opportunity to meet one another. The Dance is a stag affair and frequent cutting in on the dance floor is the rule. Refreshments will be served and the gaiety will continue until midnight. Sandy Trotman, '60 and Al Smith, '60 are co-chairmen of the mixer.

Thursday morning, the freshmen will meet with the deans of the College in which they are enrolled at 10:30 A.M. At 1 P.M. there will be an important meeting in the chapel to help the new class get acquainted with registration procedure.

The big event for Thursday will be a picnic and a pep rally in the cage. These events are under the joint direction of Janet Ledbury, '60 and Joel Nichols, '60. There will be entertainment in the form of singing, cheers, skits and the music will be provided by The University of Vermont Band.

Friday is the time for enrollment for the class of 1962. There will be a movie shown "East of Eden" in the Student Lounge at 8:45 P.M.

More tests and meetings on Saturday followed by the Presidents Reception at 8 P.M. At this time the new students will have the opportunity to meet President Fey and his wife. They will also meet the Deans of their respective colleges. Refreshments will be served and there will be dancing in the Southwick gymnasium afterward.

Sunday morning will be devoted to various religious activities which are explained in the Preliminary Days Program. Sunday afternoon is for relaxation and recovery but informal guided tours of the campus leaving from Waterman will be conducted by members of the honor societies and the freshman week committee.

On Monday the freshmen are on their own to face the upperclassmen and the 8 o'clocks.

Spotlight On Variety Keynotes Concert Series

by R. Keimowitz

As a student entering a university, one has the obligation and responsibility (to take advantage of all that university offers. The George Bishop Lane Artists Series, of the University of Vermont is an offering that no student can afford to miss. In the 1958-1959 Series, fourteen different programs will be presented by the world's most outstanding performers. This year for the first time the Lane Series boasts two program Series, the Red Concerts and the Blue Concerts. Each series will offer seven concerts of fine entertainment, from jazz to symphony.

The Red Concerts will open the season on October 1, with a presentation of the Broadway musical, Lil'l Abner. Touring with the company will be many of the series and dances who appeared in the Broadway production.

The next presentation on the Red Series will be a concert by the Danish National Orchestra. The program will include works from the standard reportoire, and also a major work by the Danish composer, Carl Neilson. John Frandsen will conduct.

On the following program, the Red Series will play host to Benny Goodman and his Orchestra. The world renowned "King of Swing" will play a program of both jazz and classical works calculated to please the most discriminating listeners.

A return engagement of the National Ballet of Canada will be presented next. This year the company (travelling

Homecoming Weekend

UVM Homecoming - 1958 will serve as the introduction for the class of 1962 to "big" college weekends. Because of this, freshmen will play a special role in the four day celebration, as the king and queen, to be elected by the entire student body, will be chosen from the class of '62. The duty of the elected royalty will be to reign over the weekend from the time that they are introduced by a well known band leader at the Homecoming Ball on Friday evening, until the termination of the festivities on Sunday.

The newest, and what promises to be one of the brightest attractions of Homecoming is the Junior Peerade of floats, to be held before the UVM - St. Lawrence University football game on Saturday. As each fraternity and sorority will enter the competition, it will replace the usual display of posters. During the half time ceremonies of the game, the winners will be announced.

Also new this year will be two performances of Vermont Varieties - one to be held Thursday evening after the pep rally, and the other on Saturday, after the roast beef

For the first time since the founding of UVM, a southerner has come north to take the reins of our university in the Great Northern Kingdom.

On March 3, 1958, John T. Fey, at the time clerk of the United States Supreme Court, was elected by the board of Trustees of the University of Vermont and State Agricultural College to succeed Dr. Carl W. Borgmann as president of the university, effective July 1. Mr. Fey is the university's 17th president.

Dr. Borgmann, named to direct the Ford Foundation's new Division of Science and Engineering, served at Vermont through June 30.

Mr. Fey was born in Hope-

Take A Giant Step

This is your first day of college and you are anxious, excited, and perhaps a little curious. You may be a little unsure of yourself concerning just what to expect, how to act, or whether you can make the grade.

First of all, expect to study: this is the prime reason you are here at UVM. If you plan to make the grade, plan to get a head start and do not fall behind in your studies. Beginning anything may prove difficult; but once momentum is gained, ultimate success is always in sight. The first weeks will be difficult, different, and perhaps even rugged. However, there is no person among you who would not be here if it were thought that the individual had not the aptitude and perseverence to attain a degree.

Let me caution you about listening to hearsay concerning which courses and professors to take. Be careful when upper classmen say a teacher is terrible. Remember, this person could have failed the course or may have other prejudices. Instead, if you want, try to obtain the advice of a few.

The most fundamental concept is for you to have initiative. You should have initiative in your work as well as determination to do well. Here at UVM the initiative for accomplishment is left to the student. The decisions will be made by you and no one is going to stand over you to tell you to study. Your initiative is the only force that will make you study.

Socially act yourself: do not put on an act as if you are "Joe College." Participation is another concept that you should use. You should participate in the activities here at UVM. The athletic events, the Lane Series, extracurriculum activities etc. should all be a part of your education. Seventy-five per cent of your life here will be studies, but the other twenty-five per cent should be social. A person who can have such a schedule, can be admired. College life is one where you can learn facts, but also you can learn about life.

We sincerely urge, therefore, that you start your college career with determination and vigor. The years ahead will pass away quickly for those who utilize every minute, so work hard, have fun, and be happy to be a part of UVM.

On behalf of the CYNIC, let us welcome you, the freshmen and also President Fey to UVM.

Another group performing on both series, though in different programs, is the New York City Opera, which will do the beloved Madama Butterfly on the Red Series.

The next Red Series presentation is the internationally famed Stuttgart Chamber Orchestra conducted by Karl Munchinger. This 16 piece ensemble will play works from the Baroque masters to the Viennese classics.

To completely round-out this already astounding series, the Lane Series presents Isaac Stern on March 10. This brilliant violin virtuoso has recently been acclaimed as one of the three finest violinists alive.

These, however, make up only one-half of the Lane Series programs.

Among the Blue Series will be Jean Pierre Rampal, October

"I'M ONLY A JUNIOR—HEY, YOU WITH TH' BOOKS—! WHERE'S TH' LIBERRY?"

5. in 'The Ages of Man", consisting of excerpts from the poems and plays of William Shakespeare. Gielgud, a star of the Old Vic Theater from London, is generally considered the greatest living actor in the English-speaking theater.

The Chicago Symphony Orchestra, under the famed Fritz Reiner, will perform in the following Blue Series concert. Considered by many to be the finest recording orchestra in America, Reiner will lead the 105-player group in works of their large repertoire.

The Blue Series will also present The National Ballet of Canada. It is expected that this year the company will do some of the full-length ballets in its repertoire, such as Giselle, Sleeping Beauty, and Swan Lake.

The Diary of Anne Frank, which won both the Pulitzer Prize, the Antoinette Perry Award, and the Critics'.

The New York City Opera will make its appearance on the Blue Series in Verdi's Rigoletto.

Jazz enthusiasts will revel in the announcement that on the Blue Series, December 2nd, the Errol Garner Trio will perform at Memorial Auditorium, the home of all the Lane presentations.

The seventh attraction of the Blue Series will be a vocal recital by the talented, lovely Metropolitan Opera Star, Roberta Peters.

Old Mill Addition Ready For Occupancy

by Dave Colburn

A new and marvelous building has been constructed on the University of Vermont campus, and the Class of '62 is the first class to have its use available for their full four years in college.

Cornerstone ceremonies for the addition to the Old Mill were held at 11 a.m. on Saturday, October 26 of last year. The building, which was completed in the early part of this summer, will ultimately replace the old and time-worn East Hall, a war-surplus building which was purchased by the university and constructed here in 1946.

Not only has the new annex been constructed; in addition, the entire interior of the original Old Mill is undergoing a complete rejuvination. Operations have already been completed in the South Wing. This year the economics and political science departments will move their offices to this new location. The classes in these departments will be held in the classrooms in the new building.

Also this fall the military science department will have classes here.

The following year, when the Middle and North Wings will have undergone their renovation program, the English department and the Audio Visual Aids offices shall move in. Then English classes will also be held in the new classrooms.

Geology, the only other department in East Hall, will be moved temporarily to the Fleming Museum when East Hall is vacated. It is expected that within a few years better accomodations will be worked out for this department.

Plans for the building were prepared by Freeman, French & Freeman, architects. The job is being carried out by the R.S. Noonan contracting firm of York, Pennsylvania.

The total cost of the operation, which is expected to be approximately $660,000, will be covered to a great extent by alumni contributions to the university's Development Program.

Incoming freshmen should be proud to be the first class to get full benefits to this new and much-needed addition to the university's facilities.

With both its traditional, plus several new features, Homecoming Weekend will provide for new students, a good insight into college social life, as well as enable many old friends to get together.

There will be an information booth set up at the entrance of the Waterman Building for your convience. This booth will be manned by upperclassmen at various times throughout the week to answer questions and supply information about school, town, etc.

THE BEANIE

A beanie is a small green hat
That sits upon a freshman's head.
Now upperclassmen see to that (Except for when they go to bed)

'So-Sixty two'ers, don't forget
And ever go without your DINK
For how else could you have met
Those upperclassmen? 'Swhat I think'

UPPERCLASSMEN

An upperclassman seems superior
To all things I feel inferior
And just when I start feeling blue
I think: why, they were freshmen, too....once.

PROFESSORS

Professors are a stuffy lot
They think I'm dumb, when I am not
I'm really not that awfully dense
To be a student in past tense!

Signed, A flunk-out

WATERMAN

Waterman room numbers are quite unique
(Or maybe I am just a freak)
But if number three comes after two
Why are even numbers so few?
Oh--now I know why after all
I'm on the wrong end of the hall!

MAINE RATED TOPS IN CONFERENCE

by BOB MESSIER.

Revenge will be the order of the day at two o'clock this Saturday afternoon. It will be then that the UVM Catamounts meet their old Nemesis, the University of Maine, in their first outing at Centennial field this year. Over the years the record stands at 2 and 11 in favor of the Maine "Bears" who also handed Vermont its biggest defeat of the "57" season.

From the recent scouting of Coach Lapointe, Maine will have its usual "well balanced" team this year. They hit hard and play rough and seem to have their best team in years. They will work from a multiple offense consisting of a "T", a "B", and a double flank. The men to watch will be center Rodger Ellis, and right-halfback Jerry deGrandpre; standouts on defense and offense respectively. Thus far this year they have looked very impressive in the air, especially in their big win over Rhode Island this week.

The Bears will face a Vermont team quite different from those in former years. Despite their small squad, Coach Donnelly feels that all the boys show lots of promise and "have a real desire to play." Vermont's forward wall will consist of returning lettermen Frank Brown, at center, Captain Phil Chalifoux and John Marino at guards, and two promising newcomers, Ira Effron and Lou Hroenk, at the tackle slots. At the flanks will be two regulars of last year, Maynard Bush and Bill "Bonzo" Grey, both big standouts on defense. Vermont's brightest hopes lie in its fleet backfield, who showed their power by racking up thirty points last week. After much deliberation, half-backs Roy Greene and Lou Petronaci, fullback John Babic, and quarterback Bob Flance, should get the nod for starting berths.

All and all, a win would set Vermont right back into the Yankee Conference League. Dell & Dell football magazine has picked UVM as undefeated this year, as did many other sport forecasts. The big "if" is, of course, team spirit, the greatest single factor in any athletic contest. As trite as it may sound, you, the sport fans, are needed badly to drive the team on. See you at the game. . . .

"Blue Series" Opens With Sir John Gielgud

by Dave Colburn

On the evening of Sunday, October 5, the Blue Series of the George Bishop Lane Series will open with a program consisting of exerpts from Shakespeare's plays and sonnets read by the star of London's Old Vic theatre, Sir John Gielgud, who is considered by many the leading contemporary figure in the English speaking theatre.

Gielgud will present a program in three parts, "Shakespeare's Age of Man", based on George Rylands Shakespeare anthology. The three parts, which will in essence trace life, are Youth, Manhood, and Old Age.

This particular offering received praise when it opened on September 20 at the Festival Theater in Stratford, Ontario, and has met with great success in its Canadian tour. The performance here will be Sir Gielgud's first in the United States since 1950. Previous to the Burlington engagement Sir John played three performances at Her Majesty's Theater in Montreal; after leaving here he will commence a cross-country tour which will take him to the West coast.

Whether the claim that Gielgud is the greatest actor of out time is true or not, there can be no doubt that he is by far one of the best. Since his debut in 1922, when his sole line in Henry V was, "Here is the number of the slaughtered French," Sir John has become known to all serious followers of the theater. He has played with innumerable actors of well-known stature, among them Alec Guiness, Jack Hawkins, and Sir Lawrence Olivier. The student body at UVM should be proud to have a performer of such greatness appear on its campus.

A note to students: All tickets for the George Bishop Lane Red Series have been sold out. However, there are a number of seats still available for the Blue Series, especially the better seats of $12 and $15 variety. These can be obtained in the COSA office.

Sir John Gielgud, said to be the greatest actor on the English stage today.

There is going to be a Pep Rally Friday Nite, October 3, before the Maine game. It will begin at 7:30 behind the Cage. The band, cheerleaders, and twirlers will be there as well as the football team.

Danish Orchestra Begins "Red Series" Tuesday

by Pat Jay

The appearance of the Danish National Orchestra on Tuesday evening will mark the opening of the "red series" of the George Bishop Lane program for 1958-59. Their presence on the program is undoubtedly one reason why all tickets to this series were sold out the day they went on sale.

Under the patronage of King Frederick IX of Denmark, the orchestra is returning to the United States after a much lauded tour in 1952. At that time it was praised by such critics as T.H. Parker, George W. Stowe and the late Olin Downes. The Danish National Orchestra, with nearly 100 members, is renowned as a major European orchestra. In America it is held in esteem. During its fall tour the orchestra will appear at many leading colleges and will give a concert in Carnegie Hall.

The Burlington concert will be conducted by John Frandsen, whose many duties include those of Chief Conductor of the Royal Opera in Copenhagen. In addition to this post he is also director of the Opera Academy for the training of young singers for the Royal Opera. Mr. Frandsen has served as conductor for many European tours, such as the 1957 visit to Rome by the Royal Chapel (Opera) Orchestra.

The program for the coming concert includes music by Denmark's star composer, Carl Neilsen, and classical "international" compositions. It opens with the Overture to "Euranthe" by Weber, followed by Nielsen's Symphony

Poster Contest Starts For Homecoming Weekend

Two P.M. on Monday, October 6, marks the deadline for all entrants in the annual UVM Homecoming Advertising Poster Contest.

As in past years, the winning artist will receive a trophy, to be presented at the Homecoming Ball on Friday, October 31. The first place poster will be reproduced and distributed as the official poster advertising the weekend.

No rules have been set concerning the theme for the posters, except that the winner will be chosen on the basis of its eye-catching appeal. Last year's victor was said to have been inspired by Sputnik. This does not mean, however, that the judges are subversive, but that any original ideas are welcome.

Fliers, listing the rules, have been distributed about the campus, and others are available in the COSA office.

Be sure to have your entry in on time.

Professor Bogorad of UVM's English Department to teach through the medium of television

T.V. Course Offered By WCAX-TV

"To University", the University of Vermont's first televised course, made its debut Saturday, Sept. 27, on Channel 3, WCAX-TV, at 1 P.M. At that time, Dr. Samuel N. Bogorad, a professor of English at the University, delivered the first of thirty half-hour discussions on Modern Literature. His lecture will cover selected novels, plays, and poems by leading literary figures of the twentieth century, such as Hemingway, Faulkner, Steinbeck, Orwell, Shaw, Miller, O'Neill, Williams, Frost, and Eliot. In his first lecture, Dr. Bogorad gave an informed, critical evaluation of Ernest Hemingway's The Sun Also Rises, and suggested some of the problems that confront the reader who wishes to broaden the scope of his own understanding and enjoyment of this work.

Dr. Bogorad was chosen by the Adult Education Division of the University to deliver this course, and his impressive background makes him well suited for his assignment. He is a graduate of Brown University, where he received both his A.B. and A.M. degrees, and he obtained his Ph.D. from Northwestern University. In addition, he has taught at Brown, Northwestern, the College of William and Mary, the University of Colorado and the University of Vermont. He is a member of Phi Beta Kappa, and is the distinguished co-author of two books: The College Miscellany and Atlantic Essays. This course promises to be a very stimulating experience for all who partake.

New Arena Theater Opens With "Brigadoon"

by Dorothy DeCecio

The premiere performance of UVM's first theatre, the Arena in Fleming Museum, will be "Brigadoon", a hit musical which played over 500 performances on Broadway in 1947 and which starred Gene Kelly, Cyd Charisse, and Van Johnson in the movie version. Opening the first week in December, this sparkling 18th century Scottish tale written by Alan J. Lerner and Frederick Lowe, authors of "My Fair Lady", features such hit tunes as "Almost Like Being In Love", "I'll Go Home With Bonnie Jean", and "Heather On The Hill".

The show produced by University Players, staged by [illegible] Falls, and designed by Edward Peidner, will include Scottish reels and a sword dance. Choreography is by Carolyn Nass who directs the Dance Workshop. I. Pappoutsakis will act as musical director and Howard Bennett will lead the chorus. Although the musicals "Oklahoma" and "Wonderful Town" have been produced here in past years, this production complete with principal singers, actors, chorus, and dancers will be the first musical offered by the Players which includes an entire orchestrated score.

Frosh Week Activities Termed Very Successful

By MARC PECKER

Freshman week began Tuesday, Sept. 16, with the arrival of 900 new students to the UVM campus. The program for the week included orientation meetings, placement testing and consultation and a wide variety of social events. The format was customary, with the exception of one Vermont tradition. Freshmen were given the option of purchasing beanies, and as was expected, the response from the male members of the class was not overwhelming. The majority of beany sales were to upperclassmen for their freshman dates.

The Waterman Cafeteria set the stage for the freshman banquet Wednesday evening. The menu was customary and speeches abundant. The highlight of the affair was Dean Harris's cheerleading activity.

From Waterman, activity switched to the Redstone campus for the freshman mixer. It is this reporter's opinion that this event be renamed "Freshman Mixup" in future years, as Simpson was a chaotic mass that evening. The confusion was caused primarily by hordes of very collegiate-looking upperclassmen attempting to gain entrance to this exclusive freshman function. Congratulations to the strong body of volunteers and Gold Key members who so adequately guarded the doors. Needless to say these strong arm techniques caused many of the freshman beauties to exit to the lobbies and corridors to meet the upperclassmen and chaos was the order of the evening.

A picnic and pep rally were held Thursday evening and because of inclement weather were held exclusively in the gym building. The pep rally was an extremely well-planned affair and was met with extreme enthusiasm by the freshman body. The cheerleading was excellent and speakers well chosen. Dr. Gregg's repetoire of jokes was extremely good and spicy. SAE and THETA CHI presented last year's Kake Walkers and both teams showed truly excellent form. Carol Demis and TEP provided musical presentations.

The conclusion of the Freshman Week program was the President's reception, held at Southwick. It was followed by a dance.

Congratulations to the members of the committees that planned and sponsored the events and especially to Bette Samson, Charlie Hines and Jean Robbins for a very fine and successful freshman week.

Auditions for Twelth Annual Vermont Varieties will be held this evening and tomorrow afternoon. All kinds of talent are needed for this student-faculty show: singers, dancers, comics, acts, writers, actors, and musicians. Auditions on Thursday 7:30-9:00pm Friday 4-6pm.

Vermont Varities will be performed twice during Homecoming weekend. The show is a variety type revue written around student and faculty life, with original songs, dances, and skits. Everyone is invited to audition.

Dr. John C. Huden, director of the testing service at Vermont, has been re-appointed chairman of the research committee of the Vermont Historical Society, it was announced recently.

Dr. Huden, who is also a professor of education at UVM, is the author of numerous papers and articles on Vermont history and Indian settlements. He is presently conducting research on Indian place names in the area.

Pre-Meds And Pre-Dents Recieve Special Guidance

by Bob Kelmowitz

In 1945, the Pre-medical and Pre-dental Advisory Committee was founded. Professor Rowell, then a zoology professor, and the present Dean of Administration, and Dr. Pierce of the UVM Medical College faculty, felt that not enough information was was received by a Medical school to do a fair job of evaluating the student. Therefore, these two men formed a committee intended to help the students plan their undergraduate years, and to help the medical schools in their evaluation of the applicant. Until 1956, when he was made Dean of Administration, Mr. Rowell was Chairman of this committee, a position that Dr. Clinton D. Cook, of the Chemistry Department, now occupies.

The operation of the committee is relatively simple. Before enrolling in UVM as a freshman, each incoming pre-medical and pre-dental student receives a pamphlet from the Pre-medical and Pre-dental Advisory committee, with possible course plans for his next four years. When the student arrives on campus he is assigned to an advisor, a member of the committee, who aids the student throughout his undergraduate years. When the pre-med, or pre-dent, decides to apply to Medical schools, if he so requests the committee goes into action. Faculty evaluation cards are given to those teachers who are best acquainted with the student. When the advisory committee meets, all its members, coming from many different spheres of learning, evaluate the student from past records, faculty evaluation, and personal contact. After careful weighing of the facts, the committee recommends a student as unsatisfactory, satisfactory, with reservations, satisfactory, or superior, on the basis of academic average, faculty opinion, and extra-curricular activities.

Along with this evaluation form, the chairman writes a letter to the Medical school, expressing the views of the whole committee, and explains how, and why, the committee decided as it did.

When asked how effective the committee has been, Dr. Cook said: "It is fair to say that in the last four of five years, almost every student the committee has recommended has been accepted somewhere, though not necessarily in the school of his choice." However, the committee can not get a person in, or keep one out of medical school, nor does it wish to.

The pre-meds and pre-dents of this school, along with all the medical colleges owe Professor C.D. Cook, Chairman of the Committee, Dean G.V. Kidder, Prof. C. Brown of the Chemistry Department, Prof. L. Jones of the English Department, Prof. B. Murdock of the Psychology Department, Prof. M. Potash of the Zoology Department, Prof. E. Steele of the Political Science Department, Prof. R. Torch of the Zoology Department, Prof. W. Whitcher of the Chemistry Department, Prof. A. Wurthman of the German Department, Prof. R. Linnell of the Chemistry Department, Prof. R. Badgley of the Sociology Department and Mr. E. Clifford, Dean of Men their thanks. Yet, no such list of acknowledgements would be complete without thanking the committee's founders Dean L.S. Rowell, still a member of this group, and Dr. H.B. Pierce.

Congress Of Radiation Research Has Renown Meeting At UVM During Summer

by Roger Zimmerman

During August of this year the Vermont campus played host to a world-renowned group of scientists organized as the International Congress of Radiation Research. The Congress was held under the auspices and joint sponsorship of the National Academy of Sciences-National Research Council and the Radiation Research Society in cooperation with the European Committee on Radiobiology. The Vermont meeting was the first to be organized on a truly international scale.

It was estimated by the National Academy of Sciences that nearly 90 per cent of the world's foremost authorities on radiation research participated in the Congress. Among the countries represented at this scientific gathering were the United States, Great Britain, France, the U.S.S.R., India, Poland, Japan, Israel, Yugoslavia, Germany, and the Netherlands.

Some three-hundred and nineteen papers were contributed to the Congress, ranging in subject matter from physics to the latest data on radiation effects on humans. In addition to these contributed papers, thirty-six international authorities discussed selected areas of investigation in a series of seven symposia.

A well-coordinated recreation program, of which swimming was just one of the events. Under the responsibility of the Ladies' Hospitality Committee, Mrs. F.J. Sichel, wife of Dr. F.J. Sichel was chairman.

Many representatives also visited some of the high spots of Vermont, such as the Barre granite quarries, Mount Mansfield, Shelburne Museum, and Branbury State Park.

The Congress was considered to have been so successful, that a committee was formed for the purpose of drawing up plans for a Permanent Congress which would meet every three years. The definite accomplishments of this international meeting, to list but a few, were information exchange, mutual discussion of problems, and the reading of papers from chosen authorities in their fields. But of great significance also, is the fact that this meeting gave to each of its representatives that intangible feeling of better international relationships too, as well as the respect given by each member of his fellow colleagues.

It is most interesting to note that two Nobel prize winners were among those present at this historical gathering: George de Hevesy (Sweden-Chemistry, 1943) and H.J. Muller (Medicine, 1946).

Those who served on the arrangements committee were D. F.J. Sichel (chairman) of the UVM College of Medicine, Dr. D.J. Saith (vice-chairman) also of UVM; Dr. A.K. Solomon, Harvard Medical School; Dr. Franklin Hutchinson, Yale University; Dr. H. H. Rossi, Columbia University School of Physicians and Surgeons; and Dr. K.B. Setlow, Yale University.

Newman Club Sends Leaders To Convention

Ohio State University, Columbus, Ohio, was the setting for the 44th Annual National Newman Club Federation Convention. The six-day meet, which began Monday, September 1st, was attended by over six hundred delegates from secular colleges and universities all over the United States. Representing UVM were Alan Overton, president, Rudy Lampron, 1st Vice-president, Doreen Mekeisen, 2nd Vice-president, Lynda Poley, secretary and Ray Wiener, social chairman and the Newman Club Chaplain Father Branon. The convention theme was "Christ, Your Campus Guide For America's Future."

The delegates attended commissions and institutes concerning various problems within the Federation and individual club and Catholic policies; these were conducted both by the National Executive Committee members and learned Catholic priests and laity. The educational and spiritual aspects of the conventions were well organized as were the many social events. The Ohio State Student Union building graciously accomodated the many wants of the delegates--ball rooms, cafeteria, bowling alleys, lounges and lots of comfort.

The convention's favorite words were--ALBUQUERQUE NEXT. The next National convention is to be held at the University of New Mexico in Albuquerque, New Mexico.

THE AWAKENING

Two weeks have past, the book store is not so crowded neither are the dean's offices, and in general, the dawn of another school year is upon us. Let me wish all a belated welcome to UVM.

Saturday, Vermont will start the athletic schedule with a football game. Just how many of you readers intend to go, and how many of you will cheer? This topic, you all are saying, is trite, and the word spirit should be used by the sport's editor to drum up spirit and interest in sports activities, but we are not just referring spirit in regards to athletics, but to the whole university.

Last year at the Norwich game, or was it the Union game, or it may have been a game two years ago, but one could attend a game and throughout most of the game the stands would be almost completely quiet. The cheerleaders would try, but the fans would not cooperate. This quietness and uncooperation is not just at the athletic contests, but this is the attitude of the students at this University. No one ever defends UVM in a discussion involving other colleges, and yet people apply and go to Vermont. The only spirit, interest, or cooperation, is found during a mere weekend in February, which we call Kake Walk.

Everyone talks about Kake Walk: Everyone lives for these three days, and everyone rumors that it should be four days, because this is such a wonderful tradition and a good time. This, they feel, makes UVM. It is the only spirit one should get from 3,000 students? Is it the defense that everyone gives their friends about what UVM has to offer, and this is the defense that everyone uses to hide or cover up this University. Is anyone proud of this school?

Let me submit to you freshmen, because you are the ones who can help to better this situation, as you are the new blood of this school. The old blood has proven they lack this word spirit, but you do not. You are fresh out of high school, and we are sure you ran around cheering, yelling, telling, and singing all about the "old high school." This old blood is interested in just sitting back on their "derrieres", and allowing someone else do the job, letting someone else worry about the school affairs. Twenty-eight men did not sit back; they are out trying to represent this school on the gridiron. How many more with football ability sit back and just comment or laugh about the team? How many freshmen are in this category? How many have newspaper ability, or debating ability, or just ability to learn, and do not use this ability? This is the laziness, the quietness, and the uncooperation that was first mentioned.

Let us turn over a new leaf right at the beginning; let us attend athletic contests; let us budget our studying, so we will have time not only to attend, but to participate, (not just in athletics either, but, for example, elections, other extra-curricula activities, etc.); and let us work to better our University. Remember also A's and B's look good on transcripts for oneself, but it also builds up the prestige of the University. We can never expect to be another Harvard, but prestige helps to build a school educationally as well as athletically. Kake Walk Spirit represents a three day affair, but we need some spirit to carry us for the other 362 days of the year. This is YOUR University, here is where you will gain YOUR higher education, and here is where four of YOUR best years are or will be, spent.

Statement From Pres.

TO ALL STUDENTS

Joint Sportsmanship Statement by the Presidents of the University of Vermont, Middlebury College and Norwich University.

In the interest of sportsmanship, gentlemanly conduct and due consideration of the property of others, the Presidents of Middlebury College, Norwich University and the Vermont have agreed upon and are issuing to their respective student bodies the following joint statement.

"We are agreed that pride in alma mater, college spirit and friendly rivalry between colleges are healthy and desirable and should be encouraged; however, we also are agreed that damage of property, either on a rival campus or elsewhere, is not a proper manifestation of school spirit. We condemn such actions, and any student who is apprehended may expect to be subjected to disciplinary action.

"We also wish to announce at this time that possession or consumption of alcoholic beverages is not permitted at football games held under the auspices of the colleges we represent."

S. A. Treas. Reports

Each year at the beginning of the school year it is the duty of the S.A. Treasurer to publish in the CYNIC, a copy of the budget for that year and also a financial statement of the past year. In accordance with that policy, in this issue of the CYNIC you will find a copy of the budget for the 1958-59 school year.

In this budget you will see that S.A. has allocated money to 23 organizations on campus, 5 S.A. Committees, 9 organizations in a "special" category (i.e., CYNIC, Ariel, Centaur, etc.). You will also see that there is a surplus of funds of $2.282.17. This surplus is to be used by the S.A. Council ad other organizations that need money during the year. It is hoped that if any organization finds that it needs money or has a project which it considers worthwhile, then they will come to S.A. and petition for funds to support the project. This, of course, does not mean that S.A. will be able to give money to everyone, however.

As far as last year is concerned, S.A. ended the year with a surplus of $3,804.66. This surplus will be carried over into the present year and can also be used for general allocations. It might appear to many that this surplus is rather large considering the fact the S.A. was so short of money last year. The problem, as I see it, was that many organizations could

Clearng House

By Peter Schoffstall

Good afternoon.

It occurs to me that one of the better reasons why things have been difficult this week is that I don't have my blotter and pen and note pad set from the University Store. . .in matching gold stripes. They also have a personal stamp with pad and tags all set so you can do your own home printing of your name and address.

Fortunately I am not the only one with rusty grey matter. My roommate had trouble with this gem from the pages of "Selected readings from Titchener": "Meaning psychologically, is always context; one mental process is the meaning of another mental process if it is that other's context. And context, in this sense, is sense, is simply the mental process which accrues to the given process through the situation in which the organism finds itself." I quote out of context which will hamper the more astute. . .but still:

For those in classes mentored by Dr. Samuel N. Bogorad: If you think you're in the hot seat you ought to watch TV University. Hello There. I'm glad to see you all back and extend my greetings to the Class of '62. Hope you all had a swell summer.

With the new school year, comes new faces, new people, new ideas and here we find a new column. I hope you will enjoy it. It will be very diversified and if any of you out there have beefs, corrections, additions or anything on your mind, just let me know, I will try to take the situation in hand and show the "power of the pen".

Things were really buzzing here during Preliminary Days and before classes actually started.

A new idea has been initiated. The frosh men and women alike are "featured" in a Freshman Record. It helps the upper classmen in locating a date for every night of the week. There are checks, circles and underlined names in all of these books which the upperclassmen rushed to get hold of. I saw one student grab a handful and by the time he got to the steps of Waterman all but one were gone. They say "a word to the wise is sufficient," so here's my word to all. Beware! Pictures can be deceiving!!!

During the summer months, those precious few, I saw a few Broadway shows, one of which is definitely worth

Vending Machine Acc't.	7,259.05

Now, to get back to this year, you will notice that there is over 18 thousand dollars in the Student Union Account. The S.A. Council has voted to use this money for redecoration and refurnishing of the Student Lounge. In this way we hope to be able to make the lounge available to more people. It seems to me that this is a good use for the Student Union money.

One last matter which I think would be of interest to many students. Last year S.A. had the problem of a couple of organization making unauthorized purchases with S.A. funds. As a result, I have returned to the old practice of having the S.A. Treasurer approve all purchases before the purchase is made. This is done by merely getting the Treasurer's signature on the purchase order. Although this will require a little more work on the part of the organization treasurer, I feel that it will save a lot of problems in the future.

TAIWAN STRAIT

One of the biggest problems now covering the front pages of every newspaper is that of the Taiwan Straits. The Nationalist regime of Chiang Kai-Shek on Taiwan is in grave danger of being "liberated" by the Chinese Communists. At first, when the crisis arose, the U.S. left ambiguous the question of whether it regarded the Nationalist held Islands of Quemoy and Matsu, lying between Taiwan and the main land, as a "Related position". However, when the communists began firing on Quemoy last month, the U.S. stated that the protection of these two islands was necessary in defending Taiwan. Russia is backing the Chinese Communists strongly. The U.S. has come to the aid of the Nationalists Regime because she is committed by a treaty signed in 1954, which declares that "in case of attack against the territories of either of the parties" the other "would act to meet the common danger".

Thus far the communists have made an effort to blockade Quemoy with heavy artillery fire but the Nationalists, with help from the U.S., have succeeded in getting some supplies through to their troops. So far diplomatic attempts to settle the crisis have not been successful.

INTEGRATION

Last month President Eisenhower said

> I deeply regret the action of Virginia and Arkansas in closing schools. Most of us believe that all men are equal in the sight of God. . .We had been making progress toward that goal. . .I fervently hope that progress toward our goal will resume.

Governor Faubus had closed the high schools after he failed in several attempts to obtain a delay in the integration program. In Virginia, Governor Almond, Jr. took similar action in two communities. An alternative program was suggested by Governor Faubus under special legislation. His plan would require majority vote of the the registered voters in the schooldistrict. Assuming that the voters would reject integration, the plan then called for leasing the schools to a private corporation. Governor Faubus, in strong anticipation of the referendum is proceeding with his plans to reopen Little Rock Schools on a private and segregated basis.

FIFTH FRENCH REPUBLIC

When General Charles deGaulle came to power in June he promised to end the four year old war in Algeria and to give France a strong government consisting of a powerful executive, in contrast to the system under the fourth republic in which the dominant assembly overthrew cabinets at will. Sunday, September 28th, France will decide whether or not to adopt the new Fifth Republic.

LEBANON

Last summer, President Eisenhower declared that the U.S. was sending forces to Lebanon to help her preserve internal order and defend itself against indirect aggression, referred to by Eisenhower, was that of the President of Egypt, Nasser. Last week the new Lebanese government came into being. General Chehab succeeded President Chamoun, pledging to maintain the independence of Lebanon. The U.S. troops will probably withdraw in October, when presumably Lebanon will seek to steer a neutral course between Nasser and the West.

At 8 A.M. on Thursday and Friday, October 9 and 10, in the Student Lounge, the Goodrich Classical Club will sponsor a presentation of the Tyrone Guthrie production of "Oedipus Rex".

The production, staged by the Stratford Ontario Shakespeare Festival Players, will use William Butler Yeats' version of the Sophocles tragedy.

The Collegiate Future Farmers of America Chapter scheduled a special meeting on October 1, 1958 at 7:30 P.M. in Morrill Hall to consider membership from the Freshman Class. This years first and second semesters activities were discussed. All those who missed the meeting, please contact Glen Bronson.

Pinnings "do."

Three sororities at Sigma N. became pinned. Diane F. Smith was the first to take the [illegible] for Diana Bennett. ADP. Ed Clas made the move next and pinned Carol Butler of New Milford, New Jersey. A few days later Lana Wharton, the third occupant of the "executive suite" took a bid and pinned Paula Martin, KAT. Jack Power's marriage of Jancy Viennthaler of Little Rock, Arkansas took place during the summer too.

It has been a marvelous summer for engagements and marriages in the Kappa Alpha Theta house. Barbara Middlebrook, Theta's president this year, was married to Lt. Charles Bauer, a graduate of Norwich University. Inge Bruderaam '58, was married to Fred Dickerman, '60 and Gail Gibson, Theta's president last year was married to Frank Smith of Sigma Phi Place. Not to be undone by all these marital vows, Liz Beck, '59, became engaged to Don Bicknell, Delta Psi, a sophomore at UVM's medical school. Following suit, Marian Brothers became engaged to Monty Graham of Sigma Phi as did Carolyn Black to Navy man Frank Russell of Burlington. They plan to be married in September.

On September 6th Terry Scribner, Acacia, '58, and Ann Keithline Tri Delt, '59, were married. Immediately in Hanover. ALPHA CHI OMEGA

The Alpha Chis returned to a freshly painted house, and are very glad Mrs. Bartlett is back this year as housemother.

Some exciting summers were spent by the Alpha Chis. KAPPA ALPHA THETA

There will be an Open House to be held immediately after the Maine-UVM football game on Saturday, October 4th. Everyone is invited to attend.

Last Monday the Thetas were entertained by the sisters who attended the Theta Convention in Wernersville, Pennsylvania, the latter part of June. Fay Pendergast, Karen Johnson, and Judy Rossiter, related some of their experiences and sang some songs that they had learned.

NEWMAN CLUB NEWS

On Sunday, September 22nd, the Newman Club started off the new school year with a Communion Mass and Breakfast. Speeches were given by Father Branon, the chaplain and Alan Overton, the president. Following the breakfast, students signed up for various committees.

Another yearly event, the Newman Club Mixer, will take place on October 3rd. It will be held at the Starlight Roof of the Hotel Vermont. The event, lasting from 8:00 to 12:00 pm, will be highlighted by a five piece dance band. Admission for the event will be fifty cents. We sincerely hope all Newmanites will attend.

PHI DELTA THETA

The summer proved to be a good one socially, if not financially, for the Phi Delts. Jobs, due to the recession, were scarce. Not overly concerned about this condition were All Overton, 59, Ed Dailey, '58, and Ray Wiener, '60, who went to a rewarding Phi Convention in Ashville, North Carolina. In spite of a packed schedule they attended enough meetings to bring home some good points, some of which are being incorporated in Vermont Alpha.

The newly elected officers for the coming semester are: Al Overton - President; Bill Swanson - Vice President; Dixon Welt - Secretary; Dick Loati - House Manager, and Vin Skinner - Social Chairman.

Three Phis did not return this year, but the gap is being filled by their three graduate students; Gene Meder, Charlie Howe and Paul Epranian. Both Paul and Charlie are in their second years of graduate work.

While most of them were having a good time this summer the alumni had some extensive work done on the house, part of which went to the lighting fixtures in the living room.

The Phis are happy that their popular house-mother, Mrs. Greta Noyes, is back for a second year.

PI BETA PHI

The Pi Phis first meeting of the year was followed by an informal get-together in which summer adventures were related.

Linda Ball, Diane Morse and Janet Ledbury represented UVM's chapter at the Phi Beta Phi convention held at the New Ocean House in Swampscott, Mass., last June. Shirley Nicholls, Maddy Ryan, Sandy Concannon, Pat Lyman, Betty Ogilvie and Sue King also attended the week long pro-

PHI SIGMA DELTA

For the second year in a row, Phi chapter of Phi Sigma Delta fraternity has won the Brummer Cup as the outstanding chapter in the country. This award was presented to Master Frater Robert Erhlick and Vice Master Frater Clyde Lord in Chicago where they attended the National Convention during the first part of September.

The brothers of Phi Sigma Delta wish to welcome back Arthur Farovitch after a year of absence.

A party is planned for Saturday evening October 4th from 8:00 to 11:30.

SIGMA ALPHA EPSILON

New officers were elected and installed by the SAE's prior to summer vacation.

The following people will be in office during the fall semester; Wales Newell - President; Avery Smith - Vice-President; Emile Conlon - Secretary; Leon Rudd - Treasurer; Terence Macaig - Corresponding Secretary; Anthony Gallo - Warden; David Wood - Herald; Alcott Smith - Chronicler; Jack Ovitt - Chaplain; Stephen Moore - Steward.

SIGMA NU

At last things at "the Lodge" are again approaching a normal status, after many trying days of house cleaning. We are again privileged to have Mrs. Ruth Gordon with us as house-mother. Mrs. Gordon was greeted on her return with a completely redecorated room. Other house improvements include a new floor in the chapter room, and "better than ever" kitchen facilities. The boys plan to further enhance the appearance of the house by holding a work weekend this week.

SIGMA PHI EPSILON

Three Sig Eps have returned this year; Eric Birmingham, David Wilcox, and Peter Collins.

There was quite a bit of activity around the house this summer. Six members lived in the house during the summer session. Throughout the summer the members came to the house on week-ends to fix up the "barn" and the basement.

Vermont Gamma chapter of Sigma Phi Epsilon was one of the 12 chapters chosen from the 147 chapters of Sig Ep to be recipients of the William L. Phillips Foundation scholarship awards. J. Donald Capra was chosen as the winner of the scholarship.

TAU EPSILON PHI

TEP has new officers at the helm; Dick Marrin - Chancellor; Jerry Feig - Vice Chancellor; Dick Spadola - House Manager; Barry Lessinger - Steward; Howie Hexler - Bursar and Mike Rosenthal - Scribe.

The TEPs are anxiously awaiting the breaking of ground that will mark the beginning of construction of their new wing.

THETA CHI

This summer the 123 chapters of Theta Chi held their biennial convention at Michigan State in East Lansing. Our Vermont Chapter was represented by James Meyer, president, and Stanley Tassie, Secretary. During the four days of the convention the ninth biennial "School of Fraternity Practices" was held, at which the various types of chapter administration were discussed and criticized.

This semester we were happy to pledge Millard Simmons and Michel Charbonnier.

MADEMOISELLE

Mademoiselle's fifth annual Art Contest is now under way. The two winners will interpret the two winning stories in the magazine's 1959 College Fiction Contest and will receive $500 each for publication of their work. The closest runners-up will receive honorable mention and their entries will be kept on file for possible future commissions by Mademoiselle. Winners and honorable mentions will be announced in the August 1959 COLLEGE issue.

Any woman in college or art school who submits her entries before her twenty-sixth birthday is eligible to compete. No work need be done especially for this contest. Any samples--at least five--that show ability in one or more media will do. Mademoiselle will accept photographs of originals, either color transparencies or black and white glossies. This is not a commercial art contest; Mademoiselle is not looking for fashion illustration or advertising layouts, but for imaginative, original work in whatever medium or style the student works best.

All entries for the contest must be submitted by March 15, 1959 to Art Contest, MADEMOISELLE, 575 Madison Avenue, New York 22, New York.

Judges this year will be: Bartlett H. Hayes, Jr., Director of the Addison Gallery of American Art; Elaine de Kooning, painter and critic; and Bradbury Thompson, Art Director of MADEMOISELLE.

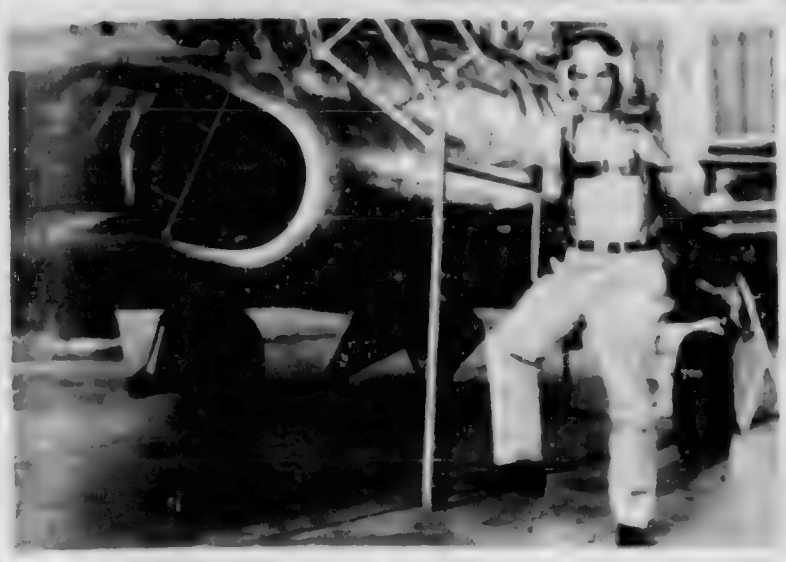
Senator Kenedy Visits Vt. For Political Help Campaign

By BRENDA BERLINER

On Friday [illegible] Mrs. Morrow and I had the opportunity to interview several candidates for the Democratic party at the hotel Vermont. Among those we spoke to were U.S. Senator John Kennedy from Massachusetts, Fred Parotte candidate for U.S. Senate from Vermont, Bernard Leahy Democratic candidate for governor and Mr. Lumbers, the Chairman of the Democratic party for the state of Vermont. Mr Parotte was most kind and cooperative. He acted as our host and introduced us to Senator Kennedy.



Asked about some of the issues facing this country Kennedy gave the following views: Senator Kennedy felt Red China should not be admitted to the United Nations until "they show signs they are willing to cooperate" which they are not doing now. He also stated that a stronger effort should be made to back the Supreme Court's decision on intergration and he felt that eventually public schools will be opened to all.

When asked about plans for the future, the senator said he is running for re-election.

Wedwaldt Heads AFROTC

Cadets Have Summer Work

2nd Lt. Andre Turenne posing before a T-33 jet aircraft.

The 870th Air Force R.O.T.C. Cadet Group of the University of Vermont is proud to announce that Robert J. Wedwaldt, son of Mr. and Mrs. William Wedwaldt of Wallingford, Vermont, has been appointed Commander of the Cadet Group. Wedwaldt holds the rank of Cadet Major.

Cadet Wedwaldt is a senior in the College of Technology at the University studying mechanical engineering. He is a member of Theta Chi fraternity, also a member of the Arnold Air Society, the Honorary society for advanced Air Force R.O.T.C. Cadets.

Before coming to the University of Vermont, Cadet Wedwaldt attended Wallingford High School, graduating in 1955. After graduation from the University of Vermont next June, he will enter the United States Air Force.

Many of the cadets were fortunate enough to be flown To Eglin Air Force Base, Florida, for the Fire Power demonstration. All were given the thrill of a lifetime by flying in a T-33 jet aircraft. Other activities included classes in navigation, weather, survival, nuclear weapons, and marksmanship. Discipline and hard work were the rule.

There was an important meeting of students who have plans for a legal career on September 29, 1958. For Freshmen and Sophomores, it gave information about the type of courses law school recommend that undergraduates take. For Juniors it explained the Law Aptitude Tests. For Seniors, it announced the new program of departmental recommendations for law school applicants and explained generally how to apply to law schools.

It is important to have a register of the names of all the pre-law students at UVM. There are frequent requests for names of interested students to whom law schools may send catalogs and other materials. There is also need to know the total number of persons who might be interested in applying for Law Aptitude Tests so that the necessary number of application blanks can be secured. All those who missed this meeting, please contact Professor Little of the Political Science Department.

Senior Day Is Postponed

By LIZ BOULE

There will be no Senior Day exercises today as scheduled. Dean Rowell stated, however, that there is a very good possibility of plans for a future date in the spring.

Plans for a jazz concert, similar to the one held last year on Senior Day, were in the final stages. It was then discovered that it would be impossible to have a band on the budget appropriated for this activity. Therefore, the plans were cancelled.

There will be a meeting, October 31, of the senior class officers, Mortar Board, Boulder, Dean Harris, Dean Clifford, and Dean Rowell. The purpose of the meeting is to plan the senior activities during the coming year. The group will pay particular attention to the possibility of senior privileges and commencement.

IFC Discloses Rushing Rules

Heretofore fraternity men and freshmen have been denied the right to associate freely with each other until the commencing of the rushing period. It was felt that this did not give an ample opportunity for the freshmen to become acquainted with the fraternity system and its members.

The Interfraternity Council of The University of Vermont has accepted the following rushing rules and agreements to be in effect this year.

Contrary to former Interfraternity Council rules, freshmen will now be allowed to associate freely with fraternity men with the following stipulations.

(1) Fraternity men should understand and are expected to live up to their "Gentlemen's Agreement" of not paying for the entertainment of freshmen.

2) No fraternity men shall enter the freshmen dormitories unless authorized by the Interfraternity Council. It is understood that Converse Hall does not fall under this stipulation.

(3) No freshman men at the University may enter a fraternity house except at the time designated by the Interfraternity Council.

All violations of the above rules will be brought formally to the Interfraternity Council by the Rushing Committee.

All violations by fraternities, voted as such by the Council shall incur a penalty of $100, payable within one month to the Interfraternity Council. If this payment is not made within one month, the fraternity will not be eligible for competition in any interfraternity event until the payment is made.

Any violation of these rushing rules by a freshman will prevent him from rushing or joining a fraternity for a period of one year.

No man shall be eligible to join a fraternity unless he has gone through formal rushing at The University of Vermont, or who has been on campus for at least one academic year, or who has sophomore standing as established by The University of Vermont.

The Newcomers Club will hold a get-acquainted meeting for new members of the UVM faculty and staff on October 9 in the Faculty Lounge of the Waterman Building.

Attending the meeting, which starts at 8 p.m., will be Dr. and Mrs. John T. Fey, and the deans and officers of the University. Dr. Muriel Hughes of the UVM English department will speak on "Vermont Expressions."

The Lane Series Box office ticket sale is taking place in the CODA office, and at Bailey's Music Rooms. A limited number of Blue Series tickets & all price categories are available. The Red Series is completely sold out.

The Fleming Museum Association announces its film program for the 1958-59 season.

The series begins October 15th with Frank Capra's Academy Award Winner, "Lost Horizons", based on the novel by James Hilton and starring Ronald Colman.

On November 19th there will be five films on pre-historic and medieval art in Europe and pre-Columbian art in Central and South America. Two deal with the cave paintings at Lasgaux and the great Gothic cathedral at Chartres.

Another of Frank Capra's Academy Award winners the comedy, "Mr. Deeds Goes to Town", follows on January 7, starring Gary Cooper and Jean Arthur.

The program turns international on March 11 with "Miss Julie", a Swedish award winner of 1951 at the Cannes and Berlin Film Festivals. Based on a play by August Strindberg it stars Anita Bjork.

The final program of the series has five films on modern art. Four are on the work of Henry Moore, Mark Tobey, John Marin and Jackson Pollock. The fifth, "Begone Dull Care", by Norman McLaren was made by painting directly on the celluloid film, turning a sound track by the Oscar Peterson trio into a jazzy eyefull.

while mentioning. That was "West Side Story" a great musical, dealing with the Puerto Rican problem in New York. The story itself was good. The music and the choreography, which were done by Leonard Bernstein and Jerome Robbins, the author in that order were terrific. I heartily recommend it to you all. The album of the show is available and I'm sure any and all will enjoy it immensely.

Speaking of albums, Jonny Mathis, the phenomenal singing star whom I saw at the Shell House in Oceanside, Long Island, this summer has a new hit album. It's called "Johnny's 12 Greatest Hits."

The Lane Series is the thing this year. Thank goodness the GBI Series committee finally realized the necessity of more attractive drawing cards and more times for student attendance. Be sure to see "The Diary of Anne Frank", even if you miss Benny or Errol. It's great.

New York City is instituting Educational TV on Channel 11 WPIX. Almost all pre-college subjects are being offered by October 6, the schedule is to be expanded to thirty-five hours weekly. Something like this should be offered nation-wide. Glad to see WCAX-TV is also adopting this idea.

World Series time is drawing near. Who do you like? Me, I like the Braves to repeat. The underworld undesirables are offering 7-4. Any takers?

Last but not least, let me give a personal welcome to President John T. Fey on becoming the new father of the University Family. So long for now.

Lament Department: Two major campus organizations goofed when they didn't sponsor "round-up" booths at Club Carnival last Friday; Centaur, the lit. mag., and Round Table, the local discussion club. . .both in need of many new sheep for their respective folds. I hereby notify all frosh of their importance and value on campus.

Communications Dept.: (Local) WRUV programming will better itself this year with a new policy of two hour segments run by the same person. This alleviates the necessity of having ten people scheduled for programs in an evening and having only three of them show up. For my own ears, since I now have moved five hundred yards and can pick up the signal, if I turn off all flourescent lights in the area, it will be a blessing because if a particular program is bad I'll know it's going to be bad for a full two hours and can relax. I also understand that the studio cut-ups have run out of firecrackers.

Nasty Department: (Brief comment division) Student Association is considering the purchase of voting machines instead of a new Station Wagon this year.

No takers appear to be available in the soap box speaking festivals which were held last Spring. The noon time forum was healthy, informative and amusing. It's not well rehearsed. It had the roots of tradition we seem to have lost in all our fancy new buildings and super, new, organization-type chumminess at UVM. I could even suggest some beginning topics: "President Fey's Golf Scores," "The Day Registration Took Each Student only five minutes and forty-five seconds to complete," "Why there are more committees at UVM than cows in Vermont," "etc., ad vomitum.

I have a letter from the "Committee of 100" in support of the N.A.A.C.P. Legal Defense and Educational Fund, Inc. . I will send my contribution off, however as it is, in a week. If you'd like me to include yours drop your check off in the CYNIC box in Waterman Information Office. Little Rock is just a few years away. Don't, by any means, get moved or excited about it. It takes all kinds of engineers to do Western Electric's job

It is Western Electric's job in the Bell System to produce some 65,000 different parts which are assembled into a vast variety of telephone apparatus and equipment. This job, coupled with our other responsibilities, requires the help of engineers in every field.

Their skills and talents are needed to develop new manufacturing techniques, solve quality control problems, devise testing facilities and methods. They work on new applications for metals and alloys, calculate raw material needs, seek manufacturing cost reductions.

In helping meet the Bell System's need for more and better telephone equipment, Western Electric engineers have assignments in the other areas of our job — installation, distribution and purchasing.

Our engineers are also involved in defense projects entrusted to us by the government. Because of our specialized Bell System experience, we are well equipped to handle projects like the Nike guided missile system and the White Alice communications network in Alaska.

Of course, W.E. engineers are encouraged and assisted in developing professionally . . . in expanding their technical know-how. Company-sponsored programs — like the full-time Graduate Engineering Training Program and the Tuition Refund Plan — help them along.

Promotion from within — a Western Electric policy — helps our engineers move into positions of prime responsibility. Today, 55% of the college graduates in our upper levels of management have engineering degrees. In the next ten years, 7,000 key jobs must be filled by newly promoted people — engineers included.

Western Electric technical fields include mechanical, electrical, chemical and civil engineering, plus the physical sciences. Ask your Placement Officer for a copy of "Consider a Career at Western Electric," or write College Relations, Room 1111F, Western Electric Co., 195 Broadway, New York 7, N. Y. Sign up for a W.E. interview when the Bell System Interviewing Team visits your campus.

New Buildings Developed To Add Something To The Old

by Shelly Wexler

On Monday, September 22, 1958 the newest building on the UVM campus was formally opened for academic use. This new addition to the oldest building on campus, the historic "Old Mill," has been named "Lafayette Hall." It was General Lafayette who laid the cornerstone to the "Old Mill" in 1826. The new hall is the second project in the long range development program of the University of Vermont.

The three story structure is capable of accommodating six hundred and eighty students and will provide complete facilities for the department of political science, commerce, economics, English and science. Among the many extras in "Lafayette Hall" are flavored fixtures and large windowed areas throughout the building.

Dedication of the new building will take place during 1958 Homecoming festivities.

This past week witnessed another change on the UVM campus. The University's Alumni, Development and Public Relations Offices have moved from their old locations in Waterman Building to their new alumni house quarters on the southeast corner of College and South Prospect Streets.

President Fey Speaks To Frosh On Education

by Arnold D. Berliner

Many things have been said and done during Preliminary Days. It can be safely assumed that the Freshmen, however confused by the on-rush of college life, have enjoyed the program prepared for them. We also presume that the majority of UVM's new students benefited by the period of orientation.

President John T. Fey prepared the new class at the Freshmen Convocation. In accord with American educators and statesmen, Dr. Fey said that the learned man is the foundation of freedom. This was pointed directly at the upperclassmen as well as the Freshmen. Perhaps it is hard for recent high school graduates to realize the burden of their responsibility as college students, but the UVM class of '62 should be well aware of the importance of an education. The universities of America give, to most students, the opportunity to say, "I've attended an institution of higher learning. Now I can go into business." An education shouldn't be wasted; it's an opportunity to jump at the other opportunities that populate life so profusely. An education should be used to learn more and, as Dr. Fey has said, not to make a living, but to make a life. Only through education can one gain insight as to the American way of life: can one gain initiative to understand others and their problems. Here only does one realize the significance of the other person as an individual-another human being seeking the answers to his own questions. No one will deny the need for this feeling for another at this point in our country's history.

Dr. Fey stressed this point as a key to building a better nation. Cooperation and reason were his key words; optimism and hope shall result.

A sense of "these values point to the depth and scope of the education which we hope you will receive at the University," he stated, ...broad and meaningful in terms of living as a respectable individual in a free society." The maintenance of a spiritually strong America depends upon it.

Navy Dept. Schedules Exams

The Navy Department has announced that applications are now available for the Navy's thirteenth annual competitive examination for its nation-wide Regular NROTC college training program. The mental examination is scheduled for December 13, 1958, and is open to all high school seniors and graduates who can qualify.

The deadline date for receipt of all applications if November 15, 1958, the Navy stated.

Male citizens of the United States between the ages of 17 and 21 are eligible to apply for the Navy College Aptitude Test. Persons attaining a qualifying score will be given the Navy's rigid midshipman physical examination next February. From the pool of qualified candidates remaining in competition, approximately 1800 young men will be selected for appointment as midshipman and will enroll in one of the 52 colleges of their choice where a Naval Reserve Officers Training Corps Unit is located.

The Regular NROTC is maintained for one purpose - to train and educate young men for ultimate commissioning as career officers in the Navy and Marine Corps. Successful candidates will start their Naval Careers in colleges and universities across the country in 1959. After a normal college education and substantial Navy training, graduates will be commissioned as regular officers in the Navy or Marine Corps, for active duty with the United States Fleets, throughout the world. For those who qualify and apply, assignment to flight training will open new careers in naval aviation.

In addition to the normal curriculum, midshipmen in the Regular NROTC will study a planned course in naval science. All tuition, fees, and books will be furnished by the Navy, plus an annual retainer pay of $600 for a maximum of four years. Regular NROTC midshipmen will spend part of three successive summers on training cruises with various Fleet units.

Applications for this program leading to a career in the naval service are available from Mr. Bryan Mosher, Assistant Dean of Men, or from the nearest U.S. Navy Recruiting Station.

Dean Mosher has been provided with specific information concerning the NROTC program and will furnish information bulletins to any interested student.

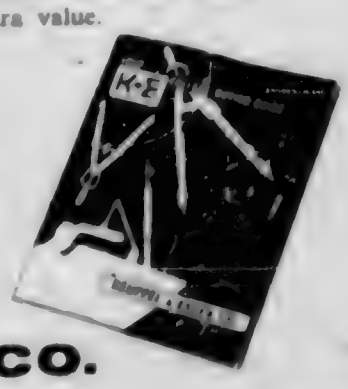
drawing instruments and slide rules

. . . are important, in college and after. That's why the wise choice is K&E, America's oldest and largest maker of engineering supplies and equipment.

When it comes to Slide Rules... take the K&E Decitrig®:



Its versatile scales team up to give faster solutions of complex problems. A dual purpose D scale and three LL scales cover a log log range of 1.00... to 22,000. And the A-B scales make quick, non-stop work of square root derivations. Sharp, engine-divided graduations permit accurate readings in a hurry.

And...look at K&E Drawing Instruments.

But remember, there's more to drawing instruments than the way they look. It's the important "extras," such as accuracy, materials, workmanship, manufacturer's reputation, that determine genuine value. Every K&E set—and they come in a wide price range—offers you the "extra" features that mean extra value.

Persons attaining a qualifying score will be given the Navy's rigid midshipman physical examination next February. From the pool of qualified candidates remaining in competition, approximately 1800 young men will be selected for appointment as midshipman and will enroll in one of the 52 colleges of their choice where a Naval Reserve Officers Training Corps Unit is located.

The Regular NROTC is maintained for one purpose - to train and educate young men for ultimate commissioning as career officers in the Navy and Marine Corps. Successful candidates will start their Naval Careers in colleges and universities across the country in 1959. After a normal college education and substantial Navy training, graduates will be commissioned as regular officers in the Navy or Marine Corps, for active duty with the United States Fleets, throughout the world. For those who qualify and apply, assignment to flight training will open new careers in naval aviation.

In addition to the normal curriculum, midshipmen in the Regular NROTC will study a planned course in naval science. All tuition, fees, and books will be furnished by the Navy, plus an annual retainer pay of $600 for a maximum of four years. Regular NROTC midshipmen will spend part of three successive summers on training cruises with various Fleet units.

Applications for this program leading to a career in the naval service are available from Mr. Bryan Mosher, Assistant Dean of Men, or from the nearest U.S. Navy Recruiting Station.

Dean Mosher has been provided with specific information concerning the NROTC program and will furnish information bulletins to any interested student.

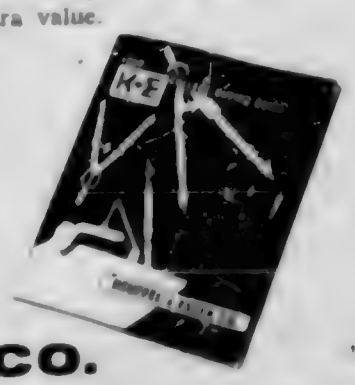
For engineering freshmen...

drawing instruments and slide rules

. . . are important, in college and after. That's why the wise choice is K&E, America's oldest and largest maker of engineering supplies and equipment.



When it comes to Slide Rules... take the K&E Decitrig®:

Its versatile scales team up to give faster solutions of complex problems. A dual purpose D scale and three LL scales cover a log log range of 1.00... to 22.000. And the A-B scales make quick, non-stop work of square root derivations. Sharp, engine-divided graduations permit accurate readings in a hurry.

And...look at K&E Drawing Instruments.

But remember, there's more to drawing instruments than the way they look. It's the important "extras," such as accuracy, materials, workmanship, manufacturer's reputation, that determine genuine value. Every K&E set – and they come in a wide price range – offers you the "extra" features that mean extra value.

"Your K&E College Buying Guide"— will give you useful information on the materials you'll need for your engineering courses . . . 36 pages, with plenty of pictures, and handy check-list. Get it at your college store.

Lane Series Opens Up Rehearsals

by Pat Jay

A new feature of the Lane Series this year will be a number of open rehearsals, given under co-sponsorship with a Burlington group known as the Friends of Music for Youth. This group, composed largely of music teachers of the Burlington area, requested that some of the Lane concerts be open to local students of the graded and high schools.

To meet this request, directors of the series are arranging to permit attendance at rehearsals of various programs for the price of $.50. The first appearance will be that of the Danish Orchestra, Tuesday, October 7 at 6 p.m. During the rehearsal, which will last about an hour, the Overture to "Euryanthe" by Weber and Mozart's Symphony No. 40, in G minor will be performed, in addition to parts of other compositions.

Announcement of other open rehearsals will be made later. UVM students who wish to attend are welcome.

Dr. Badgley New Faculty Member Of Med School

Dr. Robin F. Badgley, an instructor in sociology at Yale University, has been appointed to the faculty of the Vermont College of Medicine, it was announced recently.

Dr. Badgley was appointed an assistant professor of medical sociology in UVM's division of preventive medicine, succeeding Dr. Albert P. Wessen.

A graduate of McGill University in Montreal, where he received his M.A. degree, Dr. Badgley received his Ph.D. from Yale University.

In 1957-58 he was a post-doctoral fellow for research in pediatrics in the outpatient department of Grace New Haven Hospital, at the same time serving as an instructor of sociology at Yale University.

Prior to teaching at Yale, Dr. Badgley was a lecturer at Sir George Williams College in Montreal.

The Department of Political Science proposes to take a group of students again to Ottawa, Ontario, Canada, to observe the Canadian Houses of Parliament in session this spring. The exact date of the trip depends on parliamentary meetings, but it will be from a Thursday morning through the following Saturday. It will be necessary to have a $25 deposit from those who plan to go. There will probably be a rebate on the deposit, since in 1956 the cost was only about $18. This amount included transportation, tips, and hotel rooms in the largest hotel in Ottawa. The meals are the responsibility of each person, and the total cost will probably be less than $35. On previous trips the Canadian officials have rolled out the red carpet and have done everything to make the trip an enjoyable one.

In order to see how many persons might be interested, so that planning can get under way, there will be a meeting to explain the trip in room 104, Old Mill, on Monday, October 6, 1958, at 4 P.M.

X-C Predicted To Have Successful Campaign

by FRED ROBINSON

[illegible] School has once again [illegible] the leaves are beginning [illegible] their breathtaking colors [illegible] us upon us, and if by chance [illegible] a cool windy afternoon and happen to be walking in the vicinity of Hills Hall, and someone [illegible] past you in thin white shorts and a grey tee-shirt, you can be sure that Coach Archie Post's cross-country team is well under way toward another successful campaign.

Familiar faces will be a comforting certainty to Coach Post this season as he lost none of his seven starters through graduation. Running their last year for the Green and Gold, are Captain Ray Allen, Larry Seymour, who captained the Cat thin-clads during 1957, and Hugh Sinclair. The junior class is well represented by Howie Cutts, Fred Kolstrom, Frank Harrington, Dan Mossman, Norm Picard, and George Sleet, who this semester is eligible along with Soph Jack Hosher.

Moving up from a fine Frosh team of last year, who incidentally were undefeated and untied, are Johnny Bister, Neil Borroughs, Bob Donahue, Tommy Barrett, Ants "Whitey" Luce, and Bill Perkins.

UVM opens its season playing host to Rensselaer on Oct. 4. The squad will participate in five dual meets plus the Yankee Conference meet and the New Englands, which is held in Boston. Last year the University of Vermont was the site of the Yankee Conference tilt; however this will be run at UMass (Amherst) this season.

Placing fourth in the New Englands and fifth in the Yankee Conference in '57, UVM was led by Fred Kolstrom of Springfield, Vermont, one of the best x-country runners ever to attend the University. Kolstrom placed fourth in the Conference and an amazing 13th out of a field of 120 at the New Englands. Look for this lanky junior to come out on top plenty this season.

When asked for a pre-season prediction, Coach Post smiled and replied, "You can be sure we'll win the State Championship because there's no other cross-country college team in Vermont." He pointed out that both Norwich and Middlebury have tried to promote x-country, but so far haven't been too successful. But that's all right! You boys didn't want to beat fellow Vermonters anyway! The sport staff of the CYNIC wishes Coach Archie Post and Co. the best of success for the '58 season.

Frosh 11 Open Friday

The Freshman Football Team held its first workout last Monday and only 25 men came out for the team. This is the poorest showing in the history of the game. It is hoped that others will attend practice this week to swell the small squad.

The Kittens open this Friday and their road is a tough one, only a week and one half of practice under their belts. After that the frosh play three more games, one more than usual. It will have to be another team or so till we know just who's on the squad.

Fraternity Racas

by ALAN SILVERMAN

This week initiates the fall intramural sports program. Football is the first event, with the fraternities and the mens' dormitories competing for the championship.

There are four leagues: League A — Sigma Nu, TEP, ATO, Kappa Sigma, AEP, Sigma Phi, League B — Phi Sigma Delta, Delta Psi, Sigma Alpha Epsilon, Sigma Phi Epsilon, Phi Delta Theta; League C — Wills 1 and 2, Buckham 3 and 4, Chittenden 1 and 2, Converse 1.; League D — Wills 3 and 4, Buckham 1 and 2, Chittenden 3 and 4, Converse 2.

The game, of course, is not played under the same rules as that of collegiate or professional football. A couple of the fine points are: blocking only on the line of scrimmage, unlimited substitution, five downs in which to score, seven men on a team, and four periods consisting of fifteen plays per period.

Last year Phi Sigma Delta and Sigma Nu fought for the championship. Once again these two teams should be right on top.

Tierney & Henrichs Play Pro Ball

by BRETT LAZAR

Tom Tierney — now there's a guy who can well be proud of his athletic achievements here at Vermont. "The General" answered our shouts in the fall as a triple threat backfield man, and in the spring he turned his attention to anchoring the left side of Ralph Lapointe's infield. Tom, who received his B.S. in Education last June, is back with us this year, taking graduate courses in History and coaching the Freshman Football Team.

After graduation last June, Tom signed a contract in the Milwaukee Braves farm system and was sent to Waycross in the Georgia-Florida league.

Tom was hurt by a three week layoff and was only hitting .180 after the first two weeks of the season, but he began to get his eye back as he became accustomed to the grind of six games and a Sunday afternoon tilt every week, and by season's end was hitting a very respectable .275. Next spring Tom will report to the Atlanta Crackers of the Southern Association and try to break into their Class AA outfield. Incidentally, Russ Henrichs, another very familiar name to us, played with Tom at Waycross this summer. Russ, too, got off to a slow start and finished the campaign with a 3-6 record. Warren Tessier, who did so well at St. Mike's for three years, played the outfield in the same league and hit in the .280's.

Tom expects to return to Vermont each fall to coach football while he's still playing professional ball, but eventually he he hopes to coach baseball in college on a full-scale basis. I would suspect that Ralph Lapointe, whom Tom calls "the best coach I've ever come in contact with," has much to do with this desire.

THE WINNER AND NEW CHAMPION

Ray Allen Captains X-Country

by BOB GOLDMAN

At the end of last year's season, the members of the Cross Country squad elected senior Ray Allen as their captain for this season. Ray hails from a farm in South Hero, to which he intends to return upon graduation this June.

Capt. Allen is presently treasurer of Acacia fraternity, and a member of Alpha Zeta, which is an honorary agricultural fraternity. He Kake Walked for Acacia in both his sophomore and junior years. In his first year of walking he and his partner took both a third and a fourth place.

Ray began his track career at Lyndon Institute, which he attended for four years prior to his coming to UVM. He is also a member of the Catamount track squad. He was the No. 2 man, behind Fred Kolstrom, in the mile and two mile events last track season.

When asked about the coming Cross Country campaign, RAJ stated that this year's team has great possibilities of being as good a team as UVM has ever had. He feels that there is a very good chance of taking both the New Englands and the Yankee Conference.

Other members of the squad who have returned from last year are Fred Kolstrom, who was the most outstanding runner last year, Howard Cutts, Larry Seymour, Norm Picard, Danny Mossman, Frank Harrington, Bill Perkins, and John Bister.

Practice for the team started last Monday. The first meet will be held this coming Saturday against R.P.I. Capt. Allen expresses the desire for a large turnout at this opening meet, so let's all get out and support our C.C. men. The event will begin at 12:30 behind the cage, and will be over in time for fans to go to the football game against Maine.

The Spectator By Jerry Heller

TO KICK OR NOT TO KICK

Though I am still a youth and have not acquired the full worldly wisdom of an alumnus, I have come to discover the simple fact that the game played with a ball made of pigskin is quite unpredictable. Those of you who listened to the Coast Guard game this Saturday I'm sure will agree with me. This year, however, the authorities have conceived a new variation of the point after the touchdown, dedicated to the proposition that coaches need more worries and the game more unpredictability. Now the quarterback must decide to call for a place kick (one point), or attempt to run or pass (two points). Picture the coach pacing in front of the bench wringing his hands as the quarterback looks over pleadingly for some fatherly advice as the moment of decision arrives. What a fine time the Monday morning quarterbacks will have if their team elects to kick and leads by seven points while the opposition decides to run, after scoring in the waning moments of the game, and wins 8-7.

This will definitely make the game more exciting, if it can be made so, more than it is now. It does, however, make all kinds of complications from the coach's viewpoint. He must work out all kinds of defenses against spread formations and have to concoct some of his own special plays.

For the quarterback, who has always been a type of gambler, the new rule makes him assume the role of a master gambler and many a coach and student body will be wanting his head on a silver platter if he plays the wrong card.

In my opinion I'm in favor of the new rule. It is a transformation of a stereotyped play into one that can have all kinds of variations and be quite thrilling from the spectator's point of view. After listening to the game this Saturday it looks as if Coach Donnelly likes to gamble and try for two. I'm anxious to see it in action and I'm sure you all want to see the team win this Saturday so let's all be there and

Cats Roll In First Half; Rocked In Second

by PAUL STANTON

At least we didn't lose it! Ahead, 30-14 at halftime, Coach Ed Donnelly's "hungry" UVM gridsters contracted an acute case of butterfingers, as the visiting Catamounts were caught by a determined Coast Guard eleven, 30-30, with eight seconds remaining in play.

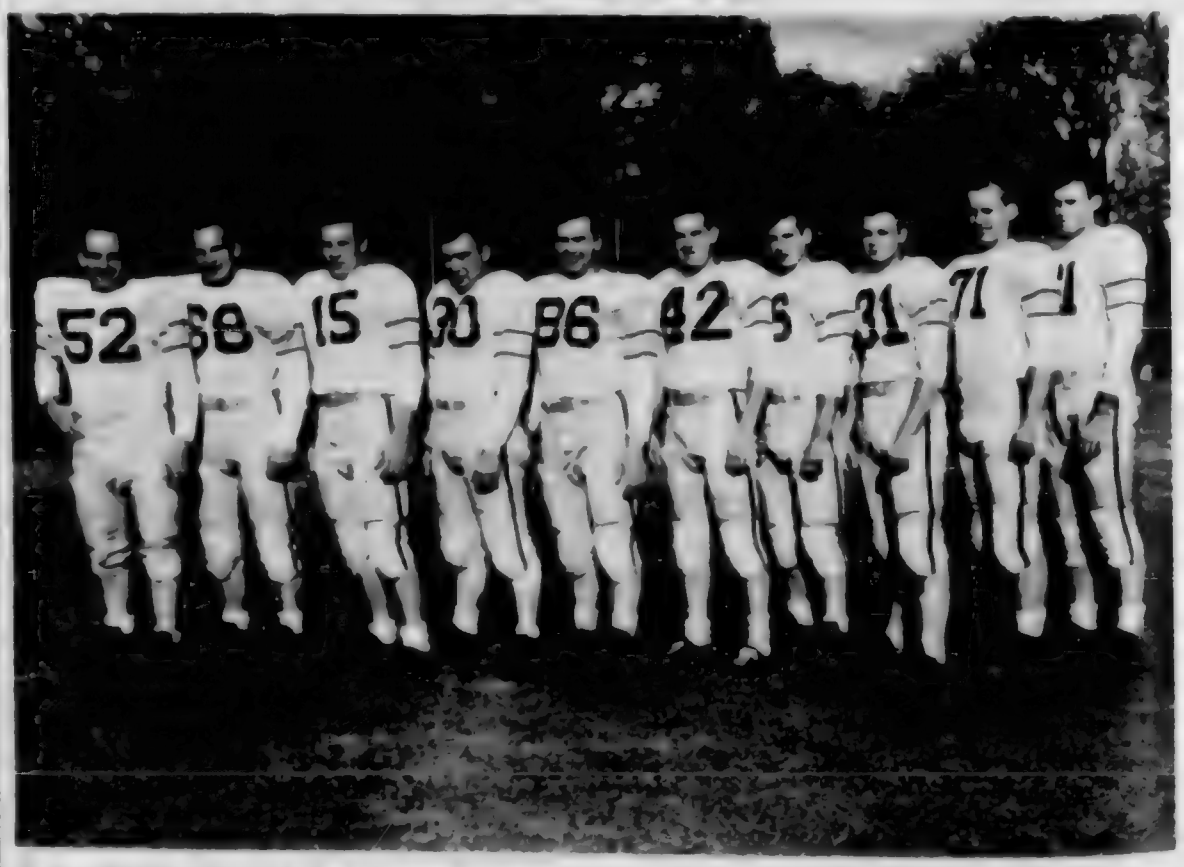
Down 24-30, with less than fifteen seconds to go in the fourth quarter, Cadet halfback Paul Lewis raced off tackle for two yards on a fourth down play to deadlock the score. Jack Babic blocked the kick for the extra point, and the game ended seconds later.

Vermont Takes Early Lead. . . .

The hosts kicked off, the Cats bringing it up to their own 41. Vermont successfully drove upfield in the following ten plays, as left halfback Lou Petronaci raced around left end for the first touchdown of the afternoon. Quarterback Bob Flance then dashed off tackle for two extra points. Still in the first period, right halfback Roy Greene returned a Coast Guard punt 22 yards, and the Cats were rolling again. Flance rifled a pass to Greene from the five, for the second UVM tally. Once again, Lou Petronaci cut off left end for another two points. The Cats led, 16-0.

Cadets Come Alive.

It was early in the second period that the Cadets proved themselves to be no easy patsy. Bob Ferguson launched the attack as he raced for a touchdown from the Vermont six. The Cats blocked the run for extra points.



Greene Grandslams.

Roy Greene, Vermont's biggest ground gainer, took the Coast Guard kick off on his own ten, and raced 90 yards for the third Green and Gold TD of the game. Petronaci's run for extra points was halted on the one. Just a few plays later, Vermont halfback Pete Nelson intercepted a Cadet pass, and charged 55 yards for UVM's last TD of the game. Petronaci successfully garnered the two points on another left end dash.

Coast Guard caught fire once again before the half ended and managed to push another touchdown across. The Cats were tiring. Deep in their own territory in the third period, the Cats chose to punt. The following ensued: the pass from center intended for Petronaci missed its target completely, and went out of the end zone to give the onrushing hosts a two point safety.

The Cats took over the ball on downs, and the game appeared to be won. A fumble on the Vermont 32 was recovered by Coast Guard, which led to the final Cadet tally.

To quickly recap the afternoon, Vermont seemed to be plagued by its same old troubles, running out of steam when it counts the most, and fumbling at the most inopportune times. Better luck next week!

Chicago Symphony Performs In "Blue Series" Attraction

by Dorothy Indick

This Sunday, October 12, Burlington will play the proud host to the Chicago Symphony Orchestra, presented by the noted impressario Sol Hurok, and the orchestra's manager George A. Kupen. This will be the group's first tour in five years. The offering, which is the 2nd of the "Blue" George Bishop Lane Series, will be a program which the members of the Lane Series Committee believe "will be the outstanding concert" and the "most musically rewarding evening" of the season.

Conducting the Chicago Symphony Orchestra will be Budapest-born Fritz Reiner, recognized as one of the foremost musicians of our time. With him will be Walter Hendl, associate conductor. During his illustrious musical career, both as an operatic and symphonic conductor, and an orchestra builder, Mr. Reiner has worked with the Cincinnati and Pittsburg Symphonies, the Philadelphia Orchestra, and The Metropolitan Opera, which he left in 1953 to assume the leadership as Musical Director of the Chicago Symphony. In addition, Mr. Reiner was the only conductor from America to be invited to take part in the opening festivities of the reconstructed Vienna State Opera.

The program for Sunday evening will be one mostly of modern music, with one Beethoven selection. The music for the evening is as follows:

Overture "Leonore", No. 3 Opus 72 - Beethoven.

Suite for Orchestra No. 1, Opus 3 - Bartok.
Allegro vivace
Poco odagio
Presto
Moderato
Molto vivace

Intermission

Divestimento, "The Fairy's Kiss" - Stravinsky.
Allegorical - Ballet.
Sinfonia
Danses Suisses
Scherzo
Pas de deux: Adagio --Variation -- Coda.

Interlude and Dance from "La Vida Breve" - Falla

Both the Stravinsky and Falla works have been recorded by Fritz Reiner and the Chicago

This orchestra, which is the third oldest Symphonic organization in America, preceeded only by the New York Philharmonic and the Boston Symphony, was founded in 1891 by Theodore Thomas, who conducted the group for more than 13 years. Judiciary Revised; Corrections Accepted

by Linda Slack

The final report written by the Committee on Jurisdiction of Student Court and Related Matters and submitted to the faculty and student body for consideration last May has accepted by the University Council.

At the meeting on July 23, 1958, the Deans of the Academic Colleges, Dean of Men, Dean of Women, Dean of Administration, and President Fey, chairman, made additions and corrections to the report based on the comments and letters received, and voted to adopt the recommendations on UVM Judiciary as part of the University Regulations.

Work has already been started to put into actuality the revised rules concerning authorities and jurisdictions of those offices and groups which deal with student violations of regulations. Organizations affected by these changes have been notified and throughout the year, they will receive help from the Jurisdiction Committee in enforcing them within the respective groups. Student Association is also considering an amendment to their Constitution and By-laws as a result of the new issues.

Since this report was accepted late in the summer, there was not time to include its content in the green pages of the Date Book which deal with University Regulations. However, a supplement is being prepared so that all may have a copy.

Dean Rowell, commenting on the report, said, "I believe that this is a step in the right direction. Only by use of it throughout the ensuing year will we be able to judge its workability. Perhaps modifications will be necessary. It is a start, though, in helping to clarify the responsibilities and authorities within the University".

The report, printed below, is the product of two years of deliberations by the Committee, of which Professor William Lewis was chairman. Bold faced material denotes additions or revisions recently made.

RECOMMENDATIONS

1. Standing Committee on Jurisdiction--The committee, recognizing the impossibility of so clearly defining jurisdiction that there would be no jurisdictional disputes, recommends the establishment of a Standing Committee on Jurisdiction.

A. The committee shall be appointed at the beginning of each school year

B. Composition
1. Dean of Women and Dean Men.
2. Faculty member to be chosen by Policy Committee of University Senate.
3. Three students.
a. One chosen by Mortar Board and Boulder Society jointly, but not necessarily a member of either group. A woman student shall be chosen in even-numbered years, a man student in odd-numbered years.
b. A member of Student Court chosen by the justices. A man student shall be chosen in even numbered years, a woman student in odd-numbered years.
c. One (man or woman) chosen by Student Association Council, but not necessarily a member of that group.

C. Responsibilities.
1. Temporary.
a. To serve in an advisory capacity to the Dean of Women and Dean of Men in implementing the recommendations of this report.
b. To explain the recommendations of this report to appropriate student groups
a. To decide what group shall have jurisdiction in cases of questionable or overlapping jurisdiction.
b. To decide questions of protest on jurisdiction.
c. To receive requests for appeals from decisions of any judicial body. After reviewing the request, the committee may either deny the appeal or establish an appropriate board and assign the case to it for re-hearing and decision.

II. Jurisdiction in non-academic cases--To prevent overlapping jurisdiction insofar as possible, the committee recommends the following

A. The Dean of Women and the Dean of Men should be responsible for handling all cases of misconduct in non-academic areas. These include

Plans Announced For Huge Four Day Homecoming Weekend

Sparked on Thursday, October 30, by a pep rally, UVM Homecoming - 1958 will be presented during a four day weekend. Most of the traditional events, plus several new features, are included on the program, which will last from Thursday until Sunday.

Plans should be made to attend "Autumn Enchantment," the title given to this year's Homecoming Ball, which will be held at Memorial Auditorium. During the intermission of the dance, the king and queen, chosen from the class of 1962, will be presented to the audience. The name of the band will be announced in the next issue of the CYNIC.

Saturday's schedule of events offers the newest, and what promises to be one of the biggest, attractions of the weekend. The Homecoming Peerade of floats is planned for after the dedication of Lafayette Hall, and before the football game. Since each fraternity and sorority will enter the competition, the floats will replace the usual display of posters. During the half time of the game the winners will receive trophies.

Also at half time of the St. Lawrence - UVM football game the parents or alumnus who have travelled the farthest distance to attend the festivities, and the parents who have, presently, the most children enrolled in the University, will receive "V" blankets.

Immediately after the game Prof. Francis Weinrich will play college music on the University carillon. At 4:30 the Animal Industry Club once again will hold its roast beef B.B.Q., to feed the hungry football fans.

Following the B.B.Q., at 7:30 PM, Mr. Greg Falls and the University Players' annual Vermont Varieties will go on stage at Memorial Auditorium. Originally scheduled for two performances at Southwick, the Varieties has been changed to accommodate a larger crowd at a more convenient time. Try-outs were held last week, and plans for a very entertaining show are well underway.

The pre-game sale of Mortar Board Mums, along with a number of fraternity and sorority open houses and parties help to round out a very eventful Homecoming - 1958.

October 30, 1958 - Thursday
7 P.M. - Pep Rally

October 31, 1958 - Friday
9 P.M. to 1 A.M. - Homecoming Ball ("Autumn Enchantment")

Sir John Gielgud Acclaimed By Reviewer

By Peter Scheffels

"A round unvarnished..." performance unblemished with a smooth flow of sense and consonance, words, gesture, treasured as no other we have seen. this and more was present as John Gielgud took the stage for the first in this year's performances for the George Bishop Lane Series. The program was framed in its three portions by Sir John's reading out of George Ryland's Shakespeare Anthology entitled Shakespeare's Ages of Man."

The three parts of the program represented some of Shakespeare's comments on youth, manhood and old age, which brought to the audience and myself a panorama of characters, and Gielgud slipped easily, marvelously, from one to another with the grace we would expect from a man who has been doing Shakespeare for thirty-five years.

But, there was a difference in the three sections. It is hard to say whether the material of the fourth part was weaker than the others or whether we may lay this at the feet of Sir John's explanation that this was his first appearance before an American audience in seven years. American audiences do not immediately warm up and the audience on Monday seemed to catch cold right at the end of the first part. It was not evidenced by their applause, and, I feel I can say the emotion they experienced, but by the coughing. Which is to say that I wonder at the degree of acceptance of such an evening. I wonder if, with the increase of television sets, we are less and less willing to accept the performance of a man who is twelve or thirty rows ahead of us, who's voice reaches us and is masterful, but whose face is a blob for the distance. It can't be said.

The second part gained over the first in fire. Hotspur, Richard the Third, Othello hummed and bellowed their manhood at us, with with speed, with the whole art of Shakespearean wonder and as Cassius, we were brought again to the time we saw his lash vengefully and frightened against Caesar, on another stage.

Part Three, on old age, brought us Claudio from Measure for Measure, Caesar himself, the ageing Henry the Fourth, and death-Hamlet, the dying Romeo, the Commedian Henry IV, and a superb death of Lear, and this third part of the program was the most eloquent. For Shakespeare's language takes a time to catch you in its grasp. At first it is antithetical, then warm, slowly and its lumminess no longer is sweet, and becoming suddenly perfect and right and proper for the occasion. We knew at the death of Lear, for example, that we had had an evening with a master actor whose knowing about Shakespeare runs deep and of people, runs true, even if there moments in which it could have been larger. Sir John Gielgud has not lost his moment on the stage. He is still very much there.

Schedule For Law Tests

The Law School Admission Test required of applicants for admission to a number of leading American law schools, will be given at more than 100 centers throughout the United States on the mornings of November 8, 1958, February 21, and April 18, 1959. During 1957-1958 over 14,000 applicants took this test, and their scores were sent to over 100 law schools.

A candidate must make separate application for admission to each law school of his choice and should inquire of each whether it wishes him to take the Law School Admission Test and when. Since many law schools select their freshman classes in the spring preceding their entrance, candidates for admission to next year's classes are advised ordinarily to take either the November or the February test, if possible.

The Law School Admission Test, prepared and administered by Educational Testing Service, features objective questions measuring verbal aptitudes and reasoning ability rather than acquired information. It cannot be "crammed" for. Sample questions and information regarding registration for and administration of the test are given in a Bulletin of Information.

The Bulletin (in which an application for the test is inserted) should be obtained four to six weeks in advance of the desired testing date from Law School Admission Test, Educational Testing Service, 20 Nassau Street, Princeton, New Jersey. Completed applications must be received at least two weeks before the desired testing date in order to allow ETS time to complete the necessary arrangements for each candidate.

Captain Charles T. Bailey, a veteran of World War II and Korea, has been assigned to the University of Vermont as an assistant professor of Military Science and Tactics in the Army ROTC Program. Captain Bailey, a native of Birmingham, Alabama, and a graduate of Georgia State College, entered the Army in 1940. He has served in Austria, Japan, and Germany, and participated in five campaigns with the 31st Infantry Division in the South Pacific during World War II. He was assigned to the 24th Infantry Division at the outbreak of the Korean conflict and fought in five campaigns with that unit. His many decorations include the Silver star, Bronze Star with two oak leaf clusters, the Purple Heart, and the Combat Infantryman's Badge with Star. His last assignment was with the Headquarters of the Georgia Military District in Atlanta.

Captain Bailey will instruct members of the Senior Class of the ROTC Program in the subject of personnel management, military administration and justice, combat operations, logistics and staff procedures. Captain Bailey, his wife and two children will reside in Essex Junction.

The assignment of Master Sergeant Joel F. Surrell, a native of Rutland, as an assistant instructor in the Army ROTC Program at the University of Vermont was announced recently by Lt. Colonel Eston T. White, Professor of Military Science and Tactics at UVM. M/Sgt. Surrell will assist in the instruction of the basic course students in such subjects as map reading, military history, drill, and the various small-caliber weapons of the infantry.

Entering the Army in 1940, M/Sgt. Surrell served in the 1st and 76th Infantry Divisions during World War II. From 1946 to 1951 he served as a member of the Immigration Section of the Port of Yokohama, Japan. Upon his return to the United States he was assigned as an instructor in ROTC at the Gloucester High School, Glocester, Mass. His last assignment prior to arriving at UVM was with the United States Army Advisory Group in Korea.

M/Sgt. Surrell, his wife and two children have established a residence in Essex Junction.

It is further requested that the photographic section of your office schedule dates on which subject individuals may have photographs taken for these releases.

Medical Tests

Vermonters who plan to take the Medical College Admissions Examination, which will be held at the University of Vermont kn Oct. 28, have just two weeks to register for the tests, according to Dr. John C. Huden, UVM's director of testing.

Candidates must register with the Educational Testing Service, 20 Nassau Street, Princeton, N.J., by Oct. 14.

Prepared and administered by the Educational Testing Service at the direction of the Association of American Medical Colleges, the examination consists of tests of general scholastic ability, a test of the candidates understanding of modern society, and an achievement test in science.

The Medical College Admissions Examination is so designed that most candidates will only answer about 50 per cent of the questions correctly. No one is expected to achieve a perfect score, and there are no established "passing" or "failing" grades.

Test scores are used by medical schools to supplement other available data for determining admissions, and are not available to candidates. Scores compare an individual's performance with that of other candidates taking the test, and the report to the medical schools shows the relation, of an individual s score to the scores obtained by other candidates.

Vermonters registering with the Educational Testing Service by the Oct. 14 deadline will receive admission tickets for UVM's Oct. 28 examination. Registrants should report to Room 24, Hills Hall, The University of Vermont at 8 a.m. on that date. The tests will begin at 8:15 a.m.

Testing Service Announce Dates Of Exams

The Graduate Record Examinations, required of applicants for admission to a number of graduate schools and by an increasing number of donors of graduate fellowships, will be administered at examination centers throughout the country four times in the coming year, Educational Testing Service has announced. During 1957-58 more than 15,000 students took the GRE in partial fulfillment of admission requirements of graduate schools which prescribed it.

This fall candidates may take the GRE on Saturday, November 15. In 1959, the dates are January 17. ETS advises each applicant to inquire of the graduate school of his choice which of the examinations he should take on which dates. Applicants for graduate school fellowships are often asked to take the designated examinatiins in the fall administration.

The GRE tests offered in these nationwide programs include a test of general scholastic ability and advance level tests of achievement in sixteen different subject matter fields. According to ETS, candidates are permitted to take the Aptitude Test and/or one of the Advanced Tests.

A Bulletin of Information (in which an application is inserted) provides details of registration and administration as well as sample questions, and may be obtained from college advisers or directly from Educational Testing Service, 30 Nassau Street, Princeton, New Jersey, or P.O. Box 27896, Los Angeles 27, California. A completed application must reach the ETS office at least fifteen days before the date of the administration for which the candidate is applying.

Business

The Admission Test for Graduate Study in Business, required for entrance by a number of graduate business schools or divisions throughout the country, will be offered on four dates during the coming year, according to Educational Testing Service, which prepares and administers the test. During 1957-58, many students took the test in partial satisfaction of admission requirements of graduate business schools which prescribed it. Among these institutions are the graduate business schools or divisions of the following universities:

Carnegie Institute of Technology, Columbia University, Harvard University, Massachusetts Institute of Technology, Northwestern University, Rutgers University, Seton Hall, Syracuse University, University of Chicago, University Michigan, University of Pennsylvania, University of Virginia, Washington University (St. Louis)

A candidate must make separate application for admission to each business school of his choice and should inquire of each whether it wishes him to take the Admission Test for Graduate Study in Business and when. Since many business schools select their entering classes in the spring preceding their entrance, candidates for admission to the 1959 classes are advised to take the test at as early an administration as possible.

The Admission Test for Graduate Study in Business is not designed to test specific knowledge in specialized academic subjects. Normal under-graduate training should provide sufficient general knowledge to answer the test questions. Sample questions and information regarding registration for and administration of the test are given in a Bulletin of Information.

The tests will be administered on February 5, 1959. Applications and fees must be filed with the Admission Test for Graduate Study in Business, Educational Testing Service, 20 Nassau Street, Princeton, New Jersey, at least two weeks before the testing date desired in order to allow ETS time to complete the necessary testing arrangements.

"Why I Don't Hardly Like Seniors"

by Jules Older

I hope ya'll don't get the impression that I came to school all set against upperclassmen. Why, when I came here I didn't even know what one was. But I found out pretty quick.

There was this here freshman week with nobody but us underclass people, and no senior fellas so I didn't know there was anything wrong with 'em.

Only then we had a dance. Just as sure as maple syrup and as green as a pool table I walked in - like a southern chicken bein' led to the fryer. I started dancin' with a tall blonde. She starts tellin' me how homesick she is for the folks in Springfield, and I figger I'm doin' all right, when in walks trouble. A fella' 'bout nine feet tall, wavy hair, and wearin' one of those green jackets with a VS on it comes sauntering up and kinda' whispers to her, "Might I have the pleasure of the next dance?" I was gonna say something when I noticed that she was breathing funny, like a thirsty dog, and not talkin' about Springfield any more.

So I just snuck off into a corner. There was a cute little girl there with red eyes, and I started talkin' to her. We got to arguing about who came from a smaller city (she was countin' cows), and I dared her to step outside to Indian wrestle the point. But as soon as we got out, there was another big guy settin' in a sports car. "Hop in", he says, and in one hops, with nary a goodbye.

Later, when three more seniors had relieved me of two more girls and my wallet, I decided it was time to go. Just then a car pulls up and another classman pokes his head out.

"Lift?" he says.

Well, thinks I, maybe they're not so bad after all.

Then he turned on the meter.

"Sing A Song"

Last week we looked into the prospects of drumming up school spirit. To stay on this trite line, the next step in helping to build up the spirit in this college is an "alma mater". Just what is an alma mater and why do we need it?

An alma mater is a traditional school song which is sung at all traditional events and all events in which the entire school participates, such as a pep rally or ball game or a mass meeting. The need for this song was made obvious at the pep rally on Friday and the football game Saturday. Sure, we have a fight song, but that is not the traditional alma mater, such as Maine's "Drink a Toast," or Yale's "Whiffenpoof Song." We realize that we will not gain a famous college song as such, but there must be someone who can come up with a better idea than "Champlain" which is a lake in Vermont and New York, and any college in either state could sing to "the lovely lake, Champlain."

This song does not bring a surging beat, a forceful melody, and overpowering emotions to us and, therefore, we do not sing it very often. In fact the only time we use it is during Frosh Orientation week, and then it is never used again. Let me quote Max Ansbacher in one of his editorials:

> Most of the things which a good university should have cost money and we at UVM must accept this as the reason for many of our wants. A good song costs nothing. Can not we then have at least this one sign of school spirit?

Six months after the publication of this editorial, action was taken and two alma maters were presented to UVM with one set of words. Tell us where are these songs and what happened to them?

There is a music department, band, choir, orchestra, pep committee, three men's and women's honoraries, SA IFC, Pan-Hell, and other organizations, yet not one of these have helped to bring a song to UVM as our alma mater. We of the CYNIC feel it is time to begin and find a method to build up this type of spirit. We are willing to be the first to send representatives to a committee which we could call the "Alma Mater Committee". Please, some of the other organizations help us out: let's get some representation from a few of the above listed organizations to form this committee to bring UVM an alma mater.

The Apology

These are not excuses for our mistakes, but this is an honest apology from this editor and his staff. To Senator Kennedy, Sranyi-Unger, other names we misspelled, or to the notices we left out, etc. we are sorry. To Bob Kelmowitz and Peggy Day, who are the co-chairmen of Homecoming, and not Bob Kuhns and Betty Wilder as we mentioned, we also ask your forgiveness. Bob Kuhns and Betty are co-chairmen of publicity.

This is a new year and many new faces in school as well as our staff. Our problem is to break in new members to give them the needed experience that we hope will be attained. The mistakes are our fault, but we shall rectify them in the future.

Thanks also to the parents who sent in over 250 subscriptions, and we hope you received your issue on time. We mail these issues out to all of you on the Thursday that they are printed, therefore, the late complaint must be sent to the Post Office.

Uninformed

Hi - All you talented people!

The first line might (!) confuse you, but if you have enough curiousity to read a little further, you'll find out what I'm talking about.

"Talent! Me! Oh no.! "But I say "yes," if you can honestly give a positive reply to the following questions:

1. Before getting out of bed (or into), do you go through different contortions? (a plain old yawn will do)
2. Do you react physically at our football games? (eg. standing up and frantically waving your arms at the nasty referee)
3. Do you sometimes explain what you have to say with the help of an arm, hand or leg movement? (e.g. If you don't know, ask the ladies!)
4. Can you walk or even waddle?

If you've truthfully answered yes to one or more of the following questions, then you definitely are among the talented few. (?) After learning that you're talented, I assume you'd like to know what kind of talent you possess. That's a reasonable inquiry, but if you want me to tell you, I suggest that you sit down and strap yourself in.

You are, what the "World of Culture" calls -- "A Born Modern Dancer." Now, if you stop laughing, I'll explain myself. Modern dancing is actually a person's response and interpretation of various situations. And we of Dance Workshop would like to have YOU and your talent join us.

Since you know what you can offer us, I'd like to tell you what we can offer you. During the fall season, the group hopes to visit different colleges, including many of the New England colleges, Dartmouth, McGill and Queen's University of Ontario, Canada.

Besides participating in the Vermont Varieties, "Dance Workshop" has the honor of dancing in the "University Players" production of Brigadoon. Last semester, the club put on such a wonderful show for the Fine Arts Festival that many of the dances were performed on television.

Being a member of "Dance Workshop" makes you eligible for "The Orchesis Modern Dance National Honorary." This group plans to visit New York City and Montreal to see different types of dance programs from the modern dance jazz concerts to the more formal ballet.

Therefore, I'd like to ask you once more -- "Can you walk or even waddle?" If you're able to, then you can dance, and we'd like to have YOU dance with us.

Yours truly,

Janie Leon
Publicity Manager

Hello there. Since last week's paper, I've been getting some comments about my first column. I appreciate these and I will try and improve on my mistakes. Keep the comments rolling in, whether constructive or "destructive", and any other news you feel might be worthwhile. Thanks.

Intermittently throughout my column this week, you will find some "Critical notations from famous diaries". Try this one for size.

April 18, 1775. Wild horses couldn't drag me out of the house tonight. I'm beat, Paul Revere.

Recently at UVM, it seems that the frosh rush has slackened off. This past weekend I even saw some upperclass women with dates. At curfew time, you can even find a place to park by the new dorms. That restaurant downtown is empty at ten o'clock when it should be packed. Girls are sitting home and studying. Can you imagine that?? I don't know what has happened. I really didn't mean to scare you with my remarks last week. Give the girls a chance to prove themselves. Aw, c'mon fellas.

Clearing House

By Peter Schoffstall

Good afternoon.

Squelch Dept.: The following note arrived last Friday after my inability to see correctly at Club Carnival:

Just to clear matters up in the Clearing House, since the reporter evidently did not have his glasses on during the Klub Karnival, Round Table most certainly did have a table and added many names to its mailing list (we were not looking for sheep but interested participants in enlightening discussions!)

The Dean of The University of Virginia on that institution's lack of cut system! "We look at total cuts and we don't much care whether absenses are excused or not." UV has ripened to a mature age on this question.

The present policy at UVM reflects departmental quirks of trust. (I've only read one cut policy announcement in my classes this year.) Generally the system imposes the law of "three-and-no-more," and three or four or twenty or one, the policy is facade not real, not valuable and not generally necessary. Why not just discard a dislocated system? Save the fellow who prints little pink cards, but the attendance at the infirmary and stop being stodgy? Let the individual professor judge. Normally he's intelligent enough so this wouldn't be much of a strain, and if he is "over cut", judicially or even without a cut system, he should be asking himself and his students what his trouble is.

Concluding, then: maturity and responsibility to self

Parisian Interlude

By Audrey Gordon

Editors Note: Audrey Y. Gordon, a Junior at UVM, is on a leave of absence this year to study in Europe. Audrey, once News Editor of the CYNIC now holds the position of Foreign Correspondent. She will send us her column whenever she finds time in her busy schedule to enlighten us on various issues and news overseas.

My first column, contrary to its title, shall not concern Paris, but rather Belgium, where I spent my first week abroad. At the present time, the word Belgium mainly brings to mind the world's fair, and thus, I write to you about L'Exposition.

On first sight, the Fair is extremely impressive. The architectural design is the contemporary vein, and each Pavillion is a credit to its particular country, However, as one proceeds to enter the various pavillions disappointment may set in.

The main attractions of the fair are the U.S. and Russian pavillions. Even in the friendly atmosphere of the fair-grounds where people of all nationalities walk together, the external competition between these two great nations is evident.

If the purpose of the fair is to show the people of other nations what one's country is capable of and what is happening at the present time in this country, then America has failed to accomplish this.

The U.S. stressed more the splendor of the nation, rather than the community life, social benefits, medicine and educational system. Although we cannot profess to excellence in the above-mentioned, we can at least

ROTC Societies Plan Mil. Ball

The Arnold Air Society And Ethan Allen Rifles held a meeting Wednesday, October 1, to discuss their joint presentation of the 1958 Military Ball. Plans were made concerning the hiring of a band, the place where the ball will be held, the contest for Queen, publicity, ticket sales, and decorations. Combined committees of Air Force and Army R.O.T.C. were appointed to handle the various aspects. The military societies are doing everything in their power to not only make the Military Ball successful but to keep student ticket prices down to a minimum. The Ball will be held November 14.

Indignant

I am an indignant freshman. I have just returned from the Vermont-Maine football game, and I am appalled at the lack of spirit shown by our student body. Despite the almost frantic efforts of our cheerleaders to arouse enthusiasm among the spectators, school spirit fell far short of the mark. However, it must be noted that there are a lot of green freshman on campus, and they haven't yet mastered the art of cheering. But how then would you explain the fact that the upperclassmen sounded more like a group of mourners then a spirited crowd?

A step in the right direction would be the formation of a card cheering section. This is obviously well suited to a school where the students are afraid to make any noise. Steps are now being taken to initiate such a plan.

However, this is only a finger in the dike. Our campus is still not safe from the threatening sea of apathy.

Very truly yours,

David Shiverick

UVM'S Theatre Being Built

It's difficult to find a pleasant note in the razing of an historic landmark, but there's a lone bright spot in the passing of the old Boston Opera House.

The building's furnishings are helping to establish one of New England's newest theaters, the University of Vermont Arena Theater, which will be the showcase for the University Players, UVM's theatrical group.

Seats from the opera house were purchased to help outfit the theater, which will provide a happy combination of the old and the new.

Presently under construction at the Robert Hull Fleming Museum, it is custom-designed to the needs of UVM Thespians.

The new flexible facilities will permit the presentation of in-the-round as well as conventionally-staged productions. Aiming at intimacy between players and audience, no seat in the new theater is more than six rows from the stage.

Another of its features is a well-equipped control room, complete with hi-fi sound effects equipment, an extensive lighting control board with cross-connecting panel, a stage manager and director's booth, and two-way windows which allow technicians to observe presentations without distracting the audience.

Work on the theater is expected to be completed by mid-November.

Change in Policy

Last Monday the Under Secretary of State Christian Herter made a speech which showed the first sign of an enormous change in the Far East Policy of the United States. The United States hinted that it was ready to negotiate a settlement with the Chinese Communists about the Taiwan Strait. This is a complete reverse in policy. The U.S. has had for many years an unbendable policy towards the Chinese Reds and if this step is taken it will be our first step in recognizing the Chinese Communist Government. The reason for the drastic change arose because of the alarm of our allies; that the U.S. was supposedly preparing for a military showdown in what was regarded as the wrong issue and in the wrong place.

Mister Herter stated that the offshore islands were not "strategically defensible" which John Foster Dulles enlarged upon at his recent press conference.

Thus far no evident physical changes have occurred, but we do know that there has been a radical change in the Administration Far East Policy and we are anxiously awaiting the outcome.

Congressional Elections

One month from now elections will take place for the entire House and 35 seats in the Senate (including 2 new seats for Alaska). The mid-term election is traditionally against the party in control of the White House. Vice President Nixon is campaigning fervently to break the tradition.

Fifth French Republic

France's Fifth Republic came into being last Sunday when there was an overwhelming majority for deGaulle's new Constitution. France's communists, who opposed the new Constitution were the biggest losers. Within the next four months the new government will be set up. The new President, who will undoubtedly be deGaulle, will be elected for a seven year term. The new assembly will also be elected within the next two months.

Nuclear Tests

This past Friday, Moscow confirmed that she had once again resumed Nuclear Tests after having stopped them since last March. In the meantime the United States and Great Britain will cease testing of nuclear weapons on October 31st. The Western Powers made the stipulation that the test suspension would remain in effect only if the Russians did not resume tests after that date, that an agreement on overall disarmament measures was begun and that the Geneva talks showed signs of progress on controls.

Thus we have the major happenings that occurred this week in our Wide World.

Panhel News

Sunday, October 12, is the annual Panhellenic Workshop. Girls representing all the sororities on campus are invited to gather at the Alpha Delta Pi House from 2:30 - 4:30 p.m. to discuss and attempt to solve common chapter problems.

There will be individual workshops for sorority presidents, secretaries, treasurers, social, pledge, rush, and scholarship chairmen. A chairman will preside at each meeting. Following this, the group will convene for a general discussion. Refreshments will be served. Nancy Dana is the overall chairman for the event.

A fetching young lady from New York was tripping down a street in Bogota, Columbia, minding her own business when a star-struck "bogotano" picked up her trail. He followed her for a block or two, breathing gentle compliments. She became angrier each moment, and at the end of the third block flounced over to a traffic policeman. "That man on the corner has been following me!" she announced indignantly.

The cop looked at the man, then surveyed the seething young lady. He took off his cap and bowed. "Senorita, if I were not on duty, I would follow you, too."

Miss Bachman to Visit for Placement

Miss Rosemary Bachman, Assistant Director of the Harvard-Radcliffe Program in Business Administration, will visit UVM on Thursday, October 16, under the auspices of the Placement Service.

The purpose of Miss Bachman's visit is the showing of a movie which illustrates a special graduate year of study for women who have taken a liberal arts degree. Women from the Senior and Junior classes are invited to attend the movie, which will be shown at 3:30 p.m. in 239 Waterman. Miss Bachman will be available for informal interviews at the Placement Service from 10:00 a.m. on, but it will not be necessary to take an interview in order to attend the movie.

from all over the country for junior administrative positions in business, industry, and social service institutions. Among the courses offered by the one-year graduate program are human relations, finance, marketing, production, report writing, economics, and personnel. A unique feature of the program is that it integrates a six-weeks' full-time job assignment into the nine-month academic course. This provides young women who may not have had work experience with an opportunity to try out a field in which they may wish to seek a permanent job upon completion of the program.

Instruction is based on the case method as it has been developed by the Harvard Business School. The faculty of the program are members of the faculty of the Harvard Business School.

Miss Bachman is a graduate of the University of Michigan. After completing the Harvard-Radcliffe Program in 1954 she was employed for two years by the S.S. Pierce Company of Boston. She was then appointed to the post of Assistant Director of the Harvard-Radcliffe Program.

Further information and material may be obtained in the Placement Service, 16 Waterman. Co-eds may also be interested in reading "Your Campus Leader, What Now?" in the current issue of Mademoiselle, describing the Harvard-Radcliffe Program.

ROBERT H. SWISHER, B.S.E.E., GROVE CITY COLLEGE, '54, SAYS:

"I like my job. Here's why."

"I'm a radio transmission engineer for Bell Telephone Company of Pennsylvania. My work is interesting and full of variety, and I get all the responsibility I can handle. Have a look at today's assignment, for example —and see for yourself."

"8:30 a.m. I'm at my desk applying a new method for overcoming interference on Pittsburgh's mobile radio channels. It involves operating inactive channels on reduced power."

"10:45 a.m. Before any modifications can be made, it's important that I check apparatus and wiring options. That's what I'm doing here at the Remote Control Terminal equipment."

"1:30 p.m. After lunch, I take a company car out to the transmitter tower site. Here I check wiring and explain our plan to one of our mobile radio maintenance men."

"3:15 p.m. I review my proposed modifications of auxiliary control circuits with Supervisor Sid Graul. Now I'll prepare work orders, and next week we'll make operational tests."

"Final phase. The operational test is made from an actual mobile radio unit. I'll make test calls and monitor the channels from various points within the Pittsburgh area."

"See what I mean? I really get to 'carry the ball.' Soon I'll be taking a special course in advanced electronics at Bell Labs—a great opportunity. As I said —I like my job."

Conference Plans Set

On April 9, 10, and 11, the Vermont Conference will bring to UVM something which its faculty and library cannot give it.

The topic, "New Directions," will allow prominent speakers to discuss the newest developments in their respective fields.

Unlike previous years when the topic set a definite limit upon the speaker's presentations, "New Directions", the Committee hopes, will refrain from putting the speakers into such a straight jacket, and will instead give them the liberty to speak on the subjects in which they are most interested.

Co-Co Meloney and Leroy Meshol are the Co-Chairmen of the Student Committee. The Treasurer is Sheila O'Toole, Secretary - Peggy Link. Bob Kuhns and Fred Mandell are in charge of publicity, and Fred Sharff will handle arrangements. Professor Raul Hilberg of the Political Science Department is the head of the Faculty Advisory Committee. Other members are Professor R. Cochron, English Department; Mr. M. Haviland, Director of Libraries; Professor A. M. Huq, Department of Commerce and Economics; and Professor A. W. Sadler, Department of Philosophy and Religion.

SAIL ON, SAIL ON!

Tomorrow (October 12) is just another day to you. You get up in the morning, wash your face, do all the ordinary things you ordinarily do. You go to your classes, study at your desk, eat your meals in the dining hall, come home to your room for more study, go to bed. And if you give one little thought to the fact that October 12 is Columbus Day, you're not.

Yet surely Columbus deserves more than that. Let us therefore pause for a moment and retell the story of this gloriously stirring saga.

Christopher Columbus was born in Genoa on August 25, 1451. His father, Knute T. Columbus, was in the three-minute auto wash game. His mother, Eleanor (Swifty) Columbus, was a sprinter. Christopher was an only child, except for his four brothers and eight sisters. With his father busy all day at the auto wash and his mother constantly away at track meets, young Columbus was left pretty much to his own devices. However, the lad did not sulk or brood. He was an avid reader and spent all his waking hours immersed in a book. Unfortunately, there was only one book in Genoa at the time—Care of the Horse by Aristotle—and after several years of reading Care of the Horse, Columbus grew restless. So when rumor reached him that there was another book in Barcelona, off he ran as fast as his fat little legs would carry him.

The rumor also proved false. The only book in Barcelona was Cuidar un Caballo by Aristotle, which proved to be nothing more than a Spanish translation of Care of the Horse.

Bitterly disappointed, Columbus began to dream of going to India where, according to legend, there were thousands of books. But the only way to go to India was on horseback, and after so many years of reading Care of the Horse, Columbus never wanted to ride a horse again. Then a new thought struck him: perhaps it was possible to get to India by sea!

Fired with his revolutionary new idea, Columbus raced to the court of Ferdinand and Isabella on his little fat legs (Columbus was pregnant with little fat legs all his life) and pleaded his case with such fervor that the rulers were persuaded.

On October 12, 1492, Columbus set foot on the New World. The following year he returned to Spain with a cargo of wonders never before seen in Europe—spices and metals and plants and flowers and—most wondrous of all—tobacco! Oh, what a sensation tobacco caused in Europe! The filter had long since been invented by Aristotle, curiously enough, but nobody knew what to do with it. Now Columbus, the great Discoverer, made still another great discovery: he took a filter, put tobacco in front of it, and invented the world's first filter cigarette!

Through the centuries filters have been steadily improved and so has tobacco, until today we have achieved the ultimate in the filter cigarette—Marlboro, of course! Oh, what a piece of work is Marlboro! Great tobacco, great filter, great smoke! And so, great friends, when next you enjoy a fine Marlboro Cigarette, give a thought to the plucky Genoese Christopher Columbus whose brave and perseverant spirit made the Marlboro lovely thing possible.

And thank Columbus too for Philip Morris Cigarettes, for those who want the best in non-filter smoking. Philip Morris joins Marlboro in bringing you these columns throughout the school year.

do not come out of rules. Granted, rules are one way, but they are not the best resort. Mature results will not come out of childish methods; Men and Women do not come, immediately out of a nursery school; they do come out of boundless challenge to their own personalities, that element of us that we'll have to live with right to the last breath. Today, more than ever we need to be strong, not regulated. Today we're pretty soft.

New Yorker Dept.: John Teal, new mentor of Soc. 104, "Cultural Anthropology" makes an interesting appearance as the subject of the current "Profiles" series in the New Yorker magazine. Mr. T. knows all about musk ox and and Eskimos, you'll recall.

New Directions: The Vermont Conference Committee has named its program theme for next year (Spring). The story (p.--) on this is illusive. The fact is that VCC has not chosen speakers and so is pretty vague about what will be said. This is only reasonable. Other facets are unreasonable.

In Clearing House last week I implied some disagreement within the ranks of the Committee, or some element of indecision. In saying "Vermont Conference plays: "What's in a Program?" I was basing that tease line on information which lead me to believe that the Committee, or one of the members of the Committee, was considering reshaping the format of the 1959 Conference away from those of former years. I was not "sharp-shooting" since I knew that the possibility of change was only proposed and that I would have to wait until this week to discover the plan. Well, it's this week and the story is out and I am not enlightened. My immediate point of question lies in lengthy incredulity in that such a really intelligent and imaginative group of people could come up with such a hackneyed title---and what will the publishers of the same name think?

Lost Horizons appears as the first film on the Fleming Museum Association Film Series next Wednesday, starts at 8 and stars the late Ronald Coleman. It costs, as does the Goodrich Classical Club's showing of Oedipus Rex tonight and tomorrow night at -- (in/at)---------.

Newer Directions: I would like to suggest a congress of the language clubs on campus to sponsor a foreign film festival to fit within the framework of the Annual Fine Arts Festival. The potential is great and there's good change that SA, COSA and the Vending and Kake Walk Committees might see it that way, too.

Next Week: The beginning of a series on what we are at UVM and a few comparisons, commencing with the latter.

See you in the lines.

Outing Club Has Mt. Day

Sunday, September 28, was the Outing Club Mountain Day. At 9:15 a.m. twenty-six [illegible] enthusiasts left the campus for Mount Mansfield. At the Long Trail just east of Smugglers' Notch, they started their ascent of Vermont's highest mountain. The majority of the group made it to the top--the chin, but a few stayed behind at Taft Lodge which was about two-thirds the total 2.3 mile climb. At top the weather was cold and windy; and, thick clouds made the visibility extremely poor. However, a short distance below Taft Lodge the cloud line ended and a good view of the surrounding country could be enjoyed. On returning from the top, the group split--one party descending the same way as they came; the other, Profanity Trail. Both sections returned at Taft Lodge for refreshments of apple juice and donuts before the final trip to the bottom.

This year's Mountain Day turnout was small because of the poor weather. The event, one of longstanding, was originally a University holiday and everybody made the hike. In recent years, the Day has been sponsored by the Student Association and run by the Outing Club.

This Saturday the Outing Club will hold a square dance in the Student Lounge, adding a touch of variety to their planned activities of the year.

Graduate Awards Directory

Complete information on how to obtain graduate study funds, ranging from $200 up to $10,000, is now available in the second volume of the WORLD-WIDE GRADUATE AWARD DIRECTORY. Over 250 universities and foundations from almost every State, and over 100 foreign universities have sent information to be included in this new volume.

Among the awards are many that have gone begging in former years because qualified applicants didn't know about them. This guide to graduate study awards is published annually by The Advancement and Placement Institute to provide the needed communication link between administrators of assistance programs and potential candidates.

This DIRECTORY is the only comprehensive global compilation of graduate awards devoted entirely to American scholars, educators, librarians, scientists, and social scientists. Volume II presents completely new and additional data from Volume I which was published in 1957.

Current information about the fellowships, assistantships, scholarships, loans, prizes, and self-help programs includes candidates' prerequisites, place of application and descriptions of the study programs.

Copies of both volumes of the WORLD-WIDE GRADUATE AWARD DIRECTORY may be examined at many graduate schools, university placement or dean's offices, libraries, or may be ordered from the Institute, Box 99H, Greenpoint Station, Brooklyn 22, N.Y. The price is $3.00 for each volume or $5.00 for the two volumes.

The Advancement and Placement Institute, a non-commercial professional and advisory service in the education field, has been publishing the monthly, non-fee teacher placement journal, CRUSADE, since 1950. The Institute also issues the annual WORLD-WIDE SUMMER PLACEMENT DIRECTORY, a comprehensive guide to summer employment for college students and educators.

SA Committee Advises Clubs

The Student Advisory Committee is authorized by the Senate to have oversight of the student organizations and to advise them as the need arises. It consists of eight members of the various faculties, and ex-officio, the Dean of Administration, Assistant Dean of Women, the Dean of Men, a representative of the Treasurer's office, and Coordinator of Student Activities. They welcome two students, the presidents of WSGA and Student Association, to attend the meetings with full privileges of discussion.

The most important routine activities of the Student Advisory Committee are those involved in supervising the system of advisors to approximately 80 student organizations, approving new or revised constitutions, and encouraging student groups to fulfill organizational requirements and responsibilities.

Results of the meeting held on October 3rd were these:

1) The appointment of subcommittees.
2) A report of the fact that the University Council has approved the following constitutions:
 a) UVM Chess Club
 b) UVM Psychology Club
 c) UVM Class of 1959
3) Also, certain constitutions are still unfinished and pending. They are:
 a) Class of 1961
 b) Class of 1960
 c) Vermont Student Nurses Association
 d) Future Farmers
 e) German Club
 f) Espanol
4) They also moved for the formation of a committee appointed by the chairman of Student Advisory Committee to be composed of four students and four faculty members with COSA as chairman. The purpose of such a committee is to study the non-athletic extra-curricular program.
5) Plans for Homecoming, under the direction of the Staff & Sandal, and Key & Serpent organizations are well under way.
6) The Alumni, the Dean of Men, and the Dean of Women, along with various students are working on a program for parents at Homecoming.

THE PROBLEM CORNER

Referring to last week's problem, the number which should be added to 1, 6 and 21 so that the resulting numbers will form a geometric progression is 1⅛.

Correct solutions to this problem were submitted by Peter DeRose, Allan Greenfield, John K. Holmes, Mrs. John H. Kent, Barbara Noble, Robert S. Poulios, Mrs. Norma Shortsleeve and Marvin Vipler.

Problem

A rectangular barn 40 feet long and 30 feet wide stands in a luxurious level meadow. A cow is tethered to one corner of the barn by a rope which is 50 feet long. Over what area can the cow graze (Outside the barn, of course)?

Leave solutions to these problems at the office of Professor Schoonmaker, Room 341, Waterman, no later than Monday of the week following publication of the problem.

Two Chicago matrons stopped to look at a bookstore display. "There's a book on 'How to Torture Your Husband'" said one. "I don't need that," the other replied, "I have my own system."

at the University and at seven other universities in Argentina, was a demonstration against a bill that would allow private universities to issue degrees and professional titles. This was the prorogative of the state U's. Well, you students of this state university, why do we allow private universities to grant the same degrees we are granted? Let's rebel, like our fellow "hot sketch" South American students. There is a union for almost every occupation now. Why not form a student union? I'm sure there are a few minor things that we students don't want to, but have to tolerate, or else.

December 15, 1776. Scouts reports the river full of ice. Maybe I'd better call this whole thing off. Who wants to go to Trenton anyhow? George Washington.

This week I would like to mention a movie I saw recently. It's "Cat on a Hot Tin Roof". It was terrific and with a cast like it has, I'm sure none of you will want to miss it. Don't.

National Hour Exam and Quiz Month is Drawing near. All profs take heed. Make sure you schedule them the day after all vacations and big weekends as you have done in the past. Naturally our minds are the freshest. It always seems that this ritual starts so early in the year. It's not early though. Just imagine, only six and a half weeks to Thanksgiving. So long for now.

[illegible] to attend the Expo and get the predominant American views. I think this is a misrepresentation of the American man on the street who supports the Government's impression of America. These impressions are not favorable and rather more resulting hostility against America.

It is the other hand the aim of the fair was to be different from Russia in order many people to believe that America excelled. One of the most obvious differences was in the Art although I disliked both America showed more expression in Art and acceptance of any creative kind of Art. The Russian Art adhered to the classical form and did not permit freedom for the artist.

"America - The Land of The Free"

"Russia - Imprisonment by Regulation"

America showed the conveniences and luxuries of the individual in the home. The Russians displayed little. Whereas America tries to convey the idea that the main concern of the nation is the people, Russia outwardly admits the first concern of the nation is the nation.

However, much credit should be given to the U.S. Although the art work was the worst possible the sculpture was placed with much taste. The plan of the Pavillion was excellent, there was little confusion, and many of the exhibits were decorative and instructive.

Russia's Pavillion, like America's, was Political propaganda act, but much more obvious. She tried to impress upon the people the happy state of the individual living in the Communist environment. However, the Dreamhouse is in bad need of repair. The cracks in this illusion can readily be seen throughout the Pavillion.

Most impressive of all was the overwhelming statue of Lenin as one walked in and Sputnick. Most of the attention was paved to mechanical excellence, production increase and a superior educational system. I concede to all three points.

Contrary to popular opinion, I was most impressed by the Mexican Pavillion. The Art, sculpture, and photography displays were excellent; the building was planned for efficiency and beauty.

On the other hand, in the French Pavillion I felt as though I was a rat in a Skinner experiment trying to get out of a maze. They didn't even use cheese to give me a clue at a turning point. I found it to be most distasteful.

Mon Dieu! I'm not being faithful to France! Well, if the French want to kill me for it, the Algerians will be on my side.

(EDITOR'S NOTE: This is an article by Marlene Parad[illegible] Grand Isle, Vermont's [illegible] International Farm [illegible] Exchange delegate to Ire[illegible]

My first stop in the Republic of Ireland is in Newca[illegible] County Wicklow, with the Valentine family of Leamore Park. The land borders the Irish Sea, making it a beautiful spot. Vermonters often say, "If you don't like the weather, wait a minute and it will change." This doesn't hold true in Ireland, however, for the weather has been rainy all summer. Since I arrived June 27, we have only had about two weeks of good weather. Are the Irish farmers discouraged? They certainly are.

Moisture Wipes Out Crops

In a normal year the harvest would begin about August 10, but this year it didn't start until September 4 and 5. Because of this delay many crops have been ruined. The Valentines had eight acres of sugar beets which were wiped out. As I walked through the fields the other day, I saw bales of hay lying almost covered by new grass.

In southern Ireland much wheat, barley and corn - or oats - is grown. Leamore Park consists of 220 acres, 80 of which are bog and being reclaimed slowly from the Irish Sea. The Valentines also lease 90 acres of land around Newcastle. They have 80 acres of spring wheat, ten acres of barley, and eight acres of corn.

All the corn will be kept on the farm for feeding, and most of the barley will be sent to Guinness' Brewery in Dublin for making stout or beer. The wheat will go to flour mills. Grains have been flattened by heavy rainfalls. This situation along with the wet land makes it very difficult for the Valentines to get their large combine onto the fields. Mills are rejecting much of the wheat because the grains have started to sprout and the moisture content is too high. To keep the moisture content down to 21 per cent, the required amount, the Valentines have just installed a grain dryer. More fortunate than many, they will be able to sell their wheat at a reasonable price.

Irish farmers seem to be faced with a long, hard winter. A report in "The Irish Times" on September 9, described the situation:

"The almost constant rain of the past few months, particularly along the east coast, has caused much speculation as to the outcome of the harvest. The majority of the wheat offered by farmers to the mills have been rejected because -- of its quality. The position was described yesterday as extremely grave. Even should the weather show a considerable improvement, yields will be down."

If we do get any good weather, the Irish farmers will work late into the night to attempt to save the grain crops.

A New Hampshire farmer had been urged to attend the funeral of his neighbor's third wife. "But I'm not going'," he announced to his own wife.

"Goodness sakes, why not?" she asked.

"Well, Mary, I'm beginnin' to feel kinda awkward about goin' so often without anything of the sort to ask him back to."

X-C Team Tops RPI In Opener, 15-46

Five Cats Tie For First

by PAUL STANTON

Coach Archie Post's well-drilled, Green and Gold cross-country team successfully opened its 1958 campaign last Saturday at home as the UVM thinclads swamped visiting Rensselaer Polytechnic Institute, 15-46. It was a perfect day for running as the sun shone brightly over the entire length of the Burlington Country Club.

Engineers Build Lead.

The Engineers took an early lead as the two teams broke in quest of victory. As the runners passed the Redstone campus, RPI still maintained its slight lead.

Catamounts Fred Kolstrom, Capt. Ray Allen, Dan Mosman, Norm Picard, and Howie Cutts "showed their stuff" as all five swept past the front running RPI men shortly after reaching the golf course.

As the runners ripped out of the country club, one could see only the five Vermont men far ahead of the pack.

Five Tie For First.

Kolstrom, Allen, Mosman, Picard and Cutts all broke the tape at the same moment to give Vermont the first five places. Their time was a respectable 25:53.7.

Two Engineers took the sixth and seventh spots, but four more Cats then finished in succession again. The race was all Vermont!

Commenting on his team's fine showing, Coach Post remarked, "I'm pleased with the results of this race. It's good to see the five of them whip in together, but had it been a tougher race, one or two would undoubtedly have been way out in front. We run Union here next Saturday (Oct. 11) and they'll be tough to crack. However, we stand a pretty good chance to win it."

Sports From Southwick

by Dorothy Indick

On Saturday, October 11 at Southwick, a W.R.A. Sport's Day will be held from 1-4 P.M. Tennis, Archery and Hockey will constitute the day's activities. If, however, the rains pour down, volleyball and badminton contests will be played indoors.

Besides UVM, -- Middlebury, Plattsburg, and Green Mountain will bring some athletically-minded maidens to compete in the day's events. Afterwards, refreshments will be served.

Nancy Paquin is the chairman for this Sport's Day (which has the theme: Fall in Vermont.) Her aides Janet Tinker and Claudia Noyes are working on decorations; Ronnie Goldman, Jupie Bonanno, Mary Prespare, and Sue Platt are organizing the various teams.

On Saturday, October 18th, a Sport's Day will be held at Middlebury College with UVM, Colby, and Skidmore attending. The day's activities will include tennis and golf.

Unexperienced Frosh Lose To Cadets, 8-6

by BOB MESHEL

That old football sickness, "fumbleitis" struck the Vermont "Kittins" last Friday, as they were edged out by the Norwich Cadets, 8-6. Both teams had that "inexperienced look" as the game started, and the first two periods witnessed poor offense and many penalties. Late in the first period the Kittens were knocking on the door, but fumbled and lost possession on the Norwich eight yard line. In the third period, Vermont's plays began to click. Their efforts were climaxed by a sensational forty-yard run by half-back Maynard Ducatte, who scored with no tacklers in sight. However, the extra point pass play was blocked, and this was to mean defeat for a squad who out-played their opponent. In the last period Norwich finally began to move, and a nifty pass from quarterback Wale tied the score. On the point after, Wale again took to the air and hit his speedy half-back Valhouli, to give Norwich the lead and eventually the game.

Vermont left guard Luziette, and center Pario all looked especially good on defense. Coaches Evans and Tierney feel the boys lacked enough practice sessions and were not quite ready for their first encounter. Despite their small 21 man squad, the team's passing and running attack looked better and better as the game progressed. I'm sure we can look for a smoother and better trained team come October 11, in their encounter against R.P.I.

You freshmen especially, make it a point to be there, and I'm sure you'll witness a Vermont victory.

Meet The Catamounts

by DAVE SCHULTZ

It gives me great pleasure to introduce the football team to all of you. Today we will meet three of the starting backfield players; Bob Flance, Lou Petronaci, and Roy Greene. All three of these fellows belong to the same fraternity, Phi Delta Theta.

Bob, the quarterback of the team hails from Manhasset, N.Y. While a student at Manhasset High, he participated in football, basketball and baseball. He captained his football and baseball teams during his senior year. His football team went on to be North Shore (Long Island) champs that year. Bob was chosen to the first All Nassau County teams in all three sports, which is quite an accomplishment. The adage, "like father like son," applies very nicely to Bob and his father. Bob's dad played semi-pro football and baseball on Long Island in his prime.

Quarterbacking the football team, playing guard on the basketball team and pitching for the baseball team kept Bob quite busy during his freshman year at UVM. Last year Bob played quarterback behind Dick White, and pitched for the varsity. Being an advanced Air Force ROTC man he looks forward to Wednesday very much.

Bob's reply was one of optimism when questioned about the remainder of the season. He felt that if the team keeps up its spirit and cooperates with Coach Donnelly, we will end up the season with a better than .500 record.

Speaking of the Maine game it was his opinion that the team played a good game. With the exception of a few defensive flaws our defensive unit did a good job on the Maine team. He felt that our offense just couldn't get rolling because of a hard charging Maine line.

Lou, the 5 foot 7 inch 150 pound terror comes to UVM from Montclair, N.J. Captaining the the football team at Montclair High, in his senior year there, he led them to the state championship. He also was captain of the freshman team here. This is Lou's fourth year of football at UVM. Without a doubt last year was his greatest. He was voted as the Vermont lineman of the year. That includes all the state schools. He was an all-state end and was cited as the best player of the year in Vermont. On campus he is very interested in inter-fraternity sports, participating in basketball, softball and track. Lou is Vermont's only triple threat this season. He is our shifty halfback, best punter, and hard tackling linebacker on defense.

"Maine is the toughest team we have to meet this season," Lou said. He believes that since Coast Guard Academy beat Norwich last Saturday, and since we were definitely stronger than the Coast Guard, we should beat Norwich. The only other team he sees giving the team a rough time is Middlebury who lost their best player, Pete Aldrich, in their game against WPI. He pointed out that Rochester, who is not a power, ripped past Hobart and we meet both of these clubs later on in the season. If the fans back the team in the remaining home games as they did last Saturday, the players will be putting that little something extra in their efforts to win, according to Lou.

Roy, the fleet-footed halfback from Butler, New Jersey, is in his third year of football here. At Butler High Roy was on the football team and ran track. In his senior year there he scored 110 points for the track team. His father also participated in athletics at college playing tennis for Clemson University.

In his freshman year at UVM, Roy was third string halfback, and also ran track. Last year he started in all but one of the football games. Since that time he has had many spectacular runs, such as the one against the Coast Guard for 91 yards. Roy is currently vice-president of the class of 1960, and vice-president of the Varsity Club.

He believes that the rest of the year will be rough since the team has only twenty-four men. Barring injury on the team, Roy says that the game will be tough, especially after the long trip to Geneva, N.Y.

Speaking about the Maine game, he believed it was a fast-moving, hard-hitting contest. He gave credit to the good reserve teams Maine brought along. "Small mistakes really hurt us on offense and we couldn't get rolling.

PROFS CHALLENGE GREEKS

On October 11 at 2:00 p.m., many of the stauncher members of the UVM and S.A.C.K. faculty will try their hand at beating the fraternities—physically this time. At present, the line-up for the "Formidable Faculty" consists of Messrs. Cochran, Kent, Gould, Simon, Nadworny, Steele, Potash, Christy, Mosher, Julow, Little, Dewey, Torch, and of course, Clifford. It has been rumored that a few of the faculty members have been lifting weights and even taken courses in judo in preparation for the contest. Actually, it seems rather hard to believe, when softball is the game scheduled for that afternoon.

The game will be played behind the gymnasium, and the fraternity team will consist of one member from each house. This does not mean, however, that the fraternity team will put fifteen men on the field at one time. Rules WILL be followed—somewhat. It is definitely AGAINST the rules to sharpen ones spikes, and therefore, all faculty members will be inspected before the game. It is also against the rules to throw molotov cocktails at fraternity players, but minor infractions will be allowed if the occupants of the men's residence halls can get away with it.

On a serious note, however, the game should be interesting, and both the "Formidable Faculty" and the fraternity team hope to see a large turnout. And you don't have to be twenty-one to attend: or married either!

SENIOR DAY

October 17th will be UVM's annual Senior Day. From 9-11 A.M. all Senior students will receive carnations in Waterman. The day's activities will also include refreshments and a jazz concert by Pete Davis in the Coffee Shop from 4-5:45 P.M. The President's Reception from 8-8:30 P.M. and a dance at Southwick with music by the Music Messengers will terminate the activities.

Ethan Allen

On Wednesday, October 1, the Ethan Allen Rifles, the Army ROTC Honorary Society met to receive 4 new members into the society. The new members include: Paul Donahue, Richard Loati, Clyde Lord, and David Bell.

After the initiation ceremony a joint meeting was held with the Arnold Air Society to coordinate planning for the Military Ball. The Military Ball will be held Friday, November 14.

Cats Whipped By Maine Eleven, 26-0

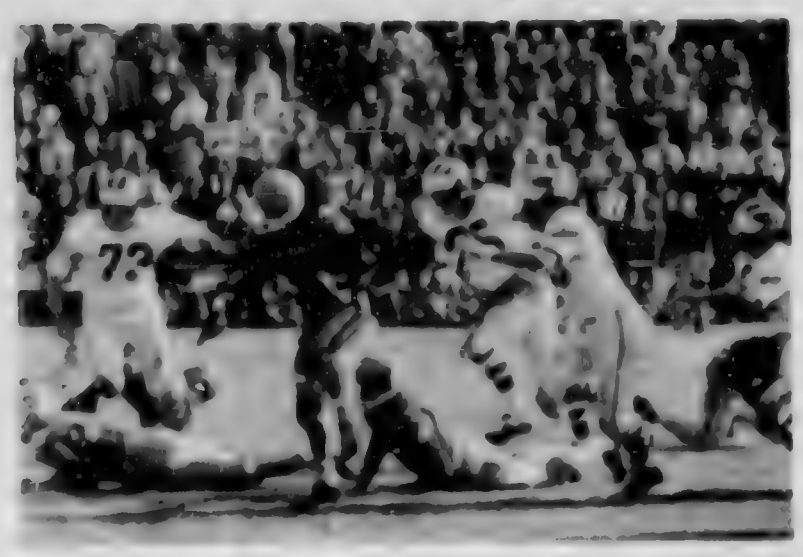
Home Opener Spoiled By Bears

Petronaci Outstanding In Defeat

by FRED ROBINSON

The big Bears of the University of Maine used brute strength to garner to lowa a determined but tired Catamount eleven, 26-0, at sun-drenched Centennial Field on State Day. The outcome of the battle was decided by the tremendous depth of the Maine bench and the sensational blocking demonstrated by the Pine Tree Staters from Orono. Time and time again the Maine line belted down would-be Vermont tacklers to spring their shifty backs loose. But one little man they didn't stop was the bundle of dynamite, Lou Petronaci, a junior from Montclair, N.J. This mighty mite was in on almost every tackle, knocking down passes, throwing key blocks - - - stopping possibly twenty more Maine points. Even with two men trying to take him out, Lou would break loose to pull down the ball carrier.

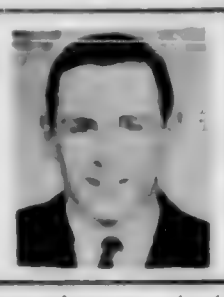
Opening the game, the Cats kicked off to Maine who grabbed the pigskin on their five and raced it out to the 34. One Bear after another smashed into the middle of the Vermont line, but to no avail and Maine was forced to kick. Roy Greene tucked it away on the UVM ten, but before he could build up any steam, he was smothered by a host of Maine defensemen. Coach Donnelly's boys couldn't seem to click and Petronaci was forced to punt. Maine and Vermont traded punts throughout most of the first quarter with Maine substituting on almost every play.



The Cats began to tire. With five and a half minutes to play in the period, Maine began to roll, picking up three first downs on five plays, and threatening on the Vermont 32. But the UVM forward wall held and on third down, Phil Chalifoux slashed through to deflect a pass and force UVM to kick. The boot sailed out of bounds on the Vermont six with one minute and a half left in the first canto. Just before the period ended, the Cats chalked their initial first down of the game.

The opening moments of the second quarter saw the Green and Gold break over into Maine territory for the first time in the game, but a holding penalty made the accomplishment short-lived. With 4th and eighteen, Vermont booted out of the hole only to have great Bear blocking, bring the ball to rest on the Vermont 32. On the first play from scrimmage, Maine clicked on a bullet pass into the end zone to break the ice. Petronaci knocked down the extra point pass try. The Bears thundered over for two more TDs in this disasterous quarter. After having a fourth TD jaunt called back, Maine was threatening again, but the half ended with score 20-0.

Vermont started the [illegible] half by again booting to Maine but after a series of downs Bears were forced to punt. Petronaci snagged it on the [illegible] ten and raced 48 yards to the Maine 42 before he [illegible] hauled down. This marked the first time that UVM offense penetrated Maine territory. With about four minutes left in the third quarter, UVM punted and as the dust cleared, two Cats — Roy Greene and John Babic — were shaken up on the play and had to leave the game, thus almost eliminating any hope of a Vermont upset. A penalty caused the play to be run over again, and Petronaci tripped up the runner on the Vermont fifteen. A Maine pass clicked inside the five, and two plays later, the Bears crashed over for their final tally.



In the fourth quarter, Lou Petronaci was sidelined with a leg cramp and when he left the field he received a standing ovation for the sparkling performance against such odds. Vermont managed to pound out its second and last, first down, late in this period.

Next week the Cats are guests of Hobart College, always a strong competitor. Come on gang! LET'S HIT THAT WIN COLUMN!

The Spectator By Jerry Heller

Last week as I was watching our football team being pushed all over the field, I witnessed an incident in the stands. An upperclassman stood up, at a particularly exasperating moment in the game, when four Vermont men were stretched out on the field and a Maine man went galloping over the goal line. The upperclassman screamed, "Coach, why don't you teach those guys some fundamentals?" Three very brutish and sneering freshmen turned around and said, "Why don't you go out there and show them how to do it?" Naturally the upperclassman had no basis for his statement as it was obvious that it wasn't a lack of knowledge in fundamentals that was hurting UVM, but a sorrowful lack of manpower as twenty-four Vermont men faced a Maine squad of forty. However, the freshmen's statement was twice as rediculous, as the upperclassman was a mere 5'5" and 135 pounds, soaking wet. This profound statement, that the three wise freshmen spouted so eloquently, could be put to good use if they just directed it to their fellow classmates.

The men in the Class of 1962 haven't done anything to shame themselves, yet, and that is exactly why they should be ashamed they haven't done a thing. We now have approximately twenty-five men out for the freshman football team, at the University of Maine, one hundred and sixty Freshmen came out for the team. There could only be two reasons for this failure to come out at Vermont, the Frosh are either "chicken" or stupid.

Word reached me from some very reliable sources that someone in the Administration has given Freshmen the advice that they should stay away from football this year, stick to their books and come out for Spring Practice. This advice on the part of that person is pure sabotage to this school's athletic plant. Good Freshman teams are essential as a basis for the Varsity. I'm sure that President Fey would be interested to know who the person is.

If you Freshmen believe this advice then you're definitely not using your heads and there couldn't be any real desire on your part to play football or help your school. Coach Donnelly knows about this new "Wait until Spring" policy and I can assure you that there's going to be a rude awakening for those Johnny come lately's.

If this is an example of what the Class of '62 is going to do for this school then I'm glad that I won't be around to see the results. WAKE UP FRESHMEN and get out there and play ball. It's time to stop throwing the bull in those dorms and use that spare time for studying. I can think of two men in in the starting lineup, namely Bill Grey and John Marino who have not only gotten top grades but have also been accepted into Honor Societies. NOW is the time to start working for your school!!

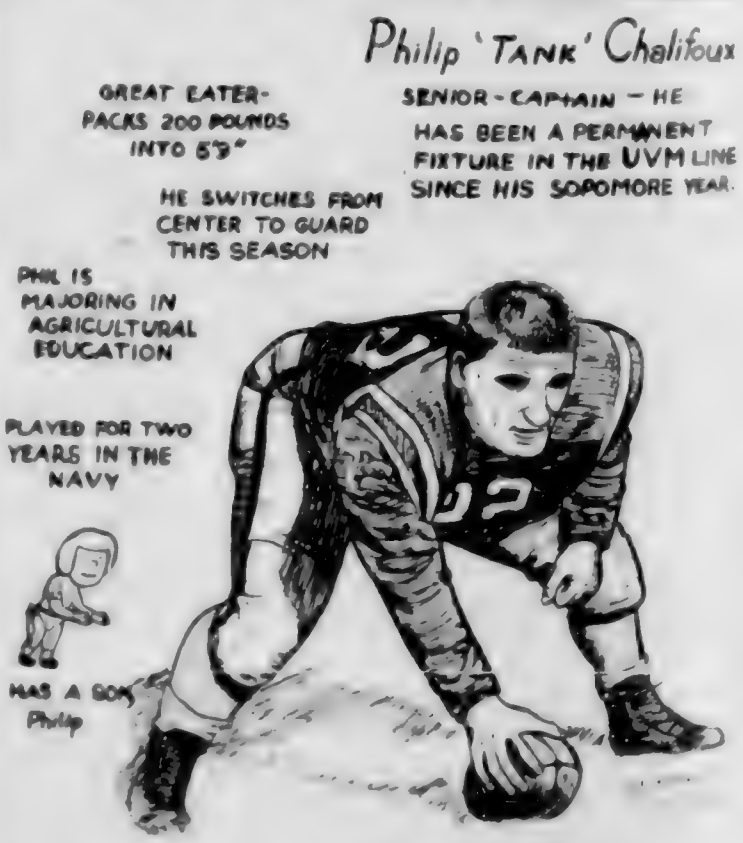
I have a laugh but mouse hand up for you boys. Pictures of your play in last Saturday's game

Cynic Sports Special: Capt. Phil Chalifoux

by BOB GOLDMAN

Catamount Football Captain Phil Chalifoux was born and bred in the town of Fitchburg, Mass. He played four years of football at Fitchburg High School, two years in the Navy, and now here at UVM, he will have put four more years into the game upon the termination of this season. This adds up to a total of ten years on the gridiron for Captain Chalifoux, and he has enjoyed and loved every minute of it. While in high school he gained positions on both the All Worcester County and the All State teams.

Phil lives at 337 Dorset St., in South Burlington, with his wife, Nancy, and son, Michael. The whole family is anxiously awaiting the arrival of a new addition next February. Capt. Chalifoux is in the school of Education, and intends to go into coaching upon graduation. He wants to coach near his hometown of Fitchburg. During the second semester of this year, he will be a teacher at Burlington Junior High School. Phil also runs the concessions at both football and baseball games.



Pilot Chalifoux replaced Dick White as Captain at an election held just after last year's Middlebury game. Phil feels that the Catamounts have a great potential in the first string squad, but is lack depth as far as replacements go. The result is that many of the No. 1 team men must stick it out for a full 60 minutes of playing, which is a rough road for any player to carry. Only three freshmen have been held over from last year's squad, which is a very poor turnover. Despite these factors, the team is doing an excellent job, and Chalifoux feels that the Cats will come out with a winning season, provided there are no injuries incurred before the end of the season.

This weekend the UVM squad will face Hobart, a small but strong college team. Phil feels that we should be able to take this.

Fraternity Fracas

Last week the fraternity football season got off to a fast start. In League B, SAE trounced Sig Phi Ep 37-7, and Phi Sig slipped by Phi Delt 31-21. In the latter contest Ray Weiler scored 20 of his team's 31 points. Clyde Lord and John Grotta stood out for the winners.

In League A, favored Sig Nu trounced Sig Phi 50-0, Kappa Sig trimmed ATO 30-6, and Phi Mu beat AEPi, 32-12. This week Sig Nu takes on Kappa Sig in what should prove the deciding game in the league.

Urbie Green To Play At Homecoming Ball

That's right - Urbie Green - Who's he? For one thing he was chosen over such people as Boyd Raeburn, Elliot Lawrence, Leroy Holmes, and Ray Conniff to provide the music for this year's Homecoming Ball. Something else, too, he plays a sweet, progressive trombone, and leads a very versatile orchestra.

Known best in the jazz field, Urbie has been labeled as "America's great new trombone stylist", and has been featured with such names as Woody Herman, Benny Goodman, Gene Krupa, Frankie Carle, Ray Block, Lester Lanin, Hugo Winterhalter, Sy Oliver, Vaughn Monroe, Jackie Gleason, Perry Como, and many others.

His tone is matched by few trombonists, whatever the style, and his conception is consistently imaginative and always emotionally compelling. With his new band, Urbie lets the soloists have the freedom of expression blended with ideas of exciting ensemble playing which he learned to admire with Krupa and Goodman.

As a studio band, Urbie and his orchestra are CBS regulars, and have recently been signed to cut discs for RCA - the newest album being "Let's Face the Music and Dance."

Benny Goodman has put Urbie's talents to good use many times. A year ago, in the absence of the clarinetist, Urbie led the Goodman band on tour, and on special engagements of the orchestra, he is usually found in the lead trombone seat. Urbie was also featured in the movie "The Benny Goodman Story", playing all the trombone solos.

Woody Herman has employed the services of Urbie Green a number of times, too. A now famous solo by Urbie with the Herman Herd - "Blue Flame" - is used by the popular New York disc jockey, Al "Jazzbo" Collins, as his radio theme.

Urbie's TV musical credits include "The Jackie Gleason Show", the Arthur Godfrey shows, Perry Como and others.

All this at the age of 32. It's no wonder though, for Urbie played professionally for Tommy Reynolds and Jan Savitt at the age of 16.

In 1952, Urbie won the Down Beat New Star Award and earned a similar citation from Metronome Magazine.

Born in Mobile, Alabama, Urbie is the youngest of three trombone playing brothers. His mother started him on a musical career by giving him piano lessons. He's married and is the father of Urban, Jr. A welsh terrier dog, a gift from Gene Krupa, rounds out the Green family.

In selecting Urbie Green and his orchestra, the Homecoming Committee felt that they had found a combination that's hard to beat - a trombonist that plays "sweet", like the late Tommy Dorsey, and is also able to play tremendous jazz as well.

See you at the Homecoming Ball on October 31, Friday, at Memorial Auditorium. Tickets will be on sale at Bailey's Music Rooms, in the UVM Book Store, and in lower Waterman.

Urbie Green, "America's great new trombone stylist," and his Band are scheduled to play at the Homecoming Ball.

Benny Goodman To Present Outstanding "Red Series" Concert Tonight

Benny Goodman, "Mr. King of Swing", to perform tonight at Memorial Auditorium as part of the "Red" Lane Series.

"MR. KING OF SWING" PLANS CONCERT IN AUDIENCE'S INTEREST

By BOB GOLDMAN

Tonight, the fabulous "King of Swing", Benny Goodman, will take over Memorial Auditorium, will present a concert of both classical and popular music. This evening's appearance of Goodman and his band marks their first performance before a college audience in Goodman's present Silver Jubilee concert tour. Prof. Jack Trevithick, Lane Series advisor, has announced that tickets for this "Red Series" concert have already been sold out.

Benjamin David Goodman is just 49 years old, and has recently been acclaimed as a legend in America. He was born in Chicago on May 30, 1909, the eighth of eleven children. He studied music with Franz Schoepp, and he made his professional debut at the age of 12 at Central Park. At the age of 14 he left school to play with bands around the Chicago area. He toured the country two years later with Ben Pollack's famous band. B.G. made his first recording in Dec., 1926.

In 1934, Benny organized his first band, which played at Billy Rose's Music Hall, and later reorganized the band for a coast to coast N.B.C. radio show called "Let's Dance." He brought jazz to Carnegie Hall in August of 1938. He married Alice Duckworth in 1941, and they now have two children, Rachel and Benjie. In the spring of 1955, Universal-International started filming "The Benny Goodman Story," with Benny himself recording all the music.

Goodman will be accompanied tonight by such noted musicians as drummer Roy Burnes, pianist Roland Hanna, trumpeters Allen Smith, Johnny Frosk, and E.V. Perry, also trombonist Rex Peer and saxophonists Gene Allen and Bob Wilbur.

Benny has an amazing eye for talent, and has started many a famous star on his or her career. Among these are Peggy Lee, Jack Teagarden, Stan Getz, Helen Forrest, Martha Tilton, Dick Haynes, Art Lund, Harry James, Gene Krupa, Lionel Hampton, and many

Mental Health Discussion Held By Noted Psychiatric Authorities

by R. Keimowitz

The second of the Wednesday afternoon panel discussions dealt with the subject of "What is Mental Health?" Speaking to a very large group were panelists Mr. Eldred, Head Psychologist at Waterbury State Hospital; Mrs. Corman, a psychiatric social worker, presently employed at a Burlington Childrens' Home; and Dr. Young, psychiatrist in charge of the Mental Health Clinic in Burlington. Prof. B. Murdock acted as moderator.

Mr. Eldred began the discussion by giving a short, clear analysis of what he considered mental health to be. He defined mental health as: "the ability to live comfortably with yourself, the ability to live comfortably with others, and the ability to live with the stresses and strains of daily life." He stated that the difference between mental health and illness was a continuum with ideal living at one end, and inability to live functionally at the other. Mr. Eldred went on to state some basic needs that should be fulfilled in one is to be considered mentally healthy. Some of these are the need to be loved, to be accepted, to have a sense of worth, and the need for a harmless constructive outlet for one's feelings.

The psychiatric social worker, Mrs. Corman, discussed the more practical aspects of mental health, and in effect seemed to accept the "sketchy" statement by Mr. Eldred. She stressed society's role in individual adjustment and suggested that attention be paid to trying to alter some social customs, in order to foster a healthier climate. In speaking on the present focus of psychological research, she said, "perhaps we have neglected the focus on social relationships." Consistent with her whole discussion was the statement that "man is a biosocial being," and when psychic troubles develop, "the treatment must be psychosocial."

Dr. Young began his statements by saying that he was "not sure that we know what mental health is," and felt that psychiatrists might not be "able to define mental health." He immediately went on, however, to attempt the definition of the ideally adjusted person. The term "interpersonal relations" was not mentioned, this seemed to be an underlying theme, for Dr. Young also showed a definite social orientation.

Though the discussions were felt by many to be rather uninformative, the panel did bring to mind many important points which one should consider. Mrs. Corman's feeling that we should not just watch disturbed people and treat them, but rather look into our "uncertain" society, and attempt to modify and rectify cultural traits, can only be taken well. The idea that we should realign our outlook and focus more on interpersonal interaction is necessary not only for our theorists, but for all func-

Danish National And Chicago Symphony Orchestra Acclaimed Finest Performance In Lane Series Attractions

Danish

by Tanya Lehman

On Tuesday evening, October [illegible] the Danish National Symphony Orchestra gave one of the finest performances ever heard in a Lane Series audience. Under the direction of John Frandsen the program was one of contrasting without overtones of the showy. From the playing of the national anthems of the United States and Denmark which sounded far superior to most arrangements therefor, listeners were aware that here was the humility and dedication that are necessary to produce great art.

First on the program was Carl Maria von Weber's "Overture to Euryanthe", played with a clarity and precision that was immediately remarkable. Not only did the work itself "retain its stirring vitality and lyrical freshness," but the dedication and humility of the musicians lent communicative fire that formed 'rapport' with the audience.

Carl Nielsen's Symphony #2 "The Four Temperaments" was outstanding offering of the evening for several reasons. It was the work of a Scandinavian composer played by musicians of his native land, one of whom later in the program expressed great happiness 'that an American audience should have enjoyed it with such enthusiasm. Perhaps playing music from one's native land was one of the reasons for the [illegible] performance of the work. It was hardly necessary to read the program to feel the "[illegible]" "[illegible]" and "[illegible]" emotions which make up the tones of each movement. In spite of the [illegible] of the work however the mood was broken by applause between the movements. It seems to this reporter that an audience could show its appreciation of good music in a much more dignified manner by refraining from applause until the conclusion of a work than by outbursts at the ends of movements. Mr. Frandsen seemed most patient with the audience in spite of its lack of control in this respect.

The playing of Mozart's Symphony #40 in G Minor evidenced the same excellences as the preceding works on the program. To listen to it with a spot light on Tuesday evening and feel the strongest possible relation to the statement that the works of Mozart [illegible] emotion. Our greatest art is the disciplined representation of human experience. Mozart poured his experience into the creation of the work, the Danish National Orchestra poured its emotion into the recreation of it.

Last on the program was Brahms' "Variations on a Theme of Haydn." This selection completed the program on

Chicago

Tanya Lehman

On Sunday evening, [illegible] 12, the Chicago Symphony Orchestra, under the direction of Fritz Reiner, gave one of the best concerts of music of this century ever heard at Memorial Auditorium.

Contrary to the opinion of people who had labeled the program a poor selection because of its great emphasis on relatively recent compositions, the audience heard a varied selection that portrayed with excellence the full potential of a symphony orchestra. The five movements of Bartok's "Suite for Orchestra, No. 1, Opus 3" showed almost every shade of harmony from that of the instruments to the [illegible] volumed tones of the [illegible] vivace movement's [illegible] bars. The obvious Hungarian folk influence of the work is important to keep in mind. It is encouraging to hear modern as well as traditional music retaining kinship with the early and basic elements of our culture by incorporating their beauty into more recent works.

Stravinsky's "The Fairy's Kiss," an allegorical ballet, is similarly based on a folk element. This time, however, it is a fairy tale and not established music. Throughout the work one could visualize dancers performing in conjunction with it and one could almost become part of the ballet itself. The changes in harmony, rhythm, and melody created never to be forgotten feelings for the audience, not to mention the varied combinations of instruments that have made the work outstanding.

Last on the program was the Interlude and Dance from "La Vida Breve" by Falla. Based on a folk melody, it soared to the heights of artistic creation and provided a fitting conclusion for an evening of fine music of this Century.

The Chicago Symphony Orchestra gave a performance excellent in all aspects of musicianship. The instruments were played with agility and mellowness of tone. The cooperation and interplay between them and their conductor was outstanding. The audience heard the full meaning of the words "symphony

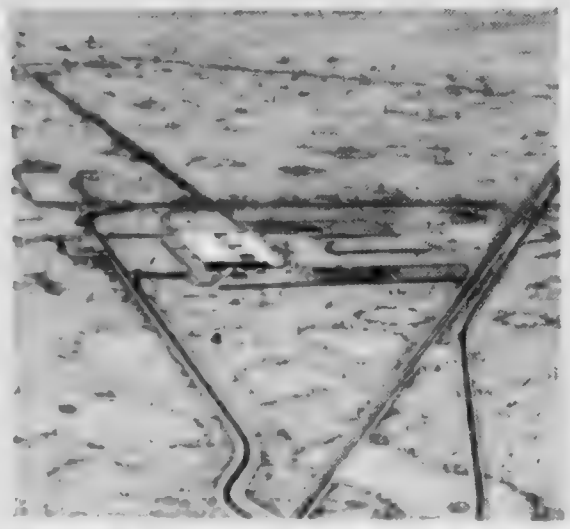
FLORIDA RESEARCH AND DEVELOPMENT CENTER

Another Unmatched Engineering Facility to Advance Propulsion Systems of the Future



Future aircraft and missiles may require propulsion systems far different from those in wide use today—different in size, power output, appearance, and perhaps even in the basic method of utilizing energy.

To probe the propulsion future...and to build and test greatly advanced propulsion systems for coming generations of flight vehicles, Pratt & Whitney Aircraft is now operating its new Florida Research and Development Center. This facility supplements Pratt & Whitney's main research and development installations in Connecticut.

The new Florida Center, financed and built by Pratt & Whitney Aircraft, is unique in America's air industry. Here a completely air-conditioned plant with 17 acres under roof is specially designed and equipped for the development of new power plants of virtually any type. Testing is handled in special isolated areas; the nearest is four miles from the plant and many miles from any inhabited area. The new Center can be greatly expanded on its 10-square-mile site. Continued isolation is insured by a vast wildlife sanctuary in which the Center is located.

Of the many people employed at the Center today, about half are scientists, engineers and highly trained technicians. By late next year, the total number of employees is expected to be almost doubled.

The new Florida Research and Development Center is one more reason why Pratt & Whitney Aircraft is able to continue producing the world's best aircraft propulsion systems . . . in whatever form they take.

ISOLATION — Ten square miles comprise the site of Pratt & Whitney Aircraft's new Florida Research and Development Center. Experimental shops and offices covering some 17 acres are in the foreground, while the test areas, barely visible in upper left, lie four miles in the background.

LOCATION — The new Center is located at United, Florida, midway between West Palm Beach and Lake Okeechobee, in the upper Everglades area. It is almost surrounded by a wildlife sanctuary. Most employees live in the cities and towns along the east coast of Florida, driving to the Center on excellent new highways.

Dr. Janson Becomes Museum's New Director

Dr. Janson, Fleming Museum's new Director.

The accent is on exciting arrangements and diversified panels at UVM's Robert Hull Fleming Museum, where Dr. Richard H. Janson, the Museum's new director, is laying plans for this season's exhibitions.

Dr. Janson, who took over his new duties Sept. 1, hopes to make greater use of mobile panels, which will allow more freedom in arranging exhibitions.

An exhibition of glass from the British Isles, "The Story of English Glass," will be shown in November incorporating these ideas. This exhibit, on loan from the Corning Museum of Glass, is a follow-up to "The Story of American Glass", which was a popular attraction at the Museum last year.

A good deal of time will be spent continuing to broaden and deepen the Museum's permanent collection, Dr. Janson says. In addition, he plans to continue the re-arrangement of the "American Rooms," and will further develop the exhibition arras.

A graduate of Williams College, Dr. Janson received his M.A. in art history from Yale University in 1952. He was a Fulbright Scholar in Great Britain from 1954-55, carrying on research for his doctoral thesis, "The Railroad Train - An Arthitectural History 1830-1930." He received his Ph.D. from Yale in 1958.

In addition to directing the Fleming Museum, Dr. Janson is an assistant professor of art in UVM's College of Arts and Sciences. Prior to joining the University of Vermont faculty, he taught at Yale University, Wesleyan University and Mount Holyoke College. This past summer he was an instructor in art at Queen's University Summer Extension School at Hamilton, Bermuda.

Alpha Lambda Delta, a freshman women's scholastic honorary, will hold its annual Coke Hour Tuesday, October 21, at Southwick from 6:45 - 8:00 p.m. All freshman girls, having a high school average of 80 or higher, are cordially invited to attend.

"Mum" Sale

Mortar Board, the senior honorary society for women, is again sponsoring the sale of "Mums" for the annual Homecoming Weekend. Mary Jo Judd is in charge of the sale, and her committee consists of the entire society.

These "Mums" will be sold downstairs in Waterman from Monday October 27, until Friday October 31. On Saturday, November 1, the "Mums" will be sold to the parents attending Homecoming Weekend.

The cost of the flowers will be $1.00 and the proceeds will go to Mortar Board.

others.

The "King" is not only a legendary figure on the national level, but is known throughout the world as a great musician and entertainer. His most recent overseas excursion was to Brussels, where he played a week of jazz concerts at the World's Fair. Mayor Robert F. Wagner of New York City stated in a citation given to Goodman before he left for the Fair, that "He goes as an ambassador, representing the very texture of the phenomena of the perrenial enthusiasm of youth in the world." After leaving Brussels he went on to perform in Copenhagen, Oslo, Hamburg, Berlin, Frankfort, Cologne, Vienna, and numerous other cities.

Goodman leads a dual musical life. He is recognized in both classical and jazz circles. Although he is popularly known more for his jazz, he has also had a great career as a classical clarinetist. He has recorded the "Mozart A Major Quintet for Clarinet and Strings" on the Columbia label. In his classical repertoire are the Mozart and Weber Concertos, and the Mozart, Weber, Brahms, Beethoven, Bartok and Hindemuth chamber works. He is also noted for his rendition of Copeland's "Concerto for Clarinet", which is one of the most difficult clarinet solos ever written.

There will be no program for this evening's event. Mr. Goodman will announce his selections during the concert.

Immediately following tonight's concert, Benny Goodman will travel to Boston's Symphony Hall, where he is due to appear tomorrow night in a program produced by the famed jazz impresario, Jack Wein.

V Club To Sponser Annual Dance Saturday

Each year the Varsity Club sponsors a dance. The proceeds go toward the buying of varsity blankets for those seniors who have unselfishly and without hope of material gain participated in the athletic program of the University. It is the Varsity Club's way of showing our appreciation of the graduating seniors.

The entire University is asked to participate in this worthwhile event, and everyone is invited to attend. Tickets can be obtained from any Varsity Club member or can be bought at our sale that will take place on the first floor of the Waterman Building, Thursday and Friday afternoons from 1:00 p.m. - 4:00 p.m. Tickets are only 50¢ a person.

"Space, Space, Space, And Not A Spot To Find"

Last April an editorial was written concerning the parking situation here at UVM. The problems that students have in parking in blue sticker areas leave much to be desired. If one arrives on campus after eight o'clock, he finds no space on campus, and has to park on the main streets quite a distance from campus, or at the infirmary area, which is becoming a crowded parking lot.

Here is a quote from that editorial: "Can you imagine the chaos which would result if girls or freshmen had cars?" But now junior and senior girls are allowed to have cars as well as sophomore girls with a 75 average or better. This is the first year of this rule, and there are not that many cars used by girls this year, but as this rule becomes older, habit sets in, and more and more girls soon will have cars. The situation will become more and more chaotic.

In back of Waterman there is a new and enlarged area for yellow stickers to park. Blue sticker parking space becomes smaller and smaller as areas are eliminated. The area in back of the former "Old Mill", is taken up by Lafayette Hall where parking was allowed, even if it was for yellow stickers only. This at least got the yellow stickers away from blue sticker areas. In front of Lafayette Hall, where the road leads to the gym, there used to be spaces for blue stickers, but that was taken away. Although there is now parking around the side of the gym for blue stickers, this can not accomodate all the cars that we have on campus.

How can the problem be solved? Should we designate parking spots individually to each student and this is the only spot where he or she can park, or should we take cars entirely off campus? Should we build parking spots outside of campus? If some of these questions can be answered, our solution can be found. The campus would probably look better if the streets in front of our buildings will not be crowded with cars.

The problem is still unanswered as room to build upon is hard to find without destroying the lawns. Let us hope that the administration will do something to build more spaces or set aside more spaces for us to park. By us, we mean the blue sticker crew, who never find places to park. We of the CYNIC staff have this problem as we have to run the paper's material down to the printer many times a day during the week and we encounter inconveniences this way. The paper is open for suggestions from anyone in its search for a solution for the administration. The main problem, though, is that it costs from $1,000 to $1,500 per car to build and maintain an asphalt parking lot.

"62" Opinion

In my opinion the Cynic certainly lives up to its name if it allows such garbage as The Spectator by Jerry Heller to be published.

Apparently Mr. Heller wrote his article to inspire the Class of "62" to pull together. If he wants school spirit and unity he should have chosen a better way to achieve his goal.

He quoted figures saying that we have 25 men on the freshman team, while the University of Maine has about 160. Previous to this, however, he stated that the varsity team was heavily outnumbered, 40 to 24. Could it be that previous classes, including Mr. Heller's, have shown this so-called lack of enthusiasm?

Respectfully submitted,
Fred G. Cleveland

"Stupid" Men?

Mr. Jerry Heller

In regards to your recent column, The Spectator in the Oct. 9th issue of THE VERMONT CYNIC, I would like to humbly submit my views on the subject at hand.

To begin with, those "brutish and sneering" Freshmen that you refer to, are doing more than their share towards the functioning of the "schools' athletic plant". More perhaps, than the upperclassman that is mentioned in your most informative letter. You see, these three sneering "brutes" are on the Freshmen football team.

Now that this point has been established, let us turn to your statement concerning the reasons for Frosh not doing their part to keep the "athletic plant" in production.

You say "that the Frosh are either chicken or stupid". Why, may I ask, isn't this illustrious upperclassman friend of yours playing football?? It certainly seems foolish, to say the least, to restrain himself because of lack of weight.

Let us look back at the Varsity team of a few years ago. Surely your friend must remember "Ed Beck" ('56). This huge fellow of 135 lbs. or so did rather well. I believe, (and please correct me if I am wrong), that "Ed" made the All-New England team. One can clearly see that weight didn't restrict this man.

Also, Mr. Heller, don't you think that you are overlooking the fact that this college life is entirely new to the entering class? Perhaps these "stupid" men of the Class of '62, would like to adjust themselves here to this new way of life and put more emphasis on their scholastic work rather than towards athletics.

A lot of these "chickens" are paying for their educations from their own personal savings and must attain a relatively high scholastic rating in order to acquire acceptance into institutions for advanced professional training.

As for your wanting to see this class do honor to UVM, isn't it an honor to place students in an Honor Society, as well as having some gain game on the gridiron?

Granted, there could certainly have been a greater turnout for this sport, but name-calling and degrading the entire class is by no means the best method of arousing campus loyalty.

LIGHT ON AUGUST HARVARD

David Boroff, author of "Imperial Harvard" in Harper's (October, 1958) is a professor at Brooklyn College. His article, which is one of a series of three, has a sketchy, half-brushed tone; nevertheless, contains some lucid insights:

Harvardites feel " . . . an invulnerable sense of security" "About half of all Harvard Students (4,500 undergraduate, 1,000 Radcliffe co-eds, 1,500 graduate students) are candidates for honors in their fields."

On the salary scale of professors: " . . . the best in the country."

The undergraduate carries four courses and works with a tutor after his freshman year; "periodically meets with him for a session of remorseless intellectual exchange."

Professorial laments include: " . . . corridor after corridor (being), swallowed up by administration . . . but it is far less obtrusive than in the majority of American universities."

The Harvard gentleman "should schedule no course before 11 AM," and the classic example of the type is said to have put a suitcase in the middle of his room and turned up occassionally for a fresh shirt, spending the remainder of his time in pursuit of parties, clubs and misplaced weekends. "Sherry in the rooms" is also

Now in a more serious vein, I'd like to brief you on a new Jazz Magazine that was announced in New York last week. It's called the "Jazz Review". It will be published monthly and include not only criticisms and reviews, but also biographical and discographical articles; interviews; poetry and fiction. Among the contributors will be, editors Nat Hentoff and Martin Williams, Dizzie, Bob Brookmeyer, Miles, The Monk, The Bird, etc. There will be reduced rates for college students, so all you jazz addicts get "splivy".

With all the new records coming out, I haven't had a chance to hear any spectacular one this week. But of course you've heard all the albums entitled "Music for Studying". "Music for Remembering", etc.

the next one out will probably be, "Music That Puts A Lump In Your Throat or Songs That You Can't Swallow."

I am a junior now, and I can reveal "what every sophomore should know".

Use shaved ice for drinks that are served with a straw;

Cubed ice for highballs and old fashioned;

And cracked ice for shaken drinks.

Of course I don't mean to tell these facts to the sophomores on this campus because us . . . well, you know why. All you have to do is get married and then, you know that too.

At Grinnell College in Iowa, a report was brought before the Board of Trustees. I will try to bring you the "Highlights" of this story and interject some of my own feelings.

"First, we might increase our use of the formal lecture; occasional carefully planned and prepared lectures at which all the students in a course would be gathered together in one room, in lieu of regular classes." Good idea.

"Second, out courses might require broader reading and less dependence on textbooks" Great idea. Saves me $35 to $40 every year.

"The inadequacy of our present library . . ." Need I say more?

"Third, our students would be able to do better work and to lead less frenetic lives if they were enrolled in fewer courses than they now take." Oh boy, I can major in gym and R.O.T.C.

Well fellow students, how do you feel about these suggestions? Just drop me a line and let me know.

Wellesley College has announced that beginning this fall there will be no Wednesday or Saturday morning classes. This plan, submitted to the college by a student committee, will permit the student to devote longer periods of concentrated time to her individual studies. My guess is, that either they have more ambitious students or else they don't have a coffee shop or a lounge.

Reputation

I was reading the October 2, 1958, issue with pleasure, until I came to a passage in the editorial on page four entitled THE AWAKENING and paused there to wonder what might have been in the writer's mind. In the last paragraph I found the following: "We can never expect to be another Harvard, but....."

What does the passage mean? Is someone selling your University short? My son sought my advice on whether to go to Vermont if admitted and I said certainly do. If I wanted him to go to Harvard he would have applied to Harvard and Harvard only, but who wants Harvard, and who wants to be another Harvard? Let Harvard strive to be another Vermont.

UVM has its educational qualities, its strong reputation, its position as a leader in the field of American education not because it is striving to be another Harvard but because it is UVM, particular, strong, unique UVM. It has the character of a leading University. It does not strive to be another somebody but strives only to be itself. As such it is in a position to let Harvard hope to be another UVM.

It is not my intention to lecture the editors and particularly the writer for the above quoted phrase. But if it takes an outsider to tell the students of the University that they have something outstanding I am quite willing to do so. I would advise the student not to look into the green grass beyond the other fellow's fence but to cultivate the clover in which the young men and women of UVM now stand. It is a cultural clover rich in tradition, taking a back seat to no other school. You need but to look sharply, evaluate yourselves distinctly and hold out the standards which others have handed down to you cultivating them so that they may grow and prosper.

I want my son to gather the richness of life which UVM has to offer through its cultural greatness and traditional bounty. Let not anyone say, "We can never expect to be another Harvard...." but let them say, "Harvard would like to be as fortunate in leadership and culture as are we."

In closing I wish to congratulate the staff for the fine work they have done in publishing this and other issues and may the spirit of the students of UVM develop as has UVM's cultural and traditional growth down through the years.

Sincerely,
M.J. Magurney

Satellite Launched

On October 11, 1958, the fifth United States satellite, The Pioneer, was launched. Its destination was the moon or the vicinity surrounding it. However, due to its loss in speed The Pioneer will never reach its goal. Nevertheless, it has gone farther into space than any other man-made missle. The Satellite was powered by three main stages and an unusual fourth stage engine which gave the rocket a total of more than 160,000 pounds of thrust. The Vanguard, launched on March 17th of this year, attained a maximum height of 2,466 miles. The expectation at Cape Canaveral twelve hours after take-off was that The Pioneer would reach a maximum of 90,000 miles and then would be drawn by gravity into an earthly orbit as a Satellite. However, thus far the Satellite has reached a height of 120,000 miles and is still climbing. Although The Pioneer failed in its objective to attain an orbit around the moon, it proved that it can be done in the near future.

The first attempt to launch a rocket to the moon, last August 1st, resulted in total failure because the rocket collapsed after seventy-seven seconds in space. The partial success of The Pioneer give the United States the feeling that we are not "lagging behind" the U.S.S.R. It lifts the spirit of the people, and gives them more confidence in their own country.

The Papacy

After nineteen years, Eugenio Pacellis reign as Pope Pius XII ended. The Pope's death set in motion a dramatic and ancient ritual of mourning and burial. The process of electing a new Pope will begin on October 25th, when the Cardinals gather in secret conclave in the ancient Sistine Chapel.

Cease - Fire

Finally, after three months of the Quemoy bombardment, the Chinese Communists proclaimed a cease-fire. A shift in the United States policy in the Tawain Strait conflict probably caused this response. There are many theories as to why the Communists had ordered the cease-fire. One of the most probable was that Peiping had decided to test the meaning of Dulles' hint that the offshore islands might be abandoned if a cease-fire were put into effect. However, the real meaning of the cease-fire and the prospects for settlement of the Tawain conflict, still remain uncertain.

Integration vs Unsettled

The four high schools in Little Rock are still closed but the segregationists appeared to be firmer than ever. Governor Faubus' plan to operate the school privately has many difficulties. The first of the legal obstacles came from the Supreme Court. The court said "evasive schemes for segregation" would not be allowed to nullify its original decisions for integration. This statement was directed toward the private school plan, thus, this weekend the students had very little prospects of returning to the public schools.

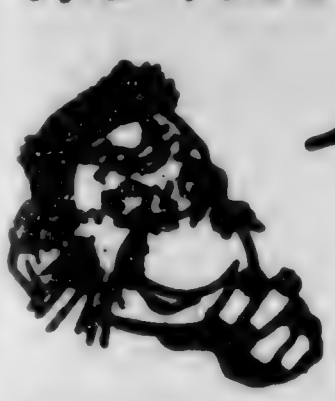
The Man Who Thinks for Himself Knows...

ONLY VICEROY HAS A THINKING MAN'S FILTER... A SMOKING MAN'S TASTE!

Now answer this one: Do you really think about the filter cigarette you choose? YES____ NO____



If your answer is "Yes"... well, you're the kind of person who thinks for himself. You can be depended on to use judgment in everything you do.

The fact is, men and women who really think for themselves usually smoke VICEROY. Their reason? Best in the world. They know for a fact that only VICEROY — no other cigarette — has a thinking man's filter and a smoking man's taste.

IF YOU HAVE ANSWERED YES TO 6 OF THESE QUESTIONS, YOU ARE A PERSON WHO THINKS FOR HIMSELF!

THE PROBLEM CORNER

Problem: A vendor had a quantity of eggs for sale. To his first customer he sold half of his eggs plus half an egg, to the second customer half of the eggs left plus half an egg, and continued to sell them in this manner. After serving 6 customers he had sold all of his eggs. How many did he have in the beginning?

Leave solutions to these problems at the office of Professor Schoonmaker, Room 341, Waterman, no later than Monday of the week following publication of the problem.

How To Look Exactly Like A Freshman

by Jo Oriole

There are many little tricks that one can do to make absolutely sure that one cannot be mistaken for anything but a freshman. When mastered, these will assure the nouveau collegian that he need never run the risk of being mistaken for an upperclassman.

Time and space do not permit the composing of a complete list at this writing; so this article will be limited to a discussion of only the basic points.

The first distinguishing feature of an underclassman is the expression on his face. There should be a perpetual scowl, showing the world that he is a bored, blase "cosmopolite," who has seen and done everything worth doing.

Next comes a must - a necessity. There is nothing like a pipe clenched tightly between the teeth to give that virile appearance every freshman strives for. There need not be tobacco in its bowl, for no one will get close enough to him to find out.

The third means won't have universal appeal. Girls may omit it entirely. It is simply: give up shaving. The type that this appeals to may prefer a cigar to a pipe. There are, however, some disadvantages to this idea. Girls usually have little appreciation for a cigar, and ROTC officers, as a rule, prefer the clean cut type.

Last is one of the easiest and most important rules. Never describe anything by its full name. With a minimum of practice, this can be mastered. Thus, political science becomes poly sci, the Iliad and Odessey metamorphose to the Ill and the Odd, agriculture students are known as Aggies, and Mary Fletcher Hospital is referred to as the "Fletch".

If these rules are faithfully followed, one can rest assured that he will be the object of many admiring glances from afar. Always from afar.

THE DRESS PARADE

In all my years of observing coed fashions—and I have been arrested many times—I have never seen such verve, such dash, such Je ne sais quoi as can be found in this year's styles!

I am particularly enchanted by the new "baby waist" dresses which so many of you girls are favoring this season. How demure you all look in your "baby waists"! How sweet! How innocent! How colorful when your housemother lifts you up and burps you after dinner!

Another trend that leaves me limp with rapture is the oversized handbag. Goodbye to dinky little purses that hold nothing at all! Hurrah for today's sensibly sized bag with plenty of room for your makeup, your pens and pencils, your shelter half, your Slinky toy, your MG, and your Marlboros.

Did I say Marlboros? Certainly I said Marlboros. What girl can consider herself in the van, in the swim, and in the know, if she doesn't smoke Marlboros? What man, for that matter. Do you want a filter that is truly new, genuinely advanced, but at the same time, does not rob you of the full flavor of first-rate tobacco? Then get Marlboro. Also get matches because the pleasure you derive from a Marlboro is necessarily limited if unlit.

To return to coed fashions, let us now discuss footwear. The popular flat shoe was introduced several years ago when it became obvious that girls were growing taller than boys. For a while the flat shoes kept the sexes in a state of uneasy balance, but today they will no longer serve. Now, even in flats, girls are towering over their dates, for the feminine growth rate has continued to rise with disturbing speed. In fact, it is now thought possible that we will see fifteen-foot girls in our lifetime.

But science is working on the problem, and I feel sure American know-how will find an answer. Meanwhile, a temporary measure is available—the reverse wedgie.

The reverse wedgie is simply a wedgie turned around. This tilts a girl backward at a 45 degree angle and cuts as much as three feet off her height. It is, of course, impossible to walk in this position unless you have support, so your date will have to keep his arm around your waist at all times. This will tire him out in fairly short order; therefore you must constantly give him encouragement. Keep looking up at him and batting your lashes and repeating in awed tones, "How strong you are, Shorty!"

Next we turn to hair styling. The hair-do this year is definitely the cloche-coif. One sees very few crew cuts or Irene Castle bobs, and the new Mohican cut seems not to have caught on at all. In fact, I saw only one girl with a Mohican—Rhodelle H. Sigafoos, a sophomore of Bennington. Her classmates laughed and laughed at her, but it was Rhodelle who had the last laugh, for one night a dark, handsome stranger leaped from behind a birch and linked his arm in Rhodelle's and said, "I am Uncas, the last of the Mohicans—but I need not be the last, dear lady, if you will but be my wife." Today they are happily married and run a candied-apple stand near Macon, Ga., and have three little Mohicans named Patti, Maxine, and Laverne.

The so-called "Branon Bill", to provide transportation for non-public school pupils, was introduced by him and stirred up much controversy within the past few years.

Sen. Branon will discuss the responsibility of voters and the role of politics in today's society. The question of the relationship of religion and politics will undoubtedly arise. The general topic for the meeting will be: "The Christian and Politics".

The guest speaker has spent his life on his own farm in Fairfield and has devoted much of his time to public service, holding many town and county offices in addition to the service in the legislature. He has likewise been very active as a member of St. Patrick's Parish in Fairfield. Both he and his wife, the former Mary Barry have frequently appeared as speakers throughout Vermont and, on occasion, in the adjacent states.

The encore by Nielsen, immediately recognizable by its similarity to the Symphony #2, was in well chosen relation... to the work so acclaimed by the audience early in the evening. The arrangement of Sousa's "Stars and Stripes Forever" not only sounded far better than usual renditions, but further portrayed the warmth these artists felt for the music and the audience. This warmth was also shown in the presentation of a medal to Mr. Trevithick of the Lane Series Committee by Johann Hentzen, who expressed happiness that Vermonters should be interested in the musical accomplishments of a small European nation.

This is the second American tour for this ninety-six piece orchestra, officially called the Danish State Symphony Orchestra. Under the patronage of King Frederik IX, often called the "Musical Monarch" because of his enthusiasm for that art form, the orchestra first toured the United States in 1952 under the joint direction of Thomas Jensen and the late Erik Tuxen.

It is especially gratifying to be a listener in an American audience, for until 1949 the Danish National Orchestra was content to stay within the boundaries of its homeland. With awareness of its musical prowess, however, the orchestra then began to make recordings and to play in Flensburg, Germany, and Oslo, Norway. These trips were followed in 1950 by an invitation to play at the Edinburgh Festival where the orchestra gained a truly international reputation. Then came the first tour of the United States in 1952, a performance at the Concertagebouw in Amsterdam, at the 1954 Bergen Festival, another trip to Edinburgh, and, in 1955, a trip to Paris. In 1956, the orchestra played in Stockholm, during April of 1958 in Switzerland and two months later took part in the annual Sibelius Festival at Helsinki, Finland.

The encore by Nielsen, immediately recognizable by its similarity to the Symphony #2, was a well chosen relation- ship to the work so acclaimed by the audience early in the evening. The arrangement of Sousa's "Stars and Stripes Forever" not only sounded far better than usual renditions, but further portrayed the warmth these artists felt for the music and the audience. This warmth was also shown in the presentation of a medal to Mr. Trevithick of the Lane Series Committee by Johann Bentzon, who expressed happiness that Vermonters should be interested in the musical accomplishments of a small European nation.

This is the second American tour for this ninety-six piece orchestra, officially called the Danish State Symphony Orchestra. Under the patronage of King Frederik IX, often called the "Musical Monarch" because of his enthusiasm for that art form, the orchestra first toured the United States in 1952 under the joint direction of Thomas Jensen and the late Erik Tuxen.

It is especially gratifying to be a listener in an American audience, for until 1949 the Danish National Orchestra was content to stay within the boundaries of its homeland. With awareness of its musical prowess, however, the orchestra then began to make recordings and to play in Flensburg, Germany, and Oslo, Norway. These trips were followed in 1950 by an invitation to play at the Edinburgh Festival where the orchestra gained a truly international reputation. Then came the first tour of the United States in 1952, a performance at the Concertagebouw in Amsterdam, at the 1954 Bergen Festival, another trip to Edinburgh, and, in 1955, a trip to Paris. In 1956, the orchestra played in Stockholm, during April of 1958 in Switzerland and two months later took part in the annual Sibelius Festival at Helsinki, Finland.

Hula Hooping was in style last Saturday afternoon as the Gamma Phi Team hooped their way to victory over the men from AE Pi. A three event contest determined the Gamma Phi's the champion Hula Hoopers as Lorie Patino and Marty Proffitt out hooped them around the knees. Mary Vipler was too good for the Gamma Phi's in the contest around the neck and proved champion in that division.

After the contest the Gamma Phi's served coffee and cookies and both teams awarded various prizes and trophies to the winners of the different events.

and unusual Harvard is not. Clubs substitute for fraternities (there is only one) and serve the purposes of a small minority whose Harris Tweed coats and disarranged manners are a puppetish classic of what the stereotype traditionally should be . . . socially.

Horoff continues: "There is no attendance check in most classes . . . (which) are sometimes) suspended to allow students to catch up, on their reading."

"Students are treated like responsible adults, and usually they behave accordingly."

The Crimson, the student newspaper, with its own plant, presses and pressmen, is a going business. "a superbly turned out undergraduate newspaper . . . independent of faculty control." It publishes, among other iconoclastic items, an annual "Confidential Guide to Freshman Courses," which is half tongue, half earnest, sparing no blow at the dull and deadly among the faculty. Harvard President Pusey's attitude toward the Crimson, reports Horoff, is that it is a growth making experience, not that he and others among the administration and faculty are not disturbed now and then by the recurrent assaults.

Reisman's (Doubleday), THE LONELY CROWD, "inner-directed man," value goaled and filling his own image of himself (as opposed to the "other-directed man") is the best description of today's Harvard man according to Van Wyck Brooks.

TIME AND THE MARKET

Time magazine's Education section this week deals, under the title "The Organization Scholar" with a review of THE ACADEMIC MARKETPLACE Basic Books) by Sociologists Theodore (U. of Minn.) Caplow and Reece J. (U. of Tex.) McGee, forward by Jacques (Columbia) Barzun.

Briefly, the Caplow, McGee, Barzun view of State and back with figures the increases in numbers of the professor who's position is not unlike that of teacher for the organization scholar, who had obtained his position through "an accumulation of just behind the scenes."

Also: "More than one university confessed that a socially presentable wife is 'also' one of the scholarly attributes it looks for."

LIGHT ON UVM

What this comes down to is that the Harper's story about Harvard and the Time chuckle at Academia are significant symptoms, potent enough to cause us to do some re-evaluating. 'Come - some uncomfortable questions the articles have made me wonder at just what every individual here wants. There is not enough space for me to review adequately every article I have run into on university affairs in one column . . . and then devote say the remainder of the publishing year in search of theoretical and the specifics at UVM. What I propose, then, is to continue in this vein, citing where necessary, but generally running alongside the latest uncovered item.

orchestra". Upon Memorial Auditorium emotional and responses to modern were more sympathetic understanding than The encore, Strauss's or Waltz", though ferent time and a branch of our musical tion than other parts program was played same depth and commitment that characterized the playing of the works mentioned above. One could feel especially as the performance progressed, Mr. Reiner's love and dedication for the work he does with great ability.

This communication, however, was definitely during the playing of Beethoven's "Leonore Overture Number 3", the first work on the program. During that time the orchestra seemed almost like a machine for music, as capable as machines are, that do not express human feeling and experience, which expression is the chief function of art. Reiner has no less feeling for music than other great conductors, but there was missing from the Overture that intangible element of feeling that unites the artist of a work with his audience.

However, of the Burlington concert by the Chicago Symphony Orchestra, it is the works of this century that are to be remembered in glory, for, through them the audience gained greater understanding of modern composers and of the lasting traditions of those who preceded them.

Meet The Catamounts

by DAVE SCHULTZ

This week we will meet the remaining backfield player along with the center and right end of the squad. These fellows are Bill Grey, John Babic and Frank Brown.

Halfback John Babic

JOHN BABIC - - - - - - - - - - - -

Playing halfback on this year's team is John (Jack) Babic, hailing from Jersey City, N. J. originally, and now from Union, N. J. At Snyder High School, in Jersey City, he was football captain in his senior year. He received all-county and all-state recognition that year. On top of this, John was voted the most valuable player in Jersey City, as well as winning the Kiwanis Club award, and the Babe Ruth Sportsmanship Award. Kimbal Union Academy was the next step for him before enrolling at UVM. There he played football, lacrosse, and basketball.

In his freshman year here, John was the leading backfield player on the team. For the past two years he has been the starting halfback on the varsity. He has received the nickname of the "Bonecrusher" because of his jarring tackles. Occupying most of John's extra time is participation in intra-mural sports, and in the Varsity Club. He especially likes intra-mural softball, and basketball, playing for his fraternity, Kappa Sigma.

Returning from a defeat at the hands of Hobart last Saturday, he believes the team lost the game because of uncalled for major mistakes. In reference to this he points out that the Catamount team has been plagued by fumbilitis for the past two seasons. The wind, in his estimation, was quite detrimental to our game, as it hampered the passing attack.

Looking ahead to the future games John sees a rough schedule in store for the team. However, he feels that if the fellows iron out their mistakes, the team has the potential of winning the rest of the games left this season. He predicts that the Rochester game will be the roughest one to go.

BILL GREY - - - - - - - - - - - -

Hailing from Grahamsville, N. Y., comes the right end of the team, in the person of Bill Grey. Bill attended three high schools in upstate New York. In his sophomore year at Greenwich High, he was a three letter man, playing football, basketball and baseball. Newfane High was where he spent his junior year, again participating in those three sports. Ending up at Tri-Valley High for his senior year, Bill was co-captain of the football team and was voted "Athlete Of The Year" there. In high school, Bill was a plunging fullback.

At UVM in his freshman year he was switched to end, where he once again did a commendable job. He was also third baseman for the Kitten nine. In his sophomore year along with being on the varsity football and baseball teams, he was elected to the Gold Key, where he served as president. This year Bill has been elected to the Junior Men's honorary, Key and Serpent which is quite an accomplishment for anyone. Bill is known around the football field as "Bongo." He has a tremendous stamina as he plays almost sixty minutes every game. Bill is a cadet in Advanced Air Force ROTC. He is treasurer of the Sigma Phi place.

Bill thought that the boys played a pretty good game against Hobart; but due to the worst officiating job he has ever witnessed, the team did not have a chance. This was the feeling of a few of the men on the squad besides Bill. He stated, "At times we looked real sharp, and at times we did not play nearly as well as we could have."

Looking ahead, Bill sees the team winning all the rest of its contests. He feels the team has the potential if they pull together. Looking to the next few seasons, he feels that this school should do something about giving out scholarships to athletes so that we won't have as poor a showing in the future as we have had in the past.

FRANK BROWN - - - - - - - - - -

St. Johnsbury's contribution to its state university is Frank Brown. In High School at Lyndon Institute, he was named to the All-State football team at the guard position. This was in 1951. Since then "Bud" has served in the armed forces, playing football for Fort Leavenworth, in Kansas. All told he has played a total of twelve years of football.

The Spectator By Jerry Heller

The immediate reaction from the class of '62, to my last editorial was one of indignation. This was something that I had anticipated and I was pleased that it did take place. Although the first reaction was pleasing to my ego, there was a secondary reaction that I had really hoped for and I believe it partially took place. The latter was supposed to bring out the true meaning behind the editorial. I expected the Frosh to peek through the thin curtain of editorial dramatics and see what I really wanted them to. The following events took place:

1. I received two mysterious phone calls, the second one coming while I was at home. I let the anonymous caller get his terrifying threats out of his system and then shrewdly detained him to get across my points. I was pleasantly surprised to find an understanding person behind the gruff voice who realized that I was really striving to get more men out for the team.

I might be able to make the class of '62 look bad now but if they come through with the spirit which I now know they have, they can show their real value to the school.

2. A mysterious white banner was hung between the two trees in front of Waterman. The banner read, "Let's see Heller's Spirit . . . Signed, Sneering and Brutish Freshmen." This sign was a puzzle to me as it was quite ambiguous. I didn't know if it meant that I was being challenged to show my own personal spirit or if it meant that someone wanted others to contract that rare disease on this campus called "school spirit." I hope it was the latter.

3. I attended the Frosh football game, which they won 14-6, defeating the R.P.I. freshmen. I've thoroughly convinced myself that the booing which accompanied my entrance into the stands was good hearted and I definitely was pleased to see a fair-sized crowd braving the miserable weather of the day. The spirit of the rooters matched that of the players who showed a drive that was faintly reminiscent of great UVM teams gone by.

4. One man came out for the team the day following my editorial. This may not sound like much but if one man felt something, whether it be school spirit, conscience, or just desire to play ball I'm satisfied and feel that I've accomplished something.

Amidst the pats on my back for having nerve enough to write a "potent" editorial, a friend asked me a question. "Why didn't you give credit to the guys who went out for the team." My big idealistic bubble burst in my face and I realized that I had become so carried away with my theme that I hadn't thought of these men. I would truthfully like to pay tribute to them at this time, not as just a gesture, but because I saw a good caliber ballplayer on the field this Saturday who plays hard and is willing to work for his school.

by STEVE COOPER

Last Saturday, October 11, was a cold, windy day in Burlington, Vermont. However, for Coach [illegible] Post of the Green and Gold Cross Country team, it was a great day. His team had just upset a previously undefeated Union College team (which was heavily favored) in a thrilling finish. The score was [illegible]. This was the first time in three years that the Cats had beaten this, always tough, opponent.

There were two outstanding features of this meet. First and foremost, Union's Pete Hoffman broke the old Burlington course mark of 24 2 set in last year's Yankee Conference championships with a fine running time of 23 31.

The other important factor in deciding this race was the employment of the "seven man displacement." This meant that Vermont's seven man club finished before Union's first five men crossed the line. (In cross-country meets, the first five places on each team are counted in the scoring) and it was by this seldom used scoring method that Vermont won the meet.

The place finishes are listed below:

1st place	--Hoffman	(U)
2nd place	--Cutts	(V)
3rd place	--Kolstrom	(V)
4th		(U)
5th		(U)

UVM Bows To Hobart, 18-14; To Face Rochester Away Sat.

by FRED ROBINSON

The undermanned UVM Catamounts played heads-up ball Saturday at Geneva, N.Y., but a costly fumble late in the fourth period, on the Vermont four, handed the game to Hobart College, 18-14. The windblown tilt was a heart-breaker for the Donnellymen who displayed the best line play yet, since they opened their season. The blocking and tackling was crisp and sharp, but the backfield couldn't seem to click when the situation called for it.

CATS LEAD - - - - - - - - - - - -

Vermont elected to kick off to start things rolling in the first canto with the 40 mile-an-hour wind at their back. Hobart grabbed the ball and moved it to their 40, where the jolting defense of UVM shook the ball loose and Johnny Marino pounced on the pigskin to give the Cats their first crack on offense. And all they needed was one crack, as Bob Fiance rifled a pass to Roy Greene who scooted over for the TD. Lou Petronaci swept end for the twin-pointer and UVM led 8-0. The remainder of the first quarter was an exchange of punts and the stanza ended with UVM holding the only score.

HOBART SCORES - - - - - - - - -

The second quarter started as the first had ended except that now Vermont was kicking into the wind. This proved to be the turning point as a Petronaci punt was blown back three yards behind the line of scrimmage. On a series of plays, Hobart crashed over for six, and after missing the point after attempt, UVM still led 8-6. The Cat offensive machine again came to a grinding halt when the Plainsmen intercepted a Fiance pass on their 35 and raced 65 yards to paydirt and the halftime lead, 12-8.

In the third period, Petronaci, after almost breaking through on a punt return, teamed up with Greene to carry the Cats into Hobart territory where Lou slashed over for the Vermont six-pointer. The extra point try failed and the Green and Gold led 14-12 as the stanza ended.

The fourth canto was played on even terms until the fatal closing seconds when a Vermont fumble on the UVM four presented Hobart with an 18-14 victory.

Halfback Roy Greene was the offensive standout for the Cats with some fine runs, and Jerry Mason, substituting for the injured Lou Hronek in the tackle slot, looked great on defense, breaking through the Hobart line to throw the Plainsman ballcarrier for big losses.

Vermont was hit hard by injuries in this game, which saw Lou Petronaci, Maynard Bush, Phil Chalifoux, Roy Greene, and Bill Simonds sit out part of the battle. Bush will probably be lost for the remainder of the season with a broken thumb.

Next week the Cats will travel to Rochester, NY, to tangle with Rochester who thus far this season are undefeated and unscored upon in three outings.

by PAUL STANTON

Coach Ed Donnelly's UVM gridders will take to the road once again this weekend, as the Cats prepare to face a [illegible]-packed University of Rochester eleven come Saturday.

This will mark the fourteenth meeting of the two clubs since 1916. UVM has won six, lost six, and tied one. Last year, the Yellowjackets topped the Catamounts, 14-6.

Thus far this season, Rochester is unbeaten and unscored upon in three games, while Vermont has dropped two decisions and tied one. Among the Yellowjackets' victims was Hobart, beaten 24-0. Hobart edged the Cats, 18-14, last Saturday.

Thirty-three men comprise the Rochester football team, which looms as the finest in the school's history. Parinello (left halfback), Briggs (right halfback) and Campbell (fullback) add great speed to the Yellow and Blue attack, while Gene Nicandri returns as their sparkling signal caller. Also back is Palvino, Rochester's Little All-American guard from last year.

Vermont will send a total of twenty-one men down to Rochester for the clash. The Cats will be minus the services of Maynard Bush, who broke his thumb in last week's game, and Lou Petronaci and Lou Hronek, both out of the line-up with injured knees.

Needless to say, this will be Vermont's toughest game of the year.

FROSH GRIDDERS TOPPLE R.P.I., 14-6

by PAUL SALVAGE

The Vermont Kittens took to the air last Saturday as they overpowered the R.P.I. freshmen, 14-6 in a penalty-packed football game at Centennial field.

The Kittens got off to a grand start when halfback Maynard Duquette made a startling run from deep in Vermont territory to the RPI twenty-seven yard line. However, UVM quarterback Don Palotto then made his only mistake in the game, an RPI quarterback Wade intercepted a pass meant for Don Johnson and ran the length of the field for a touchdown. This was the only score of the game for RPI. The Engineers led, 6-0.

The Kittens received the kickoff on their own thirty-seven yard line, whereupon Palotto completed three consecutive passes for three first downs, the first quarter ending with Vermont on the RPI twenty-seven yard line.

KITTENS TIE SCORE - - - - - -

In the beginning of the second period, the Kittens lost the ball, but they pushed RPI back to their own five yard line, and recovered a fumble giving them a first down with goal to go. Don Johnson ran around the end to tie the score, 6-6.

JOHNSON SCORES AGAIN - - - -

In the third quarter, Vermont recovered a fumble on the RPI twenty-five yard line, and after a series of plays, Johnson once again ran around the RPI end to give the Kittens another touchdown. Maynard Duquette then placed a pass into the arms of Johnson in the end zone for an extra 2 points, and Vermont led 14-6.

The fourth period was a see-saw battle with neither team making any serious threats. Outstanding on offense for the Kittens were Don Palotto, Maynard Duquette, and Don Johnson, while Tim Luzetti did some fine defensive work.

During this past week several interesting [illegible] appeared as the result of fraternity football action. The three top contenders; Phi Sig, TEP, and SIG Nu all remain unbeaten.

The results of last week's play were Phi Sig over Sig Phi, TEP over ATO, Sig Nu over Kappa Sig, SAE topping Phi Delt, Delt Psi tripping SAE, and TEP over AEPi.

The top game features the clash between Sigma Nu and TEP.

by PAUL STANTON

Last Saturday afternoon, before a chilled gathering behind the gym, the Fraternity All-Stars thoroughly crushed the Formidable Faculty in a curtailed four inning softball game, 12-5. Fierce winds and a driving hail storm caused the early termination of the intended seven inning fray.

The Greeks scored their twelve runs in the first three frames, as Bob (Fireball) Cochran bore down to retire the side (without a man reaching third) in the last stanza. Hal Burrell picked up the win for the "Beat Generation," tossing a nifty four hitter, and scattering eight walks.

Dick (Yogi) Marron walked to start the ball rolling for the Greeks in the first. Burrell whiffed, but Tony Crovo's single sent Marron to second. Newell popped to the pitcher, but Wester walked to load the bases. Livolsi's free ride sent Marron home with the first run of the game. Lewis drew a pass, Crovo scoring. Ray Wiener then singled two more runs home, before Wedwaldt popped out to retire the side.

Dean Kent and Bill Steele both walked to start things off for the Faculty. After Potash popped out, Christy unleashed a shot to center field to clear the bases. Nadworny singled, but teammates Clifford and Gould left him stranded on first, both popping out.

Each team pushed two more runs across in the second inning. The All-Stars led, 6-5, going into the top of the third.

The Greeks pounded out six more runs in their half of the third to wrap up the contest. The six insurance runs came as a result of six walks, a single and two mis-plays. Neither side scored in the fourth, as the game ended.

VOL. 76 UNIVERSITY OF VERMONT BURLINGTON, VERMONT OCTOBER 19, 1959 EXTRA

1959 Tuition Raised To $1040 For Out-Of-Staters

Vermonters Pay $300 Providing Legislature Accepts Budget

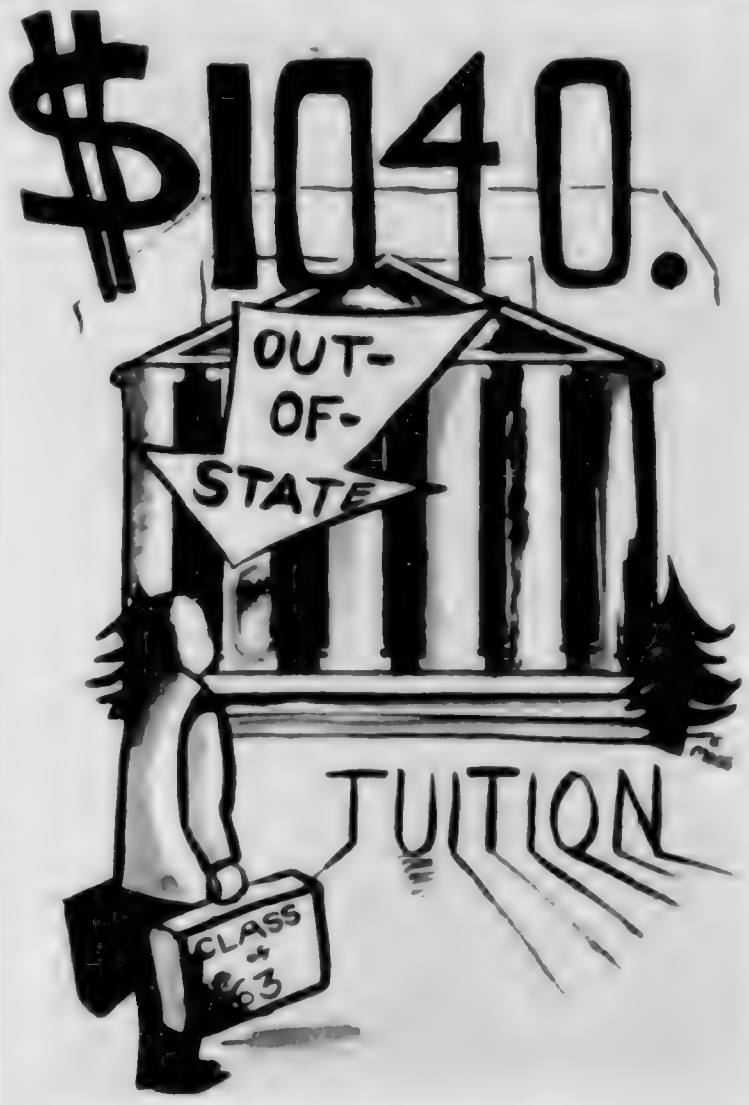
BURLINGTON, VT., OCT. 18 - The University of Vermont both increased its base tuition (from $835 to $1040) and adopted a 1959-61 operating budget which will ask the Legislative of Vermont to lower tuition for the majority of Vermonters enrolling at this 20th oldest American institution of higher learning.

The seeming paradox came about this way

The base tuition charge was increased from the present $835 to $1040 effective in the fall of 1959. In commenting, University President John T. Fey said that the tuition increase was directly related to the University's plan to increase its faculty salaries in line with the critical national need to do so.

The action by the Trustees will mean a $205 tuition increase for every out-of-state undergraduate enrolling next fall. More than 1200 undergraduates are included in this year's non-resident enrollment.

What the action will mean for residents of Vermont will have to await action by the 1959 Legislature. The University is requesting $2,010,540 for the next biennium in order to peg resident tuition at $300.



This would be an increase of $75 for Vermonters enrolling in the College of Agriculture and Home Economics, for state appropriations presently set a $225 resident tuition charge for that college. Also affected will be Vermonters enrolling in elementary and junior high education.

However, the $300 tuition figure, if approved by the Legislature through the appropriation requested, would be a $45 tuition reduction for Vermonters enrolling in all other undergraduate divisions at Vermont. Their tuition was set at $345 by the 1955 Legislature which first voted funds to make it possible for the University to reduce tuition for Vermonters enrolling in these divisions.

The $300 resident tuition figure, President Fey said, is being recommended to the 1959 Legislature because "it is in line with the low tuition which has, since 1955, provided a reasonable opportunity for higher education for qualified young Vermont men and women.

"Our enrollment figures," he said, "show that low tuition at UVM has encouraged worthy young men and women who otherwise might have been denied an opportunity for education.

"A primary factor in the decision to seek the $300 fee," he said, "is our conviction that it would be more equitable for the University and the state to offer Vermonters one tuition rate for any of the undergraduate divisions at their University. Thus we are recommending the $300 figure to the 1959 Legislature to remove the disparity between the $225 and $345 figures presently established."

Bond Issue Requested For New Library

BURLINGTON, VT., Oct. 18 - The University of Vermont will bring a request for $2,000,000 for a new library before the 1959 Legislature when it convenes in January.

Announcement of the plan to seek a new library was made today following a Board of Trustees meeting at which a proposed biennial budget of more than $13,000,000 was approved. The budget calls for some $6,207,000 in state funds, an increase of $1,819,000 over state appropriations received for the biennium which ends this July.

While the University will ask the State to provide a $2,000,000 bond issue to permit immediate action on the Library, the plan approved today by the college's trustees would pay half the cost of the library back to the state over a period of years through a $30 library fee which would be charged each student.

The University's President, John T. Fey - who will be making his "maiden voyage" to the Legislature which made the University "an instrumentality of the state" in 1955 - described the need for a new library as "urgent."

The present library, he said, was built in 1885 to serve a student body of under 400 and to accommodate some 30,000 books. It is now "seriously inadequate" to the needs of more than 3200 students. The University's 200,000 library volumes have "overcrowded and overflowed" the stacks available to the point where many volumes have housed in offices and rooms in other buildings.

"Of great concern is the fact that the Library will seat only 175 students when recommended standards would require the University provide seats for about 25 per cent of its undergraduates."

"We do not deem it either wise or honorable for us to put off seeking to meet this need. Therefore, he said, "we are hopeful that the people of Vermont will be able to find the additional means to make possible a new library in the next biennium in order that their overall investment in the education of their young people is not allowed to be compromised."

EDITORIAL:

"So Long UVM..."

"T-U-I-T-I-O-N, come down for us, why you got up where nobody can see." This is the cry of many students, especially undergraduates and the future cry of high school seniors. The University of Vermont has raised tuition again to a new high of $1040. How many of the out-of-staters here at UVM are going to find it difficult to return to school next year because of this raise? How many more students in the future will be unable to attend UVM?

The in-staters benefit by this raise, providing that the state legislature will go along with the new budget, and continue to pay the remainder of Vermonter's tuition. Now the proposed amount is $300 for all Vermonters, so in-staters should have no gripes. Their only problem will be if the legislature of Vermont will accept this plan and pay the rest of the tuition.

President Borgmann saw that one-third of the students in 1954 were Vermonters because of the high-instate tuition. This was not a state university in his estimation and therefore, the state in 1955 passed the amended charter which lowered the Vermonters tuition, which the state paid the remainder of the tuition. Hereby, the school receives the same tuition from every student with the state paying the difference of the in-stater students. Vermont, being a small state, relied on the enrollment of out-of-stater to keep their financial status up, and every two years this tuition has risen steadily while not affecting the Vermonters whose tuition remains the same.

The only good of this new tuition raise is the increase of faculty salaries which raises the standard of a school and keeps the college on a high caliber. This enables our salaries to compete with those of other colleges and therefore, we will keep the high esteemed faculty here at UVM, instead of losing them to more financially attractive institutions. This then becomes a need to help our faculty, which is all well and good. This extra money becomes an obligation on the University's part to aid our faculty financially. Fixed salaries is a matter of business dollars and cents, but should this burden rest on the student's shoulders as a high tuition raise?

We admit that the faculty salaries are below the median figure, but when $205 comes from our pockets, then it begins to hurt. Some of the students have alotted so much for their education and all of a sudden this amount is not enough. What happens now to those who can not raise this amount, or those who have other brothers and sisters in college and their fathers can not give them any more? This certainly will force undergraduate to discontinue their education here at UVM. Is this morally right on the University's part? It would have been better for the school just to raise the tuition of incoming students and let the now undergraduates pay the same amount until they graduate.

Much as we feel that the faculty ought to have higher salaries, we can not help wonder whether students are going to get an education which is $205 better. It looks as if we come out on the short end.

This is a CYNIC extra bringing you the facts and only the FACTS concerning the issue of a raise in tuition to be requested by the University of Vermont

There will be an issue of The CYNIC on October 23. The deadline for this issue is Tuesday, October 21 at 9 A.M.

VOL. 76 UNIVERSITY OF VERMONT, BURLINGTON, VERMONT OCTOBER 23, 1958 NO. 13

Budget Increase Proposed By Board Of Trustees

ASK LEGISLATURE TO SUBSIDIZE VERMONTER'S TUITION

The University of Vermont will request an increase of $1,819,000 in the biennial appropriation it receives from the state, it was announced here following a meeting of the Board of Trustees, which adopted a total operating budget of more than $13,805,000 for the next two years.

In related actions, the Board voted to increase UVM's base tuition from $835 per year to $1040 per year, effective in the fall of 1959; and to ask the state for $2,000,000 in capital funds for a new library. Under a plan approved by the Trustees, UVM would establish a $30 library fee to pay $1,000,000 of the library's cost to the state over a period of years.

University President John T. Fey said the University's proposed operating budget of $6,805,000 for 1959-60 and $7,000,000 for 1960-61 provide for a continuation of the University's present education, service and research programs. "The University is not seeking operating funds to begin new or additional programs," he said. The 1959-61 budget compares with an operating budget of $5,566,000 for the first year of the present biennium, and $5,936,000 for this year.

The former clerk of the U.S. Supreme Court, in his first year at the helm of the University, said the proposed increase in UVM's total operating budget is accounted for primarily by the "need to increase our salaries in line with a critical national need to do so."

In commenting on the tuition increase authorized by the Trustees today, Dr. Fey said it was "directly related both to plans to increase faculty salaries and to the amount of money we need to ask from the people of the state if they are to keep UVM tuition low for their qualified young people."

Under the proposed operating budget, the increase in UVM's total operational expenditures would be financed by the state and by tuitions paid by students. "These are the two major sources of income to which we may turn," he said. "It is significant that some $721,000 or 40 percent of the increase we are asking from the state will go directly to Vermont residents in the form of reduced tuition at their state university."

Breakdown of UVM's requests for state appropriations, with comparison of appropriations for the current biennium follows:

TUITION REDUCTION: $2,010,540, is requested for the biennium. This is an increase of $721,010 over the $1,289,520 received in the current biennium.

TEACHING COSTS OF THE COLLEGE OF AGRICULTURE AND HOME ECONOMICS: $878,235.07 is requested for the 1959-61 biennium. This is an increase of $176,235.07 over the $702,000 received in 1957-59.

EXTENSION SERVICE: the service division of the College of Agriculture: $905,000 is requested. This is $215,000 more than the $690,000 appropriated by the 1957 Legislature. The request is based on a need to match federal funds.

EXPERIMENT STATION: the research division of the College of Agriculture: $516,000 is requested for 1959-61. This is a $151,000 increase over the $365,000 appropriated by the 1957 Legislature. This request also is based upon a need to match federal funds.

RELATED AGRICULTURAL SERVICES: including some testing services: $207,000 is requested, a $41,000 increase over the $166,000 appro-

Varieties Presents

Vermont Varieties, a revue type musical, studded with satire, original songs, humorous skits, dances, and individual acts, will be presented by the University Players during Homecoming Weekend in Memorial Auditorium on Saturday, November 1, at 7:30 P.M.

The show will feature several satirical skits: "Inside the Infirmary"; a new view of Romeo and Juliet in "East Side Story"; the lament of counsellors at "Camp Damp-Cot"; a look at the Do-It-Yourself craze based on "Phoenix '55", a revue which appeared in New York City; and the consequences if "UVM Goes Commercial".

Director Greg Falls announced a partially completed cast, including the reappearance of stars from Varieties '57, Carol Demos, Joan Loveridge, and Rita Bilak. The new performers chosen are June Brown, Mike Solby, Toni Feola, Alice Zalon, Terry Rubin, Paul Schimelfenning, Jane Page, Andy Bailey, and members of the Dance Workshop, the Converse Men's Chorus, and a quartet composed of John Bulger, Millard Simmons, John Russell, and Dave Hoelterling.

The song lyrics and melodies, practically all written especially for the show, will be played by accompanist Jack Ovitt, and include songs like, "Mono Blues", "Counsellor's Lament", "Out Behind the Barn", and "Miss Infirmary".

Mr. Ed Feidner has designed the sets, and serves as technical director for the production. Peter Schoffstall and Peg Martel hold positions as Stage Manager and Business and Publicity Chairman respectively. Dorothy DeCecio is chairman of publicity for the University Players.

Candidates Will Reign

This year, as in past, the King and Queen of Homecoming will be chosen from members of the freshmen class. Thirty-four students from the class of 1962 have been selected to represent their individual dorm or floor in the contest to determine who will reign over the Homecoming festivities.

Each of the girls has a busy schedule planned, although only one of the twenty-two maybe crowned Queen. All of the girls will ride in convertibles in the Homecoming Peerade, and they also have been invited to appear on a local television program.

The fact that there will be no campaigning is one feature that distinguishes this election from the others on campus. Pictures of the royalty candidates will be posted in Waterman On Monday, October 27, then, on Wednesday, October 29, the entire student body will be given a chance to cast their ballot. On Friday, October 31, the big secret will be revealed at the Homecoming Ball, when band leader Urbie Green announces the winners with all due ceremony.

The candidates for queen and the dorms they represent are as follows: Dagmar Pfanzelter, Mason 2; Helen Osgood, Mason 3; Ann Van Gilder, Mason 4; Margaret Sweet, Mason 5; June Vecciolla, Hamilton 1; Joyce Alexander, Hamilton 2; Susan Clair, Hamilton 3; Susan Washburn, Hamilton 4; Anne Parker, Simpson 2; Beverly Brown, Simpson 3; Patricia Dean, Simpson 4; Carol Koningsburg, Robinson; Doreen Hector, Coolidge 1; Nancy MacAdams, Coolidge 2; Marcia Smith, Coolidge 3; Diane Hedley, Allen House, Patricia Pires.

Goodman Plugs Green

Dixieland in its finest form will be featured by the Urbie Green Sextet during the half hour intermission of the Homecoming Ball. Urbie's reputation for superb interpretation of both dixieland and progressive jazz is famous throughout all music circles. The versitile trombone stylist has appeared as a part of All Star Groups at every Newport Jazz Festival since its inception.

Benny Goodman, after his recent "Red" series concert here, praised Green with, "Urbie's one of my boys, he's great!" Members of the Goodman band echoed this with, "Urbie's tremendous"; "He's too much"; An outstanding musician"; "Glad to hear Urbie's coming up, you'll like him."; "A wonderful guy, and a top-knotch trombonist."

Urbie's experience in the field of music, partially listed in last week's CYNIC, easily shows that all those attending the Homecoming Ball will enjoy the best in dance music, and the best in jazz.

Transformed into a spacious ballroom with the aid of streamers of fall colors, Memorial Auditorium will be the scene of Friday's Homecoming Ball, entitled "Autumn Enchantment." As in past years, the dance will be semi-formal, which means that the girls have the option of wearing a cocktail dress or a formal. And see, flowers for the date is not necessary for the dance, but a Mum for Saturday's game is a must. Tickets for the Ball maybe purchased for $3.50 per couple in lower Waterman, the UVM Book Store, Bailey's Music Rooms.

See you at the Homecoming Ball, on October 31 at 9 P.M.

Increased Funds Felt Solution To Library Problems

Last Sunday, October 19, a number of radical decisions were made at a meeting of the Board of Trustees. Among these was a plan for the construction of a new $2,000,000 library on this campus.

The University intends to ask the 1959 Vermont State Legislature for a $2,000,000 bond in order to permit immediate action for the construction of this library. UVM intends to pay off half of this bond ($1,000,000) within 15 to 20 years. This sum will be paid from a library fee of $30 to be charged to each student in attendance at the University.

According to Mr. Haviland, the director of Billings Library, the proposed building will be constructed by Freeman, French, and Freeman of Burlington. This is the same firm that constructed the new girls' dormitories. The expected site of this new edifice is between Morrell Hall and the men's gymnasium.

Plans call for a building of six stories with a base area of 72 x 180 feet. The architecture will be modern, but will be in harmony with the present campus buildings. Most probably, it will be of brick construction.

The present capacity of Billings Library is 175 students whereas the new capacity will be in the vicinity of 400 students. Volumes numbering up to 500,000 are to be housed in this new structure.

Current library stack rooms which are located at several points around campus, will close down and the books will be moved to the new building. However, the Coolidge Library at Redstone Campus will continue to function.

Mr. Haviland also stated that new books will not be acquired expressly for the new housing, but a collection is to be built up over a period of years.

Future plans for the old Billings Library have not been disclosed as yet.

Norwich Bus

Tickets for seats on the chartered bus to the Norwich game will go on sale in lower Waterman.

The cost of the round-trip tickets will be $1.00. Tickets for the game itself are on sale in the University Bookstore for $1.00.

Teaching

All students who expect to do student teaching in the spring semester must fill out application forms immediately indicating their teaching fields and any conditions which should be taken into account in determining their placement. These forms maybe obtained from Waterman 143.

Panhel Lowers Rushing Average

Panhellenic has voted that a girl must attain a one-semester 72% scholastic average (or the preceding semester in order to be pledged to a sorority during rushing. This requirement will go into effect for the first time this year, and is the result of several years of debate and discussion.

The Council has for many years required an initiation average of 75%, in the belief that a girl should not attempt to assume the privileges and responsibilities of sorority life without being scholastically secure. It is even more important, therefore, for a freshman or new student, who is just becoming acquainted with academic life on the college level, to have demonstrated sound scholarship before entering into the activities of a sorority. An average of 75% has been and still is required for eligibility to receive an open bid.

Each sorority holds foremost among its goals the ideal of high scholarship. As students, and as sorority women, we feel that we take a step nearer to that goal by establishing a pledging average.

Full House Swings As Goodman Delights Many

by Dave Colburn

On Thursday, October 16, the "King of Swing" Benny Goodman played to one of the largest crowds that Burlington's Memorial Auditorium has seen in many moons. At the end of the year, when the jazz is still ringing in our ears and culture has again been quietly ignored, dusted, and packed away into its dark corner, it will certainly be said that Goodman was one of the largest, if not the largest, attraction of the 1958-59 Series programs. Not forgetting Errol Garner and L'il Abner, of course.

Goodman himself played, as always, superbly. His band, although lacking the real fire of the famous Benny Goodman band of the [illegible] swing (Gene Krupa, Lionel Hampton, Harry James, [illegible]) was far more than adequate. Their interpretations of such old favorites as "The Angels Sing", "One O'Clock Jump" and Cole Porter's "Riding High" watered many a nostalgia plant to life again.

Betty Bennet, the vocalist, left something to be desired in my mind. She appeared particularly in Matt Dennis' "Angel Eyes", to be trying hard to imitate the "misty" school of singing that has gained such great popularity in the past few years. (June Chrystie, Chris Conner, Julie London). However, she doesn't quite make the grade. Her voice, rather than being called "misty", might be defined as "foggy" or "drizzly". Not "misty".

At the end of the first half, before intermission, the quartet, consisting of Goodman plus drummer Ray Burnes, pianist Roland Hanna, and a bass player with whom I am not familiar, played some really good jazz. Especially intriguing to many was the interplay--the "call and answer"--between clarinet and piano. However, this in no way discredits the other members of the group. The four together created exciting, stimulating sounds that one seldom hears even from greats in the jazz field.

After intermission everything broke away; inhibitions were loosed, scores more or less ignored, and the band swung into such Goodman classics as "Sing, Sing, Sing" and "Cherokee". It was with great reluctance that I left the performance after the final number an sole encore, "One O'Clock Jump".

Unfortunately this was not true of a great many in the audience. I am not going to lecture; those who feel above being lectured to may stop reading here.

Encore is originally a French word. It means "more" or "again". In our language it is transposed into a noun, used in theatrical or entertainment terms to mean an extra, something beyond what is on the program. An encore is generally brought about by audience response i.e. clapping, cheering, etc. Excuse me if I speak very basically. I was under the impression that everyone here knew about encores. Obviously I was wrong.

The minute Goodman finished the program the audience got up and began to leave. I was shocked. To do this after such a great performance is not only impolite, unmannerly. Moreover, it is insulting to the performer. It must have taken great willpower and self control on his behalf to play the one encore that he did. Even after he began to play, people continued to walk out, even to talk. As a performer, Benny Goodman in Burlington was a great success. As an audience, as host, we were an utter failure.

Tuition Raise Brings Remarks, Reactions, And Problems

Students React To Increase

By JULES OLDER

The following is a list of answers given by UVM students in regard to the new tuition hike.

Pat Schlemenz, Bennington, Vt. - I don't think the tuition raise will solve the money problem. As the price goes up, less and less out-of-staters will apply to the school. The state itself ought to pay more towards the teachers' salary.

Richard Smith, Boston, Mass. - It is pretty cheap here now. Every other university is raising its fees, I guess we have to also. Besides, why shouldn't the out-of-staters pay more? The school is primarily for Vermonters.

Burt Weaver, Bristol, Vt. - It is pretty obvious that the school is trying to discourage out-of-state students and encourage natives. This is a state university, but I don't think it's quite fair to the non-residents. The $30 drop won't mean much for the Vermonter, but $200 will certainly hurt the others.

I think it's good to get a cross-section of different walks of life. Vermonters can learn alot by association with others.

Bobbi Sims, Plainfield, N.J. - The people responsible for this action are discouraging capable and sincere students and thus lowering the standing of the school. The pupils being kept out are capable of adding a great deal academically, socially, and activity-wise. For the same price they can go to a private university.

Joy Mason, Rutland, Vt. - I really think it's a little steep. Wellsley costs about the same price.

Joyce Zipf, Boston, Mass. - No educational institution is good if it has only one type of people.

Charles Rooney, Massena, N.Y. - It's probably worth it in the long run to keep the quality of the teaching staff but it is rather hard on people working their way through school.

Bill Sensenig, Norwich, Vt. - For the good of the school, the board shouldn't go through with this. Through a mixed group we can find out what other people are like instead of going along day by day in our own set ways.

Dave Selib, Brookline, Mass. - I gather they don't want us out-of-staters. I've never seen a Board of Trustees with such hindsight. Non-residents add something to the school, an element of diversification. Qualified new students are being chased away.

I can see a proportional raise including the Vermonters, but the way it's set up now is penny wise and pound foolish.

By ROGER ZIMMERMAN

Student reaction, both pro and con, is expressing itself from one end of the campus to the other. At least this activity is one beneficial result from the expected tuition raise. I have made a sincere effort to get as much as a "cross-section" as possible of the varying reactions displayed throughout the school. However, I must admit that this was indeed a difficult task as the majority of students interviewed were definitely taking the "con" side of the tuition controversy. Without biased interpretation, here are some of the results:

Pat Fenn (Vermont) - "The ratio of out-of-state students will definitely drop if this tuition hike is carried through. The overall effect will be detrimental to the school. I feel that the $300 tuition for Vermonters is sufficient."

Dave Newton (California) - "It seems to me that the university is taking advantage of the increasing influx of college students." Dave feels that there should be a definite margin between the tuition paid by out-of-state students and that paid by Vermonters. However, he asks, "Why is this margin as great as it is?"

Tom Siccama (a veteran from New Jersey) - "One of my objections to this whole deal is the reduction of in-state tuition. Not only this, but there will be no increase in G.I. benefits to cover the tuition raise."

Dick Marron (New York) - "I'm in favor of the tuition raise if it will help to raise the standards of UVM, and if it will also aid the administration in its dealings with state legislature."

Charles Tierney (Vermont) - "To my mind, the $45 reduction for Vermonters won't make such a big difference to their budget, whereas the $205 increase required of all out-of-state students will definitely effect their chances of remaining here." He suggests letting the present out-of-state students graduate, and then raise the tuition for the incoming class which starts next September.

Larry Ostrow (New York City) - Larry agrees in principle with the tuition hike because "UVM is below the median of academic pay"; but he does not think that the degree of increase is rational, and further feels that this increase will possibly result in the loss of potential alumni. One of Larry's suggestions for mitigating the financial burden carried by the student is to "have more state and federal aid in the way of long-range student loans and scholarship."

Harry Cutler (New Jersey) - Harry understands the administration's viewpoint with respect to the tuition issue; however, he says it would be unfortunate if the added amount of tuition did result in the loss of potential out-of-state students.

Deans Comment On Tuition

By LINDA SACK and DAVE COBURN

The reaction of the student body to the raise in tuition made apparent the need to explain the reasons for such action. CYNIC reporters interviewed Dean Rowell, Administration; Dean King, Education and Nursing; Dean McKee, College of Technology; Dean of Men Clifford; Dean Kidder, College of Arts and Sciences; and Dean Kent of the Graduate College.

The following is a summary of their comments and explanations: For several years there has been an attempt to increase the University's faculty salaries so that they might be equitable with salary scales in the northeastern colleges and neighboring schools. Recently the Federal Government's Committee on Higher Education proposed a salary plan whereby there should be an increase of 33 1/3% in the pay of all teachers the first year and within the next five years a total raise of 50%. Even with the new tuition cost of $1040, the suggested raise will not be met by the University. However, it will enable us to assume a median range in the scale of salaries in other schools, and will enable capable, ambitious faculty members to remain on campus. They will no longer have to, in a sense, subsidize the cost of educating the students by accepting low salaries, though tuition for the student body still does not represent at least half of the cost of education.

Many have expressed concern about being able to pay for a year at college with this added expense. As Dean McKee said, though, "This increase is in line with those in every activity and service. Parents' salaries have probably been raised also, to meet the higher cost of living."

However, to aid the student and his family in paying the annual charge of attending college, Dean Rowell suggested using loan funds presently available in the University. Though $25,000 was set aside last year for out-of-state scholarships and it is probable that money will be reserved again for this purpose, he pointed out that the trend is to borrow money which can be paid back after completion of the course of study. From past experiences, this has proved to be suc-

Miscellaneous

TUITION: The tuition raise has now settled in the minds of every student at UVM and the repercussions are reverberating in these "hallowed halls of learning." The coffee shop, lounge, and other gathering-places have groups discussing this issue. Pros and cons are being debated but the realization that it is true must be faced and nothing can be done. Undergraduates have to face the problem of obtaining $205 or else find another institution to attend, for instance, their own state schools, which will be cheaper for them.

PARKING: To go along with last week's editorial, we find this idea from Syracuse University: "Sophomores at Syracuse University will not be allowed to have cars on campus. This is the school's latest step in trying to solve this parking problem, which is 85 per cent of the college-affiliated autos can not be parked on university lots. So, as of September 1, no Syracuse freshmen and sophomores who live in fraternities, sororities, campus living centers or near campus will be allowed cars. Veterans and students living beyond a mile of the center of campus are exempt from the restrictions." From their newspaper, the DAILY ORANGE, we find this statement: "those of us who can afford cars and manage to finagle parental approval probably look darkly on the rule, but as students we should be learning to develop mature attitudes toward problems such as this, and from looking at the statistics, no one can deny that somewhere some restrictions had to be made." Should we do this???

STAFF: The CYNIC staff is undergoing a few changes of staff members this week because of the resignation of some of the past editors. Their resignations are due to other commitments which conflict with their work on the paper and they felt this was the best solution. At the same time we have undertaken to amend our constitution in order to improve the efficiency of the staff and the training of new staff members. This will be announced in a few weeks as soon as the amendments are past by all committees.

RUMOR: Therefore, all rumors about the firing of individuals on this staff should be extinguished because of the above statements. The word rumor is a horrible one and it effects the truth of many statements which causes troubles to all concerned.

PRESSES: The last topic refers to the future of the CYNIC. We tried to put out a short paper telling the facts of the tuition raise, which took us a few days to get out to the students. This is due to the fact that the news broke over the weekend and our printers do not print or work on weekends. We are not "running down" George Little Press because through them the CYNIC has received fine cooperation and help and without them the CYNIC would never go to press. The point of the future is for the CYNIC to have their own presses and press room, in order to put out not only a weekly paper but to extend the paper three or four times a week. Therefore, the news on campus and the world can be kept up-to-date. This may seem a far-fetched concept, but one for the future in bettering the coverage of this, your newspaper.

Agreement

Dear Mr. Heller,

Congratulations on your article which was printed in the Oct. 9th edition of the CYNIC. I agree with your principle.

I do feel, however, that your method of "waking up the freshmen" is a right step in the wrong direction so to speak. Your use of the words "brutish and sneering", "ridiculous", and "chicken or stupid" seem to lack completely any tact whatsoever, when used in describing a class which has only lately stopped gloating over the fact that they were intelligents enough to gain entrance to this University. (In some cases the gloating continues.)

Rather than a bale which would remedy this regretable situation, your article acted as an irritant which naturally chafes each "indignant" freshman. (Notice the name-calling and controversy which has already arisen.)

Being an 135 pound "weakling" myself, I realize the embarrassing situation in which your worthy upperclassman must have found himself. I also realize the more embarrassing situation in which he would have found himself had he "gone out there and showed them how to do it."

Again my congratulations on your courage in attacking so formidable (in numbers) a foe as the Class of '62. I hope that my slight criticism is of some use to you.

Sincerely,

James Allan, '62

Bankrupt

Dear Sir:

Thank you for the very enlightening extra issue of the CYNIC.

We certainly think the administration of U.V.M. made a wise move when they decided to raise the already too high out-of-state tuition. How clever to desire better quality and better paid faculty. They will come in handy when the academic standards are lowered to accommodate a majority of students from comparatively 3rd rate Vermont secondary institutions rather than those from large metropolitan areas in Massachusetts, New York, Connecticut, Pennsylvania, or New Jersey. With academic standards sliding toward rock-bottom, with fraternity life squelched, and wine cellars dry, even those rich playboys who are usually attracted to "country club" colleges, will look elsewhere.

Congratulations, Vermont! What we give you five years to go bankrupt.

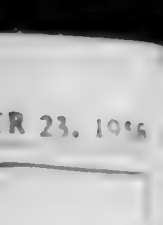
Measure Spirit



The CYNIC has just published its annual appeal to the freshmen to get out and try to awaken the smoldering embers of Vermont spirit. We have news for the Freshmen---- don't bother!! It's not worth it!! For even if you managed to get a little fire going, some big upper classman would come along and relieve himself by putting it out. But this is starting to sound like a sermon from cloud 7 and nix to that for I wouldn't want to take over the job of the Dean of Men. This letter is just going to be a discussion of a quote which I observed in a book by Dr. Ernest Baldwin of Cambridge and it has to do with mutations and their rela-

Someone said:

". . . the University of Vermont will become an oversized high school for (Vermont) students . . ." but the trustees are more concerned with raising the salary scale and this in itself is good. Theoretically, then, the next in-coming class will benefit from a happier, more secure faculty, who are eating more and better food. Some of them will even have new clothes. I cannot think of anything more immediately wonderful about it. There are limitations to my thankfulness about the tuition raise . . . especially in such other obvious conclusions as:

The tuition hike will flood the school with Vermonters. It would also seem that there will be a steadily increasing number. This means need for more classroom space. As an example: one of my courses deserves seminar treatment, but what it gets is seventy-five students jammed into one long room. Between the lack of air, the distance from the professor and his laconic lecture (for which I don't blame him much) the course is . . . sadly used. There are other courses like this. There will be more.

The request for a new, and not just an addition to the old library, is a fine example of the positive thinking being done in the President's office. I wish the tuition raise were as well grounded. The Billings library, bless that creaking old dust-catch, need

Hello there. From the Public Relations office at the University of Vermont came this release: "Oct. 18 The University of Vermont both increased its basic tuition (from $835 to $1040) and adopted a 1959-6 operating budget which will ask the Legislature of Vermont to lower tuition for the majority of Vermonters enrolling at this 20th oldest American institution of higher learning."

I guess this has hit all of you as hard as it has me. Our parents are not millionaires and for those of us who are paying our own way it is even worse. This University, as it seems to me, is trying to attain the status of the "20th oldest American institution of higher FINANCES." I realize that to go to college nowadays is a great opportunity. An education is one of the most important factors in modern times. But without an education, one cannot do very much. But it is schools such as this, that are hindering the expansion of the educational system.

The University of Vermont has a name and a very well established one at that. Why the Board of Trustees are trying to keep the out-of-staters or in other words the "intruders" away is beyond my conception. Before this big tuition jump, this was the most expensive state university in the whole country. Now it is well on its way to being the most expensive UNIVERSITY in the country. I don't think it is necessary to say any more because what good will it do. The old saying goes "what is done, is done." Besides they never said couldn't be done," so they did it. No matter how much squawking any of us do, it will not help. C'est La Vie. I'll say one thing, and that is if I were a freshman, I just might pack my belongings and leave this place in June and go to a state university in my home state, because I just know when little ole me is not wanted.

As the population of the country is increasing and it is now at 175,000,000, the enrollment at colleges and universities are also increasing. The college enrollment is now approximately 1,800,000 full-time students. This is the sixth year in a row that enrollment has increased. It will probably exceed two and a half million with the junior colleges, and part-time students counted.

Here are a few facts about college students that were gathered by the Commission on the College Student of the American Council on Education. "Joe College is no longer," the commission found. "His place has been taken by a much abler and highly individualistic seeker after independence rather than conformity. This student is seriously intent on preparation for a career, likely to be working his way through and much more interested in a concert or exploring religious ideas than in campus traditions, activities or Fraternities. Even interest in athletics has diminished. Today's student is older and may often be married, and his life is no longer wholly dominated by the college. His outside interests are much greater. "As far as this University is concerned, this does not hold true. Fraternities are still the main organization on campus. The University is slowly but surely trying to mitigate their necessity and in my opinion will eventually kill them. Rumor has it that a new upperclassmen dorm is going to be built. Men who cannot live in a fraternity house will have to live in the dorms and will have to eat in the cafeteria. This will mean that the new pledges in February will not be able to eat in the fraternity house till they are able to live there. The only way the fraternities will be able to come out of all this still in one piece, will be for them to build larger houses. I hope that the fraternity system will survive here because it brings men closer together and teaches them to live with one another.

Here are a few quips to end off today: Married Life: Living without love is like not loving at all, so why live huh???

Father to Son: I hear all you college boys ever think of is wine, women, and song.

Son to Father: No, Dad, we don't sing so much.

So long for now.

banishment. Among other things I've lost my chivalry there. If I see an empty chair, with closed books on the table in front of it, and have to do some work there, I take the chair. There's no other way. Women and children last. I have seen the time when the waiting crowd was stretched from the entrance door to the first tables.

So the library idea is good and the motive behind the tuition raise is good. But will not the LACK of out of-state students mean that it will be necessary for

> "It is a general tenet of evolutionary theory that changes in animals take place..... probably by a series of genetic mutations."

Certainly, today, this point is well founded upon scientific fact and it is my intention to show how this fact is valuable when related to our everyday college affairs. Since we have agreed that mutations do exist let me further assert that it has been shown that most mutations that we learn anything about are helpful to the species in advancing itself. In other words most mutations are favorable for they allow the organism to stand out and survive where the others die. But why stop in our discussion with lower animals and forget about man ----you and I? One of you might be a mutation. Probably Einstein was a mutation or Henry James of Van Gogh. All men who are exceptionally good in their field probably have some little oddity in their minds which makes them different----some mutation.

But how did these men find out that they had oddities? Obviously by trying everything. By getting out of the "coffee shop" and sticking their odd little minds into everything finding out just what they matched up with. And the important thing is that they did this regardless of what their bridge partner said. One of you might be a mutation and be in a position to help out struggling mankind or on a smaller scale be able to contribute to the next school function. Imagine if the first giraffe with an extra long neck felt shy and bent down in order to conform with the others. He would have died as all the rest when the low source of food had been exhausted. If he was a smart animal, and history shows he was, he probably stretched his neck far out and fattened himself on the tenderest untouched leaves at the tops of the trees. Because he used his mutation he stood out and survived.

And so it goes with every society. It is the mutant who has something to contribute because he can do something better than anyone else. The usual answer I get is that people exclaim that they are just average and definitely not a mutant. But I ask how are they measuring themselves? By the Dean's List? By a football player? By Miss Vermont? By whether or not they smoke Marlboro's? No, No, and again no! This is no measure. Did the giraffe measure himself? No sir. He just went out and started eating and found out his neck was longer. Take your cue from there. Get out and try something. Studying, singing, dancing, yelling at a football game and if you find you do it better than the others then keep right at it regardless of the cutting glances from your so called "friends".

Current and future teaching and research grants accounted for three-fourths of that figure, with a total of $369,064.23. Largest single grant accepted was $100,000 from the U.S. Public Health Service for research over a period in UVM's department of pharmacology.

Gifts to the University amounted to $31,440.30, while scholarships from outside sources rounded out the total with $16,145.

FAR EAST

Last week Mr. Dulles said that he was not in favor of turning the islands of Quemoy and Matsu over to the Chinese Communists. This was despite the Chinese Communists extension of the cease-fire for two more weeks. No official reports have been issued on the progress of the negotiations between U.S. Ambassador Jacob Beam and Communist Envoy Wang Pingnan at Warsaw.

Dulles, at his press conference stated that the Communists were looking for something much bigger than the Islands. He said that the Chinese Reds want to chase the U.S. from the Western Pacific. He implied that the Communists were still insisting that the islands were an internal affair and that the only issue for negotiation was the complete withdrawal of the U.S. from the whole Tawain area. The U.S. must find a balance point between the positions taken by the Nationalists and those taken by the Communists because Chaing said that if he were forced to evacuate the islands under pressure the Asian people would lose confidence in America.

Thus there is still a deadlock while each is cautiously trying to obtain the best possibilities in the situation.

NOVEMBER 4TH

On November 4th elections will take place for thirty-three seats in the Senate, the entire House, except for Maine which has already been elected, plus thirty-three governorships.

The Republicans, fearful of the ominous results, are campaigning vigorously. Both Eisenhower and Nixon are making tours of the United States. Nixon has been throwing daggers into the Democratic Party. He said that election of democrats would produce "a wild spending binge". He also stated that the party is laden with "radicals" and that the Truman Administration "spent more on peanuts than on missiles." Sec. Dulles regretted Mr. Nixon's statements as did President Eisenhower.

The Democrats answered Nixon's blasts in a manifesto on foreign policy which declared that in foreign affairs "the Republicans have given us six years of leaderless vacillation". Whether or not the campaign has had any effect on the voters of this country will be determined only when the results pour in on the 4th.

LUNAR ATTEMPT

Another lunar probe will be attempted by the air force early next month. And the army will make its first endeavor in December. It is certain that the Pioneer's flight has opened up wider vistas for man.

TUNISIA

Two weeks ago Tunisia and Morroco joined the Arab League in an effort to strengthen their Arab Unity. After attending a few sessions of the League the Tunisian delegate left because he felt that Nasser was dominating it. A few days later Tunisia broke diplomatic relations with the League. Mr. Bourguiba is an ardent pro Western Nationalist. Nasser has charged Mr. Bourguiba with "selling out" to the West. If the rebels side with Mr. Bourguiba he may have a good chance of mediating the conflict between the Algerian rebels and France. Paris liked his denunciation of Nasser and might therefore be willing to accept his mediating efforts in the Algerian struggle.

SPECIAL

Chinese Communists have attacked Quemoy this morning, violating their two week cease fire which terminates next week.

AFROTC Drill Team To Begin Practice For Review

For several years, the Drill Team of the AFROTC Cadet Group 870 at the University of Vermont has been competing and displaying its talents. The unusual feature about this group is that the cadets all know the drill by memory, no commands are given!!

During the school year, UVM's AFROTC Drill Team enters the Northeast Drill Team Competition, the Vermont Armed Division Competition, displays their routine during half time of football and basketball games, and marches in Burlington's Veterans Day Parade on November 11th. Two years ago, the University of Vermont AFROTC Drill team placed first in the Vermont Armed Division Competition and took second place in the Northeast Drill Team Competition and were the runners-up in the Vermont Armed Division Competition.

Each Tuesday and Thursday evening the twenty-four cadets and guidon Bearer comprising the AFROTC Drill Team practice, and an award is given to the outstanding cadet of the Drill Team during the annual spring Military Review. This year's Drill Master is, Cadet 1st Lt. John Ainse, his T/Sgt. is Cadet Norman Wilson. The advisor to the University of Vermont AFROTC Drill Team is Captain Cahill, from the Department of Air Science at UVM. Any basic or advanced AFROTC Cadet is eligible to join the Team. This year, sixteen sophomores from last year's Drill Team returned, the highest percentage of returns ever.

Two SAE's have recently been married. Frank Walters, class of '61, married Frances Jean Brenlin of Scotch Plains, New Jersey, on September 7th and on September 20th, Stanton Robinson married Carol Bishop of New Haven, Connecticut. Stanton is a member of the class of '61.

Frank Li Volsi of Stamford, Connecticut, announced his engagement to Sherill Appleton from Boston University. Frank is a member of Phi Delta Theta. Another Phi Delt, Dixon Bolt pinned Madelyn Ryan, a Pi Beta Phi, who is a dental hygiene student.

CONGRATULATIONS AND BEST WISHES TO ALL OF YOU!

ALPHA CHI OMEGA

On October 15th the Alpha Chis celebrated Founder's Day by participating in a special ceremony with the alumni, followed by a coffee hour.

Alpha Chi recently had two Exchange Dinners with Pi Beta Phi and Acacia. Both dinners were very pleasurable.

ALPHA DELTA PI

Last Wednesday evening, the AEPi's pledged an honorary member, Mrs. Gladys Stapleton of Burlington. Following the ceremony, a coffee hour was held in her honor.

Roberta Robinson, one of our recent alumnae, visited them over the week-end. Roberta is presently employed in an insurance office in Summit, New Jersey.

ALPHA EPSILON PI

On Sunday, October 5, a tea in honor of President Fey was held at the fraternity house. Besides the President, faculty members representing the various colleges and departments, and Presidents of the sororities and fraternities on campus were present. Thirty girls from Alpha Epsilon Phi consented to act as hostesses. They added greatly to making the tea a very successful and pleasant event.

The athletic event of the year was held last Saturday when the girls of Gamma Phi sorority competed against the men of Alpha Epsilon Pi fraternity in a grueling Hoola-Hoop contest. The contest lasted for hours as the competitors were fed nourishing food and given instructions from their coaches on the sidelines. At the close of the contest, some dissension arose as the AEPi's claimed it was a draw despite the decision of the judges, who awarded the laurels to Gamma Phi. The contest is now under protest and the contestants are awaiting the decision of the NCAA. Whatever the outcome I think it would be sage to coin an old phrase and say "A good time was had by all."

LAMBDA IOTA

440 Pearl Street, better known as the "Woot Palace", was recently the location of an extremely successful party, the 4th Annual Garbage Collectors Cotillion. Miss Conception (Norm Brocheu) was chosen from among many contestants as the "Garbage Collector Cotillion's "Beauty of the year."

Grant Corson, Stan Van Horn, Dan Bean, Dick Bombard, and Ted King are drawing up plans and collecting material in preparation for the Homecoming float.

The Owls wish to greet Douglas Clark from Barre, Vermont, a new pledge in the class of 1961.

The newly elected officers in the Owl House are: President - Larry Underwood; Secretary - John Saliba; Treasurer - Donald Murray; Social Chairman - Norm Brocheu; IFC Representatives - Bruce Cornish, Stan Van Horn; Steward - Ted King; Building and Ground Com. - Ray Gendron; Parliamentarian - John Cruickshank; Scholastic Integraters - Bud Martin, Jack Brown; Athletic Chairman - Morris Leno; Corresponding Secretary - John Brush; Publicity Chairman - Bob Vallier.

PI BETA PHI

Congratulations to Betty Ogilvie on her initiation into Pi Phi, which just took place. Sally Madden of Northfield is a new pledge as well.

The Delta Psi's entertained the Pi Phis at a delicious buffet supper last Thursday.

PHI DELTA THETA

Sunday, October 12, was a momentous day for five Phi Delts. Ross Artus, Enosburg Falls, Dan Bianca, Patchoque, Long Island, Charles Ippolito, Bridgeport, Connecticut; and Jim Willard and Fred Robinson both of Burlington were initiated into the brotherhood in a morning ceremony. That afternoon, they were escorted by the rest of the Phi's and Mrs. Noyes to the Lincoln Inn, where they were treated to a turkey dinner.

The luscious meals gracing our table this year are the results of the efforts of Miss Prescott. Enjoying some of Miss Prescott's cooking is Don Johnson from Burlington, who was an outstanding athlete both in high school and in the Navy. Don has been given a food scholarship by the Phi's.

Bill Swanson, the chairman of the float committee for last year, has been re-elected float chairman this year.

PHI SIGMA DELTA

The following boys brothered-up last Sunday; Jan Mashman, Arnie Berliner, Howie Brown, Steve Samuelson, and Pete Lorman.

A new addition in the house is keeping Bob Ehrlich busy. "Phi" is a soft brown puppy with a talent for friendliness.

REDSTONE HALL

Redstone Hall is having an Open House from 2:00 - 4:00 o'clock on Sunday, October 26.

SIGMA ALPHA EPSILON

Last weekend SAE was honored by the visit of their National Eminent Supreme Archon Leo S. Cade, Province Archon Charles Collins, and Jack Hotaling, Chapter supervisor. Sunday afternoon a tea was held in their honor, to which SAE alumni were invited.

PRESIDENT'S TEA

Phi Sigma Delta is having a welcoming tea this Sunday afternoon, for President Fey at Fern Hill from 3:00 to 5:00. All are invited to attend.

U.N. Discussion To Be Held

The thirteenth anniversary of the UN will be marked on October 24 at UVM by a discussion sponsored by the International Relations Club in the Student Lounge at five o'clock.

According to Professor Little of the Political Science Department and advisor of the club, the program will be an enjoyable and worthwhile event. It will be highlighted by a talk by Mr. John Eden on "The UN from a British Point of View."

Mr. Eden is on a tour of a few colleges in the United States to speak on the UN. He is a member of Parliament and a nephew of Sir Anthony Eden, former Prime Minister of Great Britain. He should be a most stimulating speaker.

See you next Friday in the Student Lounge. The discussion is open to all that are interested.

Barbershop Quartet

There will be a meeting for fraternities, sororities and others interested in barbershop quartet singing Tuesday night Oct. 28, at 8 p.m. in room 24 of the Hills building.

We plan to organize the quartets and make plans for the IFC Barbershop Quartet next spring. There will be songs by the Burlington Chapter Chorus and Quartets and refreshments will be served after the meeting.

Spirit

To combat the general lack of spirit at UVM the Freshman Class has organized its own Pep Committee. The first project is the organization of a cheering card section for the Middlebury game. The organizational meeting will be held at 4:15 p.m., on Thursday, Oct. 23, in the Student Lounge.

THE PROBLEM CORNER

Referring to last week's problem the vendor must have had 63 eggs at the beginning. Correct solutions to this problem were submitted by Sylvia Cozzi, Prof. Douglas F. Fay, Allan Greenfield, John A. Holmes, John B. Lane, Andrew Ojanen, Prof. Ippocrates Pappoutsakis, Robert S. Poulios and Mrs. Norma Shortsleeve.

Problem

In order to supplement his meager salary a professor sold peanuts at the home football games. After the big homecoming game, at which sales had been particularly brisk, the professor checked in with the chief vendor. Feeling unusually rebellious the professor told the chief, "And I'm tired of being paid off in leftover merchandise. I want cash today." "Oh", countered the chief, "so you're tired of working for peanuts. All right, if you can tell me how much money is in the money bag, it's yours. The bag contains nickels, dimes, quarters and halves. The number of nickels and dimes combined is the same as the number of quarters, and the number of dimes and quarters combined is twice the number of halves."

The professor was able to tell the chief that not only was his extra income in the bag, but how much extra. Can you?

Leave solutions to these problems at the office of Professor Schoonmaker, Room 341, Waterman, no later than Monday of the week following publication of the problem.

Cinema-Art Club Presents Movie

On Friday, Oct. 24, at the Hills Building Auditorium at 6:00 P.M. and again at 9:00 P.M. the Cinema-Art Club (Cinema-Art Group of the University Club) will present its first showing of the 1958-1959 season. The original, unabridged and uncensored version of "Les Enfants du Paradis", Marcel Carne's famous romantic drama set in 19th Century France, was selected for this showing. The film features Jean-Louis Barrault, the famous actor and pantomimist, together with a large cast of outstanding stars of the French theater for even the minor roles. As a result, the dialogue is witty and the performance is uniformly excellent throughout the 2½ hour long film, which was started in 1943 and required three years to complete. The film has English subtitles. Membership in the Group ($3.00 for eight showings) is open to students and can be obtained at this showing, but single admissions (50 cents) are also available.

SAM Newly Organized Management Club

On May 14, 1958, the University of Vermont had a new comer - SAM.

SAM is the Society for Advancement of Management, the recognized national professional organization of management in industry, commerce, government in education.

SAM was organized on this campus under the watchful eyes of Milton J. Nadworny. The woman called to the stand was handsome but no longer young. The judge gallantly instructed, "Let the witness state her age, after which she may be sworn."

Army ROTC Prepares Rifle Teams

During the past week, no less than fifty freshman candidates reported to the University Rifle Range to try-out for the Freshman Rifle Team. Candidates will spend one week firing in the prone, kneeling and standing positions. At the end of the third week the top marksman will be selected to form the Freshman team. The Freshman firing schedule gets underway on the 1st of November with a match against Lehigh Military Academy. The remainder of the schedule includes Middlebury, University of Maine and Dartmouth College, and a Yankee Conference match on the 14th of February 1960.

The Army ROTC rifle team is also hard at work practicing for the opening match against Yale University and St. Bonaventure College. This year again the ROTC shooters will be trying hard for a place in the William Randolph Hearst match that is sponsored by the Hearst newspapers organization. Last year they finished just outside the money in fourth place, so this year they will be gunning for a first place. Captain elect of the Army ROTC team is Cadet Alan Kessler.

Varsity rifle team members are assisting in the elimination firing of the Freshman candidates. The Varsity team expects to start practicing the 15th of October. Captain elect of the Varsity team is Mr. Ronald Brand, Class of '60. The Varsity has returning this year: Bill Elsey, Marv Dobert, Al Kessler, Earl Stone, Ed Haight and Merrill Benson. New additions this year from last year's Freshman squad are: Bob Eaton, Pete White, and Gordon Small. The first match for the Varsity will be held on the 15th of November against Massachusetts Institute of Technology at 10:00 A.M. on the University range. In December, the shooters will travel to Maine for a New England College rifle match followed by a trip to Harvard and Bowdoin in January. In February, the team will travel to New Hampshire for a varsity "Yankee Conference" match. The final match of the shooting season will be a trip to Norwich University to compete in the National Rifle Association individual and sectional matches held there each year. The new Advisor to the University Rifle teams is Captain Charles T. Bailey a new member of the Military Department staff this year. Coaches for the team are M/Sgt Barriman and M/Sgt Surrell.

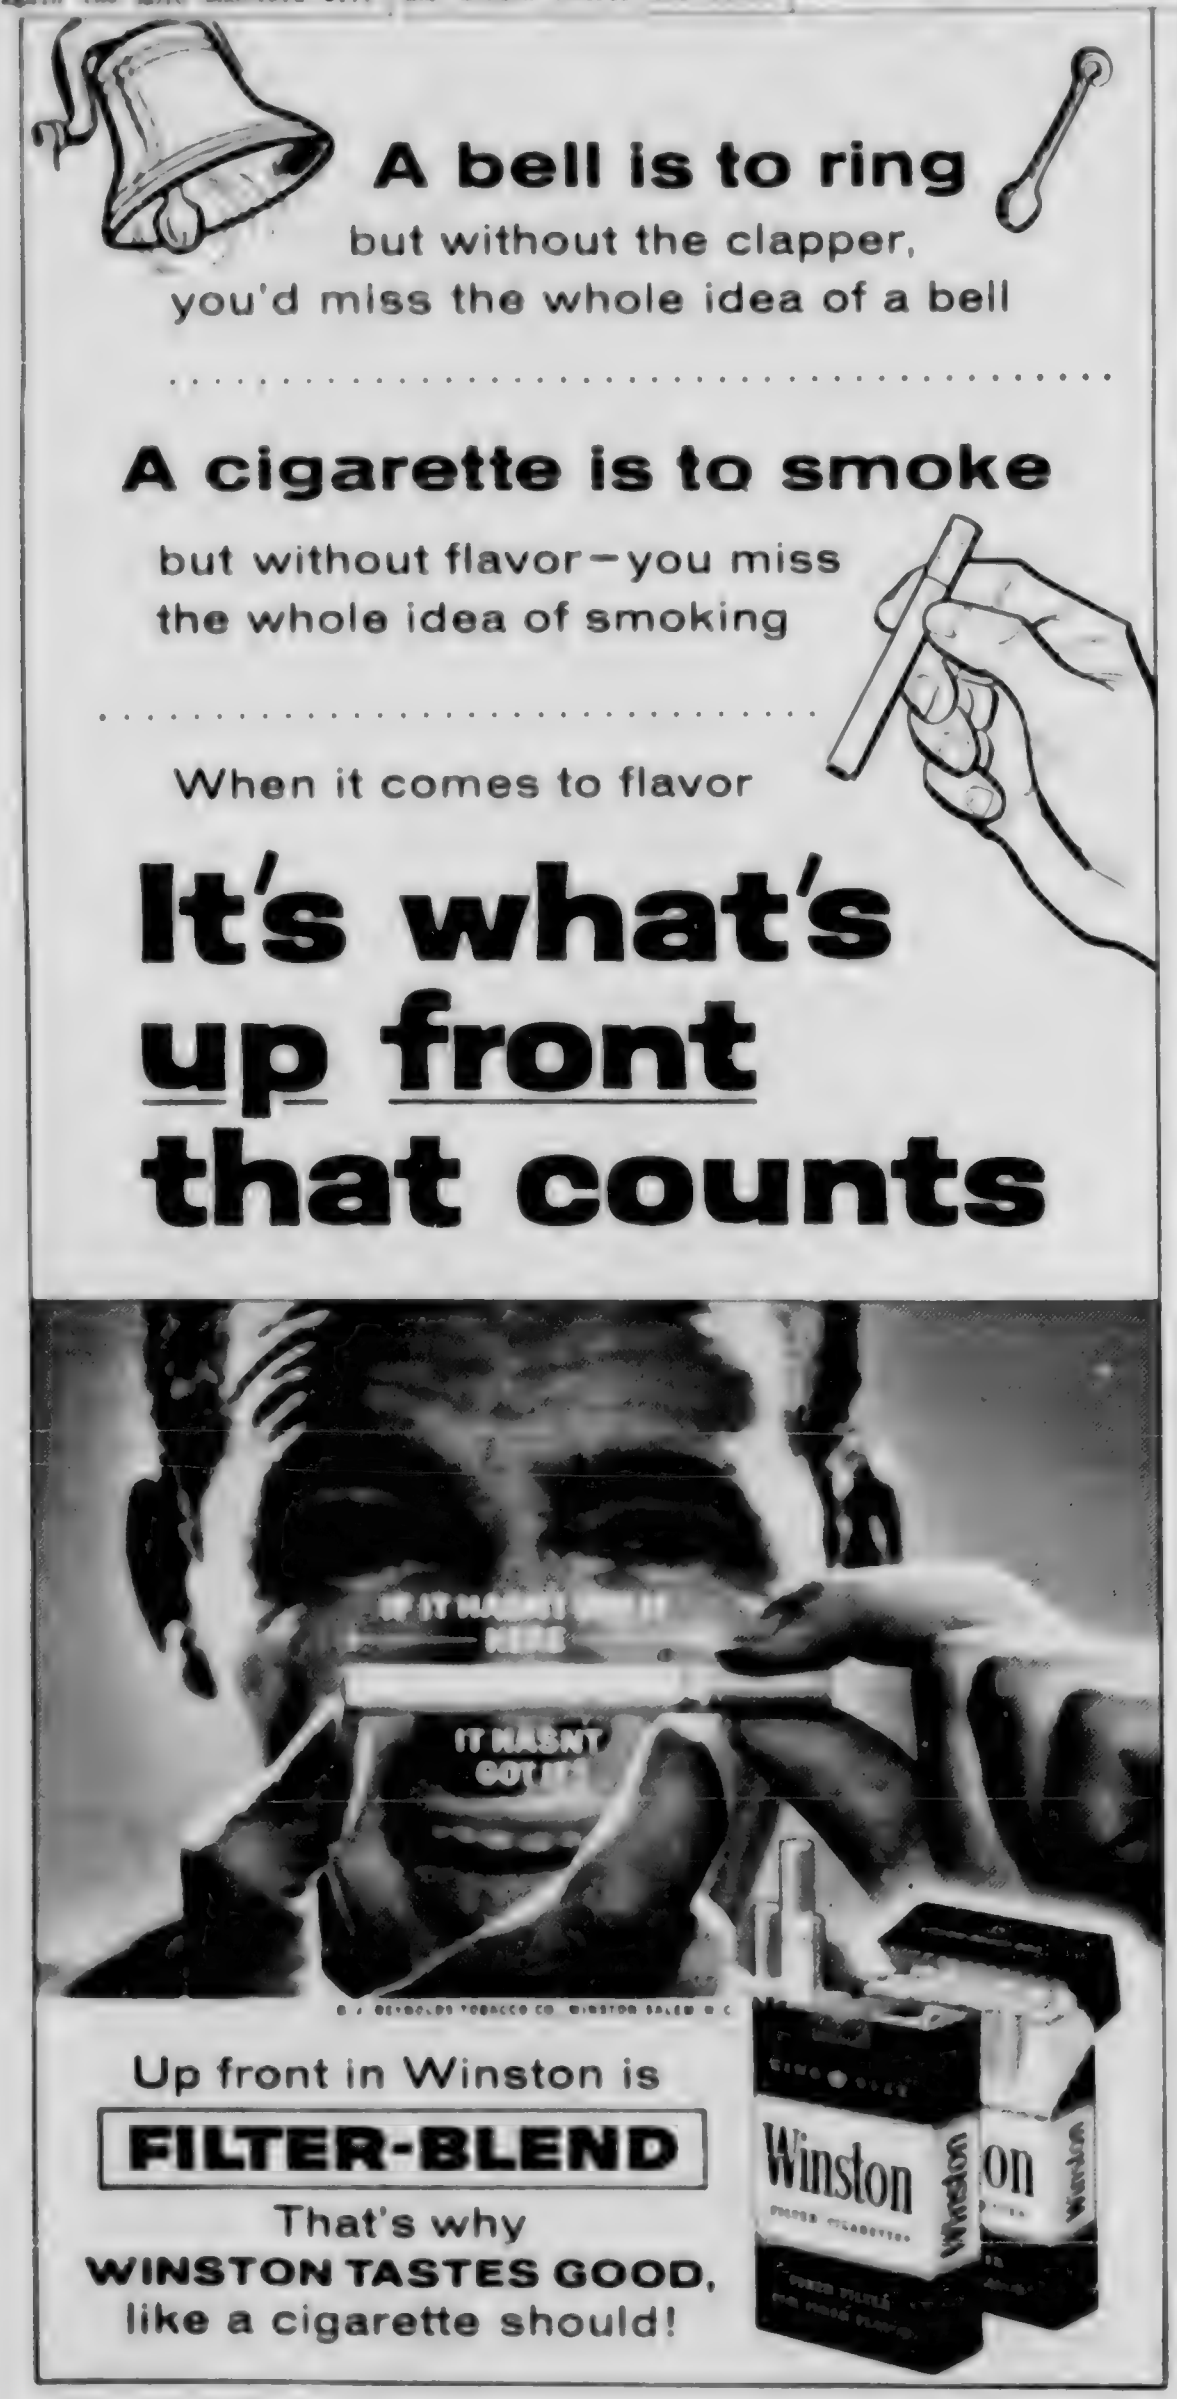
the University to take on more Vermonters, and also will it not mean lowering the standards for acceptance? In turn, won't this lower the academic standing of the University? And won't this be a little more than just discouraging for all the brilliant professors the tuition hike will retain? And won't they say "to the devil with money . . . give us some students?"

I have heard many laments over the lack of scholarship here (actually a national anathema). I do not imply that Vermonters are stupid. I do imply that the "clutch" philosophy involved in shutting out what outside money and scholarship we are fortunate to have here is an unfortunate move. I do believe there is a better way out of it. I do think that the raise is an agreeable thing to the "ins" in the political strata of the state. It'll make a nice flag to wave at election time (s).



Contrasting with the mass of povertytricken Vermonters (How the politicos will explain away this will be interesting.) UVM will be descended upon by an increase of dual-piped Cadillacs, MG's with a Mercedes or two, for only the upper bracket income can take a tuition of $1040 for long, and according to an unreasonable prejudice of mine, which runs something like: "money isn't always accompanied by scholastic spirit," those out of staters who do come will tend to make the school a second University of Miami. (The University will heat a section of Lake Champlain for a course in underwater photography?) Under such playboy circumstances it is hard to see anything but an increasing infraction of the drinking code also, and that will be less than entertaining.

Let's look at the "dark" picture of UVM four years from now: Divided into two fairly distinct economic-academic strata the school will be made up of a playboy class and a "poor Vermonter" class. Both will be graduating from an academically compromised institution, made so by the necessity of lowered standards, lowered to get enough Vermonters in to write off the deficit accomplished by a decided lack of out of state tuition. If instruction stiffens and standards remain low to facilitate black ink on the ledgers, the percentage of flunks will also increase.

If real concern over the education of Vermonters had long ago been really taken to heart, long ago, then perhaps we would now have, in addition to the University, one outstanding junior college, and the sub-standard teachers college's would not exist. In principle, the raised tuition at UVM, also underwrites continuation of the teachers college in addition to the potential subscription of sub-standard state university requirements.

I have more to say about education courses, teachers colleges and testing procedures, which I will save for another column. Here and now I am concerned over watering-down, at UVM and what can be done about it in the future. This is important enough to pre-empt anything I could possibly say about the "look-at-other-way" policy which comes out of making rules that cannot be enforced, and so I will also save my comments on that until another time.

See you in the lines.

cessful since many graduates are able to earn satisfactory or better than satisfactory salaries.

At the present, information is being received about the National Defense Educational Act which was created to increase loan funds to each state. Under this plan, a student may borrow up to $1000 a year or a total of $5,000 for his education. While in college, there is no interest charged. Upon completion, the money can be paid back within eleven years at a 3% interest. As Dean Rowell said, much buying today is done on the installment basis. The student, too, should be willing to pay for his learning.

The new tuition price makes the University of Vermont among the most expensive state institutions. With regard to this, Dean Rowell stated that operating expenses vary at each college. The legislative approach is different. In Vermont, sources of money are from tuitions and state funds whereas private colleges rely on endowments and tuition. Thus, a base tuition rate for 2 years is proposed by the Board of Trustees which is comprised of members elected by the state in a majority and 9 self-perpetuating members. This is ten set to the Legislature with a request for them to appropriate the greater sum of in-staters' costs. Results of such action will be announced in January.

Some students believe that it is unfair for out-of-staters to bear the burden of the increase. Dean King stated that it is unfortunate to place this load on them, but there is no other solution. He emphasized that students from many parts of the United States are important and necessary for a broad education. It keeps the state university from being provincial and also allows placement services throughout the country to be maintained. As he said, "Nobody has ever wanted to get rid of out-of-staters. In fact, there should be more scholarship aid available so that students from all social economical brackets can be represented." Dean Harris agreed and further stated, "Every university wants top quality students and we want them too."

Dean McKee was optimistic about the change and said that it is the only solution to the problem caused by the economical situation. He felt that students should realize this and be willing to pay whatever good education costs, for as graduates of an institution, they will be earning a greater amount than they ever invested.

As Dean Clifford pointed out, "This is a local manifestation of a need that is nationally recognized. There is no necessary relationship between the tuition raise and any rise or fall in out-of-state enrollment." "We are simply doing what everyone else is doing," were the words of Dean Kidder. He said "the purpose is to raise faculty salaries, not to get $200 more out of each student." In agreement with these comments, Dean Kent admitted that, "there was no other alternative."

If members of the student body still have questions or comments, they are advised to see any of the above Deans who will be glad to listen and try to help.

Wales Newell Selected As Business Distributor

As part of its work scholarship program, Philip Morris Incorporated has announced that Wales Newell has been selected campus business representative here. The appointment is for the full school year.

The cigarette firm, which was first in the industry to support college-level education by this method, also makes grants for higher education to children of its employees and contributes to educational and research institutions in many areas of the country.

Son of Mr. and Mrs. Leland Newell, of N. Woodbury, Conn., Mr. Newell will serve as liaison between this campus and the company's New York offices and he will develop and work on advertising and promotion projects for Philip Morris, Parliament and Marlboro brands.

Now in his Senior year at University of Vermont, Mr. Newell is active as Kake Walk Director, President Sigma Alpha Epsilon, Chancellor of Alpha Zeta, and Freshman Orientation. He is a Economics major. And is a member of Sigma Alpha Epsilon.

Many of Philip Morris' present executives began their careers as campus business representatives. While the financial assistance to undergraduates carries no obligation, the sales force and other departments of Philip Morris priated for the current biennium. Approximately $90,000 in fees is returned to the state.

MORGAN HORSE FARM: $48,000, an increase of $10,000, is requested for the coming biennium.

COLLEGE OF MEDICINE: $1,514,800 is requested for the 1959-61 biennium by the Medical College. This is a $464,800 increase over the $1,050,000 appropriation for the 1957-59 biennium. The $1,050,000 figure was also the amount appropriated in 1955-57, so that the increase requested for the coming biennium, if approved by the Legislature, would be the first increase from the state for the College of Medicine since the 1955 Legislature.

ALSO: a total of $156,000 was requested for the so-called deferred maintenance and rehabilitation appropriations which date to the state's assistance to the University in the early 1940's. Deferred maintenance of $100,000 is requested for overdue repairs and maintenance to plant and equipment. A request for $56,000 for rehabilitation is related to retirement of annuities.

Homecoming Offers Excitement For All

Barbecue To Be Held With Much Quantity And Quality

The Animal Industry Club Barbecue will once again be highlighted as one of the features of Homecoming Weekend. From a standpoint of quality and quantity, the roast beef barbecue leaves little to be desired, in fact, a quantitative analysis of consumption would put Henry the Eighth to shame. Last year, within a one hour and fifty minute period, 350 guests were served. That's an average of nineteen pounds a minute.

Official statistics compiled at Club Headquarters, concerning the amount of foodstuffs dispensed, reads as follows: 300 pounds of rolled and boned prime Western beef; 16 quarts of barbecue sauce; 45 dozen rolls; 25 gallons of coffee; 330 bottles of milk; 30 gallons of tossed salad; 30 gallons of potato salad; 2 gallons of pickels; and 10 pounds of butter. All this adds up to about two-thirds of a ton of food.

Aside from the fancy figures, the Club reports that it's well prepared to serve hungry football fans an appetizing meal again this year.

The barbecue will be held in the UVM Cage on Saturday, November 1, following the football game with St. Lawrence University.

General Chairman for the BBQ is Phil Levesque, and Mr. Robert Fitzsimmons serves as faculty advisor.

COST OF HOMECOMING

Homecoming Ball	$3.50

Harriers Top Wesleyan, 24-33, For Third Straight Triumph

by FRED ROBINSON

Coach Archie Post's cross-country Catamounts trotted along their winning ways last Friday when at Middletown, Conn., they defeated a good Wesleyan team 24-33. This week the shining light was the Green and Gold's Norm Picard of Jericho, Vermont, who burst across the finish line in 22 minutes, 33.5 seconds—more than eight seconds under the 4.3 mile course record set earlier this season. The warm (80 degree) weather was just what Norm ordered as he pounded over the new paved course and raced home 200 yards ahead of Wesleyan's best, Roger Palmer.

Vermont pushed across eight of its nine men before Wesleyan succeeded in finishing five. Following Picard and Palmer was Howie Cutts of Townshend, Vermont, with Springfield's Fred Kolstrom squeaking in fifth. Captain Ray Allen of South Hero, and Bill Perkins of Beverly, Mass., were the seventh and eighth harrier finishers, with Danny Mossman of Brattleboro, "Whitey" Luse of Mahopac, NY, and Ray Kelsey of Marblehead, Mass., sandwiching in a Wesleyan thinclad, and sprinting across tenth, eleventh, and twelfth, respectively.

Coach Post stated that Wesleyan was a little stronger than a year ago with some aid coming from the Frosh class of last season. He was very satisfied with his Cats' showing, pointing out that in the three winning meets thus far this season, the lead men have changed every time—first Kolstrom, then Cutts, and finally Picard—proving that everybody is in there scraping and giving it all he's got. That's characteristic of a well-coached combine. However, Coach Post did say that these men will not be here forever and help will be vitally needed from this season's Frosh team, where incidentally only nine men turned out. The Freshman class has more athletes than this! WHERE ARE THEY HIDING??

Next Saturday the Cats host a good Maine team, the meet starting at 12:30. The Bears have a couple of key men in Seniors Daily and Bessey. UVM will be trying to break this one-two punch up and push across as many men as possible in those top spots. This is their last home showing and it should prove interesting as the Cats will be priming for the Yankee Conference meet on November 1, at Amherst, Mass.

Question of the Week

by STEVE COOPER

DO YOU THINK UVM SHOULD DROP ENTIRELY OUT OF YANKEE CONFERENCE FOOTBALL?

PRESIDENT FEY —
We can't afford or consider dropping out because we are involved in other sports; e.g. baseball, basketball, and in view of that fact, we have to give more attention to developing football teams that compete on a more equal basis.

CAPTAIN DETHEROW —
"Certainly not, because UVM has the capability and potential to be on a par with other Yankee Conference schools in any sport in any year."

DR. GREGG —
"No, but under the present system things are bad. If UConn gives aid to players, then we should do the same. Definitely if ALL the other land grant schools that comprise the Yankee Conference give athletic scholarships, we should do the best to keep up to them. However, if student apathy continues, drop football entirely."

DR. BOND —
"Under the present circumstances yes, but we need a larger squad in order to compete with other Y.C. teams.

Cynic Sports Special: Coach Ed Donnelly

by MARTY COLE

This year, J. Edward Donnelly began his seventh year as head football coach of the Catamounts. During his coaching years, the Vermont has won three state championships.

Coach Donnelly was born in Norwich, Connecticut. As a youngster, he and his family moved to New Haven, where he attended New Haven High School. From there he went to Dean Academy, in Franklin. Throughout his high school career he played football, basketball, and baseball. After leaving prep school, he went to the University of Chattanooga. During his years at Chattanooga, he played varsity football and basketball. Upon graduating from Chattanooga, in 1932, he received a Master's degree in Education from Columbia.

Ed Donnelly's first coaching job was at Hamden High School in Hamden, Connecticut. After leaving Hamden High, he became backfield coach at Boston University. Then, seven years ago, in 1952, he took over as head coach of the Green and Gold. Since coming to UVM, he has instituted various changes in the coaching procedures. The team now trains at Boston University's Sargent Camp for two weeks before the season begins.

Coach Donnelly now lives with his wife and three children in Burlington. He enjoys playing golf in his spare time, which is not very often. The Coach is President of the New England Intercollegiate Golf Association and Chairman of the Executive Committee of the New England Intercollegiate Football Association.

Coach Donnelly looks forward to many years as coach of the Catamounts. He also hopes to get more material to coach with in the future. As he says, it is hard to coach without anything to work with. In the past two years, the turnout for the freshman team has decreased from 50 or 60 freshmen to about 20 freshmen this year. Coach Donnelly thinks that this is attributed to academic pressure forcing many capable students out of participation in sports at UVM. He was very disappointed in the number of students that came out for the freshman team this year.

Our losses this season, Coach Donnelly states, are due to the fact that we have no substitutes. He contends that when you have only 18 or 19 players on a full team, you are in trouble. The hope of winning in the future looks good if our team stays together. We are going to have to go with the first team for the full 60 minutes. Coach Donnelly, since coming to UVM, has tried endlessly without avail to give scholarships to worthy high school players. Other Yankee Conference teams, such as Massachusetts, give their full football squad scholarships. He hopes that something will be done before 1960 when UVM will once again play three Yankee Conference teams, and in 1962 when we will play four Yankee Conference teams. The Coach admits that we must do something about more material before that time comes.

The students are now getting the grandstand seats directly on the field and should support the team, which they have done well. The one to blame for the team's poor showing is the student who could partake in the program but is not willing to do his share.

In this weekend's game against Norwich, Coach Donnelly feels that the Catamounts can and will win if they stay together.

Sports Editorial:

spend his first year in the dorms, due to the fact that he has no family. Naturally he objected. After spending three years living in a crowded barracks, he preferred to reside in a single room with some local people. In order to attend this University, he took out a loan. He was receiving no form of scholarship aid whatsoever. The Administration gave Johnson an ultimatum---Live in the dorms or be dismissed from school. He quit!

It was Johnson who singlehandedly defeated the RPI Frosh, 14-6, twelve days ago. He was a sure bet to secure a starting berth on the Varsity for the next three years. Don Johnson is now biding his time until September, 1959, for that is when he will enroll in a large Southeastern Conference University---all expenses paid! That is correct. He has been awarded a full, four year, tuition, room and board scholarship. Just think, he was willing to pay to come here. Congratulations, Don, and good luck!

Once again, UVM has missed the boat---as it always will, so long as the administration maintains its warped sense of values. And all because of a single room.

HERB HEIN'S FOOTBALL FORECAST

The Vermont CYNIC is proud to announce that we are going to run a weekly football contest for the remainder of the gridiron season. Every week I will list some of the top games around the nation and those interested in competing in the contest should fill in the scores for each respective team. In case more than one person picks the winners of all ten games, we will then go by scores. You can pick a tie but remember to fill in a score for each team.

All entry blanks must be in by 12:00 noon, Saturday, and they are to be put in the CYNIC mailbox in the Information Office in Waterman. The winner or winners will be announced in the following week's CYNIC. Also, the winner will receive a free CYNIC subscription. You must circle the winning team in each contest. Both students and faculty are eligible.

My Picks . . .

ARMY-PITTSBURGH — The Cadets (4-0) are red hot this year and in my estimation can go all the way without a loss. Pitt. (4-1) has lost only to powerful Michigan State. The Panthers could make this game very unpleasant for the Black Knights, especially if Pete Dawkins, Army's Captain, is out of action. However, I'll still go with ARMY.

NORTHWESTERN-IOWA — This game could decide who the Big Ten representative to the Rose Bowl will be. Northwestern (4-0) didn't win a game last year, yet, thus far this year, the Westerners haven't lost one. Iowa, fresh from its victory over highly rated Wisconsin, will have another tough battle on its hands. Iowa will probably be favored, but I'll stick my neck out and go with NORTHWESTERN.

PURDUE-NOTRE DAME — The boilermakers (3-1) are in peak shape after their upset victory over Michigan State. The Irish (3-1) after being beaten by Army just did squeeze by Duke last Saturday. Purdue has always proven troublesome to Notre Dame and could handle them this year. This time I'll string along with Purdue.

AUBURN-MARYLAND — Auburn (3-0-1), though held to a tie last week by Georgia Tech, still preserved its unbeaten string. The Terrapins (1-4) have played mediocre ball in their past contests. Auburn's 210 pound line and fleet backfield should combine to overwhelm the Maryland eleven. Auburn in an easy victory.

VERMONT-NORWICH — The Catamounts haven't tasted victory in four games thus far this year. Yet, Norwich (3-1) was beaten by the Coast Guard and last Saturday, just squeezed by St. Lawrence. Incidentally, St. Lawrence, our Homecoming foe, hasn't won a game in three seasons. If the Cats have have profited at all from the defeats by Maine, Hobart, and Rochester, I believe they can take Norwich. At any rate I think it will be close. This time I'll go with VERMONT.

Gridders Ripped By Rochester, 46-0; To Face Norwich Sat. In State Opener

by [illegible]

Whatever hopes Vermont has for a fairly good grid season, can depend on the outcome of their encounter with the "Horsemen" of Norwich this Saturday. The Norwich offense can be summed up in this formula: [illegible]. What does it mean? The G.R. stands for their three interchangeable quarterbacks Clements, Cronin, and Bagnell. All three men are of somewhat equal speed, and can be enough to exhaust any defense. The rest of the formula stands for their sensational left-halfback, Bob Ripley, who wears number [illegible]. He was the big difference in the Norwich victory over the "Cats" last year. The play to watch will be the run pass option. The ball is hiked to the quarterback, who in turn laterals to Ripley on the flank. From this position he can either run the ball or pass it, depending on where the defensive backs are playing. Basically they will run from a "T", with their line split quite a lot to facilitate trap plays. The big fault of the "Cadets" this year has been their poor defense, especially around the flanks. Their only standout has been their hefty right guard, Dergins ('?'), who has been holding up the Norwich wall single handedly. Vermont will work from its usual wing "T", and I think we may see a little of the Direct Series (a variation of the single wing, but with no pulling lineman.) The Battle-weary Cats will surely have their hands full as this will be Norwich's Homecoming game.

Vermont Or Norwich?

The sports department of the CYNIC is pleased to innovate a new kind of "contest"---open to its members only. Each week, for the duration of the UVM football season, each sports writer will attempt to pick a winner of that Saturday's Vermont gridiron contest. It should be quite interesting to see how accurate the various writers are in their selections.

The first "consensus" will pertain to the UVM-Norwich clash, to be played Saturday, October 25, at Northfield. Kick-off at 1.30.

WHAT PRICE GLORY?

Coast Guard 30, Vermont 30, Maine 26, Vermont 0; Hobart 18, Vermont 14, Rochester 46, Vermont 0. Midway through the 1958 grid season, the University of Vermont has yet to win a football game. As the crowd files out of the stadium each week, the same lament is heard, "Why don't we ever win?"

We can't win! Not as long as the administration wants to lose. In this world, we must fight fire with fire. In order to compete with the other Yankee Conference schools, we must do as they do- - - -subsidize athletic teams. The public can't be fooled. They are willing to pay to see a good game, but we can't induce our own student body to witness a free contest. And I don't blame them- -I don't like to lose every game either.

Each year, many potential candidates are passed by, and immediately picked up by our opponents who come back to whip us. There are currently twenty-four men composing our gridiron squad. Out of the starting eleven players, four receive aid. One man is receiving an out of state full tuition scholarship, two others get Vermont state tuition scholarships, and the fourth man is enrolled here under the G.I. Bill, and therefore needs only a partial scholarship. We play a seven game schedule. The starting eleven players on five of the teams we meet, not only receive free tuition---they also get room, board, books and laundry. gratis. Seven of the men on the remaining two teams receive the same. The other four aren't as fortunate----they must pay for their own laundry and books.

All of the Yankee Conference schools grant these "free rides" to their athletes. The Universities of Connecticut and Massachusetts boast of the huge amount of aid awarded their athletes. This season we play only one Yankee foe. This means that we can only lose one game (Maine, 26-0), and thereby automatically qualify for the Beanpot basement. In order to be eligible for the Y.C. crown, we must play at least five league contests. As the football schedules are prepared three or four years in advance, I have learned that in a few more years, the University of Vermont will once again be playing a full Yankee program. In short, our athletes will be competing with other men financially aided to do the same job. UVM will become the Yankee patsy (if it hasn't already.)

The University of Vermont awards a total of eight scholarships per year to athletes in all sports. Some years, that number is not reached. And remember, the most we give to any one man is full tuition. Some receive only partial tuition aid. Is it any wonder that high caliber ballplayers go elsewhere?

UVM can't even compete on an equal level with our two state opponents. There are some good ballplayers in this state, but they refuse to play for their state's University. And why should they, when they can get a free ride to one of Vermont's private institutions----with the state's money to boot. Our football coach can promise nothing to a potential candidate; he can only recommend that man for a tuition scholarship. At the same time, either of the other school's coaches can safely promise free "everything" to choice players. Until our administration realizes the fact that great athletes aren't inherited but sought after, we will continue to lose football game after football game. It is hoped that in the next few years, Vermont will be able to have a representative football team of more than twenty-four players.

Last year's freshman football team was composed of thirty men. Three of those men are now playing varsity ball. What has happened to the others? Unfortunately, and unknown to most, there appear to be certain members of the faculty who oppose intercollegiate athletic programs. These instructors are apathetic to the problems which the players face when they are unable to attend every class; travelling and giving their all for UVM. The Debating team and similar groups are allowed to make up work lost---- Why aren't the athletes?

To cite an example of the administration's policy regarding the athletic program, I should now like to disclose some information received over the weekend---from a very reliable source. The star of the Frosh football team, Don Johnson, quit school on Monday, October 13---Here is why! Johnson, 22, served three years in the paratroopers prior to his enrollment at UVM. A resident of Burlington, he was ordered to

Undermanned Cats Routed By Hosts

by LARRY ALBERT

A homecoming crowd of fifty-three hundred saw their Rochester Yellowjackets remain unbeaten and unscored upon last Saturday as they routed the University of Vermont, 46-0. This was the Catamounts' third loss in as many Saturdays. The Green and Gold had a squad of only twenty-one men present as the services of halfback Lou Petronaci, end Maynard Bush, and tackle Lou Hronek were lost for the afternoon, due to injuries.

Cats Halted - - - - - - - - - - -

Vermont got off to a quick start when halfback Roy Greene ran back the opening kickoff forty yards to the Rochester 43. Two quick passes to Greene from quarterback Pete Lyford had the ball inside the Yellowjacket 20. Halfback Pete Nelsen carried the ball to the 14 where the tough Rochester line, led by Larry Palvino, stopped the Vermont attack. This was the Cats' deepest penetration.

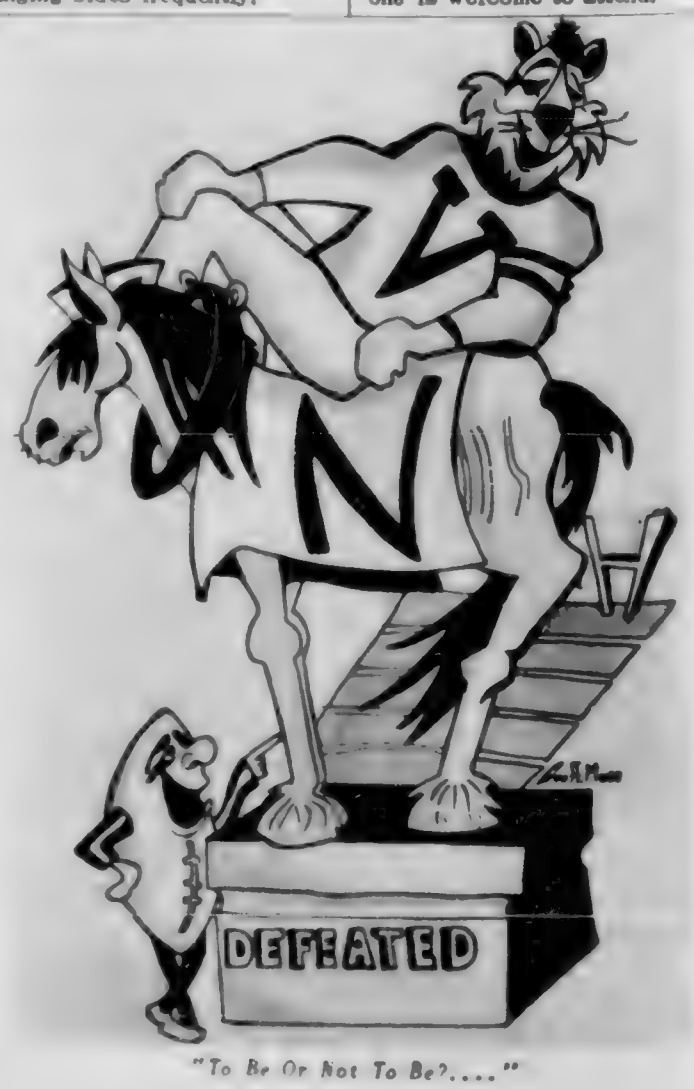
The story seemed clear from the opening period, as the Yellowjackets, fresh from a 47-0 defeat of Union, led 23-0 at halftime. In the third period, UVM made its best drive of the second half, following a pass interception by Bob Flance.

A Flance to Greene pass, and a fifteen yard penalty for offensive holding placed the ball on the Rochester 25 yard line. Here, Vermont was stalled by virtue of two 15 yard penalties.

The statistics tell the game's story. The Yellowjackets rolled up 319 yards on the ground while Vermont obtained a meager 24. The Cats picked up six first downs to Rochester's 16. The only department Vermont led in was passing, and as usual, fumbling.

Kittens Beat Larries, 14-6

by JAY KRONFELD



Last Saturday, the UVM Freshman football team proved to be too strong for their counterparts from St. Lawrence. The Kittens topped the Larries, 12-6. Vermont scored its touchdowns in the first and last quarters. The Larries pushed their lone tally across in the second period.

The first Green and Gold touchdown was scored on a long run by Maynard Ducatte. The kick for the extra digit was blocked. The Larries tied it up by the end of the second period. Following a blocked UVM punt, they bulled the ball across the goal line to even up the count. Neither club was able to score in the third quarter, the ball changing sides frequently.

Towards the end of the final period, the Kittens struck pay-dirt again as fullback Walsh plunged over from the two yard line. The game ended with the Vermont Yearlings on top. The Kittens are now 2-1 on the season. They will close out the current campaign this Saturday when they host the Williams frosh. Kick-off is at 2, at Centennial Field.

Gridders Ripped By Rochester, 46-0; To Face Norwich Sat. In State Opener

Meet Cadets At Northfield

by BOB MUNRO

Whatever hopes Vermont has for a fairly good grid season, will depend on the outcome of their encounter with the "Summermen" of Norwich this Saturday. The Norwich offense can be summed up in the formula [illegible]. What does it mean? The "T" stands for their three interchangeable quarterbacks [illegible], Cronin, and Engstrom. All three men are of somewhat equal speed, and can be enough to outwit any defense. The rest of the formula stands for their sensational fullback, Dick Hipps, who wears number 33. He was the big difference in the Norwich victory over the Cadets last year. The play to watch will be the run pass option. The ball is placed in the quarterback, who in turn fakes to Hipps on the "belly". From this position he can either run the ball or pass it, depending on where the defensive backs are playing. Basically they will run from a "T", with their line split quite a lot to facilitate trap plays. The big fault of the Cadets this year has been their poor defense, especially around the flanks. Their only standout has been their hefty right guard, Bergina ('57), who has been holding up the Norwich wall single handedly. Vermont will work from its usual wing "T", and I think we may see a little of the Delaware Series (a variation of the single wing, but with no pulling lineman.) The Battle-weary Cats will surely have their hands full as this will be Norwich's Homecoming game.

Varieties To Display UVM's Talent Saturday

Highlights of Vermont Varieties, to be presented this Saturday in Memorial Auditorium, at 7:30 pm, include an inside story of the Infirmary, singing star Carole Demas, and Romeo and Juliet a la 1958.

With the names of diseases and doctors fictitious to protect the guilty, students who have not been fortunate enough to visit an infirmary will be introduced to one via song. Featured in this satirical skit are a quartet of doctors seeing for "four feeble students yearning to get well"; a chorus of Mono sufferers: "It's Called the Kissing Disease"; and an offbeat look at Dr. Freud.

Carole Demas, a star of last year's show, will reminisce on Jack Ovitt's original "Sunday Afternoon"; cry "Oh Campus Me", because of her ultra-sophisticate tendencies, and look into the future with a song from "Brigadoon", next production of the University Players.

For those who really "dig that jazz", Varieties will spotlight a modern and quite "beat" Romeo and Juliet in "East Side Story", a satire on a current Broadway musical hit. Ted Edgecomb and Alice Zalon star in this "real cool" love story.

Outstanding talent radiating from a cast of about twenty, clever satire written into a fabulously funny skits; sharp dance routines; and original music all add up to Vermont Varieties, 1958 . . . a Homecoming must!

A jazz concert, the presentation of the King and Queen, a trophy awarded to the designer of the winning poster, all accompany over three hours of very danceable music which begins at 9 p.m. in a surrounding of "Autumn Enchantment" at tomorrow's Homecoming Ball.

Although the doors open at 9:45, the announcement of the Homecoming Royalty won't be until 10:30, when a fanfare introduces the new King and Queen, a crown of flowers is being created especially for the ceremony by Gove Florists, and will be presented to her by band leader Urbie Green. Neither the King nor the Queen will know the results of yesterday's elections until the dance Friday night.

Featured during the half hour intermission of dance music will be jazz - the best in both dixieland and progressive by the Urbie Green Sextet. Urbie's reputation in the field of jazz is outstanding. He has been praised by all the greats, and has been a regular with the All Stars at the Newport Jazz Festival.

Urbie Green is recognized as being one of the most versatile musicians in the business, and leads an orchestra that echoes this wonderful talent. A critic for "Down Beat" recently wrote the following about the trombone stylist: "Urbie is too much. I would want his LP for the listening pleasure and also for its contribution toward the comeback of something else besides bands; music.

Paul C. Silver, Class of '59, displays his poster, which adds a modernistic touch to a traditional event.

Homecoming Briefs - - -

A number of important little items - bits of info and answers to questions - always go along with a big weekend. This article is to fill in the details.

First of all the money part, tickets. It's best to get 'em in advance, but you will be able to buy them at the individual event also. Lower Waterman seems presently to be the popular place for advance ticket sales.

Mortar Board's Mum sale is a must for a visit. Flowers for the dance are not necessary, but all the women should sport a MUM at Saturday's game.

All visiting parents and returning alumni should remember to register Saturday morning, before the Peerade. Parents go to Waterman, Alumni to Alumni House.

St. Lawrence U. will be well represented on the UVM campus over the weekend, as their cheerleaders, ROTC Band, and a number of students make the 150 mile trip to attend the festivities. Additional thanks go to several sororities for finding beds for SLU cheerleaders, and to our band for helping play host.

Peggy Day and Bob Kuhns, along with many of the Homecoming Queen Candidates, appeared on WCAX Television last Tuesday. A film was shot and shown on a later show also. Bob and Peggy cut tapes for WCAX and WJOY radio to publicize the weekend too.

If you're wondering what to wear to the Homecoming Ball Friday night, it's semiformal. Most of the men seem to prefer suits, but a few tuxes or sport coats with slacks are seen too. For the girls, cocktail dresses are popular, or if you'd rather, a formal.

DON'T FORGET TONIGHT'S PEP RALLY!

Junior Honoraries Work For Successful Events

Plans for Homecoming - 1958 have been in progress since last May. Negotiations for a band, the ordering of trophies and the reserving of locations, advance publicity, all were well underway by the middle of June. Throughout the summer more work was done - the signing of Urbie Green's contract came in early August, and meetings of the committees started again during Frosh Week. A great deal has to be done for the smooth operation of an eventful social weekend, and each year the co-sponsors of Homecoming are the Junior Honoraries, Staff and Sandal and Key and Serpent.

The Homecoming Committee consists of all the members of the two honoraries, with the presidents serving as co-ordinators of the weekend. A number of subcommittees are headed by representatives f Staff and Sandal and Key Serpent.

Those chiefly responsi for Homecoming - 1958 are follows: Co-ordinators, Ro Keimowitz and Margaret D dance, Peter Rabinovitch Janet Ledbury; king and que Robert Roffman and Bette S son; publicity; Robert Ku and Betty Wilder; ticke Lawrence Brown and Cyn Marvin; finances, David Cu and Dorothy Isham; half c mony, Frederick Mandell Jacquelyn Sheehan; and Mom Dad's Day, Charles Tetz and Patricia Darling.

Members of the honorar who served on the indivi committees include: Virg Broch, Josepha Emdin, S Flax, Phyllis Genero, Virg Low, Susan Ramsey, Caro Slack, and Karen Johnson.

"Oh Campus Me" sings Carole Demas in Saturday's Varieties.

Both Lane Series Presents National Ballet Of Canada

by Dorothy Indick

The National Ballet of Canada will return to Burlington Memorial Auditorium on Nov. 3 and 4. The troupe's Burlington appearance here was sponsored by the 1957 Lane Series. The troupe, with the exception of the New York City Opera, is the only attraction to be re-engaged for both the Red and the Blue Series.

On Monday, Nov. 3, the Blue Series selections will be presented, consisting of the following pieces: Swan Lake, Act II, by Tchaikowsky. The choreography is by M. Petipa and L. Ivanov, and the decors and costumes by Kay Ambrose. The second selection, Lilac Garden, in Ernest Chausson's Poeme for Violin and Orchestra, Op. 25, is choreographed by Anthony Tudor. Miss Ambrose also does the costuming. The third item is called Les Rendez-Vous. It is taken from l'Enfant Prodigue, by Daniel Francois Ashton. Frederick Ashton is the choreographer and William Chappel the costumer.

The two principal dancers are husband and wife ----- David Adams and Lois Smith. They will perform as Odette and Prince Siegfried in Swan Lake. Miss Smith, "Canada's first native-born prima ballerina," has appeared, with Adams, as guest artist for Ted Shawn's Dance Festival, held at Jacob's Pillow. The pair were then described as "the finest dancers of a season which has included some of the big names of the field." Adams has appeared with the Royal Ballet of England (formerly Sadler's Wells Ballet) and the Metropolitan Ballet, and he has often partnered Celia Franca, the Canadian company's artistic director.

Miss Franca will join Miss Smith and Adams in the Lilac [illegible] which is considered an outstanding modern ballet. The choreographer Anthony Tudor has done work for the Royal Ballet. Miss Franca has, according to the New York Times, "put together a large company with charm and looks, as well as inherent ability. She has already succeeded in giving them a fine artistic discipline, and she has manifestly inspired them with something of her own ideals." Burlington will remember Miss Franca's performance as star of the operetta Offenbach in the Underworld, given in 1957.

The third work of the evening, Les Rendez-Vous, also a modern ballet, features dancers Earl Kraul and Angela Leigh. It was choreographed by Frederick Ashton, who has also worked with the Royal Ballet.

On Tuesday afternoon, from 4:00 to 5:15, the Ballet company will present a special performance for school children (college "children" included). The selection will be Acts II and III of Coppelia. Betty Pope will dance the principal role of Swanhilde.

The Red Series selection for Tuesday evening will be the entire production of Coppelia, with Lilian Jarvis as Swanhilde. Since the Red Series is sold out the matinee will afford an excellent opportunity to see most of Coppelia. Tickets to the matinee maybe purchased in the COSA office, Bailey's Music Store, in the Burlington schools or at the door. The price is 50¢.

The performance Tuesday evening will be the U.S. premiere of the Company's new production of this ballet. Previously the company has performed only the first

Junior Peerade Brings New Attraction To Homecoming

Noon on Saturday marks the starting time for one of the biggest attractions of Homecoming - the Peerade of floats. Floats representing each fraternity and sorority, both the UVM and St. Lawrence University bands, new convertibles carrying the King and Queen, plus all of the candidates for queen and the cheerleaders from both schools, will proceed from the campus to Centennial Field - via a long route.

Led by the UVM Band and a combined Army, Air Force ROTC color guard, the procession is slated to parade down Main Street to the business district. From there it will proceed up Church Street to Pearl Street, and from there to the field in time for the game, a total of about two miles.

A panel of judges, including Mayor Cairns of Burlington, will select the two best from each of the fraternity and sorority divisions on the basis of workmanship, originality, and over-all effect. The first and second place winners will then be revealed during the the half time ceremonies of the football game.

During the game the floats plus the 1959 convertibles, loaned to the Homecoming Committee by local car dealers, will be on display behind the stands. In all, the Peerade should be quite colorful - let's hope for good weather.

Last year's Peerade was April 30. Now it's a big part of Homecoming - 1958.

UVM Student Shows Valor In Preventing Holdup

Miss Eleanor King of 162 Maple St. remains at the bedside of Louis Truso, Jr. The UVM student's condition is reported as "good". (Photo - The Burlington Free Press)

Reviewed by Roger S. Zimmerman, as reported by the Burlington Free Press.

October 23, 1958, another quiet evening of study for Louis Truso, Jr., 24, of St. Albans. Besides study, Truso had decided to go to a Newman Club meeting, after which he and a friend, John Goodwin, had decided to go downtown for coffee. After this, Truso drove Goodwin home; but before returning to his apartment, he remembered that he needed some groceries. Truso went to his usual place for purchasing food, Howard's Market at St. Paul and Maple Streets. It was 9:10 P.M. In just twenty minutes Truso would by lying in the operating room of DeGoesbriand Memorial Hospital having a .22 caliber bullet removed from his stomach. In his own words, this is what happened as he entered the market:

ACCOUNT

"I could see Mrs. Howard, the proprietor, looking nervous and agitated. Then I went in and saw a man in a grey gabardine coat standing in front of the counter. He had his back to me.

"The minute I opened the door, he scooped up his groceries and started to leave. I suspected something wrong from the way Mrs. Howard looked, so I tried to block his way out.

"I figured that if nothing happened, I could always apologize. Then we started scuffling. I could hear Mrs. Howard saying something in the background, but I was too busy with him to make out what she said.

"He was carrying some bread and meat and other things that were loose in his arms. Some of them began dropping as we scuffled. Then I saw he had a gun, a .22 pistol.

"A second later, he shot, but it didn't hurt and I didn't know he had shot me, until I looked down and saw the hole in my jacket and the blood and the gunpowder.

"By that time, he had rushed out of the door and turned down Maple Street, toward the lake. Mrs. Howard called the police and the ambulance and the next thing I knew I was in the operating room."

His condition is reported to be "good".

Truso, a graduate of St. Mary's High School in St. Albans, worked for two years and then entered the army. After spending two years in the service, he took a civil service position at Ethan Allen Air Force Base for two more years.

Finally, with the help of the G.I. bill, Truso made the decision to enter college, something he had always wanted to do.

As the CYNIC goes to press, new clues as to the identity of the would-be robber are cropping up from everywhere. Police have a fairly accurate description of the bandit from Truso, and some material evidence, such as a battered loafer worn by the man and apparently lost by him during the struggle with Truso.

This review was finished October 27, 1958, and does not contain information or new reports from that A.M. until today.

CYNIC requests that donations be made to help defray Truso's hospital expenses.

Dean Rowell Asks Student Cooperation In Parking

In your editorial of October 16 you discussed the parking situation on campus and concluded by asking other students to give this serious consideration and suggest possible solutions. In the same issue one columnist suggested the administration had made a "boo-boo" and complicated the problem by allowing sophomore and junior girls to have cars. I would like to present some further facts in light of some suggestions received. I hope this will reinforce your earlier request for serious student consideration for I believe the best solution may lie with student cooperation rather than administrative regulation.

For two years all resident freshmen have been denied the use of cars. The reasons for this are numerous and the results have in general been satisfactory. For several years arguments have been

The Newman Club of UVM will present it's annual retreat November 5th, 6th and 7th. This year's retreat master will be the Reverend James J. O'Brien, former Treasurer of National Association of Newman Club Chaplains. Father O'Brien has been associated with Newman for many years in various offices, he served as Province Chaplain of New England Province of National Newman Club Federation from 1954-1956. Father O'Brien is the retired National Chaplain of National Newman Club Federation.

An excellent speaker and personality make Father O'Brien popular throughout the nation among Newman Club members.

The Newman Club Annual Retreat is designed to give the Catholic student an opportunity for examination, meditation, and religious exercises. This year's retreat will open Wednesday, Nov. 5th with Mass at 7:00 a.m. in IRA ALLEN and a meeting in the afternoon. Thereafter the meetings will be held in the Student Lounge. Mass will be at 7:00 each morning and at 4:30 Friday afternoon.

Help! Help! Is Needed

This is Homecoming Weekend 1958, and it brings many old faces back to campus. Alumni return to the scenes of past adventures to relive the "good old days." The tuition raise has been the topic of conversation as well as athletic scholarships and new building projects. These three topics are of concern to alumni and parents because each one makes demands upon their purses. We intend to propose some new plans to the Homecoming visitors which we feel should be taken seriously to help our University.

This school receives some money from alumni and parents through grants or gifts. Remember, UVM acquires money in two ways, from appropriations from this state, and from these gifts and grants. Colleges that have big endowments and gifts use the money in a great many ways, such as for buildings and for scholarships to athletes or needy students. The scholarships enable such students to gain higher education where otherwise it would be impossible. This does not mean all scholarships go to athletes, since there are educational scholarships to "bright" men and women.

These alumni scream to their school for athletic prestige or the traditional weekend or the annual meeting at Alumni Hall. They like to take pride in their alma mater and want its tradition to carry through to all students who enter its halls. Does UVM have this type of alumni?

ALUMNI CLUB AND SCHOLARSHIPS

Our proposals to the alumni of UVM are to strengthen the Alumni Association, which will help to bring back the tradition to UVM. Our first proposal should be the formation of a club. Membership in this club should entail specified dues, which would in turn help in our building projects or other causes which would further inhance the prestige of this University. In return for the alumni aid, they will be entitled to receive bulletins or tickets to athletic events, or certain "get-togethers" on big weekends where all alumni can meet.

Proposal two: a scholarship program. If our alumni in cities throughout the country would band together in that city to donate certain educational or athletic scholarships to the needy students from that area or city, then this scholarship program could function. For example, alumni in an area could unite and recommend for scholarships certain students who excell scholastically and who are in need of aid to further their education. The students are then brought to the attention of the alumni group in that area who would interview the students and arrange for the aid. UVM would not pay the scholarship, but the alumni would be helping the students to gain higher education. From this group could come the "bright" men and women as well as the athletes.

In essence, we are advocating an alumni club and a scholarship program with the alumni playing a dominant role in bringing this school high educational standards along with strong athletic teams.

Panhellic

I wish to clear up any misunderstanding which may have arisen from the erroneous headline attached to the article concerning the Panhellenic pledging average. This article appeared in last week's issue of the CYNIC. In the first place, the average under discussion is not a rushing average, but a pledging average. There is no "rushing average," nor has there ever been one. In the second place, the pledging average is being established for the first time in the history of sororities on the UVM campus. It is, therefore, incorrect to say that this average is being lowered, since it has never before existed.

The establishment of a pledging average means that in order to be pledged to a sorority during rushing, a girl must have attained a 72% scholastic average for the preceeding semester. The initiation average, not to be confused with the pledging average, has been for many years and remains 75%. As in previous years, a girl must have a 75% average to be eligible to receive an open bid.

Panhellenic feels strongly that this establishment for the first time of a required average for pledging is a concrete step in the direction of higher and sounder scholarship for sorority women. In this light, I am sure you will understand our dismay upon reading that Panhellenic had "lowered" a nonexistent "rushing average."

Sincerely,

Margaret Atwood
Panhellenic President

"Red 'un"

Dear Editor,

Could I illustrate a point by a little story, perhaps a further foible for our times?

> Once upon a time there was a big green park, where the grass was always green, the sun always shone, and life was good. In this park, all set about with oak trees, a battery of grey squirrels made acorns while the sun did shine. To every squirrel his nut, and there was plenty for all, til one day, in a park over the hill and far away, inflation set in and nuts were nix. So the red squirrels came over the hill, and sparks flew as they tried to take the nuts right from the cheeks of their unsuspecting brothers. Left with tongue in cheek, the grey boys were stunned and bewildered. Tails high, the red-men beat it over the hill again, with a cache of nuts. Of course they weren't nuts from the mighty oak on the other side, but what can you do in a pinch? They grumbled about it all theway home.

Now if I could draw a few parallels, and as a Vermonter identify with the greys, and call Miss DeCecio a red 'un, just for the sake of allegory. Just because the out-of-staters got the truly unfair side of the deal-re the tuition hike, need they dea-

What should happen in the CYNIC just prior to Homecoming weekend, when parents appear to gaze on their tired offspring, carry a continual-check type conversation on with Jr.: "You're not eating right, are you Are you sure you're getting enough sleep? Why are you wearing those clothes? Your father and I made sure before you ..t that you had enough nice things to wear so that you wouldn't have to wear that old sweat shirt now go and change into . . ."

Well, what should happen in the CYNIC to counteract this type of thing is some kind of sanity, some kind of non-hedonistic positivism, some unsophomoric, great sweep of insight and a responsible assumption of responsibility.

"My, Horace, don't they just tear things apart. We never did that when we were in school, did we? (Horace nods) We just went on about our business and nobody bothered us and we bothered nobody and we didn't have all this ruckus and minor complaint to have fun . . . Did we, Horace? (Horace nods again.)

Horace is disagreeing with his wife, but that doesn't matter because her head is buried in the CYNIC, looking over all the "complaints" and "ruckus" which Junior changes from the sweat shirt into something more respectible (the button-down tartan-miniature, with the paint stain across the pocket and the shaggy-sewn rip in the arm pit where Snip, the dog at home, playfully snipped too hard). Mrs. is still talking when Junior appears in the lounge with the miniature tartan and Mr. chuckles to himself somewhere inside. He sees the shi

Highlights

By Edson Darer

Hello there. Well it's time for the first big weekend of the year. Homecoming, as I remember it from previous years at this institution, was a BLAST and I really mean a BLAST. The parties were lively, the women loose, and that "unmentionable word" was flowing. You had to wade through the cans or bottles of the "unmentionable word" that were strewn all over the place. Students were high, chaperones higher, and alumni highest. For where does an alum go to, to let off some steam. He goes back to his Alma Mater and goes to his old fraternity house and, as the football chant states, "go, go, go, really go." That's the story.

We Need Help

Why then, will this year be any different. First of all, the only thing that will be flowing will be soda pop. I suggest that a reason for this, is our illustrious alumni. They have so little hold over this university, it is pathetic. Most schools have some tradition and the alumni clubs are part of that tradition. What tradition, does UVM have that these alumni can hold onto? This factor does not make the difference. The alumni received a good education from this school and they should be grateful for it. Why don't they help out the university and if they did in a more generous way, they would have a say in what is going on at the university. At most schools, the alumni have a lot to do in the matters of scholarships for athletes and in the general rule concerning fraternities and social life. We, as undergrads, try to do all that is possible, but what can we do? We do have a little say, through the IFC and the SA. These two organizations are trying their level best, but there hands are tied without the support of the alumni. The IFC has a proposal up, to have the drinking law slackened on the four big weekends of the year. These are the times that the alumni come to pay us a visit. Fellow students, appeal to the alumni you meet this weekend and tell them to organize. Don't forget, "In numbers, there is strength." If they want to make it like old times around here, tell them to do a little persuading, and to make some pertinent suggestions to the higher echelons.

On the same subject, only in a different light, what's going to happen when the university gets rid of its abundance of out-of-staters? The "intruders" will not be importing dates for the big weekends. This will cause a slack in the business of the airlines and the busses and the hotels and motels. It might even cause some more unemployment in the state and a possible slide back into the recession. This might cause some complaining. Then we might see some action. Eventually there won't be any imports from anywhere, except maybe Winooski.

Finals Finally Gone?

This maybe coming a little early, but at Clemson College, a statistical survey was taken regarding the exemption of seniors from final exams. Out of 25 questionnaires, there were 19 answers. There were nine schools which did not exempt seniors, but of those, Ohio State and Stanford had earlier exams. Georgia Tech has no final exams AT ALL. U. of Maryland exempts all graduating seniors from exams, with NO requirements. Lehigh requires an "A" average. No. Carolina State, Penn State, Fordham, and Kentucky require a "B". Harvard, Colorado U., and Michigan State require a "C". Well, UVM, why not hop on the bandwagon, so we students can lead a less frantic life?

At the University of Miami, a new parking lot has been opened. This brings the amount to 43. Forty three parking lots. Do we have one? Are there any blue sticker areas left? Yesterday, I had to park at the Air Science building and I came up to school at 8:15.

Politics?

For all political fans, came this story from Window

cend in a barrage of insult on Vermont education? For those favored elite (?) in the cities, quantity isn't always quality, and a few good things and people have come from even Vermont. So, instead of grumbling all the way to the golden metropolis, let the 'country-clubbers' at least forsee the possible outcome of the situation, as suggested by Pete Schoffstall, that of a Cadillac strata and the poor Vermonter.

The realistic approach, rather than the derisory sneer is a better way to crack the nut.

Thank you.

Parking!

In regard to your recent editorial, "Space, Space, Space And Not A Spot To Find," it has become obvious just how much the administration of this school regards the opinions of its students. Not only were your opinions disregarded, but as if in direct opposition to these suggestions, another student parking area was obliterated over the weekend. No longer is the area parallel to the Cage available to student parking, as those who received tickets Monday morning are now well aware of. The familiar sign, "YELLOW STICKER PARKING ONLY" which once dotted the UVM campus here and there, now covers almost all available off-street parking. Is this a solution to the parking problem? Obviously, hidden somewhere in the confusion and Red-Tape of our administration is an answer, but as usual we are defied to find it.

Concerning the very efficient University Police force, which apparently is on the job twenty-four hours a day, I heartily commend you. I doubt if your efficiency is even exceeded by the F.B.I. Special commendation should be given to the way you put up No Parking signs Sunday night and ticket all offenders Monday morning. In a talk with a Burlington police officer I learned that the police department policy concerning newly authorized No Parking zones, is to allow approximately two weeks befor ticketing offenders. Thank heavens we have a more alert and efficient staff than the Town of Burlington. Good Show.

Respectfully,

QUEMOY

Last Monday the Communists resumed bombardment of Quemoy. They claimed that they had violated the two week cease fire because the United States had violated an understanding not to escort Nationalist supply vessels to Quemoy while the cease-fire was in effect. It was admitted by Washington that the United States ships were in that area. However the United States said that no violation had occurred.

Mr. Dulles and Chiang conferred on Tuesday. They issued a joint communique which made the following points

1) It was hoped that the communists would abandon their futile and dangerous policy. The U.S. said that they were the "authentic spokesman for free China."

2) It was declared that a return to the mainland was the "sacred mission" of the nationalists's, but not by force. It was hinted that only a revolt within Communist China could restore a Nationalist Rule.

TAIWAN STRAIT

The situation has in short taken an ironical turn. The U.S. is now willing to demilitarize the off-shore islands provided a cease-fire is issued, but the communists do not want the U.S. to demilitarize and are forestalling any withdrawal by artillery bombardment.

This situation will remain unsettled until the U.S. can find some new means to bring pressure on Peiping.

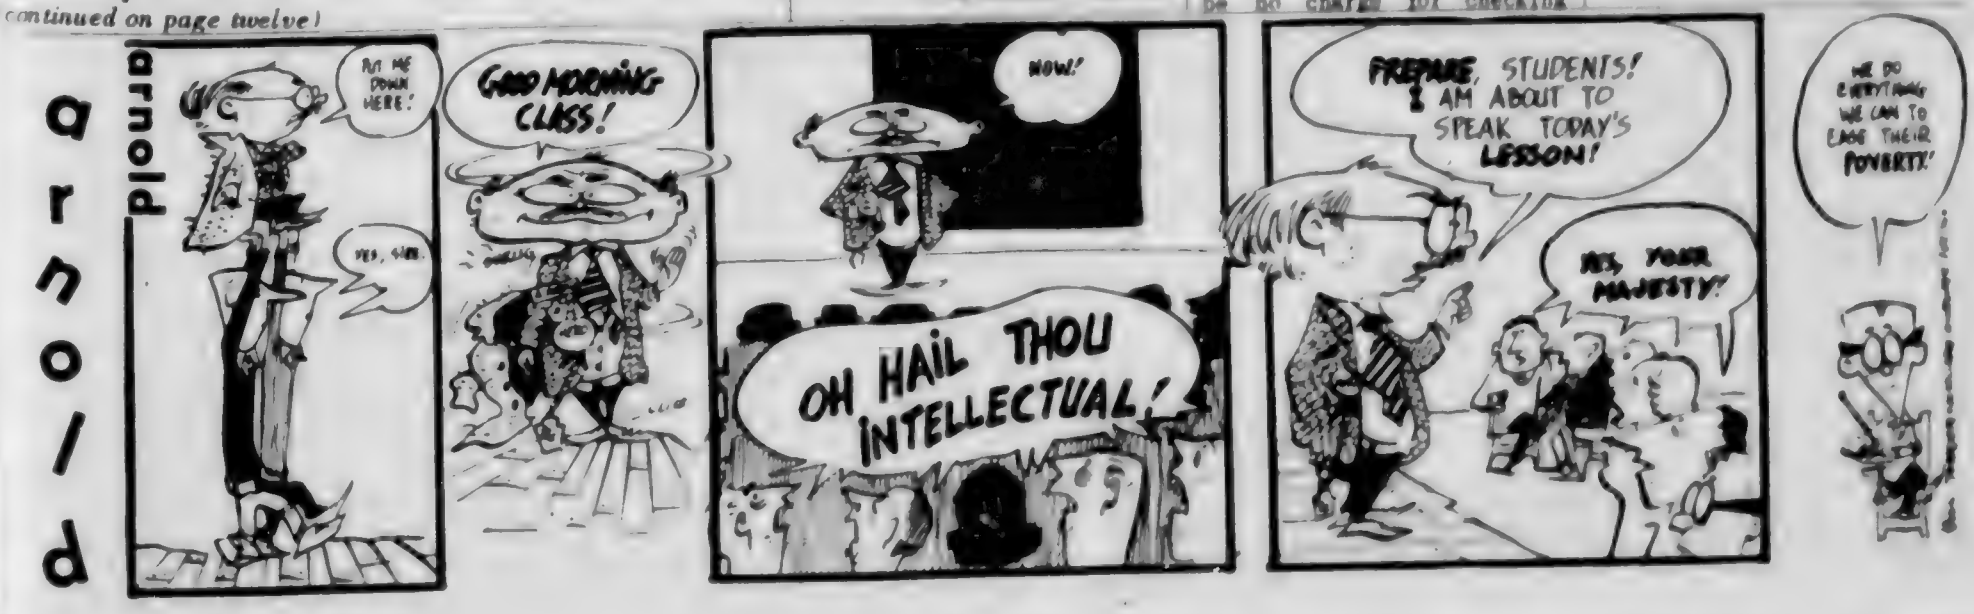
DE GAULLE

Since Premier De Gaulle returned to power last June, he has been endeavoring to induce the Algerians to end their struggle for independence from France. This struggle has been continuous for four years.

De Gaulle has tried to win over the bulk of the Algerian Moslem population. He has refused their demand to be independent but has offered them a representative democratic regime. The European Colonists in Algeria reacted with astonishment and bitterness to De Gaulle's offer. However, in France all groups praised De Gaulle. This is the first time in a long time that a leader of France has had so much support. In his press conference De Gaulle said "confidence has replaced anguish in France: national unity has prevented division."

"SCHOOLESS" STUDENTS

Seventy per cent of the students who were locked out of their classrooms when Governor Faubus closed the Little Rock high schools, have enrolled in emergency classes. Only 215 out of the city's 700 Negro high school students have found schools to attend.



The largest single enrollment of white students is operated by a private corporation formed by Faubus supporters. The corporation schools, however, are lacking a substantial cirriculum, teachers, and money.

POLITICAL AFFAIRS

The Democrats appeared to be unaffected by the increased vigor of the Republican campaign. So far there has been no sign that the campaign last week has deflected the Democratic tide. By all accounts, it appears that the best the Republicans can expect is to prevent the Democratic vote from becoming a landslide.

Military Ball

Next week the combined societies of Arnold Air and Ethan Allen Rifles will announce the name of the band that will play at the Military Ball on November 14. In the meantime they have been hard at work planning military strategy for the presentation of the Ball. They have made decisions on certain issues such as price which will be $2.50 per couple; there will be no charge for checking hats and coats; there will be free refreshments served; and the Ball will be held in Lower Waterman. The following are the names of the committees and of the cadets heading them: Queen Committee, Bob Wedwaldt; Decorations, Thayer Lewis; Publicity, Jerry Heller; Invitations, Dick Shine; Refreshments, Gerry Mason; Tickets, Charlie Fetzlaff.

ACACIA

Last Wednesday evening the Alpha Chis and the Acacians held an exchange dinner. The get-together was enjoyed very much.

Saturday afternoon a tea was held for the Mothers' Club in appreciation for all they have done. They feel very fortunate to have such an active Mothers' Club and they like to show their appreciation.

After a huge success with the pirate party, the Acacians are looking forward to a big Homecoming.

ALPHA CHI OMEGA

Last week the Alpha Chis enjoyed a four day visit from Mrs. E. L. Avrett, Jr., Province President. During her visit, informal workshops, and meetings with the chapter's officers were held. Mrs. Avrett is counselor to Alpha Chi Omega's collegiate chapters at University of New Hampshire, University of Rhode Island, Syracuse, and UVM.

Congratulations to Doris Graff, who was elected to Omicron Nu, the Home Economic's Honorary.

ALPHA EPSILON PHI

AEPi will start its speaker program known as "Careers In New Dimensions 1958" soon. This program is designed to help the members of the house to choose a post-college career. President Fay will be one of the participating speakers in the program. A few of the many topics which will be discussed are: "A Military Career in the Space Age", "Pathways of Law", "Medicine, Specialization or General Practice" and "Business, the World of Many Forms".

Assistant Professor Hall is now the new faculty advisor of the house. His many attributes will be of great advantage to the fraternity.

ALPHA DELTA PI

This past week has been Friendship Week at the Alpha Delta Pi house. On Thursday night, the neophytes were hostesses for the alumnae and the sisters at a tea. The week culminated in initiation on Sunday. The newly initiated members, Barbara Bradshaw and Cindy Reilly, were guests of honor at a banquet following the ceremony.

Also initiated at this time, was Mrs. Gladys Stapleton of Burlington. Gamma Tau chapter is very proud to have her as one of their new sponsors.

The sisters are busily planning an Open House to be held after the Homecoming game on November 1st. Everyone is invited to join them for jazz and fun.

Pat Rose, ADPi, has been elected stage manager for the forthcoming production of "Brigadoon".

DELTA DELTA DELTA

This past Sunday, the local alumnae of Tri Delta held a tea for our chapter at the home of Mrs. Wetzel on East Street. Chatting and refreshments provided a refreshing interlude on a quiet Sunday afternoon.

This past weekend the initiation of seven pledges also took place. The new sisters are Ricky Collins, Barbara Evans, Sharon Garrity, Helen Griffin, Gail McLean, Patricia Morse, and Helen Spencer. The ceremony was followed by a buffet dinner for all the chapter at the house.

Special congratulations are extended to Ricky Collins, who was named "Delta of the Month", and given a special pin in recognition, and to Helen Spencer, who was awarded the "most improved scholastic average" pin. Nancy Agneta retained the award pin for again earning the highest average in the chapter.

Two student nurses in Tri-Delta are on affiliation this year - Jean Lord in New York, and Lynn Blake in Boston. In order to keep them informed, some of the Tri Delta write short notes each week, which are collected and forwarded by Jeanne Young.

DELTA PSI KAPPA ALPHA THETA

The Delta Psi's got a rather unusual awakening one Saturday morning at about 7:15. While five Thetas stayed at the house to cook breakfast, all the rest went down to 61 Summit Street armed with pots and pans and spoons and proceeded not only to wake the Delts, but the five surrounding blocks as well. The Delts all came, though, and had breakfast with them, surprising the Thetas with their early morning affability. No doubt there were some who did not have Saturday classes, yet what sports! The following Tuesday night, a few people noticed a gathering assemblage in front of the house which turned out to be the Delts with a return invitation to dinner. The Thetas give compliments and thanks to them and to their cook.

Since then they have had exchange dinners with Phi Delt, Tri Delt, and ones for the future are on the calendar with Sigma Phi and the Owls.

Last Saturday afternoon the Phi Delts came over to listen to the game with them and play bridge. Apples, fudge and cookies furnished by the Phi Delts were passed around and the afternoon was very pleasant.

Theta extended an open bid to Judy Morse of Simpson Hall, and expect to initiate her within the semester.

Last week-end was a big one for the Thetas. Parents' Week-end time came, providing many happy memories. The weekend began on Saturday with lunch at 11 for those who wished to go down to Norwich for the game and lunch again at 12 for those who were unable to attend . . . Saturday night there was a banquet at Sunny Hollow, and on Sunday morning a brunch at 9:00.

KAPPA SIGMA

Last Wednesday, the Kappa Sigma's held an exchange dinner with the Tri-Deltas. Since the evening was so entertaining for both parties concerned, President William Geissel announced that he plans to hold exchange dinners with all the sororities during the semester.

The Kappa Sigs were proud that three of their brothers were chosen as Distinguished Military Students in the Army R.O.T.C., as well as being elected to the honorary Ethan Allen Rifles Club. The three chosen were Robert Gallagher, '59; David Bell, '59; and Robert Davison, '59.

PANHELLENIC

Among the activities of Panhellenic is the Indoor Sports project. Indoor Sports is an organization sponsored by wives of doctors in Burlington and composed of handicapped people in the Burlington area. Since the sororities rotate in attending these meetings, each sorority has the opportunity to [illegible] this service.

PHI SIGMA DELTA

Paul Silver has been elected float chairman and work has begun on the float. Homecoming will bring back many alumns to the house, where a buffet on Friday and a party on Saturday night is planned.

The Tea for President Fleming was attended by many students who welcomed the opportunity to greet UVM's new President.

SIGMA ALPHA EPSILON

The SAE's have just completed a fall work project, which consisted of a complete overhaul of the kitchen and installation of a new sink and freezer.

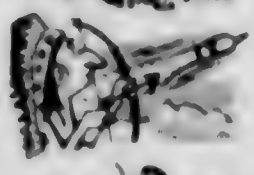
SAE has scheduled a buffet supper for SAE's from UVM and St. Lawrence, alumni and guests on Saturday of Homecoming.

SIGMA PHI EPSILON

The new pledges of Sig Ep are Steven Bresco, John Rapp, Loren Barr, and William Dupras.

The Sig Eps traveled to Norwich for the game between UVM, where they celebrated the 50th anniversary of the founding of Norwich's Sig Ep chapter.

SIGMA NU



As the Sigma Nu's venture into the initial round of hour exams, "happenings" at the Lodge are primarily of a scholastic nature. However the books were put aside when

THE PROBLEM CORNER

Last week's problem was not printed in its entirety, so it had an infinite number of solutions. Let's try it again.

PROBLEM:

A bag contains nickels, dimes, quarters, and halves. There are 50 coins in all. The number of nickels and dimes combined is the same as the number of quarters, and the number of dimes and quarters combined is twice the number of halves. If there are an even number of quarters, how much money is in the bag?

Leave solutions to these problems at the office of Professor Schoonmaker, Room 341, Waterman, no later than Monday following publication of the problem.

Newman Club Breakfast

The UVM Newman Club will hold its Homecoming Communion Breakfast on Sunday, November 2, in the faculty dining room of the Waterman Building. The Breakfast will be at 10 00 A.M.

The speaker for the event will be Miss Catherine Nulty. Miss Nulty is a former faculty advisor to the Newman Club at UVM.

Tickets will be on sale in Lower Waterman on Wednesday and Thursday and after Mass on Saturday, All Saints Day. The price of the tickets is one dollar per person.

and wonders how many clothes changes they will go through before Junior's 9 o'clock, which they plan to attend ("Ah, Mom, there's no PTA here'").

What should happen for these people is normalcy. So far they will have run into it with the series of changes Junior has brought on himself. By the time their through Mrs. should be almost half way through the CYNIC.

Mrs. starts on the "Pinnings, etc." page, mainly because she wants to see if Junior had pinned someone. She notes that there are no "divorce" listings and even discovers one girl who, through some fluke of fate or the society editor's tired eyes, is reportedly pinned to two different men. She notes another (from former readings of the "Pinnings, etc." section) who seems to have three switches since the first day of school. Mr. would have said: "That one's batting 500!"

Mrs. looks up at Junior who is standing, expectantly knowing he has chosen wrong. Junior mumbles a little to himself during his second ascent of the stairs to his room. Opening the door he marches into the havoc of an 8 o'clock dorm room and heads for the drawer, a white shirt, a tie and a jacket which, he thinks to himself, should please the "old girl" chuckling. His roommate looks seedy eyed over the covers, hair porcupined out, and Junior thanks his stars for the close cropping style that his father insisted was manly enough for any college man.

Downstairs Mrs. finishes the "Pinnings, etc." and turns again to the welcoming front page . . . in color . . . then back to the insides of the thing: the editorial. She makes it half way through and then stops, knowing what it says: normalcy. She and Mr. and all the other Mrs. and Mr. are "welcome for the weekend."

"Well, there's no death notices, at least," she says, finally looking at Mr. who raises his eyebrows and lights his pipe.

Upstairs Junior is retying his tie for the fourth time ("Why does this always happen when I'm in a hurry?") and Mrs. has started on the letters to the Editor. They are not disturbing. She has not been reading the columns in past issues, so the irrate words and agreements float gently over her head.

Karl Andren Edits UVM Alumni And Undergrad Publications

by Roberta Gluck

Do you know what goes on in the new UVM Alumni House, located at 109 South Prospect Street? Upon walking into the building one cannot help noticing the buzz of activity, a great portion of which can be traced to Mr. Karl Andren. Mr. Andren's main functions are concerned with the UVM Publications Office. The work of this office involves it with both alumni and undergraduates. Mr. Andren and his department makes available to our campus organizations its aid in printing and publishing all sorts of materials, and is also responsible for four distinguished UVM publications: The Alumni Bulletin, The Alumni Magazine, The Bulletin For Parents, and The UVMailbag. Mr. Andren himself is the capable and conscientious editor of the first three of the above mentioned publications; with Miss Irene Allen as the Associate Editor. Miss Allen does a very fine job of editing the UVMailbag, which is printed for faculty and staff every two weeks.

Mr. Andren's background bears out his capability for the job he has been holding here at the University since July 1955. After graduation from Harvard University in 1936 he went into the advertising field in New York. From 1940 to 1945 he served with the Army staff of SHAF in Europe. Not long after his discharge from the Army, Mr. Andren and his wife moved from N.Y. to Burlington, at which time he became affiliated with the University's Public Relations Office. Mr. Andrens' present position as head of publications puts him in close contact with many alumni, who show their persistent interest in UVM through their correspondence with him. His three part serial story, "What UVM Means to Me" has received many responses from high school seniors, UVM seniors, and alumni, and their essays, published in the Alumni Magazine, have proved very interesting.

Miss Irene Allen is a native Vermonter and a UVM graduate of the class of '25. Her work on publications is not her first job here at the University, for she has been associated with Billings Library, the UVM Press Office, and the Agricultural Extension Service.

It is undeniable that both Mr. Andren and Miss Allen do an admirable job in keeping both the alumni and undergraduates informed of all phases of UVM life.

Freshmen Participate In Homecoming

Members of the Class of 1962 will actively participate in the Homecoming Weekend by sponsoring a social gathering on Saturday night, after the Vermont Varieties. Starting at 9:30 P.M. the Waterman Student Lounge, complete with refreshments and music will be open to all freshmen, their parents and families plus all members of the UVM Family.

Organized by the Freshmen Men's Residence Halls Council, the gathering is to provide a place for the Class of '62 to meet after the Varieties, and at the same time to enable the parents to become better acquainted with the University of Vermont. Arrangements are under the direction of Peter Saidel, William Collins and Carl Cobbs.

Both the Administration and the Homecoming Committee were pleased to see the freshmen initiate this event, and hope it receives the support it deserves.

Mr. Van Benthuysen Discusses Out-Of-State Tuition Problems

Vermont will always be a mecca for many students seeking to the University from beyond the borders of the Green Mountain State.

UVM's Director of Public Relations, Larry Van Benthuysen said that "both President Fey and former President Bergmann have made it clear that the University will always welcome and benefit from welcoming out-of-state students to UVM's student body."

Van Benthuysen, a UVM graduate of 1951 who came to Vermont as an out-of-state student from New York State, said that out-of-state students should not interpret UVM's latest tuition increase as being directed at them.

"It's true," he said, "that UVM tuition of $1040 will give UVM the highest out-of-state tuition of any state university." But he said that a look at other state universities in New England will serve to show that UVM is unique in New England for the large numbers of out-of-state students it admits.

Of New England state universities surveyed Monday, Maine and New Hampshire - with 1958 non-resident tuition charges of $703 and $760 - did not have enrollment figures available for release.

But the University of Connecticut, with an out-of-state tuition of only $550 yearly reported only 471 out-of-state students in a total enrollment of more than 10,700. The University of Massachusetts lists a non-resident tuition of $600, but admitted only 12 out-of-state students in a total of more 4,250 this fall. The University of Rhode Island likewise shows a low non-resident charge, but admitted only 375 out-of-staters in a total of over 2500.

Thus, Van Benthuysen said, out-of-state students at Vermont might be tempted to compare UVM tuition with out-of-state tuition at Connecticut or Massachusetts, but admissions policies at those state universities make it difficult or impossible for them to gain admission there unless they are residents of Connecticut or Massachusetts.

Why does UVM accept so many more non-residents than its sister state universities of New England? The answer is partly tradition, Van Benthuysen said.

While Vermonters were among the first in the nation - 1791 - to found a state university, they did not provide substantial financial support for their University in recent years. The result was that UVM functioned for the greatest part of its history very much like a private institution. Tuition has always had to provide a major share of UVM's operating expense, and this is still true.

For out-of-staters, then, UVM tuition is essentially in the same high range as it is at private colleges and universities in New England and the East. It is precisely these colleges and universities, together with state universities which have traditionally received financial support from their states, which compete with UVM for qualified teachers as well as for qualified students.

Van Benthuysen said that UVM students - both in-state and out-of-state - ought to take pride in their institution as one with a distinguished history and a respected standing among today's institutions of higher learning.

Statistics available from University Testing Director, Prof. John C. Huden, show University averages for aptitude and measurement tests given entering students are around the median figure achieved by some 40,000 entering college students. For those who assume - wrongly - that resident students do not measure up to non-residents, the statistics show that Vermont residents by and large do as well as out-of-staters taking the tests.

In summary, Van Benthuysen said that two factors would continue to assure a good-sized out-of-state representation at UVM. To be sure, he said, the numbers of Vermonters will continue to increase, "but it might be noted that the number of non-Vermonters also increase this year, even if only very slightly.

"But," he said, "Vermont is a small population state. Her per capita expenditure for education and for her other services are already high. Thus, it seems reasonable that she will always want to welcome numbers of out-of-state students to her state university not only because they will help support the operation of the University, but also because they will contribute to the heritage of that University which has always cultivated the individual.

"In turn," Van Benthuysen concluded, "out-of-state students will always be attracted to the University of Vermont because it has traditionally had a place for them, and because it has had and will continue to have a reputation as an institu-

AEPi Aids Burlington Community Chest Drive

In order to disprove the popular misconception that fraternities are harmful to the college man, the members of Alpha Epsilon Pi Fraternity aided the Burlington Community Chest last weekend. They proved to the people of Burlington that fraternities can and do play an active role in community affairs if given the opportunity.

This was done last Saturday when each member of the fraternity went into the business district of Burlington, and cleaned the windshields of all the cars parked there at the time. After each windshield was cleaned, a leaflet was left on the car, reading, "The Brothers of Alpha Epsilon Pi have cleaned your windshield so that you may see your way clear to donating to the Burlington Community Chest."

The plan was approved and endorsed by the Mayor of Burlington, as well as the Community Chest. The members of Alpha Epsilon Pi sincerely hope that their small deed helped the Community Chest's drive.

This year, and each year following, the AEPi's will adopt a charity to promote and aid it in its drives and needs.

of sound standards. The pressures of enrollment will make UVM - like other institutions - more selective. In this connection, UVM'ers ought to know that more than 2600 students applied for places in the freshman class, which numbers 955 students.

"A new tuition of $1040 will be a hardship for many," the '51 alumnus conceded, particularly in view of the fact that UVM has very little scholarship help it can offer to non-residents. However, he urged non-residents who needed help to consult with the student aid committee and suggested that, for the future, out-of-staters might consider taking it on themselves to provide scholarship aid especially for their non-Vermont colleagues.

Assuming half of UVM's 15,000 alumni may live outside the state or have come originally from outside Vermont, Van Benthuysen said that an annual individual contribution of $5 for an out-of-state scholarship fund would mount up quickly.

"Of course," he concluded, "such a scholarship fund would have to be in addition to what UVM Alumni should be prepared to give to the University for its development fund, for in the final analysis - even $1040 tuition does not meet fully the cost of education at UVM."

John Eden Speaks To IR Club On UN Day

John Eden, member of British Parliament, and nephew of former Prime Minister Sir Anthony Eden, was a guest speaker on campus Friday, October 16. Sponsored by the International Relations Club, Mr. Eden spoke informally on the role of Britain in the United Nations, and the global outlook of the UN.

From his visit to the United States he said he learned how careful and imaginative the British must be in presenting their political views to other countries. The possible interpretations of policy, in the case of any country, should be predicted, he pointed out.

In discussion the purpose of the UN, in promoting an interchange of ideas between countries, he stated that people couldn't be closer than they were outside the organization. Faith in the combined efforts of NATO, SEATO, the Atlantic Union, and through trade, seem to be essential for their success.

Pressures of global conflict Mr. Eden felt could best be met by consistent firm resolution, and the UN is of value as a place for nations to convene and discuss problems. In this vein, the organizations like WHO, FAO, UNESCO, UNICEF, and the World Bank sustain effort.

As the power of the western world we were reminded of the responsibility for leadership involved. He also commented on the 'solidarity' of our countries at this time, as an improvement over the war years.

A final point of Mr. Eden was--the days of complete victory are gone. In the world of today we need to aim more to coexist, and find a--the--cause vivendi.

S.C.A. General Meeting

Sunday night, October 26th, Student Christian Association held its second yearly general meeting. The meeting was held at St. Paul's Episcopal Church. Supper was served at 6:00 and was followed by a worship service which is Even Song. The Canterbury group were host group for this meeting.

The speaker for the evening was Charles E. O'Connor, associate secretary to the Student Christian Movement in New England. Mr. O'Connor talked about the Student Christian Association and gave some ideas and insights into its nature and purpose.

There have been a lot of questions asked about S.C.A. in the past, both by those within and those without the Association. It is hoped that Mr. O'Connor's talk did cast some light on the situation which will be of benefit to all involved and concerned.

Leidberg Is New Chaplain

By R. J. FALK

Among the new faces at UVM this year we find Richard Leidberg, the new Protestant chaplain on campus. Rev. Leidberg attended Earlham College, in Richmond, Indiana, where he received his B.A. in 1954. He then spent two years studying in the Andover Newton Theological School in Newton Centre, Mass., and completed his theological training in the Chicago Seminary, a part of the University of Chicago. His field of concentration was in the area of religion and art, the emphasis being on literature and drama.

He was employed by the Council for Cooperative Ministry at UVM, the supporting denominations of this Council being Baptist, Congregational, Methodist, and Presbyterian, and is therefore responsible to the students belonging to these various denominations. In addition to this he is an advisor to the Student Christian Association. When asked if he had any plans for the S.C.A., he replied,

"I am interested in making the Student Christian Association on campus a spiritual and intellectual force which will meet the spiritual and intellectual needs of Protestant students."

Rev. Leidberg can be found in lower Waterman, Room 36, the Religious Life Office. He wants Protestant students to feel free to drop in at any time for either personal visits or if they are interested in working for the S. C. A.

Placement

The Placement Service has recently received a copy of Directory of Retailers Who Recruit College Graduates, a publication of the Committee on Careers in Retailing, National Retail Merchants Association. This directory was prepared especially to assist college students who wish to contact prospective employers in the retailing industry.

The directory, which is classified geographically, contains names, addresses, and descriptions of 116 retail organizations in 76 communities of 36 states. Listed are the number of employees and executives in each store, the number of college graduates recruited in an average year, and the types of positions and training. Notation is also made as to whether or not the store has a summer program for undergraduates.

Students are invited to consult this directory at the Placement Service, 159 Waterman.

Enrollment

The largest student [illegible] tion in the history [illegible] University of Vermont recorded this fall, according to figures released by the University's Admissions office.

An enrollment high [illegible] 248 achieved in the fall of 1949 was eclipsed by a record total of 3276 students who registered this fall. Included in the record-making statistics was the largest freshmen class in the University's history as [illegible] 955 members of the class of 1962 assumed allegiance to the Green and Gold.

The total enrollment of 3276 reflected an all-around increase over last year's 3164. In particular, the number of Vermonters enrolling increased by an even 100 from 1657 to 1757 this fall, continuing a trend begun in the fall of 1955 following legislative action which provided state funds to permit the University to reduce tuition for all qualified Vermonters.

Total out-of-state enrollment also showed a slight increase - 10 students - from last year's 1453 to 1463 this year. Fifty-six pre-clinic nurses who enroll for special UVM courses complete the 3276 total enrollment picture.

Examined from almost any perspective, UVM's enrollment figures reflect increases. Total enrollment in the undergraduate colleges is up 90 students over last year, from 2719 to 2809. College of Medicine shows 183 students this year against 176 for 1957. The Graduate College, which increased its enrollment by 21 students two years ago and by 23 students last year, increased its total enrollment once again, from 100 last year to 155 this fall. The School of Dental Hygiene proved a modest exception to the upward trend, registering 32 students this year as compared to 34 in the fall of 1957.

The freshman and senior classes reflected good-sized increases over the same ranks last year, although sophomore and junior totals dwindled somewhat.

Some 691 men and 364 women combined to make up the largest freshman class in the University's history. Previous high, 933, came in 1956. Vermonters once again continued their trend begun in 1955 of making up a larger and larger share of the entering class. This year 537 or 56 per cent come from Vermont. Out-of-state freshmen number 418 or 43.8 per cent. Total increase over last year's 873 freshmen thus amounted to 82.

The senior class, traditionally smallest of all four classes, showed the largest increase by comparison with last year's senior class, [illegible] 462. This fall the senior class can look ahead to June commencement with 551 candidates for the bachelor's degree.

Students embarking on their junior year at UVM number 636 as compared to 639 in the fall of 1957. Some 667 students make up this year's sophomore class; 745 students enjoyed sophomore status as last year's fall semester began.

Consideration Will Solve Problem

...ed for equal privileges ... and women. This year ... University Council moved ... direction by allowing ... classes of women to have ... The other means of ... equality and reducing ... problem would have been ... exhibit cars for men in ... sophomore and junior ... classes.

What was the result of this ...? In 1957-58 a total of ... blue stickers were issued. Of these 9.47% were issued to women. This year to ... 892 blue stickers have been issued, of which 9.95% have been issued to women. The figure for 1957 is the June total and includes the replacements for lost stickers, swapped cars, etc. and the comparison assumed this was about the same for women as for men. It does not seem that a .48% increase in cars owned by women has made our problem too much worse.

SUGGESTIONS

Let us look at some of the solutions suggested---first, a parking lot for all student cars. As you mentioned the cost of this will not be less that $1000 to $1500 per car to prepare the surface. In addition, there would need to be protection by fencing, lighting and a watchman, for to park 1000 cars in an unprotected lot would be asking for trouble. Add maintenance and snow removal and the cost becomes prohibitive.

Also consider size and location. We asked the University landscape planners how large an area would be needed to park registered student cars. It figures out at 7 to 8 acres! A sizeable expanse of asphalt, and to find this much room we would have to move well outside the campus area. This is usually the case on other college campuses where parking lots are provided. They vary from one quarter to three quarters of a mile from the main classroom area. This, I am afraid, would not satisfy the student who last year asked for a yellow sticker because he had a job. Inquiry showed that he lived in a house where the back yard parking facilities were closer to the Williams Science Hall than the Waterman lot is to the Dairy Building, just for an example.

There is frequent reference to the number of spaces vacant in the reserved parking areas. Actually there is less than one parking space for every three staff cars registered. This compares favorably with many other campuses but does not allay faculty complaints.

We shall continue to favor staff cars over those of students though there will not be enough spaces for every staff member to park just outside the building where his office is, nor enough to permit random automobile travel from building to building anytime of day. The reconstruction of the Old Mill has upset many parking habits and this will not become settled until the reconstruction is complete.

As for the suggestion that the area between the Old Mill and Lafayette Hall be paved for student parking, I suggest that the extra 15 spaces would aggravate more than solve. One reason would be the noise problem in the fall and spring with open windows and a canyon-like echoing between the buildings.

REASONS

In the past few years I have asked many students for reasons why they considered it necessary for them to have a car other than the pure fun of having one. The reasons most frequently given were the following:

1. Needed to move things around from rooms to meetings and for extra-curricular activities. (Please note in the green pages and now stenciled on the signs, restricted areas extend to 4 p.m. Most of the above activity normally occurs after that time, and there is space to park near a building.
2. Transportation to and from Burlington is not adequate and frequently not available.
3. Distances in Burlington and cost of taxi make a car almost a necessity for dates, rushing, weekends.

For the sake of argument, let us concede the validity of these. I cannot see that any of them have any bearing on the parking problem we are discussing. Excluding the commuting student, at no time has anyone argued that a car is a necessity to go to classes, yet it is this use that is causing our congestion.

In view of the space and and expense, the most practical administrative solution would be to have no student cars driven on campus except by commuters, who might have special assigned stalls where each car could be parked while the owner is on campus.

I still believe the problem could be solved by student consideration and cooperation.

AFROTC Detachment Welcomes Four New Staff Members

The 870th AFROTC Group is proud to welcome four new members to it's staff. They are:

Major John F. McCaskey, the new executive officer and Senior Instructor, comes from an assignment at Pacific Air Force Headquarters, Hickam AFB, Honolulu, Hawaii. After being commissioned at Yale University in 1943, he served two and a half years in the South Pacific area. During a brief interruption of service in 1946, he went to Southern Methodist University where he obtained a degree in Business Administration. His wife and five daughters reside with him in Burlington.

Captain Eugene M. Cahill, Freshman Instructor, comes from an assignment as commander of a combat crew (KC-97) at Pease AFB, New Hampshire. He is a graduate of San Jose State College, California, and has also served as a Bombardier in the USAF. Captain Cahill is not married.

1st Lt. John W. Kehoe, Sophomore Instructor, comes from Kelley AFB, Texas, where he flew C-124 Globemasters on world-wide support missions. He hails from Clayton, N.Y., and is a graduate of Niagra University. He received his wings upon graduation from multi-engine pilot training in December 1952. His wife and three sons are living with him in Burlington.

M.Sgt. Bernard A. Knott comes to us after tours of duty with the AFROTC unit at Brown University and AFROTC Headquarters, Maxwell AFB, Alabama. Sgt. Knott's service career dates back to February 1943. Although he is a native Kentuckian, he considers himself a New Englander, having spent twelve years in this area. His wife and family of seven children live with him in Burlington.

Rock, Arizona. It's hard for Navajos to understand the difference between the Republican and Democratic parties. So Mrs. Annie Wauneka, a member of the Navajo tribal council decided to simplify her political teaching by using the party symbols - the democratic donkey and the GOP elephant. She recently stated that this procedure gave a big edge to the Democrats. Navajos much prefer the Donkey because donkeys are good workers "and you could eat the young ones." On the other hand, the Navajos had seen elephants only at the circuses "and even then their hides were repulsive." Alas and Alack, so true, so true.

Remarks I'm pretty sure no children will ever make

"Why don't you and mother come to the party with us?"

"I don't think anyone as young as me should be allowed to drive a car."

"The dance lasts until two, but we'll probably be home about midnight."

"I don't see any sense in wearing a different gown to every dance."

Have a good, clean, happy, healthy, and sober weekend. So long for now.

P.S. Remember, old maids are born, not made.

In the car, after Junior's tie and white shirt and jacket have passed inspection, Mr. turns the key and at quarter after nine, fifteen minutes late for Junior's first class, they are still circling the Waterman block, looking for a parking space. Mrs. thinks back on other issues and comments to herself on the lack of any appeal in "this" CYNIC for more parking space. Ironically Mr. asks his first question: "Anything new going on in the building line, Son?" (Mr. is a contractor of sorts.) "They're building something that looks like a parking lot out by Hamilton," says Junior. (Mrs. raises her psychic eyebrow. "Why didn't they do it here? No, that must be the new building." She says so.

In short, calm should happen this week in the CYNIC so I can't bring myself, in the Clearing House to fling brickbats at anybody's icons . . . real or imagined.

I had thought to continue last weeks line but it seems that I have misplaced the fabulously funny Edcation Department test that I was going to run (Does anyone have one that they would be willing to contribute? . . . you know, the one in Psychiatric Care and Handling of Pre-School Children, the first question on which starts something like: "Does rubber based paint stant up to many washings? (Check one) Yes--- No--- Only in rainy weather---.)

At any rate, such stuff might have made Mrs. forget Junior's sweat shirt and he would have made class on time and not have had to walk in late . . . and with his parents. Since I can't divert Mrs. I'll close with a fair warning to Junior to put the tie and the white shirt on, and the jacket, in the first place. It'll save trouble and Mrs. will only be disturbed by the girl in the "Pinning, etc." column who seems to be pinned to two different men. Maybe, also, my colleagues will come through with a nice, cozy, chummy, all's well, university paper.

See you in the lines.

It takes all kinds of engineers to do Western Electric's job

It is Western Electric's job in the Bell System to produce some 65,000 different parts which are assembled into a vast variety of telephone apparatus and equipment. This job, coupled with our other responsibilities, requires the help of engineers in every field.

Their skills and talents are needed to develop new manufacturing techniques, solve quality control problems, devise testing facilities and methods. They work on new applications for metals and alloys, calculate raw material needs, seek manufacturing cost reductions.

In helping meet the Bell System's need for more and better telephone equipment, Western Electric engineers have assignments in the other areas of our job – installation, distribution and purchasing.

Our engineers are also involved in defense projects entrusted to us by the government. Because of our specialized Bell System experience, we are well equipped to handle projects like the Nike guided missile system and the White Alice communications network in Alaska.

Of course, W.E. engineers are encouraged and assisted in developing professionally — in expanding their technical know-how. Company-sponsored programs – like the full-time Graduate Engineering Training Program and the Tuition Refund Plan – help them along.

Promotion from within – a Western Electric policy – helps our engineers move into positions of prime responsibility. Today, 55% of the college graduates in our upper levels of management have engineering degrees. In the next ten years, 7,000 key jobs must be filled by newly promoted people – engineers included.

Western Electric technical fields include mechanical, electrical, chemical and civil engineering, plus the physical sciences. Ask your Placement Officer for a copy of "Consider a Career at Western Electric," or write College Relations, Room 1111E, Western Electric Co., 195 Broadway, New York 7, N. Y. Postmen Outrun Maine, 26-31

by STAN MESSINGER

The Harriers from UVM upset a slightly favored Maine team Saturday by the score of 26-31. Maine, who for the past two years, has dominated the Yankee Conference, was shaken from its high pedestal when six of the first ten men who crossed the finish line were wearing the Green and Gold.

Cutts Stars For Cats - - - - - - -

As the race began on the wet course, Coach Archie Post felt optimistic about his chances, but thought that the time of the race would be comparatively slow. Howie Cutts from Townshend, Vermont, increased UVM's chances as he led the field out of the starting line. Going into the golf course, which is the hardest part of the race, Cutts was leading by 20 yards, followed by the two Maine stars, Bessy and Daily. As the teams went into the loop, which completes the race on the golf course, it was Cutts who was still leading Bessy by a few steps and had a very fine time of 15.5.

Going into the final stretch Cutts was challenged by Daily, who set the Yankee Conference record last year. Nearing the finish line, Cutts put on a tremendous kick and it was neck and neck down to the wire with Bessy of Maine winning by a step. Bessy's time was 23.57.7 which incidentally is very good time for a wet day. Cutts, although beaten, thrilled the few fans with his stretch drive and really showed his great speed.

Daily, the former record holder, finished third, followed by Norm Picard, last week's hero over Wesleyan. Fred Kolstrom and Perkins followed him across the wet tape. Capt. Ray Allen, Dan Mosman, Whitey Luce finished 9-10-11 respectively, while Burrows and Donahue finished 14-15 to round out the Harrier picture.

Hopes For Yankee Conference - -

After the race, Coach Archie Post said he was very pleased with the team's performance and hopes that the boys do as well next week, when they will be travelling to Amherst, Mass. to compete in the Yankee Conference runs.

Frosh Beat Williams, 20-14

by STEVE COOPER

The UVM Frosh football team scored a 20-14 win over the Williams Frosh Saturday on rain-soaked Centennial Field. It was its third win in four outings.

Moe Walsh got the UVM yearlings off to a two touchdown advantage in the first half with an off tackle score in the first period, and a 15-yard pass from Don Parlato in the second quarter. Chris Bromberg scored the two point try on a pass from Maynard Ducatt after the first TD.

Williams scored its first TD in the late minutes of the second period. They came back with another in the third period but missed the point attempt on the TD.

Ducatt clinched the game with a 17-yard run in the third period.

The only loss handed the Vermont club was by Norwich's freshman outfit.

HERB HEIN'S FOOTBALL FORECAST

Old man Upset played a big part on the football scene last Saturday, and it didn't make any predictions come out the way I had planned. Out of ten contests I picked five right, three wrong, and two of the games ended in ties. J.H. Walton of 202 Wills Hall also picked five right, and won the CYNIC football contest. Congratulations Mr. Walton for picking the winners. Again I'll say that all entries must be in the CYNIC box in the WATERMAN INFORMATION OFFICE by Saturday at noon. Also you must indicate your choices by scores and not just checks. This is done in case of ties. Well, if you're ready for this weeks picks, so am I.

NOTRE DAME - NAVY – The Irish (4-2) are anxious to get back to winning ways after dropping two of their last three games. Navy (4-1) has been plagued with injuries all year and the Middies don't look like they will give Notre Dame too rough a time. Still, there's always that chance of an upset. NOTRE DAME

PITTSBURGH - SYRACUSE – After watching Pitt (4-1-1) on television last Saturday, I feel that they are a good sound team, both offensively and defensively. Syracuse (4-1) also had an excellent team this year. This game shapes up to be a very exciting and close contest. I'll go with PITT, only because of their showing against Army last Saturday.

OHIO ST. - NORTHWESTERN – Northwestern (5-1) suffered their first loss of the season last week at the hands of Iowa. Ohio State was tied by Wisconsin on Saturday, thus making the Buckeyes record 5-0-1. However, Ohio State seems to be getting weaker as the season progresses even though they are winning. I'll stick my neck way out and go along with NORTH WESTERN in this week's Big Ten tilt.

TEXAS - S.M.U. – The Longhorns have been the big surprise in the Southwest Conference this year. They have won five in a row including a win over the Oklahoma Sooners. S.M.U. on the other hand, hasn't progressed too well this season. The Longhorns have their eyes set on a berth to the Cotton Bowl and I doubt if S.M.U. can stop them. TEXAS

ARMY - COLGATE – The Cadets (4-0-1) were held to a tie last week by Pitt, and are anxious to extend their winning streak once again. Colgate (1-4) is having a bad season this year, and I doubt that they will be troublesome to the Black Knights. Even without Dawkins and Walters, I think Army can beat Colgate and increase their total yardage gains considerably. ARMY

VERMONT - ST. LAWRENCE – The Larries have yet to win a game in three years. It is just a question of who will be the victim when St. Lawrence finally breaks this slump. The Cats came pretty close to victory last week and I'm hoping a Homecoming crowd will provide them with enough spirit to take this one. I don't think that St. Lawrence will break into the win column against the Catamounts. VERMONT

by DAVE SCHULTZ

This week the players we will meet are members from each of the upperclass grades. These fellows are Pete Nelson, sophomore; Lou Bronek, junior; and senior Gerry Mason.

Speed Exonerated - - - - - - - - -

The fastest member of the team this year is Pete Nelson. Pete lives in Newton, Massachusetts, where he attended Newton High. During his senior year there, he played football and was captain of the track team. Pete was the state 440 yard champ that year. His biggest thrill in track was when he ran at the National Indoor Track Meet at Madison Square Garden, NYC.

Entering UVM last year, Pete played football and baseball for the Kittens. At the end of his freshman year he was elected to the men's honorary, Gold Key, of which he is president. Studying takes up much of Pete's spare time as he is a pre-medical student. He belongs to Delta Psi fraternity where he holds the office of sophomore prudence.

Looking ahead to the two remaining games this season, he feels that if the team keeps together they will win the rest of the games. Pete says, "The boys are high in spirit and morale which is very good." He believes that the Middlebury game is the must game. He contends that if the team beats Middlebury the season will be complete regardless of the win, loss records. Pete sees the Cats whipping St. Lawrence this Saturday on the basis of the team's spirit. The only advantage he will give to St. Lawrence is that their team is larger than ours, which he does not believe will be the deciding factor in predicting the winner of the game.

Big and Rugged - - - - - - - - - -

"Big Lou" Bronek hails from Springfield, Vermont. He is the largest member on the team, standing 6'3" tall and weighing 215 pounds. Back at Springfield High School, Lou was on the football, track and skiing teams. He was chosen to the all-state tackle slot in 1956. That same year he was a member of the Vermont Shrine team.

This year is the first time that Lou has come out for football at UVM. It might be added here that he is doing quite a commendable job so far, as he was one of the starting tackles until he hurt his leg two weeks ago. Lou hopes that he will be ready to get into action against St. Lawrence this Saturday. He is a member of Sigma Alpha Epsilon fraternity.

Looking ahead to the St. Lawrence game, he feels that since we outplayed Norwich even though we lost, Norwich sadly beat St. Lawrence, so we should win the game. About the Middlebury game he is confident that we can win this one and thereby win the state championship.

Sturdy and Dependable

Playing his fourth year of UVM football is Gerry Mason. Residing now in Pawlett, Vermont, "Jake" attended Grahamville, N.Y. High School. While there, he was a four-letter man, participating in football, basketball, baseball and track. Due to his resemblance to Abe Lincoln, Gerry has received many nicknames.

During his freshman year here, he played baseball as well as football. Gerry is a member of the Varsity Club. He is also treasurer of the Arnold Air Society. This is an honorary society for advanced Air Force ROTC students. Gerry is seriously considering making the Air Force his career after graduation this June. He is in the school of agriculture, majoring in Dairy Production. Due to his high marks, he is a member of Sigma Phi Epsilon fraternity.

He believes that the team is capable of winning the final two contests this season. He feels the lack of depth on this year's squad is putting a big strain on the team.

Question of the Week

by STEPHEN PROBER

What is your opinion to the students' interests in UVM's athletic program both intercollegiate and intramural sports?

NORM STRASSBURG – Athletic Department

"Interest in intramural participation has been very good this year especially in the fraternity league but could be better in the independent league. In the intercollegiate sports there seems to be more watching and criticising than participation in the sport.

COLONEL WHITE – Military Department

"I think that the students have not shown the spirit at the intercollegiate sports. There should be more organized leadership through student leaders and organizations, so as to promote a spirited feeling in the student body."

COACH DONNELLY – Athletic Department

"There has been interest shown from the stands this year for there was a 50% turn out for the first game. As far as participation in football, the squad totals 21 players. If I had the talent, I could give the students something to be interested in.

MISS BETTY BANDEL, associate professor of English

"I think that a genuine healthy interest in intercollegiate sports stems from a heavy participation in the intramural sports. A development of vigorous intramural program through the housing units will bring out the students' interests in sports."

CAPTAIN FRENCH – Military Department

"It would appear from the turn out of students for varsity sports that there is a definite lack of interest. There seems to be more interest in the intramural sports but only when the fraternity's own team is playing."

Pie Party

The Gamma Phi Beta Pie Party, originally scheduled for November 7, has been postponed until November 15. The postponement is due to the Lane Series program which falls on November 7.

WSGA Meeting

There will be a WSGA Joint Conference Committee meeting on November 5, 7:15 pm, in Southwick. The purpose of the meeting will be to discuss the changes in our honor system which took place this year.

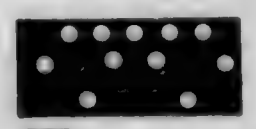
Larries Invade Centennial Field

by ALAN SILVERMAN

This Saturday afternoon, the "Larries" from Canton, New York, invade Centennial Field. This will be the 17th meeting for both clubs. Surprisingly enough, Vermont has taken 14 games, while losing one and tieing one. However, both teams as of late have been playing what might be termed "lackluster" football. For the past three seasons, St. Lawrence has had a string of 24 straight defeats without a single triumph. Vermont's record on the other hand also leaves a lot to be desired.



The type of football that you can expect from the "Larries" will be that of possession ball. They feature a split T formation with an unbalanced line. This is quite similar to the offense that Coach Donnelly employs. St. Lawrence has a sharp running game, so most of the plays will be run directly into and around the line. Their backfield is equipped with several speedsters. The men to keep your attention on are: Goodyear, their fullback and hardest runner, plus halfbacks Cuneo and Hermes. Their quarterback is considered to be a mediocre passer, thus passing is one of their handicaps. Defensively, St. Lawrence averages about 210 on the line, and employs a 5-4, 6-2, or a 6-3 defensive formation. The "Larries" have depth in reserves, more so in the line than in the backfield. In retrospect, St. Lawrence will move on the ground with lightening speed, rather than use the airlanes. Their defensive game will be superior to their offensive movement.

Vermont, on the other hand, should be at full strength that is 24 with no injuries from last week's encounter with Norwich. The Cats could not ask for a more evenly matched opponent to encounter on Homecoming Weekend than St. Lawrence. After all, what is Homecoming Weekend anyway, if not just a devious plot to "milk the cow dry." Well, who knows, maybe those "diehard" alumni will throw a few "shekels" to help us keep up that fading sport of football at UVM.

STRATEGY:

SPLIT T
Same as T except that wingback goes are left between linemen moving out from center. Chief difference is that quarterback slides laterally across more often, passes less

T-F-I
This formation was developed to combat the [illegible] split T, which presents more of a running than a passing threat. It is used widely

THE FORGOTTEN SPORT

"If we realize a good part of the potential contained in these twenty-five boys, this will be one of our best seasons." Cross-Country coach, Archie Post, September 20, 1958. Since that time, the Green and Gold Harriers have beaten four of the best Cross-Country teams in the East. Among the Cats' victims have been such powers as the Engineers from RPI, Union College, always tough Wesleyan, and most recently, Yankee Conference power, Maine.

The 1958 Varsity Cross-Country Team. Standing: Coach Archie Post, Kolstrom, Picard, Lase, Silver, Daryea, Perkins. Kneeling: Cutts, Allen (Cap't.) Harrington. Sitting: Hackett, Mosman, J. Buster, Donahue. Missing: Burroughs, Sinclair, Kelsey. (Photo by H.B. Eldred, AVS, UVM)

The thin-clads travel to Amherst, Mass., this Saturday, where they will be competing for the coveted Yankon crown. The present team is one of the finest running groups to represent UVM in many years, and it is my belief that the University of Vermont will gain its third Y.C. trophy over the weekend.

Senior Ray Allen captains the men with the busy feet. Junior, Fred Kolstrom, who placed third in last year's Yankee Conference run, is another big gun for Vermont, as is senior Larry Seymour, last year's captain. Juniors, Howie Cutts and Danny Mosman supply still more speed to the UVM entry, as do sophomore standout, Bill Perkins and Norm Picard, another man from the class of '60.

Unfortunately, Cross-Country is awarded little recognition on the UVM sports scene, an error which should be corrected. At the present time, there are more members on the Post coached team than on the Varsity football squad.

Most people do not realize the work that goes into preparing the runners. Coach Post has his men out for daily exercises, followed by trial runs and then whirlpool baths. Day after day, the runners keep up this gruelling routine, until it becomes part of their normal program.

Congratulations are certainly in order for every man connected with this spirited organization. I wish the best of luck to Coach Archie Post and his fine team.

* * * * * * * * * *

This Saturday marks another UVM Homecoming football game The winless Catamounts will play host to the gridders from St. Lawrence University, who haven't won a game in three seasons. The Dannellymen can win this game, provided the UVM student body shows up to cheer the team on.

RETRACTION

Last week, I related the story of one Don Johnson to you. Since that time, I have learned that Johnson was receiving a Vermont state tuition scholarship, for his first semester ($172.50) at the time of his withdrawal from school. I stand corrected.

Lyford Passes Twice For Catamount Score

by JOEL C. ULLMAN

Our Vermont Catamounts traveled to rain soaked Sabine Field to play the Cadets of Norwich on Saturday, October 25.

Led by triple threat Bob Ripley, who rolled up 123 yards and quarterback Pete Cronin, Norwich outlasted Vermont, 16-12. It was Homecoming at Norwich and a crowd of 5,000 attended despite the inclement weather.

On the third play from scrimmage, Bob Ripley ran 57 yards for a touchdown only to have it nullified due to a penalty. The next time the Cadets gained control of the ball, resulted in an 81 yard march for a touchdown. The big play of the series saw a fourth down on Vermont's 23 yard line, overcome by a Cronin to fullback Clyde McClelland pass connection for the T.D. Cronin booted the extra point and the Cats trailed 7-0.

The rest of the half was all Vermont, but they couldn't capitalize on it. They moved down to the Norwich 6 yard line, with a first down and goal to go, but the Norwich forward wall tightened and drove Vermont back to the 26.

In the third quarter, Vermont found itself back on its own one yard line due to a penalty. Electing to run, Bob Flance found a horde of Norwich tacklers and was smothered in the end zone for a safety and a Cadet lead of 9-0.

Early in the fourth period Norwich blocked a Vermont punt and recovered on the Vermont 6 yard line. Four plays later Cronin went over from the one foot line. Cronin then kicked the extra point, result: Norwich 16, Vermont 0.

It was at this point that Coach Ed Donnelly inserted Pete Lyford at quarterback. Lyford, who had seen only seven minutes of action this year, took charge. He clicked for two passes immediately, the second good for a touchdown. The touchdown pass hit Roy Greene at the 30 yard line and Greene, with agile speed, raced the remaining thirty yards for paydirt. The pass play covered about 50 yards. The Cats attempted to run for the extra points but were stopped by the hard charging Norwich line, score: Norwich 16, Vermont 6.

Vermont then stopped the Cadets and took over on their own 24 yard line. Lyford again threw two passes and Vermont had another touchdown. Lyford's first pass was good for 29 yards to end Ed Rockett. He then hit Roy Greene, who made a circus catch and raced over the goal line. The play covered some 47 yards. Again Vermont missed the extra point-score, Norwich 16, Vermont 12.

Vermont stopped the Cadets again and took over on their own 34. Lyford passed for a first down and then attempted a pass all the way, but Bob Ripley had other ideas, intercepting, and killing the Catamount hopes. Cronin then in seven successive plays ran out the clock.

Vermont's chances were hurt from the beginning, since Lou Petronaci had still not recovered from a leg injury. Lou is an important cog in the Vermont offense.

The second half play of the Cats looked quite good and should instill much confidence in next week's Homecoming game against St. Lawrence.

DELT PSI, SAE, AEPHI HAVE SECOND PLACE FLOATS

Mayor C. Douglas Cairns of Burlington, judge of UVM's Homecoming float competition Saturday, chose Sigma Phi Epsilon fraternity and Kappa Alpha Theta sorority as first prize winners.

In the fraternity bracket Delta Psi andSAE drew a tie for second place while AEPhi was runner-up in the sorority awards.

Marvin Dobert handed out the awards Saturday evening at the annual Vermont Varieties, held at the Memorial Auditorium.

King And Queen

Freshmen Phil McGreevy and Sally Greene were crowned king and queen of Homecoming 1958, at the Homecoming Ball last Friday evening in Burlington's Memorial Auditorium.

Sally, who resides in Montpelier, Vermont, is not a newcomer to the game of title-winning. Already this year she has been chosen winner of the Junior Miss Vermont contest.

A graduate of Montpelier High School, she is enrolled in the College of Arts and Sciences. Although she has no definite plans yet, she hopes to major in language.

Although Phil McGreevy is from Athena, New York, this is not his first glimpse of education in Vermont. After attending three years of high school in his home town, he came to the Green Mountain State to graduate from St. Johnsbury Academy.

A member of the Outing Club and the Photography Club on campus, Phil is a pre-med student majoring in history. Upon graduation he hopes to attend medical school here.

ROTC Honoraries Announce Annual Military Ball Band

Through the combined efforts of the Arnold Air Society and the Ethan Allen Rifles, the band chosen to play this year at the 60th Annual Military Ball will be the Music Messengers. This band has become quite well known in the past few years on the UVM campus as well as the Burlington area. It has performed at such functions as the Freshmen Beanie Hop and the Senior Day Dance. At both of these events the crowd appeared to be very pleased with the band. The Music Messengers were also featured at the Northeastern Waterama in Burlington this summer which was an outdoor concert and dance and attracted many thousands.

The band includes a piano, bass and percussion, which compose the rhythm section. In the main body of the band are the saxophones, one baritone sax, two tenor saxes and one alto sax. These instruments help to fortify the inspiring embellishments of the trumpeter. This produces an incredibly full sound comparable to a much larger band.

The band's arrangements are made up by well known arranger, Deighton Durrant. He has written some two hundred original arrangements on standards, favorite ballads, jazz tunes, and better Latin tempos. The group is also unique in that the arrangements are written in a manner that makes the four saxes plus a trumpet and rhythm section

Five Candidates To Vie For Military Ball Queen

Linda Farnkoff

Nancy Miller

Joan Schmouth

Susie Sells

Nancy Thompson

Each year a queen is chosen to reign over the Military Ball. This year, after difficult judging, five candidates have been chosen to run for this honor to reign over the 60th Annual Military Ball at UVM.

Every women's living unit had the opportunity to enter their candidate. This year twenty-two girls were nominated and the final selection was made by Lt. Col. Fishburne and Capt. Johns of the Air Science Dept., Lt. Col. White and Capt. Bailey of the Army R.O.T.C. Dept., Cadets Hugh Hunter and Bob Wedwaldt representing the Arnold Air Society and Bob Gallagher representing the Ethan Allen Rifles. The following girls have been choosen; Linda Farnkoff, a sophomore from Midland Park, N.J., who is sponsored by Alpha Delta Pi sorority. Linda is in the college of E. and N. and is majoring in nursing. Nancy Miller a sophomore from Braintree, Mass., who is sponsored by Mason 3rd. Nancy is in the college of E. and N. and is majoring in nursing; Suzanne Sells a sophomore from Arlington, Va., who is sponsored by Pi Beta Phi Sorority. Suzanne is in the college of A. and S., and is majoring in English; Joan Schmouth, a junior from Avon, Mass., who is sponsored by Mansfield House. Joan is in the college of A. and S. and is majoring in English and history; Nancy Thompson a sophomore from Rochester, N.Y., who is sponsored by Simpson 4th. Nancy is in the college of E. and N. and is majoring in secondary education.

The queen will be chosen by a student election to be held from 8 to 4 P.M. Wednesday, Nov. 12 in Waterman building. The winner will be announced at the ball. She will be escorted by Cadet Hugh Hunter, president of Arnold Air Society through an arch of twelve crossed sabres held by the members of both honorary ROTC societies. She will be crowned and will wear a royal robe. The queen will receive a large rotating trophy that goes to the living unit which sponsored her, a gift, and a scrapbook containing pictures and articles pertaining to all the events leading up to and including the Military Ball. She will also serve as Honorary Cadet Colonel at the Federal Review in the spring.

The ball will be held on Friday, Nov. 14 from 9 to 1 A.M. in lower Waterman. Tickets are now on sale in the University Store.

University Players Entertain At Varieties

By ARNOLD B. BERLINER

The University Players twelfth production of Vermont Varieties was the highlight of Homecoming 1958 (second, perhaps to our first football win). The show began, surprisingly enough, within five minutes of the scheduled starting time. As presented, it was as entertaining, if not as provocative, as last year's production. I'm sure the collegiate audience hoped for quite a different backward glance, but so be the word of authority. We did get a glimpse at what the "upper-crust" would deem distasteful. Nonetheless, I hope they found "The Handy Man" as enjoyable and witty as I did. But despite the dialogue and efforts of Mike Solbey, the pace was annoyingly slow.

On the other hand, the slow paced "Bach's Pony Tale" lugged with hilarity. This skit has been performed innumerable times by professionals; last Saturday's presentation could easily rated any one of them.

The majority of the remaining script and lyrics, I assume, is original. If so, the writers are to be commended for the successful application of their talents. "Dr. Campus Mr" and "Dr. Freud" sparkled and, no doubt, delighted many a coed and psychology major. The satire was good clean fun, but was somehow tarnished in the skit entitled "UVM Goes Commercial." I think the comment concerning the change in UVM's highest administrative post was uncalled for.

In my opinion, another jingle concerning "Clifford's Brew" should have been given more emphasis.

Individual performances gave us a good look at new talent as well as the familiar talents of Joan Oshlag, Carole Demas, and the Theta Chi singers. Expect to see Freshmen Alice Zalon, Terry Rubin, and Paul Schimmelphennig in future University Players productions. There's talent in those men's dorms, too!

The accompaniment, staging, scenery, and costumes all added to a successful evening. In conclusion: College satire which should have been enjoyed by all.

Cosmopolitan Club Formed

The advent of modern communications has made the world a much smaller place in which to live. Because of this people must broaden their horizons and learn more about the world around them. It is important for all of us to recognize and understand the customs, ideas and values of other lands--and to instill in these people a knowledge of our own country--so that we will all free our minds of prejudice and live more harmoniously with our neighbors.

THE COSMOPOLITAN CLUB is now in the process of being formed on this campus. Its main purpose is the exchange of ideas and customs of other lands, and the furtherance of international friendship. THE COSMOPOLITAN CLUB plans to present films and programs sponsored by foreign countries--but more important, the Club will represent a meeting place where undergraduate, graduate, and medical students will share their ideas with friends from other countries.

If you are interested in meeting people from Pakistan, South America, Italy, Israel, Greece, Iran, China, and other countries, this Club has a great deal to offer you.

The next meeting of THE COSMOPOLITAN CLUB will be:

Pre-Med Club Organized

At the beginning of this year, the Pre-Medical Society was instituted at UVM. The idea of a Pre-Medical club, which has been tried in the past, was repudiated because of lack of interest, funds, and proper organization. The Pre-Medical Society has been reorganized through the work and efforts of three Pre-Med students.

With the ever increasing demands for a better understanding of the functions of the medical profession, an interest in "after class" participation has grown so that a Pre-Med Club has been organized. The Club will be able to provide an outlet for students to see, to hear, and to ask about aspects of the profession so that they will become better acquainted. The students will be able to congregate with their fellow students and also with professionals in the field of medicine.

The Club membership includes all Pre-Meds, Pre-Dents, and Pre-Vets. Two meetings have already been held, but on Nov. 12 there will be a meeting which will introduce to the entire campus their constitution, their plans, and a trip to the University of Syracuse which they are sponsoring for all those interested.

Their advisor is Dr. Charles Bond, who has volunteered his help to get the organization off to a good start.

Notices will be posted for the time and place.

Honors Program Allows Students To Pursue Special Projects

Too many college students feel that undergraduate work is just learning, memorizing and "following the book", the graduate schools being the only place for original projects. Indeed, for many students this is quite true, but not for a group of UVM students participating in the honors program this year.

As the catalogue puts it: "The honors program at both the Junior and Senior levels is designed for the superior student with unusual initiative and intellectual curiosity, and provide an opportunity to pursue a special project without the restriction of the classroom routine."

To be eligible for honors a student must have an average of 85 in all but his freshman year. Acceptance to the program is based upon the student's choice of a project and the permission of the chairman of the department in which he wishes to do the work.

Junior honors may be taken for credit in either semester or both semesters of the Junior year, and consists of an original project, with the guidance of a faculty member of the departure in which the work is being carried out. Although no special recognition is given to people doing Junior honors work, it is felt that the experience gained by individual projects is invaluable. It's noteworthy that most students taking Junior honors also go on to Senior honors. Grades for the Junior honors programs are determined by written papers and examinations.

Working basically on the same system as the Juniors, the Seniors must, upon completing their project, presen a satisfactory written report and pass an oral examination on the general field in which honors are sought. The "written report" may be a thesis, a research paper, or an account of the purposes, methods, and results of a creative project, such as the writing of a play or a musical composition. The oral examination is conducted by a committee, selected by the department, consisting of one or more members of a department and at least one from an allied field.

On the basis of the written report, the oral examination, and the department recommendation, the committee on honors may recommend to the Dean award of senior honors. The student is then graduated with honors, and this is so stated on his diploma.

Students participating in the honors program this year are listed below with the department in which they are doing honors work.

Juniors:

Dorothy DeCicio - English, Peter Rabinovitch - Zoology, Robert Keimowitz - Psychology.

At the Senior Level:

Sarah Godfrey - Classics, Linda Hartwell - Speech; Olga Leveridge - Psychology; Alberta Kauzmann - Psychology; Ruth A. Seeler - Psychology; Leroy G. Meshel - Psychology; Theodore M. Ginsburg - Psychology, Serwin Iverson - Philosophy; Nancy Lana - English; Lawrence J. Friedman - English; Mathew H. Connors - Zoology; Peter W. Osterlin - German.

The group of fifteen represents an unusually large number, as in past years the program consisting of only three or four.

It is the desire of the committee on Special Honors, along with Dean Ridder and President Fey that the honors program be expanded. In order to facilitate this, a new Freshman English honors program has been instituted. This program is experimental, and interested students are applying now. Any Freshman may apply, and acceptances are based upon the Freshman aptitude tests, along with worthiness of the suggested project. It is hoped that this program will encourage exceptional Freshman to continue with honors work throughout their stay at UVM.

The Vermont Cynic

Full Cooperation

The fraternity system has long been a topic of discussion, both on this campus and throughout the nation. Some people react violently for or against fraternities, while others simply ignore their existence. The fact is, however, that fraternities are an active force which may, or may not, serve a useful purpose.

It is not our intention to suggest that fraternities are without faults or that there is no room for a great deal of improvement in the system as a whole. What we wish to do is call your attention to the scholastic stress of fraternities. It must be disappointing for fraternity men to go to college for four years and come out with only an education to show for all their troubles.

The Inter-Fraternity Council gives a cup to the "house" with the highest fraternity average and scholastic achievement. They set an average of 72% to be attained before a student may be accepted into brotherhood in any of the campus fraternities. The trouble is, that it takes two semesters for the majority of students to reach this average, and there are those who become classified as perpetual pledges. In fact, if IFC raised this percentage, many students would have to drop out of fraternities because they lack this average to become full members.

Many national fraternities have tried to remedy this situation by offering financial gains for the chapter with the highest average, or the individuals with the highest campus average, etc. Fred M. Turner, president of the National Association of Student Personnel Administrators, says in an article in NEWSWEEK: "Fraternity men are taking their spot on the campus more seriously. They know that it is getting more difficult even to get into college. They realize that if a superior type of student is coming along, they are going to have to offer a superior kind of fraternity." Another problem is "de-pledging" by many students because they feel studies and fraternity do not mix. Houston Karnes, chairman of the National Inter-fraternity Conference said: "Our insistence that scholarship is worth working for has a selfish motive. We want more of our members graduated from college." He went on to say that the more successful graduates we have contributing to our society, the better the public relations of the entire fraternity system.

These men know fraternities and they stress education, and here is the starting point with these men and the national fraternities. The end point is here on this campus. To build up an over-all average of a college, it has to begin in the fraternities and sororities. Social life should be mixed with education, but there has to be a point where education becomes a little more important to the individual. All fraternities should strive to go beyond the school average, not only to boost their standing, but this school's ratings. IFC has a few resolutions on their agenda which will go to improve this per cent system. Let us hope that the fraternities will see the light and give IFC full cooperation.

Letters

Carbon Copy

Mr. Magurney's fine letter in your recent issue regarding genuine values as opposed to rumored values at UVM prompts me to say yet one more word on the subject which is periodically raised in the CYNIC: school spirit.

It seems to me that many critics of UVM "school spirit" fail to take into consideration two things: the kind of pride and faith in one's school which is appropriate for a college or university, as opposed to a high school; and the nature of the genus Vermonter.

To take the last point first, isn't it characteristic of this state, and therefore of its university, to praise by understatement? What higher praise will a Vermonter dare to give to something which he is connected with than: "not too bad"? Surely even an out-of-stater must relish the integrity and amusing caution involved in this kind of praise, and, while he is a resident in the state and a member of UVM, want people here to sound CITY what they are, rather than like Texans (unless, of course, they are Texans!). During twelve years of teaching here, I have often felt an unexpressed, inarticulate pride in the university indicated by the performance of fine students who scorned to do less than their absolute best--and that "best" I would be willing to stack up against the best work turned out by any undergraduate in any American university. You expect these people to yell unrestrainedly at a game before they are sure that everyone else is yelling? Why, they would feel as if they had left off some essential article of clothing.

Surely you would not like to reduce UVM to a carbon copy of the "average" college, whatever that is, or the movie stereotype of a college. Is not our silence, our understatement as distinctive a hallmark of UVM as the true Harvard student's tendency to decry "school spirit" in the most obvious sense of the word is a hallmark of Harvard? Both of these are kinds of school spirit--inverted kinds, if you like.

As to the difference between high school and college "spirit," let me say that I think it a fine thing to have a rousing good time at a game. But surely if all enthusiasm for school is to be manifested on such occasions, we are remaining in a high school atmosphere. The senior student who feels that he can ask any question or voice any objection that comes into his head, confident that his teachers welcome vigorous, intelligent dissent--is he not manifesting pride in his university? The upperclassman who discovers that a first-class recommendation from his major department at UVM will win him a place in the finest graduate schools in the country--is he not proud of his university?

Mr. Maguirny's remarks regarding the "We can never expect to be another Harvard, but . . ." type of thinking remind me of my own astonishment when I first came to UVM and discovered that people who go to New England universities go under the long shadow of Harvard. In my home, Arizona, one simply went to the University of Arizona and never thought to

"I Have Great Interest"

By JO ORIOLE

Because I have a great interest in UVM ($417.50 worth), I feel that I should know exactly where my $417.50 is going, and whether it's being used economically. Since several other students have expressed similar views, I decided to conduct an investigation of economic policies here. Below is the result of my investigation.

Students of this university - have no fear! Your money is in safe, capable hands. The officers of your alma mater have taken extraordinary - almost unbelievable - precautions to insure that your money will be wisely spent and not squandered. To sight, but a few of the sound economic practices of the university, I give you:

(a). The clock atop Ira Allen Chapel. Obviously it was built in a less civilized era, when time computing instruments were less numerous. But our directors, realizing that we live in a highly mechanized period, when every student has his own wristwatch, have ordered the clock stopped. Now the hands rest always at one minute to twelve; not saving time, but saving money.

(b). The shower in the second floor bath of Buckham Hall. When its incessant drip became an angry roar, and its handle stuck in the full on position, our wise directors saved the price of a plumber by fixing it themselves. Some don't approve of the fact that it was fixed by putting a cap on it so that now it won't run at all, but these complainers probably aren't versed in money matters.

(c). The sloping lawns of our campus. Seeing the chance for a real coup, the school trustees ordered dirt shoveled over the green surrounding College Row. The money saved

Highlights

By Edson Darer

Hello there. The weekend is over, the gay times in part of us, saying goodbye was rough on many of us, and now here I am back at my typewriter. The campus is quiet once more and the scores of unfamiliar faces are replaced by the ones we know so well. The alums turned out in full force as expected, and they had a good time as we all knew they would. We always go out of our way to show our alumni and our parents, of which there were also many, our best side. The parties were lively, until ten o'clock and then they all lost their glow and the move was to the apartments. Here, out of the view of the chaperones, who usually keep their eyes closed anyway, the fun really starts. The "unmentionable word" was flowing as usual, because the undergrad does not relish the thought of watching his old fraternity brother or friend, come back and be able to "down a few", while he stands by and his mouth waters. What is the result? You have to run off and sneak a few, either while nobody is watching, or have a flask in the car, or run to an apartment, where the likeliness of getting caught is lessened greatly.

Mr. X

There is a rumor that one man on this campus knows everything that goes on, no matter where it is, or where it is going to be. This man, who drinks coffee in the coffee shop with his ears perked up, trying to obtain bits of information, and when he does, he goes back to his place of business and puts all the bits together, in order to try and catch someone doing something wrong. Word has it, that his "ear perking up" paid off and he has his hands on an unidentified organization, which in all probability, will have all its members "beheaded" or some other neat trick. Who is this man? I cannot tell you, my loyal readers, because if I do, my source of information might be revealed and I was sworn to solemn secrecy on my honor as a student, who is an honest student.

Politics

Most corners of the country are predicting a national landslide for the Democrats in this year's elections. I, being my own nonpartisan Democrat self, will have to agree with thepolls and the other means of determining the outcome before ir really comes. Even in Vermont, I believe that "104" will be ended with Leddy and Mr. Favette will be victorious. The Democrats will probably according to a noted Political Scientist here at the University, wind up with about 60 seats in the Senate and will pick up about 35 to 40 seats in the House. This will make President Eisenhower the only president who has had three congresses controlled by an opposite party. Quite a distinction. It shows party strength. (ha ha) This was just an opinion from this corner of the country. You look as though you don't think I sincerely mean it when I say: "Why would I want to swap with him? Look at the tough tax bracket he's in." "I just wouldn't want to drive an expensive car like that. I'd feel too ostentatious." "As long as I get pleasant companionship and we get some interesting hands to play, it doesn't make the slightest difference whether I win or lose."

So long for now.

Outing Club Begin Hikes

Nine A.M. is the time, Sunday November 9, the day Waterman, the meeting place for all those who wish to participate in a hike at Camels Hump. Lunch and warm clothing are necessities.

This year the Outing club is more active than ever, and has already sponsored three hikes and an overnight. Last week a group went to Arrowhead lake for practice in canoeing. Instruction was given by Robert Hill. In spite of the cold weather, a good time was had by all.

In the near future Ski trips and skating parties are anticipated. Ideas for other types of activities are greatly appreciated. Outing Club meetings are held every Wednesday at seven P.M. in Room 216 Waterman for all those interested in attending.

Letters

compare his school with any other. The reputation of Harvard is deservedly high, but so is the reputation of UVM. Witness the success of our best graduates in the fine graduate schools. (The CYNIC could do a great service for the university, and probably for "school spirit", by writing a series of articles on the progress of some of our best graduates, in and out of graduate school, during the past five years.)

A thing which contributes to a feeling of justifiable pride in the organization of which one is a part is knowledge of how successfully it is doing and has done its job. To promote such knowledge, the Memorial Lounge in Waterman Building was founded several years ago. Browse through it some day, and find out to what a great tradition you are heirs.

I cannot resist a final word on a subject somewhat off the point: the current dearth of football players at UVM. I gather that many promising players from last year's freshman team are no longer with us because they failed to make the grade academically. Surely if football is a good sport for young men to play, and if it is an appropriate sport for a university, it should profit from it as much as or more than the youngster who can ill afford the practice-hours away from his books. Have any of our potential Phi Beta Kappas given any thought to putting in some time during the fall playing football, even if they have to learn the game from scratch? A team made up of such men would justify football as a college sport to the most apprehensive faculty member.

Sincerely,

Betty Bandel

NOBEL PRIZE REFUSAL

Two weeks ago the Swedish Royal Academy awarded its prize for literature to Boris Pasternak, the man who write Dr. Zhivago, a recently published novel describing life in Russia during the period of transformation from Czarism to Communism.

Last week Boris Pasternak refused to accept his Nobel Prize. His refusal, he said, was determined by "the meaning attributed to this award in the society I live in." In Russia he was expelled from the unions of writers and translators, and was on the verge of being exiled from his homeland. As of now, however, he is still residing in Moscow.

Pasternak wrote a letter to Mr. Khrushchev in which he stated, "Whatever my mistakes and errors have been . . . to go beyond the frontiers of my homeland is equal to death and therefore I beg of you not to take this extreme measure toward me."

A group of British writers appealed to the Soviet Union not to dishonor the Soviet Union's writers by victimizing a writer revered throughout the whole civilized world.

GENEVA CONFERENCE

Last Friday, the Geneva Conference opened to discuss the suspension of Nuclear Tests. Soviet Delegate Semyon Ki Ksarapkin opened the conference with a demand for an immediate suspension of nuclear weapons tests forever.

The U.S. delegation chairman at Geneva, James Wadsworth, replied with a statement made previously by the western powers. They were the two basic conditions for a test suspension-effective controls and progress toward overall disarmanent. It was stated also by Britain and the United States that if Russia did not refrain from tests, they would resume testing during the Geneva talks. However, it appeared as though Russia would continue testing unless she obtained a commitment for a permanent ban.

ALGERIA

The outlook on the war in Algeria is ominous. The prospect is that it will continue. A solution of the conflict by force of arms is unlikely because the rebels do not have the strength to force the French out of Algeria and the French cannot stamp out the rebellion. At the United Nations yesterday, rebel representatives issued a "last appeal" to France to negotiate with them in some "neutral country" for a settlement of the Algerian problem in its entirety. The French, however have refused to negotiate a political settlement.

NEW PAPAL REIGN

Last Tuesday afternoon, on the eleventh ballot, the necessary majority of cardinals, two-thirds and one, voted for Cardinal Roncalli. Thus a new Pope came to reign. The Pope, Angelo Guiseppe Roncalli announced that he wished to be known as John XXIII because it was the name of his father and of the patron saint of his village.

SEGRAGATION IN VIRGINIA

There has been a great amount of pressure against the school closing laws in Virginia. The majority of the parents want the schools to be returned to city control. The implication was that the parents would go along with some integration.

In a speech to the convention, Governor Almond warned that even limited integration would lead only to chaos and confusion. Thus the situation is still at a deadlock.

Mary Arnold, Gamma Phi, beat the Homecoming rush and was pinned to Jim Peabody, Acacia last Wednesday.

ALPHA EPSILON PHI

Homecoming was really a great week-end for the AEPhi's. It was wonderful having our alums, Bobbi Goodman Bachnick, Terry Siegal, and Iris Abrams with us to celebrate the events. We were especially proud of our second place float which was constructed under the wonderful chairmanship of Mimi Perlow.

AEPhi has recently welcomed Barbara Kleiman into it's sisterhood.

This past Wednesday we had a successful exchange dinner with the Thetas and are happily anticipating the one planned with Sig Ep for this evening.

AEPhi also had their annual founder's day dinner, at which we presented a scholarship award to the girl with the highest average for the previous year. This year's award went to Wendy Sterns who graduated last June. Our guests for the dinner were Father Mulligan and Mrs. Start, our faculty advisor.

ALLEN HOUSE CHITTENDEN HALL

Exchange dinners certainly do not need to be restricted to fraternity and sorority houses. The third floor of Chittenden and Allen House exhibited how successfully such social arrangements maybe. Their exchange dinner was held at the Waterman Cafeteria at 6:00 p.m., attended by twenty-six freshmen. After the dinner, the group moved to Allen House, where they were entertained by the campus magician, Lenny Swinyer. Jack Stern and Lucy Perkins, social directors, made the arrangements.

ALPHA DELTA PI

Last Wednesday evening, the ADPis were hostesses to Dr. and Mrs. Huber, who joined them in singing after dinner.

The ADPis were very busy this past week. Everyone worked on the float; nevertheless, some of the girls participated in the W.R.A. swim meet and won it for the second time.

On Thursday night, the ADPis were guests of Sigma Phi for dinner.

ALPHA TAU OMEGA

This past weekend ATO celebrated Homecoming with a buffet dinner and the "Oktoberfest" on Saturday night. During the course of the evening, prizes were awarded to the best costumed couples. The ATOs and their dates enjoyed dancing to the music from the new hi-fi system which has been installed throughout the house.

Many alumni returned to ATO this past weekend, mingling with the guests from their chapter at St. Lawrence University.

Joe Furgal was recently appointed rushing chairman for the school year, Cliff McGoldrick, pledgemaster, and Dave Reilly, athletic chairman.

GAMMA PHI BETA

Four Gamma Phis, Betsy Isham, Joan Bosino, Marcy Beals, and Joan Meyerhoff journeyed to Montreal recently to visit the Alpha Tau Chapter of Gamma Phi at McGill. This trip was most pleasurable and the girls are looking forward to more frequent visits with their other chapters.

Homecoming brought many alumnae back to the open house at Gamma Phi after the game. Everyone appreciated the refreshments of cider and doughnuts, the warmth of the fire in the fireplace, and the music of the Pete Davis quartet.

KAPPA ALPHA THETA

The Thetas enjoyed an exchange dinner last week with the men of Sigma Phi Epsilon and the Owl House.

They are also delighted with the new television set given to them by the generous Burlington Theta mothers.

SIGMA ALPHA EPSILON

S.A.E. recently pledged Phil Ebey and accepted two new social members, Rod Rowledge and Donald Redshaw.

The S.A.E.'s had many out-of-town guests during the Homecoming weekend. Following are the names of the members and their dates:

SIGMA PHI EPSILON

New pledges of Sig Ep are David Osborne of Springfield and William Warren of Brattleboro.

The Sig Eps have had a series of exchange dinners during the last three weeks. These were with Gamma Phi Beta, Alpha Delta Pi and Tri-Delta. After dinner, songs were sung from the Sig Ep Song Book, accompanied by portions of the Sig Ep Jazz Band.

An especially festive air pervaded the Sig Ep house during Homecoming Weekend. Thier celebrations included a jazz concert and buffet after the football game, and a dance in the new party room, following Vermont Varieties.

THE PROBLEM CORNER

Problem

A manufacturer of computing machines buys tubes for the machines in lots of a thousand dozen. Each computer uses 2,197 tubes. What is the minimum number of lots of tubes used, and the minimum number of computers made, if after a certain period of time it is discovered that they have no incomplete computers and have only one unused tube on hand?

Leave solutions to these problems at the office of Professor Schoonmaker, Room 341, Waterman, no later than Monday of the week following publication of the problem.

Refefring to last week's problem, there was a total of $12.90 in the bag, consisting of 8 nickels, 10 dimes, 18 quarters and 14 halves.

Correct solutions to this problem were submitted by Richard J. Bombard, Prof. Douglas Fay, Allan Greenfield, John K. Holmes, David Merriman, Andrew Ojanen, Prof. Democrates Pappoutsakis, Robert S. Poulios, Mrs. Norma Shirtsleeve, Stan Smyrski and Smith Tumsaroch.

The Spirit Of Dewey

The Philosophy and Religion department of UVM is sponsor of one of the campus' most successful organizations - The John Dewey Club. A number of philosophical lectures have been accredited to the club; the most recent one has been "The History of Language" as delivered by Professor White.

The inspiration for varied discussions has obviously been John Dewey himself. A native Vermonter and graduate of UVM, he is probably best known for his thesis concerning learning through experience. Perhaps equally important was his constant praise of Vermont. He described the Vermont of his youth as "the most democratic area of the country." The area impressed upon him the idea of the "free, self-respecting human being." These ideas were most likely developed during his college days. If he were to return to UVM now, however, would his ideal change? Perhaps not, because he would now see the dire necessity for the aforementioned democratic ideals; he would emphasize them all the more.

The University's Philosophy and Religious Departments have indeed sought to deliver, by means of the lecture, the teachings of John Dewey. Last week's example illustrated democracy and education, which were for America's greatest contemporary philosopher, the supreme human interest.

Hillel News

There will be a Hillel Brunch in Waterman on November 7, 1958, at 11:00 a.m. A film, "The Wilderness of Zin" will be shown. It tells of the archaeological discoveries of Dr. Nelson Gluck.

The Hillel Foundation has started study groups, and they meet on Tuesdays at 4:10 p.m. in Room 36 Waterman.

a) Jewish History, with Charles Siegel as leader.

b) Basic Judaism, with H. Kahn as speaker.

After Game Party And Jazz

After a very enjoyable Homecoming, the Phi Sigs are planning some more exciting events this coming weekend when the Catamounts meet the Panthers from Middlebury.

The Holy Cross Crusaders will be featured in an "After the Game Jazz Concert" at Fern Hill, which will last until 6:00 P.M. This Dixieland jazz band is well known in the New England College circuit, and has recently played at Yale, Boston University, U. of Mass., and M.I.T. These players are accomplished musicians as well as exciting entertainers.

In the evening, a party will be held from 8:30 - 11:00 P.M., with the Holy Cross Crusaders playing in the dancing vein for this affair.

Among other happenings, 3 Big Contests will be featured during the evening:

1). A pie-eating contest between the girls and the boys.

2). A dance contest including the Cha Cha and Charleston; a prize will be awarded to the best couple.

3). A sweetheart contest will take place, and will be judged by people who are unknown to the contestants.

Mademoiselle Contest Offered

Mademoiselle is now accepting applications from undergraduate women for membership in its 1958-59 College Board.

The magazine's College Board Contest offers a chance for the freshman as well as the senior at winning one of the twenty Guest Editorships --a month on the staff of Mademoiselle. Those who are accepted on the College Board do two assignments during the college year. Assignments give College Board Members a chance to write features about life on their campus, to submit art work and fashion as well as feature, fiction or promotion ideas for possible use in Mademoiselle; to develop their critical and creative talents, to discover their own abilities and job interests, to win cash prizes and possible publication for outstanding work submitted during the Contest.

The top twenty Guest Editors will be brought to New York next June to help write, edit and illustrate the August COLLEGE issue. They will be paid a regular salary for their month's work, plus round-trip transportation to New York City.

While in New York each Guest Editor takes part in a full calendar of activities. She interviews a celebrity in her chosen field, takes in the theatre, parties, fashion shows, manufacturing houses, stores and advertising agencies, besides working daily with the Mademoiselle editor to whom she is assigned. The twenty Guest Editors get help in finding positions in their special fields, and each year several join Mademoiselle's own staff.

November 30 is the deadline for applying for College Board Membership. The tryout assignment this year gives more latitude than ever before for indicating your particular talent in writing or art, fashion or advertising, promotion or merchandising, or publicity.

Successful candidates will be notified of acceptance on the College Board during Christmas vacation; the first College Board assignments will appear in Mademoiselle's January issue.

For further information see Miss Harris, Dean of Women or the August, September, October issue of Mademoiselle.

Everyone is invited; bring your girl friend, mother, dog, or anyone - even your brother.

Directory Presently Being Printed

The material for the University Directory is now in the hands of the printers and delivery has been promised early in November. Gold Key, the sophomore honorary society, this year, again, assisted the office of the Dean of Administration in collecting the information from University students during registration and; following this period, the Gold Key members also assisted in the follow-up and correction of information on the cards.

The Head Residents in the University dormitories have also cooperated in the preparation of the Directory and have spent many hours proofreading the pages as returned from the printers and in the final checking of all information that had been made available. Every last-minute change that had been reported up to the time of going to press was included.

The appearance of the new Directory on campus is now eagerly awaited by everyone.

Newman Club Plans Retreat

by Dave Steele

The Newman Club of UVM will present its annual retreat November 5, 6, and 7. The retreat is designed to give the Catholic student an opportunity for examination, meditation, and religious exercises. This year's retreat master will be the Reverend James J. O'Brien, former Treasurer of the National Association of Newman Club Chaplains.

Father O'Brien has been associated with the Newman Club for many years in various offices. He served as Province Chaplain of New England Province of the National Newman Club Federation from 1954 to 1956. Father O'Brien is the retired National Chaplain of the Federation.

Father O'Brien will speak briefly after Mass on each of the three days of the retreat. The Masses will be at 7:00 A.M. in the Ira Allen Chapel. Father O'Brien will also conduct open conferences at 4:30 P.M. in the Student Lounge on Nov. 5 and 7. A conference on Nov. 6 will be held in Room 239 Waterman. Father O'Brien's excellent speaking and warm personality make him nationally popular among Newman Club Members.

THE CLOTHES YOU SAVE MAY BE YOUR OWN

In the autumn we take up fashions for college men, which means, of course, the Ivy Look. Today's Ivy Look clothes have made a great stride forward. Not only do they have the superb three-button sleeve, narrow trousers, and pronounced shoulder padding, but—even better than—this year they are actually covered with moss!

This new development, while attractive beyond the singing of a thousand birds, gives rise to certain hazards. For instance, people keep trying to plant you on Arbor Day. Indeed, those precise words happened to two SAE's of my acquaintance, Walter R. Cranford and Fred Rapp. Before they could protest, they were stationed up, planted knee and waterer, and today they support a hammock in Cut and Shoot, Vermont.

People keep trying to plant you on Arbor Day...

Let us now discuss shirts. Again this year the campus favorite is the good old Oxford with button-down collar and barrel cuffs. This is without doubt an admirable garment, but let me ask you a question: If you don't wear anything but Oxfords, what do you do with all the cuff links people have been giving you for your birthday since you were twelve years old?

Well sir, some fellows have their wrists pierced, but what E. Mackenzie Signifoss, a Chi Psi of my acquaintance, did was to take a dozen pairs of his handsome gold monogrammed cuff links and string them together in a charm bracelet for his girl, Jo-Carol Lester.

It turned out, incidentally, to be a mistake. In short order so many admirers accrued to Jo-Carol on account of her gorgeous bracelet that she grew tired of plain old E. Mackenzie, and one night when she was seated on a bench in Lovers Lane throwing sticks for E. Mackenzie to retrieve, she suddenly, coldly, without warning, told him they were through.

"I am heartbroken," said E. Mackenzie heartbroken. "But if go you must, give me back my charm bracelet."

"No. I will keep it," said Jo-Carol.

"What for?" said E. Mackenzie. "You can't wear it. The initials on the cuff links are all mine—E.M.S."

"Ha, ha, the joke is on you," said Jo-Carol. "Yesterday I was voted Miss Chinese Restaurant of 1958."

"So?" said E. Mackenzie.

"So," replied Jo-Carol, "E.M.S. does not stand for E. Mackenzie Signifoss. It stands for Eat More Sukgaw!"

A broken man, E. Mackenzie today squeezes out a meagre living as a penitentiary in Cleveland. Jo-Carol was killed in a long war.

But I digress. We were talking about well-dressed men, and the one essential for every well-dressed man—and every well-dressed woman too—is a well-dressed cigarette—neat, compact, flavorful, and correct for work or play, sunshine or shower, repose or revelry, darkness or light. And where does one find such a perfect companion? Just go to any tobacco counter and ask for Philip Morris. Ask for it in king size or regular. Ask for it in soft pack or hard. But ask for it, that's the important thing. Don't just stand there making cryptic gestures at your tobacconist. He may be armed.

on mowing and lawn care should more than cover the cost of the dirt. If the plan works well, it will be furthered by uprooting all the trees on campus.

These few examples should demonstrate clearly the wise spending policies of The University of Vermont. But the plans do not stop here. There is a long range program affecting even greater savings. For instance, East Hall is to be used as an auxiliary women's dorm, the tower above the Old Mill will be taken down to serve as an annex to the cafeteria, and the school furnaces will only burn scraps like the "Heller's Spirit" sign.

When these ideas go into effect, the university should accomplish its lifelong goal - a total annual budget of $417.50.

Dr. Schumacher Gives Address On Sclerosis

Dr. George A. Schumacher, M.D., Chairman of the Division of Neurology in the University's College of Medicine, a member of the staffs of both Mary Fletcher and DeGoesbriand Memorial Hospitals, and of the Medical Advisory Board of the National Multiple Sclerosis Society, climaxed a three-day national Chapter Conference of the aforementioned MS society, on October 12, 1958, at the Statler Hilton Hotel in New York City, with his report on "Research in Multiple Sclerosis."

It was Dr. Schumacher's aim to show that "basic science" research is a "combination of brains, toil, and dedication" on the part of men and scientists in many branches of medicine, and that research into the causes of multiple sclerosis is going on at an ever-progressing rate on not one, but many different fronts.

According to Dr. Schumacher, there are three kinds of "heroic figures" in the battle against multiple sclerosis. These are the following: the practicing physicians who fight to keep MS victims as well as they can with their small supply of information, the clinical scientists who observe patients and carry on a limited form of research besides; and the basic scientists whose research on deeper levels takes them into the realm of the fundamental and complex constitution of life. It is the basic scientists, said Schumacher, who are the unsung heroes of medicine.

As an analogy, Dr. Schumacher described how scientists in numerous branches of botanical research work to discover the cause of a particular plant disease. Similarly, researching zoologists and chemists, continually working to learn more about the infinite chemistry of the nervous system, will someday be able to piece together the facts and solve the MS riddle.

Dr. Schumacher went on to report on progress to date, pointing out the fact that none of the so-called "causes" or "cures" has been proven authentic. For instance, all attempts by other scientists to duplicate the cultivation of the bacterium, spirochetes, from the spinal fluid of MS patients, as reported by a woman scientist a year ago, have been unsuccessful. Also, there has been no authentic report of a virus being the cause of multiple sclerosis, and it has been substantially proven that the Russian vaccine prepared from a culture of an encephalomyelitis virus has no curing powers whatsoever.

Moreover, Dr. Schumacher asserted, research in the fields of bacteriology, pathology, morphology, chemistry, neurochemistry, and clinical science is adding to our understanding of the disease; in the future, a cause and a cure will most certainly be found. It is the fervent prayer of all multiple sclerosis victims and those who have witnessed the deadly action of MS that a cure for this disease be found soon.

awards given to the dramatization by Frances Goodrich and Albert Hackett include the Antoinette Perry Award, the National DramaCritics Poll, and the Theater Club Gold Medal.

Francis Lederer, as star in this tender, yet humorous drama of a little girl's life in the days of the Jewish persecution, is an actor of international distinction. Born and educated in Prague, he has performed roles in six languages since his graduation from the Prague Academy of Dramatic Arts. Leads in films and plays have taken him all over the world. He made his debut in America as the star in "Autumn Crocus," a play in which he had made a similar hit in London and which sent him on to Hollywood. Here he made his first American film with RKO's "A Man of Two Worlds." Since then he has appeared in the West Coast production of "The Sleeping Prince," and recently in European films, "Lisbon," "The Ambassador's Daughter," and "Wedding in Paris."

To take the role of Otto Frank in this play, Mr. Lederer has had to shave his head every evening, for, though both men are alike in height and weight, Mr. Frank is bald.

Pauline Hahn, who has been acclaimed by a N.Y. Journal American critic as "the most wonderful 'woman' on stage today, is only seventeen years old and planning to enter college next year. Born on the East Side of New York, she attended Public School 42 and is in her last year of high school. Her acting career began at the age of two-and-a-half when she was touring summer hotels in the Catskills, doing a ventriloquist act. Since then, she has been an attraction on radio, television, appearing for ten years on the Children's Hour. Her stage credits include leads in "Cat on A Hot Tin Roof," "As the Girls Go," "Thunder on the Left," "Life Is a Dream," and numerous others. Her films include "Bell, Book and Candle," "Sleeping City," "Flower of the Night," and "Theresa."

Pauline Hahn, as Anne, in the current production of "The Diary of Anne Frank" to be viewed here Friday.

The role of Anne Frank's mother that Lilia Skala plays in the "Diary" is said to be her most satisfying part in her career. From it she has memories of the days when she was a celebrated Viennese star before Hitler's invasion of Austria. When her husband was arrested by Nazis escaped to Belgium and finally reached New York in 1939, she found a haven for herself and two sons in England. Later she joined him in New York. Though unable to speak English on arrival, she has acquired a working vocabulary with traces of the Viennese accent.

Her first successful role in America was in 1950 when she appeared as the Grand Duchess in the Ethel Merman musical, "Call Me Madam." Since then she has been in movies and in more than 100 radio and television shows.

For those who do not have a subscription to the Blue Series and would like to see the play that has awed audiences all over the world, tickets can still be purchased in the COSA office or at the door.

SAM Holds First Meeting

On October 22, the Society for the Advancement of Management held their first formal meeting of the year. The guest speaker was Maurice Keenan, Manager of Manufacturing of the General Electric Plant in Burlington.

Mr. Keenan's talk on "Management and What They Ought to be Doing", centered around the prerequisites for managers, their training, and their general ability. For new talent General Electric wants young men with a firm educational foundation and an eye for future developments. Mr. Keenan felt that efficient management should be planned some 20 years ahead and by having a plan for the future, management can set goals and follow along a hypothetical path which will increase their position in the industry.

After the lecture, the floor was open to questions and Mr. Keenan provided the Society with adequate answers. Mr. Keenan felt that with the tremendous expanding population, the rising standard of living, and the increasing technological advancements, present and future management will be laying plans for our next generation.

SAM was proud to present Maurice Keenan to the students at UVM. SAM has plans of getting other top managers to this campus. Watch the CYNIC for time and place. The next scheduled meeting of SAM will be November 11.

SAM has been approached by an organization in the city of Burlington which has requested the service of the members of the Society. The Society will be in a position to bring some good to the City of Burlington. More information about this secret dealing in the next issue of the CYNIC.

Membership is still open to students enrolled in the School of Technology, School of Arts and Science majoring in Economics, and students who have a sincere interest in management and industry. Contact Richard Rubin, Arthur Kemens, Michael Case, or faculty advisor Milton J. Nadworny.

Society for the Advancement of Management will hold its next meeting on November 11, at 8:00 P.M. in 104 P.M.

Religion In Life Week Postponed

By LINDA SACK

The Religion in Life Week, sponsored by the Religious Activities Committee, and scheduled for November 12 and 13, has been postponed.

In the past, the event has consisted of panel and unit discussions on religion. However, a theme or unifying structure was lacking. In March, a new plan will be presented. It will consist of the production of Samuel Beckett's play, "Waiting for Godot," directed by Reverend Richard Leidberg, the Protestant chaplain on campus.

Those familiar with this author know that his plots describe modern situations which raise many questions about the meaning of life in contemporary world. Conclusions or possible answers to these will be formulated in individual unit discussions the following day. Clergymen and faculty will act as leaders for the groups and will be able to attend the dress rehearsal to become acquainted with the play.

Selection of the cast will be made from students, faculty, and town people. The time and place for the Saturday evening performance which will be open to the public will be announced at a later date.

"I have 43,000 reasons why I'm sold on my job"

Emil R. San Soucie got his A.B. degree from Harvard in 1954. He joined the Bell Telephone Company of Pennsylvania in early 1955. Today, three short years later, he's in charge of 35 employees in a West Philadelphia business office serving 43,000 customers.

"It's an interesting job," says Emil. "I guess that's because people are interesting. Every day, I talk with customers — and no two are alike. They all have different problems and service needs. That makes every working day different and stimulating for me.

"There's also a great sales opportunity. Homes and businesses need the convenience and efficiency that up-to-date telephone facilities offer. It's a strong story, and we tell it often and enthusiastically.

"Outside the office, I'm active in local civic affairs. And I'm always a bit awed — and pleased — by the respect people show for the telephone company and for a young fellow in my position.

"I don't know where a man like me with management ambitions has a better opportunity."

. . . .

Many young men are finding interesting and rewarding careers in the Bell Telephone Companies. There are opportunities for you, too. Talk with the Bell interviewer when he comes to your campus. Read the Bell Telephone booklet on file in your Placement Office.

Emil San Soucie sits in on a telephone sales contact by one of his Service Representatives to help her improve her sales technique.

Emil stimulates team competition in his office to increase interest in sales. Here he discusses quotas with his unit supervisors.

Hoopsters Key Up For Nearing Opener

by DAVID ETTINGER

The [illegible] University of Vermont Basketball season looms on the forecourt, and with it, comes the frustrations, heartache, anxiety, and hopes as Head Coach John "Fuzzy" Evans.

Tryouts have just gotten under way for the Varsity Basketball Squad. Of the more than twenty men who came out, 15 will be kept on the squad. Of these fifteen, 12 will be allowed to participate in away games, in compliance with a Yankee Conference ruling.

The squad will find as its nucleus, most of the returning veterans from last year's successful campaign. However, [illegible] has actually been solidified, inasmuch as tryouts are still being carried on.

A record better than last year's 15-8 ledger, seems evident with the return of the well-seasoned hoopsters.

Returning will be Clyde Lord, with an 18.9 point average, Capt. Bob Kuchar 17, Frank Giordano, 11; Bob Gallagher, 9-4; Pete Beck, 4.4; Denny Morse, [illegible]; Ron Bouchard, 2-2 and Ray Weiner, 3-3. The boys will be kept on the go with a 20 game schedule in addition to competitive play in the St. Michael's Invitational Christmas Tournament.

The return of Charlie Isles will strengthen the team considerably, as well as help to compensate for the loss of Arnie Branch who did not come back.

Some regret was expressed at the lack of a home court. "We should have three courts available; one for the Varsity, one for the Frosh, and one for Intra-mural play," was Coach Fuzzy Evan's remedy for an improvement. It does seem incongruous to this reporter, that the same facilities should be used for Kake Walking, Concerts, Ballet, Drama, and Basketball. I cannot see Shakespeare and Basketball performed in the same arena.

"Right now, we are compelled to pay rent, play ball without being able to shower properly (a deterrent to those who would come out for the team), practice at different times in order to fit into the Auditorium's schedule, and are further hampered by the player's inability to properly get accustomed to the floor which is not the same one played on at practice. Other teams have a distinct advantage over us." Although Fuzzy was upset over these conditions, he did express hope in the eventual building of proper facilities.

Three teams to keep close watch on will be Dartmouth, UConn, and St. Michael's, all of whom were victorious over the Cats last season. "We don't like to schedule pushovers in order to claim a winning season" were Evan's words as he spoke with a fired determination about UVM's chances for this year. "We can't win every game even though I'd like to, but we can lick any team on the schedule on a good night." Such optimism cannot be purely unfounded. This season could see us beating Dartmouth, Connecticut, or St. Michael's.

Whatever the results of the campaign, one thing is for sure, according to their able mentor, "They'll make a darn good showing for themselves."

Meet The Catamounts

by DAVE SCHULTZ

As the season draws to a close after the Middlebury game this Saturday, I would like you to meet three of Vermont's most underrated players. They are Ira Effron, John Marino, and Pete Lyford.

Rough and Rugged

Joining the Varsity football team for the first time since he has been at UVM, is Ira Effron, a hard hitting tackle from Poughkeepsie, N.Y. He attended high school there, playing football and baseball for his alma mater. Co-captaining the football team there, Ira was voted to the All Dutchess County, and All DUSO League teams. The latter league consisted of Dutchess, Ulster, Sullivan and Orange counties. He was also given honors as a member of the school band, playing the saxaphone.

Due to unfortunate circumstances, Ira has not been able to partake in football at UVM since his freshman year. Possessing natural talent in football, Ira broke right into the starting lineup this season. He has acquired the nickname of "Pioneer" since he is usually the first defenseman to break into the opposing backfield.

Being in the College of Technology and majoring in Industrial Management has led Ira into becoming very active in the Society of Advancement for Management, where he is currently vice-president. During the winter he enjoys skiing and playing hockey, while in the summer he enjoys water skiing to keep him in condition. Ira is a frater of Phi Sigma Delta fraternity where he is fire marshall.

Big John Marino

Sturdy and Dependable

Hailing from Ridgefield Park, N.J., where he played football for a state championship football squad, is big John Marino. While at Memorial High School, where he was captain of the football team and a member of the track team, John's team won forty straight games before going down to defeat. He was also Vice-President of his graduating class there.

During his freshman year at UVM, John played freshman football, and because of his good marks was elected to the sophomore honorary, Gold Key. For the past two seasons he has played almost the whole game without being substituted for. John has excelled at his guard position and is looking forward to having an even greater season next year. He is a member of Phi Delta Theta fraternity.

He felt that after a slow start in Saturday's game, thanks to some liberal substitution and an all around effort by the team, we came back very strong to win. He definitely believes that we can beat Middlebury this week if everybody plays as hard as they did last week. Speaking about the team as a whole as compared to Middlebury's team, he feels that Middlebury has two fine backs in Atkinson and Aldrich, but he points out that we have Petronaci and Greene, who he thinks, have a better line in front of them.

The Golden Arm

Blooming into a fine quarterback this season is Pete Lyford, of White River Junction, Vt. Coming up from total obscurity to the starting quarterback in the St. Lawrence game has shown Pete's determination to be a top notch ball player. Performing a feat of tossing five touchdowns in his last two games brings this fact to light. UVM has not seen a passer of his caliber in a long time. Pete has completed 11 for 19 passes good for approximately 220 yards so far this season. It might be said that he is following in his father's footsteps, as his dad also played football at UVM.

Attending Hartford High School in his home town, in his senior year he was captain of his baseball team. He also participated in football and basketball. He was named to the All Valley football team at quarterback. Kimball Union Academy was Pete's next step before enrolling at UVM. There he participated in football, basketball and lacrosse. Besides playing football here, Pete partakes in intra-fraternity sports for his fraternity, Kappa Sigma. Majoring in Economics, he is in the school of Arts and Science.

Looking forward to the Middlebury game, Pete feels that we should be victorious. After playing ball like a sharp team ought to play last week against St. Lawrence, the team should be all primed up for the big game, he believes. Pete thinks that a win this Saturday would obliterate the record of the team's losses earlier this season.

"THREE TIMES NOW YOU'VE SEEN TH' ACTIVITIES OF TH' CHEER LEADERS — NOW, NEXT GAME KEEP YOUR EYES ON TH' BALL!"

Profs Take To Gridiron

At 4:00 p.m. tomorrow, on the intramural field, the formidable faculty will vie with the fraternity all-stars in what should be the most interesting football game of the season.

The faculty, smarting from a 12-5 defeat in softball, have been practicing long and hard under the capable coaching staff of Profs Teal and Gould. According to Prof. Teal, a possible starting line-up will be President Fey, acting Captain, Profs Teal, Steele, Potash, Dean Kent, Dean Clifford, Tom Tierney, and Col. Fishburn. Coach Teal said there were many more men on the team but, for security purposes, failed to name them.

The game promises to be fun for all concerned and everyone is invited.

HERB HEIN'S FOOTBALL FORECAST

First of all, I wish to apologize to J. H. Walton, last week's winner, for not correctly stating the number of right picks that he had. I stand corrected Mr. Walton, you had six right, not five. I did somewhat better this week in picking eight out of ten. Chesley H. Horton of 307 Wills Hall picked eight right, out of ten, and won the contest for last week. Congratulations Mr. Horton, you had to make some hard choices to win last week. Remember to pick your winners by scores and to have your entry in the CYNIC Box in Waterman Information Office by noon on Saturday.

Now my picks for this week:

HARVARD - PRINCETON — The Tigers (3-1) in Ivy League competition bounded back last week by beating Brown. Harvard, a team that started slowly, has progressed a little with each game especially in the Ivy League. This game could help bring back the title to Princeton and I think they can win both the title and the game. PRINCETON.

NOTRE-DAME - PITTSBURGH — This game is the Eastern Regional game of the week and NBC couldn't have picked a better contest to televise. The Irish drubbed Navy last week, while Pitt was just nipped by Syracuse. This one is another toss-up but I think the Irish can take it. NOTRE DAME

OKLAHOMA - IOWA ST. — The Sooners haven't lost a Big Eight game in sixty-eight tries, and if there is one thing they want, it is to bolster their national prestige, by taking another Big Eight Title. I don't think Iowa St. can prevent Oklahoma from gaining this goal. OKLAHOMA.

PURDUE - OHIO STATE — This game is another beauty of a contest. The Boilermakers are rolling along in high gear after three consecutive victories. The Buckeyes were finally beaten last Saturday by Northwestern. In my opinion this is a case of one team going uphill and another going down. PURDUE.

ARMY - RICE — The Cadets are traveling to Houston to take on the Rice Owls in what shapes up to be another good one. Rice has slowly been gaining prestige in the Southwest Conference this year and could prove a big obstacle to the Cadets. However, Capt. Dawkins will definitely be in the line up for Army on Saturday and he could prove to be the extra spark Army might need. ARMY.

VERMONT - MIDDLEBURY — In the last two meetings between these two teams Middlebury has pulled out victories in the last quarter. Middlebury has played steady ball all season and is a good solid team. Vermont has looked good only in their last two games. It's just a question of the Catamounts keeping up their spirit. I think the Cats can do it. VERMONT

NORTHWESTERN over WISCONSIN
S.M.U. over TEXAS A. & M.
L. S. U. over DUKE
AMHERST over TRINITY

Harriers Win Yankon Crown

Lyford's Passes Stop Larries, 26-7; Cats Host Panthers Sat. In '58 Finale

Postmen Finish Ahead Of Field

by BOB MUNRO

Last Saturday the Vermont Harriers literally ran away with the Yankee Conference Cross Country Championships at Amherst, Mass. So decisive was the victory that in the final tabulations the closest contender, Massachusetts, trailed by 38 points. This was the second widest score ever recorded in the New England classic, but none as impressive as the margin by which Coach Post feels, that his squad was not really that much superior, but had the necessary spark and hustle which was needed in the home stretch. Top honors went to Norm Picard, Fred Kolstrom, and Howie Cutts who finished hand in hand, and clinched the "Bean Pot." MacGregor of New Hampshire was the first man to finish the 4-7 mile course with a time of 25:17. Assured of second place, Picard slowed up and was joined by his teammates Kolstrom and Cutts, to make it a three-way Vermont finish for second. Captain Ray Allen running the best race of his college career, placed 10th and Bill Perkins and Dan Mosman came in 13th and 14th. Alfie Lane then finished 22nd for Vermont, 5 being the entire team ahead of half the starting field of 42.

Connecticut was third with a 97-point showing that netted 55 points, three ahead of New Hampshire, who was picked to give the Cats trouble. Maine, the defending champ was fifth with 108 and Rhode Island was last with 114.

Looking ahead to the New Englands, the undefeated "Postmen" will have a tough task with eighteen teams competing for the biggest title in New England. The meet will take place in South Boston next Saturday. Coach Post feels that conditioning and spirit will decide the victor and we are all inclined to agree with him.

At this point I would like to commend the Cross Country team for a job well done. They showed a spirited team effort as rarely seen in Vermont's history. In the icy cold, and without the aid of cheer leaders or fans they won the third Yankee Conference championship in all of UVM's sports history. This is certainly a fine tribute to both Coach Post and his fine team.

Midd. Preview

by STEVE COOPER

After speaking with Norm Strassburg, a member of the UVM athletic staff, who recently scouted the Middlebury football team, this writer formulated the opinion that Middlebury's Pete Aldrich is a one man team. "He's definitely their most outstanding player," said the friendly mentor. "Aldrich makes them a go-go club. Without him, the Panthers are just a mediocre club. He's a fine passer, punter, runner and what's more he's an outstanding defensive player."

ED. NOTE: (Aldrich had been out for four weeks with an injured hand and had played but one game. However, last Saturday he scored both Middlebury touchdowns in leading them to a 12-7 victory over the Norwich "Cadets").

"Middlebury has a good defense, but without Aldrich the offense is only fair. Dick Atkinson is a good fullback, but is much more effective with Aldrich in the lineup. The 'downstaters' use the single wing and T-formation on offense. Defensively, their line isn't very heavy and probably has about the same balance as UVM. French, the left end, and Ryan, a tackle, are their best line men. Their bench is good with much stronger reserve strength than ours. Morse, a tailback, is one of the better reserves." In closing, Norm said, "Middlebury, as a unit, is not as good as last year's outfit which beat Vermont but Aldrich is the guy that makes the club—gives them that go-spark."

The "Catamounts," fresh from their initial victory of the current campaign over St. Lawrence last week, will be looking to close out a dismal season with an upset victory.

The "Cats," who in the last two games, have been playing inspired ball under the quarterbacking of an improved Pete Lyford, are really "up" for this encounter. Middlebury on the other hand, assured for no worse than a tie for state honors, is looking to sweep the title this week. The season's finale shapes up to be a great battle and both teams will be shooting for all the marbles.

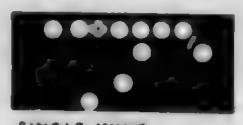
'Mural Mirror

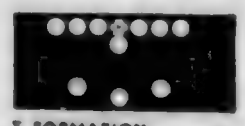
by STEPHEN PROBER

As winter approaches, the intramural program at the University of Vermont swings into high gear under the capable direction of Mr. Norm Strassburg of the Athletic Department. This year's intramural program offers basketball, bowling, handball, volleyball, badminton and skiing. All of these sports are open to the fraternities and the independent housing units connected with the university except for skiing which is open only to the fraternities. When asked about an intramural skiing program for the independent leagues, Mr. Strassburg said that if more interest was shown by the independents, a skiing program could be worked out.



Sig Nu Takes Fraternity Championship

The intramural fraternity football championship was won by Sig Nu in a 44-0 over Phi Sig. Sig Nu went into the game with an undefeated record as did Phi Sig, but Sig Nu's razzle dazzle playing was too strong for outclassed Phi Sig.



Catamount tries to look into future for results of Saturday's tussle with Middlebury.

STRATEGY:

SINGLE WING
Backs aligned in tandem to one side behind balanced or unbalanced line. Snap goes to tailback or fullback for run, pass or hand off. Quarterback is lead blocker. Wingback or end may be flanked

T FORMATION
Balanced line, quarterback close behind center, fullback about 4 yds. back, halfbacks to each side slightly closer, behind tackles. Snap goes to quarterback who spins, dives or passes

Gridders Register Initial Campaign Win

by FRED ROBINSON

Sparked by tremendous line play, the bullet passes of Pete Lyford, and the high stepping dashes of the Cat Backfield, the University of Vermont displayed the potential which they had indicated from the beginning in crushing St. Lawrence, 26-7, before a Homecoming crowd of 4500.

After the Larries grabbed the kick-off and bounded to paydirt in nine plays, the Vermont offense jelled and the rest of the afternoon was all Green and Gold. The story of the game was the Vermont line on both offense and defense. Against a much heavier St. Lawrence forward wall, the Cats, time and time again broke open holes to set up TD's. On defense, the line held five times on fourth down — twice inside their own five and twice these setbacks were turned into touchdowns. A tip of the hat goes to Bill Grey, Lou Hronek, Johnny Marino, Bob Brown, Phil Chalifoux, Jerry Mason, and Stu Saint Peter. These boys were up to the game and they certainly showed it.

After being held scoreless, in the first canto, the Cats sprang to life in the second as Bill Grey broke through to nail the Larry ball player for a twelve yard loss on Vermont 48. Catamount Lou Petronaci cradled the ball for 31 yards and a Vermont first down on the St. Lawrence two. After two run-attempts failed, Lyford hit Bill Simonds, in motion to the right, for the TD. The rush for the extra point was stopped and the Larrys from Canton, NY, were still leading with six minutes left in the first half, 7-6. UVM kicked off and then stopped a quarterback sneak try on a fourth down to give the Cat offensive machine a chance to roll again. This time it was Roy Greene, who broke off left tackle and spun 33 yards to the UVM 19. Lyford found Simonds for 9 more yards, and after the Saints broke through to nail Greene for a loss, Peterified one to Gerry Cassidy, reserve half-back, in the end zone for the second Vermont six-pointer. Greene intercepted a desperation St. Lawrence heave in the closing seconds of the half, but before UVM could get off a play, the horn sounded and Vermont had a 12-7 lead.

The third stanza saw neither team cut loose on any spectacular plays, but in the closing seconds the Larry offense began to click. Pounding away on the ground, St. Lawrence was on the UVM 4½ with a fourth down when the quarter ended.

On the first play of the fourth stanza, the Vermont line smothered the Saint TD bid and took over. After three unsuccessful tries to move the ball, Petronaci fell back and got off a tremendous boot which sailed deep into Larry territory. Still St. Lawrence could go nowhere and was forced to punt. Vermont took over on the Saint's 30 and with Petronaci carrying for fifteen yards in two attempts, St. Peter snagged a Lyford pass to give the overjoyed Cats the third touchdown. Cassidy hit St. Peter for the extra point and Vermont lead 20-7.

Late in the fourth quarter UVM piled over for another touchdown. Starting at the Larry 22, Don Nimphius carried the pigskin for fifteen to the St. Lawrence 7. Two plays later Johnny Babl plunged over from the three. The points after failed and Vermont held on for a 26-7 victory.

Looking back at the game, Vermont led in every department except in fumbles where they made no miscues. Roy Greene averaged almost 8 yards per carry in 11 tries; Lou Petronaci better than 5 yards in 17 attempts. On the other hand St. Lawrence, did an excellent job of faking especially on kick-offs and punt returns.

The election of the queen took place yesterday by a vote of the entire student body. The five finalists were Linda Farnkoff, Nancy Miller, Joan Schmouth, Susie Sells and Nancy Thompson.

Dress for the ball will be semi-formal and it is not necessary to have a uniform to attend. Tickets are being sold by all advanced Air Force and Army ROTC students and in the University Store. Next Lane Series Presents New York Opera Company

by LINDA SACK

For the third consecutive year, the New York City Center Company will be at the Memorial Auditorium for George Bishop Lane Series performances. Tuesday evening, November 18, subscribers of the "red" tickets will see the presentation of Rigoletto by Verdi. Puccini's Madame Butterfly will be sung Monday evening, November 17, as part of the "blue" program. Both operas will begin at 8:30 p.m. and promise to provide excellent entertainment.

The trip to Burlington will be the beginning of a tour which will take the company, consisting of a forty-five piece orchestra, to Detroit and Cleveland. In the past, the fifteen year-old group has presented for the Lane Series Die Fledermaus and La Boheme.

"Madame Butterfly"

Singing the title role in Madame Butterfly on Monday night will be soprano Elizabeth Carron. Richard Cassilly as Benjamin F. Pinkerton and William Chapman as Sharpless, the U.S. Consul, are the other stars. The supporting cast includes Regina Sarfaty, Helen Baisley, Arthur Newman, Arnold Voketaitis, and George Del Monte. Constantine Callenicos, the conductor, will be making his debut with the Opera Company only two days before appearing here.

Probably the most popular opera in the modern repertory, Madame Butterfly is the tragic story of a temporary marriage between a Japanese girl, Butterfly, and an American naval lieutenant, Pinkerton. She is left alone with a two year-old baby while he returns to America to marry again. Though the sailor's friend, Sharpless, tries to break this news to Butterfly, she does not believe him and hopes that Pinkerton will still return. He does, but with his American wife, and after a brief, cold interview with this woman, Butterfly kills herself.

Elizabeth Carron, being only five feet tall and weighing less than 100 pounds, is well suited in appearance as well as voice for the part of the little Japanese girl. She sang the role for the first time in New York about a year ago

"Rigoletto"

In the Tuesday evening performance of Rigoletto, stars will be Guiseppe Gismondo as Duke of Mantua, Louis Guillico as Rigoletto, and Lisa Di Julio as Gilda. In supporting roles will be Joshua Hecht, seen here last year in La Boheme, Regina Sarfaty, Helen Baisley, Arnold Voketaitis, Arthur Newman, Grant Williams, Rus-

Freshman Accidently Shot In Freak Hunting Error

Raiford Richard, a UVM freshman, was accidentally shot to death in a hunting accident Saturday afternoon. Richards was shot by Roswell M. Stearns, 24, of Newport in a freak accident.

According to the State Police version of the shooting, Richards was crouched down, out of sight, in a clump of bushes observing deer in a semi-clear area beyond. Stearns, also partly-hidden in bushes, had the sights of his rifle lined up on a deer beyond Richards.

Just as Stearns pulled the trigger of his rifle, Richards stood up out of the bushes directly in the line of fire.

The .32 caliber slug entered Richards' body on the right side of his chest and emerged from his lower left back. Police said they believed death was instantaneous.

The shooting occurred in the woods near Johnson, Vermont, between 4 and 4:15 p.m.

Richards, 18, was graduated from Johnson High School last June. Besides his parents he leaves a brother, Austin Richards of Johnson.

There will be one more issue of the CYNIC on November 20 because of Thanksgiving vacation. The next issue will be on December 11, and therefore all articles and notices should be submitted as soon as possible. The deadline will be November 17.

National Ballet Of Canada Praised

By TANYA L[illegible]

On Monday and Tuesday evenings, November 3 and 4, the National Ballet of Canada gave two diverse performances as part of the Lane Series.

The Monday evening performance opened with Act Two of Tschaikowsky's "Swan Lake", a difficult scene for even under any circumstances. It was danced in the height of classic style, but failed to achieve the grandeur of the classical ballet because the dancers did not give enough emphasis to the soaring movements which seem to carry everyone -- dancers and audience -- up off the floor. This feeling of arising from the dance floor is the outstanding characteristic of ballet. It could well have been that the condition of the Memorial Auditorium stage floor was partly responsible for this inability. The cygnets and the swan maidens, however, performed with a precision and grace that offset the unfulfilled promise of the solo portions.

Next on the program was a ballet by Anthony Tudor and Ernest Chausson entitled, "Lilac Garden". Being familiar with Mr. Tudor's fine work on the CBC this was a disappointing performance, for though intended as a satire, the satiric elements were unsharpened to the extent that the sentimental viewer regarded the work as a sad and beautiful tragedy and the more critical regarded it as melodramatic. The standard gestures of melodrama were not set sharply enough against the fine elements of the dance to be regarded as truly successful satire.

It was not until the last number on the Monday program, "Les Rendez-Vous" by Auber and Frederick Ashton, that the audience had the opportunity to see the excellent craftsmanship of the National Ballet of Canada. The leaps by the male dancers, the life communicated in the group dancing, and the especially uplifting performances by Mr. Kraul and Miss Leigh made the evening of dance a truly memorable one.

Though there was but one natural backdrop for the entire program, the pattern of the dance and the costumes embodied warmth and variation that gave the performance character.

In marked contrast to this program, the Tuesday evening performance of "Coppelia", with music by Lee Delibes and choreography after Arthur Saint-Leon, had an elaborate stage set of a fantasy-beautified peasant town. From the beginning the audience felt a vitality that was not

"Diary" Entertains, Despite Lack Of Depth

The Diary of Anne Frank, by Frances Goodrich and Albert Hackett, is a play which ran for ninety weeks on Broadway, and collected, along with full house audiences for those ninety weeks, one Pulitzer Prize and one New York Drama Critics' Award, one Antoinette Perry Award, one National Drama Critics' Poll (Award), and one Theater Club Gold Medal. The Diary of Anne Frank was the November 7th offering on the GBL Series. The fact that the play has such a long list of impressive recognitions and the fact that we were there on Friday night to wonder, "Why all the hullabaloo?" is perhaps the present point of confusion in our mind.

The set, "designed" by Boris Aronson (which means that Lisa Jalowetz, who is "assistant to Mr. Aronson" on the program, did the real legwork) was illusionally adequate, practical and well executed, as was the lighting and direction. The performance by the cast was generally excellent with the exception of the elder Frank girl, Anne's sister, who to us was off-key with the rest of the performers, perhaps not as experienced, and the portrayal of the little "old maid" dentist we found a bit hard to accept as well done. Francis Lederer made Mr. Frank warm and lovable and "gyroscopic," as our colleague (Anne Middlebrook Burlington Free Press, Saturday, November 8th, review of this play) has pointed out; a seventeen year old girl, Pauline Hahn, takes Anne Frank out of the muppet class to give us a truly womanlike performance. We were especially pleased by the intelligent portrayal of Mrs. Frank by Lilia Skala.

Now, what is really disturbing about The Diary of Anne Frank is to be found on the other, mysterious side of all the above excellence. (There is not space enough to quibble with the insignificant physical production lacks that the Friday presentation brought us.) There is enough space to point out a few of the wires on which the play walks during its course. We are not sure whether it stayed on these wires through the evening. We are almost certain that now and again it fell, which belies the fact of all the recognition.

There are moments, in this English language version (the play was first written in German) when it seems nice, just fine and dandy, to be a Jew in Nazi-occupied Amsterdam couped up in an attic with six other people; there are times when this abnormality seems absurdly normal, and this in itself is not bad, but . . . the play, in its dashing moments of frivolity, seems to completely forget, avoid, the terror which should have been uppermost in seven pent-up minds. Once the terror is well demonstrated as closing curtains cut off the group, with Mr. Frank leading a particular ironic singing of a Hanukkah song of joy. Otherwise, there is either black terror or white joshing semi-hilarity. The authors never seem to compromise themselves by allowing that string-taut deep down fear-of-discovery feeling to show for very long. Consequently, out of context, a majority of the scenes would make The Diary of Anne Frank look like Remember Mama, and consequently this is where the play fails miserably and is just a bit insulting . . . good showmanship, yes, but insulting. There is nothing deeply psychological running through the play, nothing to tear away from our plump, comfortable, well-stomached, chrome-tail-fin-on-both-family-car and piously self-satisfied middle-class mediocrity nothing to shock us . . . no depth.

The Diary of Anne Frank, then, in our opinion, is entertainment, and good entertainment. So we wonder why . . . how. . . this play could have created, German Nationalist Heroine out of Anne Frank. Maybe, in the original German the play has guts; in English it comes out smelling vaguely of box office and comptrollers' ink. . . no guts!

Of Tenors and Baritones

Tenor Richard Cassily has made appearances as an operatic and oratorio singer, and as a symphony soloist. He attended Peabody Conservatory in Baltimore where he sang the leads with their opera company. He has also studied in New York and has been at Tanglewood for a season. Mr. Cassilly sang the leading role in the NBC TV Opera Theater production of Mr. Saint of Bleeker Street. He also played Don Jose, from Carmen, with the Philadelphia Orchestra, which was conducted by Leonard Bernstein. Other parts have been with the San Francisco Pacific, Baltimore Civic and New York opera companies; with the Baltimore, Pittsburgh and Norfolk symphonies; and leads on Broadway, TV and at the Arts Festival in Boston.

William Chapman, who sings the baritone, is a protege of Lauritz Melchior. His professional career began in high school when he appeared in the Paramount Picture production of Magic in Music, and with other opera companies in San Francisco and Los Angeles. After being graduated from USC, he toured the nation's concert stages and night clubs with the famous opera star. Since then he has been heard in South Pacific in Cleveland and Cape Cod, in Arabian Nights at Jones Beach, and Candide on Broadway.

Previous to the engagement on Saturday with the New York City Opera Company, Mr. Callenicos has been General Director and conductor of the Pacific Opera Company in San Francisco. In 1959 he will travel to Rome and to Munich to wield the baton. At present he records only for RCA Victor.

Verdi's tragedy is about Rigoletto, the Duke of Mantua's jester, who has an only daughter, Gilda. She is kept hidden in a part of the city away from the vicious influence of the court. The Duke, however, discovers her retreat, and in the disguise of a student wins her heart. When Rigoletto learns of the affair, he hires a bravo named Sparfucile to kill the Duke. He takes him to a lonely inn where he is to await Rigoletto's appearance at midnight. However, as a result of the Duke's sister who pleads for his life, the commissioned killer consents to murder any stranger who visits the inn, in place of him. Gilda, waiting in the street, hears this and decides to die for her lover. She enters the house and is murdered. When Rigoletto arrives, he receives her body sewn in a sack and does not realize it is his daughter until the Duke is heard singing.

Stars

Mr. Guimondo, the Italian tenor who plays this role, made his debut in 1957 with the New York City Opera Company's presentation of Turandot. Previous to that, he sang many operas in Italy.

Many may remember baritone Louis Guilico who also appeared here last fall. A native of Montreal, Canada, he has studied in Italy, in Quebec, and in New York. In 1955 he was the winner of the Metropolitan Opera Auditions. He has been soloist with the Montreal Symphony Orchestra, Montreal TV Opera Society. Recently he starred in the Mozart Festival at Columbia University and was heard in operatic productions in Springfield, Massachusetts, and San Francisco.

Lisa DiJulio is a newcomer to the United States from Italy. She is making her debut this season with the New York Opera Company, and there is much hope that this role will lead to a future as star in the Company.

Jules Rudel is now a familiar figure in Vermont. In 1957 he conducted Die Fledermaus and last year conducted the La Boheme production. It is interesting to note that he played the violin by ear at three years and composed his second opera at sixteen.

Appointed director of the company last year, he hopes to return to Vienna with the group in the future.

Guest Speaker At Newman Club

Very Rev. Perry E. Fontaine, Chancellor of the Diocese of Burlington will be the next speaker for the Newman Club Monthly Meeting. His topic will be: CHURCH LAW IN MARRIAGE

Msgr. Fontaine, the youngest monsignor in the United States has worked in the Chancery office in Burlington ever since his ordination in 1950. He is a pleasing and interesting speaker.

This will give the members of the Newman Club and any of their guests an opportunity to discuss many details of an interesting subject. The talk will cover such areas as Mixed Marriage, proper parish for marriage, acting as bridesmaid for Protestant marriage, the pre-marriage questionaire and instruction, as well as the important spiritual and moral questions.

This will be an opportunity to clear up many a question which Catholic students are asked. Feel free to bring those of other Faiths who would like to get the opinion of an expert.

The Vermont Cynic

Disappointed And Shamed

The "play series" presented one of the best dramas of the Lane Series, and yet we must admit disappointment with the audience. It was with a great sense of shock that we watched many members of the audience leave while the cast was still taking curtain calls. This evidence of bad manners in fellow students filled us with shame.

'LATE-COMER OR JOKER'

The "fashionably late" arrivals who tramped down the aisles in the middle of the first act also annoyed us. The rudeness displayed by the person who walks in during the middle of the production, causes a great commotion in taking his seat in the middle of the row, disturbs everyone around the area, including the actors, is unbounded. Part of the blame for this must fall on the ushers, however. When a performance begins, the doors should be closed and no one should be allowed to enter the auditorium until a break or intermission. We have heard most orchestras pause after the first number to allow the inconsiderate "late-comers" to enter the hall. Anything to assuage this situation should be adopted. There is also the "big joker" who, during one of the most serious scenes, bursts into laughter, or during a dramatic scene moves his chair or talks to his neighbor.

This situation is not limited to this past performance, but during previous ones, where it has been even more disgraceful. For instance, applauding occurred at the wrong time during one of the Danish orchestra's numbers. These instances of rudeness occur no matter what company visits Burlington. Will the audience of Burlington and UVM ever learn common edict?

'COMFORT'

However, the situation is not completely black. The audience is very warm and each performance is given a fine ovation. Each performer is greeted at the end with a fine consideration from those who remain in their seats. Of course, the "dead spots" in the Auditorium, due to poor acoustics, account for some of the chair moving. Some people could not hear during Friday's drama because of this fact. Another reason for moving in one's chair is due to the "comfort" of the seats provided for the audience. Even though the dressing rooms were fixed, UVM could use a new auditorium and gymnasium to alleviate some of these problems.

NOTICE: We would appreciate comments, written or spoken, from anyone who feels that the CYNIC has in some way or if the CYNIC is not functioning properly. The work of RUMOR keeps reaching our ears, much of it unfounded or just plain carping. To settle all questions and errors, why not come to the source of the trouble instead of just mumbling discontently in your beards?

Parking Request

In regard to recent articles on the parking situation, it appears that the problem has no immediate solution. In contemplation of a possible solution, I thought of the road in front of College Row was made a one way street with parking on both sides. this would alleviate the problem temporarily. But this definitely would aggravate snow removal in the winter. However, if some steps were taken to limit parking to the hours of 7 a.m. to 6 p.m., the snow crews, which ordinarily work during the evening and early morning hours, could complete their job with a minimum of interference. I can see no increased accident hazard, if speeds are maintained at a campus rate of 15 miles per hour.

I am sure that I am not the first to think of this idea, but I would like to find out just what the ruling is on making College Row into a one way street.

Art Levison, '60

Parking Answer

I would like to give Mr. Levison an answer to his request for information. The suggestion that he has made is one that has been suggested to and considered favorably both by the University Board of Trustees and the Buildings and Grounds Committee of the University Senate. The idea of one-way traffic on College Row and on South Prospect Street between Pearl and Main was in the subject of a letter I sent to the Traffic Commission of the City of Burlington under date of June 27, 1956 with a follow-up to Mayor Cairns on September 9, 1957. It was also the subject of a letter sent by former President Borgmann in response to action by the Board of Trustees under date of December 21, 1956. Each of these requests was as follows:

1. That one-way traffic moving south be established on South Prospect Street between Pearl and Main.
2. That one-way traffic moving north be established on College Row.
3. That signs indicating school zone be erected, limiting the speed to 20 miles per hour.

It had appeared to us at the University that this arrangement would help to alleviate the cross flow of traffic at Main and Prospect which is already badly congested and similarly the cross flow of north bound traffic at Pearl and Prospect Street. The request included a study of the possibility of traffic lights, both at the intersection of Main Street and College Row, and College Row and Pearl, synchronized with the existing lights, in order that the traffic would flow regularly at all of these points and provide adequate opportunity for pedestrian crossing.

I have not been informed of any official action being taken by the traffic Commission or City Government on these requests. Informally the following reasons have been advanced against making these changes: (1) the establishment of one-way traffic tends to increase the speed of travel; (2) signs indicating a reduced speed limit are not

By Peter Schoffstall

Gradually the system of student communication is coming of age at UVM. This is an important change, since maturity in the things we do are the surest means of attaining the privileges which accompany maturity and so gradually we may also see the beginning of the end of the "kindergarden" attitude demonstrated by rules and attitudes adopted by the institution in the last few years. Demonstration of maturity and reasonable discretion is the only proper way to combat distrust and misunderstanding and the easy-way-out techniques which are involved as the basis for all rule making. This new maturity is demonstrated primarily by the positive University concern over the physical needs of the student "family" in its break toward a more mature use of its learning.

Symptomatic of this growing are the plans of the CYNIC, to eventually expand its operation and its steadily increasing awareness of the mature manner of handling the problem of where and how to get trained people in the positions at the head of the major departments. The CYNIC has recently made reassignments of responsibility. There are also plans, dreamy, but becoming more and more the necessary dream, of actually producing more than one issue a week, or at least having latitudes which are not particularly bounded by the tight budget it now operates on.

Highlights

By Edson Darer

Hello there. Another weekend gone by, and this one almost a replica of old Kake Walk Days. After the football team ran away from the Middlebury Panthers and vanquished them 20 to 6, the action started. There were open Houses at many of the sorority houses and at some of the fraternity houses also. For the first time in my college career, there were two "swinging" Dixieland bands on this campus at the same time and the "joint was really jumping." All these cats were way out. In fact they were so far out, you couldn't even reach them by train.

In fact one student was so taken by all this, that he walked out of one session and climbed very stiffly into his limousine. "Where to, sir?" asked the poor freshman chauffer respectfully. 'Drive off a cliff, James," the student said. "I'm committing suicide."

A FLYING LEAP

An elderly chaperone was walking outside of one of these sessions, when, without warning another student, who was also taken aback by all this "jazz", dashed out, took a flying leap in the air with his legs parted, and fell in a heap in the gutter. The old chaperone mystified, hurried over to him. "Dear, dear," he said sympathetically. "Are you hurt?" "NO" was the sharp reply, "but I'd like to meet the sonofagun who moved my bicycle."

There is a brand newdrink sweeping the whole country, and even parts of Vermont. The ingredients are: tomato juice, Geritol, and Vodka. It is called, a "Tired Bloody Mary."

JOE COLLEGES DESCRIBED AS CONFORMISTS

This is what the S.C. Daily Trojan states. The average college student of today has run into a real problem - he can't make up his own mind. Furthermore, when he is forced to submit to a change, the student is too timid to act independently and must seek the shelter of group conformity in reaching his decision. The Chairman of the Religion Dep't., profiled the college student as a self-confident person that feels he can find his own destiny. "This is fine," he said. "However, students do not want to give their lives to great causes. They just want a cottage with two cars in the garage. This is not the way to social progress."

I am inclined to agree with this gentleman, but I would like to say that all students hear about nowadays, is to try and "keep up with the Joneses." Money and effective without police supervision: (2) the effect of one-way traffic at the four corners of the campus is a complicated potentiality and should not be entered into without a careful survey of the situation.

At the time the Burlington Police Department did not feel that it had a sufficient staff to assign a man to traffic duty on the streets at the University. We offered to assign one of the University special policemen to be on duty from time to time to help keep traffic slowed down but this was not accepted. It was our belief that this flow of traffic would not only reduce the possibility of pedestrian accidents on either side of College Green but it would improve the situation at the entrance and exit of the Bishop DeGoesbriand Hospital parking lot and at the University parking lot at Waterman.

I am pleased to give you this information concerning part of the many approaches we have tried to make in handling our traffic and parking situation.

Scholarship

The very fine editorial in a recent copy of the "CYNIC" about fraternity scholarship has led me to write this article. I would, if I might, like to add some food for thought on this idea.

When I first arrived at UVM a couple of years ago, I had noticed that most of the questions asked by freshmen about the fraternities pertained to their social life, athletics, etc. Not loo long ago, at my fraternity's "Open House", I had the opportunity to meet and speak with several members of the freshman class. I was immediately aware of the change in inquiry about fraternities, for the first time asked me concerned themselves with scholarship. I cannot say whether or not this is a trend in the potential fraternity mens' thinking. If such is the case, perhaps it is due to the increasingly high acedemic standards of the colleges coupled with the increasingly greater difficulty of entering such institutions of learning. If this is true, should not the fraternities be aware of this line of thinking?

Through my experiences of the past semester as scholarship chairman of AEPi, I feel very keenly that a frater of high academic standing represents his fraternity just as much as one who takes a very active part in fraternity functions, and who is just as essential to his house.

The brother and pledge represent their houses in many ways. They represent their houses in their contacts with people, not only at UVM, but also wherever they should travel. They represent their

CHANGE OF MIND

The Communists have changed their minds about Pasternak the author of the critical novel on life in Russia, "Dr. Zhuiago". Two weeks ago a savage attack was launched on him to drive him into exile. As a result Mr. Pasternak turned down the Nobel Prize and wrote a letter to Premier Khurshchev to permit him to remain in his homeland.

Thus the communists have decided to let him remain in Russia but the attacks continue.

GENEVA

At the opening of the Geneva Conference last Friday the two sides argued over different agendas. The Russians fought for a blanket commitment to ban all tests prior to negotiations on a control system Western powers wanted the agenda to give priority to a control system as a condition of a test suspension.

On Friday a Washington communique disclosed that Soviet Nuclear Tests had taken place on November 1st and November 3rd. President Eisenhower said in an accompanying statement that the United States was relieved from any obligation under its offer to suspend nuclear weapons tests. Eisenhower also said that the United States and the United Kingdom would continue suspension of such tests for the time being. The United States will be obliged to reconsider its position if there is not shortly a corresponding renunciation by the Soviet Union.

Once again the feeling is that Moscow has agreed to attend a conference because a refusal would seem as if she was rejecting steps towards easing international tension.

UNCERTAINTY IN MID EAST

The uncertainty in the middle East involves Jordan, Iraq and gamal Abdel Nasser's drive to unify the Arab world.

King of Jordan, Hussein, went abroad because he felt that the situation which had occured last summer, had finaliy been stabilized. Last summer, when a republican revolution toppled the Pro-Western monarchy in adjoining Iraq, King Hussein was forced to summon British troops to share up his throne. Last week the last British soldier in Jordan left for home.

Nevertheless there was apprehension about what might happen in the absence of the King and with the British force withdrawn. There was a feeling that an internal revolt in Jordan was still probable. There was speculation that in the event of a revolt in Jordan one or several of the Kingdom's neighbor's - Nasser's United Arab Republic, Israel, Iraq or Saudi Arabia might move in and set the whole mideast aflame.

DEMOCRATIC VICTORY

Last week it was evident that the Democratic victory was clear-cut and nation-wide. The Democrats swept to majorities approaching two-thirds in both houses of Congress. They wound up in command of almost three-fourths of the State Governorships, not withstanding an evident defeat in New York.

The victory reflected dissatisfaction with the Republicans on several issues as the farm policy, the labor policy, the recession and a general lack of leadership in both domestic and foreign affairs.

Even in Vermont, a Democratic Representative, William Meyer was elected, the first Democrat to be elected to a national office in 104 years.

"I Have Great Interest"

I Pay Great Interest---------
by IMA BLUEBIRD

Because I have great interest in UVM, and all long-feathered, flighty views of it, I'd like to have an open chat with the Oriole, over, say, some bird seed and Vermont's bovine beverage. (This is in regard to the article in last week's paper, page 4, headed "I Have Great Interest".)

Regardless of the capital involved, which accounted for an investigation of the University budget, I found the views amusing enough to stand on their own three feet.

To change Oriole's maxim: Relax, you have nothing to lose but your mortgage. When the tuition jumps, to chide the jaybirds, maybe they'll put a cockoo atop Irn Allen (Chapel, of course). Then we wouldn't even need to synchronize our watches.

The real robin's egg, uncut gem, of the remarks, was in regard of the plumbing in Buckham. Such an intimate confidence--the do-it-yourself repair gone foul in the shower. The pathos of it all. First no wine, then no water.

The third leg the Bird tried to stand on, local dirt, just serves to prove a point. You can't get away from it. Ima here has heard of the Botany major who coulnd't see the forest for the trees, but never the Bird who couldn't see the worm for the dirt. No notice the Catapillers waiting to level the surface? Oh you dirty bird.

One final query, feathered fried. Why transfer the tower of Old Mill, in adding to cafeteria space? What intrigue, tippling in the tower (chocolate milk), while holding hands across the jello.

Unwilling to put all eggs in one basket. Ima leaving now--leaving every committee to its budget, Buckham to its bung. (try and budget it) and every bird to his be.

PINNINGS

Marty Laughlin, Pi Phi, '60, was pinned to Bob Mosca, Alpha Phi Homecoming.

Jerry Josephson, '60 of Phi Sig was pinned to Sue Wood of McGill University during Homecoming.

ACACIA

On Sunday afternoon from one to five, November 16, Acacia will hold its I.F.C. open house. There will be refreshments served in sufficient amounts to make lunch or dinner or perhaps both unnecessary. The main attraction will be apple pie a la mode. There will be a short skit for entertainment. There also will be open houses at three other fraternities that day. Everyone, with emphasis on freshmen, is invited to attend. This provides a great opportunity to learn something of the fraternity system.

Homecoming was a wonderful weekend at Acacia this year. Many parents, alumni, and other guests came. Three of our members, Howard Cutts, Ray Allen, and Danny Monman, were instrumental in wrapping up the Yankee Conference cross country title for Vermont. Our float gained no prizes but won many laughs and was pictured with a humorous caption in the Burlington Daily News.

ALPHA CHI OMEGA

Last Wednesday the Alpha Chis and Kappa Sigmas got together for a long awaited Exchange Dinner. The entertainment after dinner consisted of Bridge and some hot piano music by various members of both houses. Everyone is looking forward to another such affair in the very near future.

This Saturday Alpha Chi is holding its annual stock sale for the benefit of Cerebral Palsy. The girls are frantically finishing up the many different kinds of handmade items, including argyles, plaids, and patterned. Fancy pillows, lobsters and other gifts will also be on sale. Don't forget to stop in and get some Christmas shopping done or just have dessert in the Alpha Chi Tea Room.

ALPHA DELTA PI

This past week-end was Parents Week-end at Alpha Delta Pi. Parents and daughters enjoyed the football game Saturday afternoon and then returned to the house for dinner, followed by entertainment by the sisters. The events of the week-end ended Sunday morning with a breakfast.

On Thursday evening, the AlPi's and the Phi Delts held an exchange dinner. On Sunday, our housemother, Miss Hope Brunsen, was guest of honor at a tea given by the sisters.

Congratulations and best wishes go to Marilyn Davison, one of our alums, and Charles Bannecht who were married last week in Tampa, Florida.

ADPi was hostess to two St. Lawrence cheerleaders over Homecoming Week-end; Joan Hartman, ADPi, and Marilyn Reed, Tri-Delt.

Two new pledges have joined Gamma Tau: Neville Rodgers and Martha Wahl.

This past week-end several alums returned including Lou Rotanelli, Gail Atchison Baker, Sue Hyde, Marie Decker Hall Anderson, and our last year's housemother, Miss Shirley Reid.

ALPHA TAU OMEGA

The members and pledges of Alpha Tau Omega wish to extend congratulations and best wishes for the future to Robert Turner, '59, and Phyllis Clark, Tri-Delt, '61, who were recently married. Also along the romantic line congratulations were extended to George Rossi, '58, and Gail McLean, '59, Tri-Delt, who became engaged over the Homecoming Weekend. George is now under Civilian contract with the Air Force in Utica, New York. Pinnings during the weekend included: Thomas O'Connor, '59, to Ellen Stone, a 1957 graduate from Alpha Chi Omega, and John Phillips, '59, to Bunny Hall, '60, Alpha Delta Pi.

At a buffet held on Saturday, the house had the honor of having President and Mrs. Fey as guests. Also present were Mr. and Mrs. Alan B. Angney of Arlington, Vt. Mr. Angney is province chief of Alpha Tau Omega Fraternity. Our alumni president and his wife, Mr. and Mrs. Malcolm M. Mackenzie of Burlington were also present.

Frank Reickert was recently initiated into brotherhood at a ceremony held at the house.

Between the dates of November 16 and 18, Mr. Norman E. Ritchie, assistant to the National Executive Secretary of ATO will be our guest.

Plans are now being made for our annual "Communist Party" to be held sometime this month. The Taus regard this party as one of the finest social functions on our calendar. Members and pledges of the ATO chapter at Middlebury College will be in attendance.

DELTA DELTA DELTA

The Tri Delts want to extend their very Best Wishes to Gail McLean, '60 who became engaged to George Rossi, II, an ATO of '58 over Homecoming. Gail was crowned the Sweetheart of ATO last year.

This past weekend, the Tri Delt pledges gave a luncheon for the Middlebury and local Tri Delts and their dates. Although this is an annual affair, the pledges adopted this as one of their projects for the year. Everyone had a wonderful time, and we would like to take this opportunity to thank all the pledges, especially Liz Elkavich, their social chairman.

DELTA PSI

The Delts annual father's week-end was again a great success. As host to thirty-five fathers, the Delts rented two busses and treated their fathers to the Norwich football game at Northfield.

In the Homecoming float contest we captured a well deserved tie for second place.

Two more Delts have been pinned. Al Godfrey pinned Linda Henderson from New York City and Miss Jane Williams of Burlington and Castleton State Teachers College is wearing the Delta Psi fraternity pin of Charles Eldred.

KAPPA SIGMA

Homecoming weekend was marked down as a very successful one at the Kappa Sigma House. An open house was held after Saturdays football game which was attended by many people. Prominent among those who attended were Lawrence "Whitey" Killick, Dean Kidder, and Wes Abel, our alumni advisor. Refreshments were served and a good time was had by all.

On Saturday night, the Kappa Sigs held a buffet dinner at the Park Cafe in which 120 people attended. After the dinner, a jazz orchestra provided music for dancing. The weekend was rounded out nicely by the fine work of Pete Lyford, Jack Babin, and Jerry Cassidy, three KS stars in Saturday's victorious football game.

PI BETA PHI

Hernando's Hideaway, otherwise known as the Pi Phi house, will feature spaghetti and (root) beer on Sunday, Nov. 16. One dollar will buy all that you can eat Italian style. Dinners will be served at 5:00, 6:00 and 7:00, and everyone is welcome.

Mrs. Kent Morgan, Grand Vice President of Pi Beta Phi, visited our UVM chapter earlier this week. A tea was given in her honor for all the sororities on campus Tuesday evening, and a pleasant social hour was enjoyed by all.

Congratulations are in order for Diane Morse, who was recently initiated into the Home Economics' honorary, Omicron Nu.

The Middlebury Pi Phis and their dates were entertained by the Vermont Pi Phis at a buffet luncheon before the big game on Saturday. Songs, good food and old friends started the weekend off in fine spirit.

SIGMA PHI EPSILON

Sig Ep enjoyed a great Homecoming week end especially with the winning of first place of their float. Special credit goes to the co-chairmen Paul Robinson and Edson Bigelow who spent many hours planning and working on the float. Special credit also goes to Peter Bennett who again brought the Sig Eps through to Victory by the use of his jeep.

It was good to see alumni back to the Sig Ep house. Alumni Charlie Backer, Ed Downing, John A. Burgess, Mike Zachilli, Mark Plotnik, John Wu, and Bob Mosca came back for Homecoming.

Bob Mosca, '58, pinned Martha Lawton, '61, a Pi Beta Phi. The Sig Eps serenaded them at the Sig Ep house after the Homecoming game.

Thursday, November 6, there was an exchange dinner with AEPhi. Everyone enjoyed the social gathering with Sig Eps neighbors.

THETA CHI

The Theta Chis enjoyed a successful parents and alumni Homecoming weekend this year. After the game there was a brief alumni meeting followed by a buffet which was attended by both parents and alumni.

From the Rensselaer Polytechnic, we learned that three fraternities on the R.P.I. campus were fined heavily for illegal rushing procedures. The fines were doled out because the three houses had "served FREE beer to the rushees." Now isn't that a shame. The poor boys had to drink free beer. I guess nothing would have happened if the fraternities had charged for the beer. But, to give it out for nothing could have caused another economic setback in the economy.

A KISS

I heard these very cute jokes last week and I thought I'd pass them on to you, so that you may enjoy them also. I must give credit for them to a lovely young lady from out-of-town.

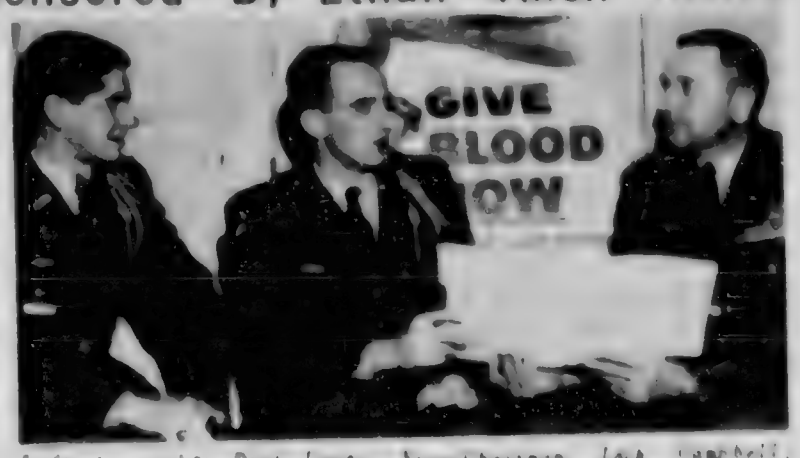
A kiss is a peculiar preposition. Of no use to no one, yet absolute bliss to two. The small boy gets it for nothing, the young man has to lie for it, and the old man has to buy it. The baby's right, the lover's privilege, and the hypocrite's mask. To a young girl, faith; to a married woman, hope; and to an old maid, charity.

Said a boy centipede to a girl centipede: "Give me a kiss."

"No," said the girl centipede to the boy centipede as she crossed her legs, "a hundred times no!"

So long for now.

Blood Drive Sponsored By Ethan Allen Rifles



The Ethan Allen Rifles are sponsoring their annual A... University Red Cross Blood drawing on Nov. 24. The drawing will be held from 10 a.m. - 4 p.m. in the Student Lounge in the Waterman Building.

Jack Campbell, chairman of the UVM blood drawing reminds students that unmarried minors (under 21) must have the written consent of their parents each time they wish to donate blood. This is a change since several years ago, one written consent was sufficient until the student reached 21.

Demands for blood continue at a very heavy rate. In recent weeks, Vt. and N.H. hospital patients have required more than 700 pints of blood weekly, in contrast to a 600 pt.-per-week average throughout the year. Blood donated through the Red Cross will save the life or speed the recovery of -- a father injured at work, -- a mother in childbirth, -- an infant needing a RH exchange transfusion, -- a patient in a VA Hospital, -- an accident victim, -- a member of your own family, -- or even you!

No Blood is ever wasted! None is ever sold! Offer a pint of your Blood today.

There is a representative in each campus housing unit who has minor release forms and pledge cards available. They are also available at the Information Office and both ROTC Headquarters offices. Anyone wishing to give should contact any representative before Nov. 17.

THE PROBLEM CORNER

Referring to last week's problem the minimum number of lots of tubes was 1184, and the minimum number of computers was 6667.

Correct solutions to this problem were submitted by Sally Camp, Prof. Philip M. Eldred, Allan Greenfield, John K. Holmes, Dean John S. Kent, Robert S. Poulios and Smith Tumsaroch.

Problem

A grocer receives a shipment of eggs and doughnuts. The eggs are packed in cartons each of which contains a dozen eggs, and the doughnuts are packed in bags each of which contains thirteen doughnuts. In checking the shipment the grocer notes that there are more cartons of eggs than bags of doughnuts, that is all there are 84 cartons and bags, and that the shipment contains fewer eggs than doughnuts. How many cartons of eggs and bags of doughnuts did he receive in this shipment?

Leave solutions to these problems at the office of Professor Schoonmaker, Room 341, Waterman, no later than Monday of the week following publication of the problem.

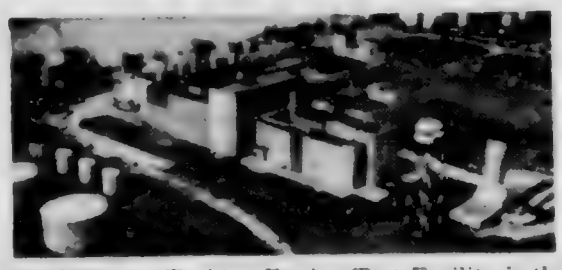
Dr. Bond Writes New Zoology Paper

By ROGER S. ZIMMERMAN

Dr. Charles F. Bond, associate professor of zoology at UVM, is the author of a paper in the latest issue of "Endocrinology". His paper deals with the volume of red cells and plasma during lactation-the process of the secretion and yielding of milk by the mammary gland. "Blood Volume Changes in the Lactating Rats", the formal title of his paper, reports the discovery of an increase in volume of blood of lactating rats, which he suggests constitutes a "lactation polycythemia". The function of this, Dr. Bond believes, may be to increase the oxygen-demands of lactation.

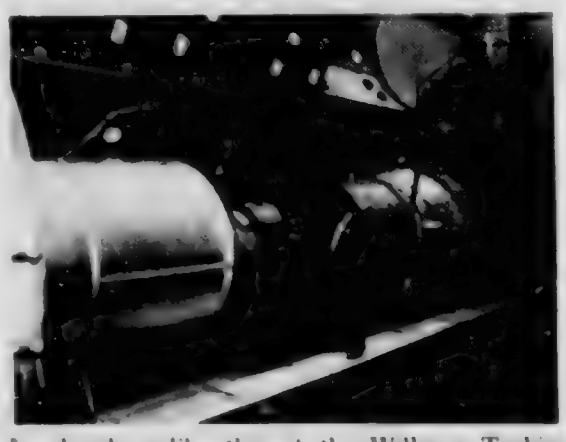
Dr. Bond's investigation in this particular field is only one aspect of a continuing in the relationship of hormones to volume of blood. In parallel to this inquiry, there has been a program carried on which deals with the relation of blood volume to a duck's ability to remain submerged in water for timed intervals.

Dr. Bond, a graduate of Bucknell and Cornell universities, began his initial interest in this program in 1945 while he was attending graduate school.



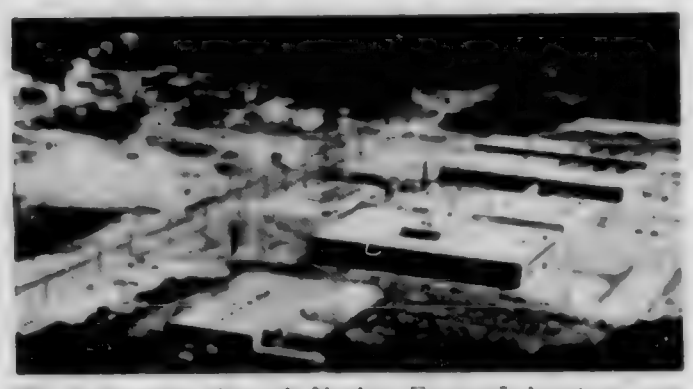
CONNECTICUT OPERATIONS

Unmatched Engineering Facilities for Developing Advanced Flight Propulsion Systems

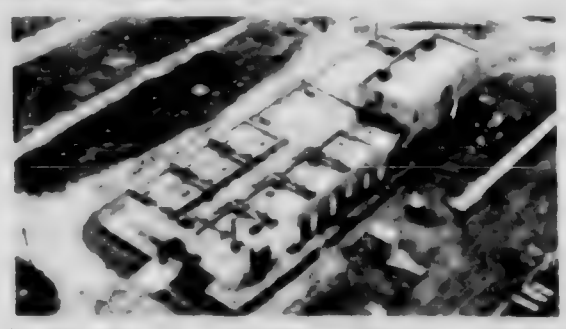


Operations at Pratt & Whitney Aircraft are essentially those of an engineering and development organization. As such, an engineering atmosphere dominates the work being done, much of which directly involves laboratory experimentation.

In the past three decades, expansion at Pratt & Whitney Aircraft has been almost tenfold. In recent years, greatest emphasis has been on extending engineering facilities to meet the needs of advanced research and development programs in flight propulsion.



Among the Connecticut P&WA facilities are many that are unequaled in the industry. Thus today, Pratt & Whitney Aircraft is better prepared than ever to continue development of the world's best aircraft powerplants . . . to probe the propulsion future . . . to build and test greatly advanced propulsion systems for coming generations of flight vehicles — in whatever form they take.



The Willgoos Turbine Engine Test Facility is the world's most extensive privately owned turbine development laboratory. Designed and built specifically to test full-scale experimental engines and components in environments simulating conditions at extreme altitudes and speeds, it is currently undergoing expansions that will greatly increase its capacity for development testing of the most advanced forms of air breathing systems

In chambers like this at the Willgoos Turbine Engine Test Facility full scale engines may be tested in environments which simulate conditions from sea level to 100,000 feet. Mach 3 conditions can also be simulated here

The Connecticut Aircraft Nuclear Engine Laboratory, operated by Pratt & Whitney Aircraft, is situated on a 1,200 acre tract near Middletown. The Laboratory was specially built for the development of nuclear flight propulsion systems

In the new Fuel Systems Laboratory engineers can minutely analyze the effects of extreme environmental conditions on components of fuel systems — conditions such as those encountered in advanced types of flight vehicles operating at high Mach numbers and high altitudes. Fuel for these tests can be supplied at any temperature from −65° F to +500° F houses in their social a[illegible] ties, and a fact that is [illegible] time overlooked, they rep[illegible] their houses in their acad[illegible] work. The loafer and the dilletante casts a dark shadow over his fraternity, while the student who is constantly striving to do his best enhances not only the reputation of his house, in general, but in particular, he enhances the reputation of the whole fraternity system.

The frater, who has made either Phi Beta Kappa, or the Dean's List, or even the brother who has raised his average considerably from that of the previous semester, and has been accepted into one of the Nation's many fine graduate schools, is an asset both to his house and to the fraternity system. Much of the adverse criticism about fraternities centers about scholarship. Many of these critics claim that once a boy enters a house, his academic scholarship drops in varying degrees. One seldom hears of the men who are a credit to their house in their academic work, from these critics. Only the men who flunked because of over-emphasis in house activities and de-emphasis in studies are used as examples for the abuse of the fraternity system. If there any better way for the fraternities to stifle this kind of criticism than by aiming their academic sights high and by proving once and for all that to enter a fraternity is to benefit and improve scholastically.

What the fraternities accomplish in social activities, in most cases, is remembered only within the confines of the UVM family, and that only temporarily. The reputation that our fraternities have academically has much wider scope. Indeed, our fraternity System's academic reputation is spreal all over the country and attains much greater permanance.

I am not suggesting that our fraternities should either de-emphasize or abolish their social activities. I only suggest that they strive to improve their academic reputation through a vigorous and beneficial scholarship program. In helping their members to help themselves scholastically, the fraternities will stand high in the eyes of the nation as worthwhile necessities of college life.

Sincerely,
John S. Hillman, '6

The Centaur, the student literary magazine, has assumed a precident-setting responsibility this year the necessity of developing four issues, a situation, which has existed only once before in the history of the magazine. What is comforting here is that apparently there will be a wealth of material, for materials presented for the forthcoming issue have far exceeded the amount of past years, and it is reasonable to think that this steady flow will continue. Along with this Centaur has received flattering support from the present Student Association, which shows that most of its acceptance problem has been solved, and, thankfully, not particularly with the aid of faculty pressure, but through a mutual agreement between students Centaur is growing.

In another area of communications, The University Players, with the aid of the Administration, Kake Walk Disposition Committee, Vending Machine Committee and Players Alums, now have a functioning and very adequate theater in Fleming Museum. The spiritual development of this will not be felt until the end of the first season, but the theater is bound to have a positive affect on the present lack of demand for theater by the students on campus.

In still another area of communications, and one of the most important, there are changes taking place . . . but (and this is the point of this column this week) they are not to be adequate enough. WRUV is being remodeled. There will be work done on some of the equipment in order to alleviate some of the disturbance caused by the "wired" system the station uses. There is talk of improving the coverage, mainly by buying a large transmitter which would be placed at the main Burlington power source and thus covering Greater Burlington; but this hardly seems reasonable to me. Isn't it time for the University, students and faculty alike, to be given the opportunity to operate a real, working, radio station!? not the present oversized juke box that WRUV now is. An FM transmitter would give adequate coverage of all students, benefit Burlington, The State Department of Education, The University and would clean up the present apathy among students toward the station. Acquiring an educational FM frequency would not be difficult. What would be difficult, I suspect, is acquiring the funds. . .but the new theater in Fleming belies the argument that getting the money just isn't possible.

WRUV-FM should be. It could out program and out service both of the two small, local stations, and it could also act as an additional source of programming which these stations can't and won't supply. I believe this is an intelligent idea, and so I'm asking intelligent people on campus to start doing something intelligent about it. Raising the money might even become a sublimation for off campus parties which have the Dean of Men and Women a little worried.

Miss Gebelle dancing Coppelia, the Doll, Miss Jarvis dancing Swanhilda, and Mr. Kreml dancing Franz were vital in creating communicative roles from a mechanical doll to two young lovers. Mr. Strate dancing Dr. Coppelius, the toymaker, gave an almost pantomime performance, enchanting to people of every age.

Act II, set in the interior of the house of Dr. Coppelius, was of a vastly different mood than the buoyant life of Act I. The mechanical dolls were danced with such fine craftsmanship that they seemed to have become truly mechanical, and Miss Jarvis was unforgettable in her tricking the toymaker into the belief that she was the doll, in order to recover her lover.

Act III, set once more in the out-of-doors, unites the lovers and brings the anti-social Dr. Coppelius back into the ranks of a joyful society. The ensuing divertissement, depicting the hours of dawn, prayer, and work, add welcome elements of a more nearly classical ballet and the entire production ends in an uplifting festival of the best fairy tale tradition.

It is unfortunate, however, that this fine craftsmanship could not have been a greater part of the Monday performance, for charming though the fairy tales are, fine dancing in the varied program of Monday evening would have been truly unforgettable. It must be pointed out, though, that in spite of the fact that the groups of dancers and the soloists alone performed admirably, there was more practice needed in the Pas de Deux. For example, because the soloists were not always sure of their combined movements, the slight imprecisions in their timing broke the illusion of the ballet in places.

The orchestra, under the direction of George Crum, performed beautifully during every dance. They formed an integral continuing foundation for the dance.

On Tuesday afternoon, the company performed Acts II and III of "Coppelia" in a special performance for children. It was well received and well attended, as were both the evening performances. This attendance indeed is encouraging for Canadian artists, worthy of recognition and praise, which they too often fail to receive in this country, deserve all the encouragement audiences can give them in their courageous attempt to establish Canadian institutions which will compete and excel among internationally acclaimed groups of artists.

Influence Of Religion On Art Examined

An interested and responsive audience attended a panel discussion last Thursday, during which the effect of religion on art was examined.

Dr Herbert C. McArthur, of the UVM English department, acted as moderator and introduced the first speaker, Prof. Alfred Whiting. Prof. Whiting, an anthropology prof. at Dartmouth College, started the discussion by putting forth the challange. "Does Man create his gods in his own image?" Asserting that this is true, Prof. Whiting pointed out that as the times change, so does one's conception of one's god change. Thus Man is creating his gods in his own image.

The second panelist, Prof. Albert Sadler of UVM, took up the challenge, taking Eastern religions and art as his illustrative material. Prof. Sadler used slides to show the artist's conception of Bhudda changed as Bhudda himself found the answer to the problem of meaning. While perplexed by this problem, Bhudda was pictured as troubled and obsessed. After discovering that life is purposeless Bhudda was pictured by artists as laughing and enlightened.

The introduction of the Bhuddaism also gave rise to new art forms. The vastness of the cosmos, the minuteness of man and the fierceness of self-discovery came to be the new topics for art. It was a shift from religious to non-religious subjects -- an unselfconscious self-expression.

Rev. Richard Leidberg, campus pastor for Protestant students, was the third speaker. Choosing Western religion and art as his topic, he told how during Baroque and Renaissance time there was a religious emphasis on art and architecture. However, today, the emphasis is on man and his objects. Slides of Picasso were used to illustrate today's art, while slides of Baroque architecture and paintings of the crucifiction were used to show art forms of the Renaissance period. Rev. Leidberg stated that he felt religious artists today, aside from Rouault, are no longer saying anything.

After Dr. McArthur summed up the discussion, the panel entertained questions from the audience.

Petronaci's third period tally put Vermont in front, 14-12. A Green and Gold fumble in the fourth period led to Hobart's 18-14 triumph.

Next on the list was another road trip to N.Y.--this time to Rochester, where a Homecoming crowd of 5,300 saw their well-drilled Yellowjackets crush the undermanned Catamounts, 46-0. Sitting out the game because of injuries were Petronaci, Bush and Hronek. The Cats traveled to Northfield on Oct. 25 for the state opener with Norwich. The Horsemen won the game, 16-12, but a new star was born in the person of substitute quarterback Pete Lyford, who threw UVM's two touchdown passes late in the final period. Lyford's first bullet hit Roy Greene on the Norwich thirty, the latter racing to paydirt. His second shot hit Greene again as the agile back whipped over the goal line. Coach Donnelly had found a new weapon.

The inspired gridders returned home to Centennial Field for the Homecoming clash with St. Lawrence University. The Cats whipped the Larries, 26-7. After the visitors had taken a 7-0 lead in the first quarter, Lyford And Co. started to move. Lyford hit Simonds for Vermont's initial TD of the day. With a little better than a minute remaining in the half, "The Man With The Golden Arm" rifled a pass to Cassidy in the end zone to give the Green and Gold a 12-6 halftime lead. Early in the fourth canto, Lyford connected with St. Peter for UVM's third TD. Cassidy hit St. Peter for the extra point, and Vermont led, 20-7. With time running out, Jack Babic plunged over from the three to give the cheerful Cats their final score of the afternoon.

Last Saturday, the fired-up Catamounts hosted powerful Middlebury College in the '58 finale. Paced by the great running of Roy Greene, the underdogs pounded out a smashing 20-6 triumph over the hapless Panthers. The victory gave Vermont a third of the mythical state crown. Down, 6-0, in the second quarter, Greene dashed over from the five to tie it up, and seconds later, put UVM ahead to stay with a flip to Cassidy for the bonus points. The ace Right Halfback scored his second TD in the third period via a ten yard run. The final Vermont tally was added by Greene in the final canto with a three yard plunge. To say that Middlebury was completely outclassed would be the understatement of the year. The Donnellymen concluded the season with a 2-4-1 mark, their best record since '55.

For the seven seniors on the team, Saturday's victory erased all unpleasant memories of an off year and vindicated all of the 1958 losses. I wish the best of luck to senior gridders, Capt. Phil Chalifoux, Frank Brown, Ira Effron, Bill Simonds, Maynard Bush, Ed Rockett and Jerry Mason.

To returning Catamounts, Lou Petronaci, Roy Greene, Pete Lyford, John Marino, Jack Babic, Bill Grey, Lou Hronek and the many others who gave their all in '58, it's WAIT TILL NEXT YEAR, and the high hopes of a better record.

Never have so many owed so much to so FEW!

Sports Questionnaire

by AL SHWADRAN

"Is the CYNIC critical enough in its sports coverage?

SGT. ADAMS — Military Department.

"In my opinion the CYNIC is definitely critical enough, but the question now arises, where is it getting them? Certainly it is not getting them a winning team. It would be critical if it would instill in the students a desire for a winning team."

MR. STEELE — Political Science Department.

"Yes, of course. Criticism should be constructive, and not based solely on rumor. Constructive criticism involves the stirring up of anger, and increasing school spirit among the student body. Constructive criticism, then, is the basis of critical analysis."

DR. GREGG — Chemistry Department.

"The sports coverage on the CYNIC is good, but the CYNIC is doing nothing to stir up a storm among the student body, as to the question: Why is everything so poor? (With particular reference to the football team). We must evaluate what we have. Then, and only then, are we critical. Things in previous years were bad too. If the CYNIC would stir up controversy and make students urge the "proper authorities" to formulate a solution, then the CYNIC will be critical in its coverage."

MR. NADWORNY — Economics.

"I believe the CYNIC offers interesting sports coverage. It is my belief that Paul's articles are critical. (With particular reference to the Johnson situation). A sports writer should stir up controversy, have imagination, and possess the capability to challenge others. This in my opinion is critical. In the analytical sense of the word the CYNIC is not critical enough. It does not give deep insight into the situation. Little is said of why we have a poor football team. If we would evaluate what we have, then this would constitute a critical analysis."

DEAN KIDDER — Arts & Sciences.

"The CYNIC is trying hard, and I believe it is sufficiently critical. On the whole the CYNIC is fair and objective, and is supporting a reasonable program."

BASKETBALL ————

In the very near future, December 2, to be exact, the intramural basketball season will start at the University of Vermont. Mr. Norm Strassburg of the Athletic Department, director of the program, has announced the arrangement of the various leagues. The following fraternities compose League A: SAE, Kappa Sig, Phi Sig, Delt Psi, Sig Phi Ep, Lambda Iota, and Acacia. League B consists of the following: Phi Delt, TEP, AEPi, Sig Nu, ATO, Sig Phi, and Theta Chi. Chittenden, Buckham, Wills, and Converse comprise League C. The season will end approximately just before our annual Kake Walk festivities begin. It will be interesting to see if SAE, last year's winner, can repeat its past performance. The gym is now available for anybody desiring to practice. See you on the court! MAY THE BEST TEAM WIN!

BOWLING ————

The intramural bowling league will probably open about the same time as the basketball tournament. The organization of the leagues will be decided upon very shortly. Mr. Norm Strassburg is also the director of the bowling program.

Faculty Ties Greeks, 12-12

by LARRY ALBERT

Last Friday, the Faculty football team tied the Fraternity All Stars, 12-12, in a game that wasn't decided until the last minute of the ball game. Playing for the faculty were such noted athletes as President Fey, Professor Teal, Captain Johns, and Professors Simon, Steele, Cochran, Potash, Bogorad and Gould. The "Faculty All-Stars" were coached by Professors Teal and Gould.

The "Fraternity All-Stars" were led by Tony Krovo and John Austin of Sigma Nu. Also appearing on the squad were Bill Hartigan of Delta Psi, Jim Goyette of Kappa Sigma, Dick Spodek of Tau Epsilon Phi, and Dave Klein of Phi Sigma Delta.

During the first quarter both teams played good defensive ball with no score for either side. The defensive stalwarts for the faculty were Morris Simon and Milt Potash, while standing out for the fraternities were Jim Goyette and Dave Klein. Early in the second quarter the faculty opened up the scoring on a twenty yard pass play from Johns to Bogorad. There was no further scoring during the first half.

The "Fraternity All-Stars" came back strong in the second half. They scored two quick touchdowns to take a 12-6 lead in the third quarter. The first touchdown came on a forty yard pass play, from Klein to track star, Dick Spodek. The second TD went on a pass from Krovo to Klein who lateraled to Austin, scoring on a 25 yard run.

The fourth quarter saw a 30 yard pass from grad student Tom Tierney to John Teal. On the next play Tierney threw the tying touchdown pass to grad student Chris Christie. The game ended in a 12-12 deadlock.

HERB HEIN'S FOOTBALL FORECAST

This football season was one of the most exciting and unpredictable seasons in a long time. On Saturday, the season swings into its last big day of activity, and therefore, this will be my last week of football picks. The winner of this week's contest will be announced in "Coop's Hoop", the basketball column that takes over in the next issue of the CYNIC. Ken Klein of 275 So. Willard St. was the winner of this week's contest with seven correct answers. I had seven right, two wrong, and one tie. Up until this week I have picked thirty contests, and out of these thirty predictions, twenty were right, seven were wrong, and three were ties. This week, along with my picks, I will attempt to predict which teams will go to the various bowls around the country on New Year's Day.

BOWL GAMES

ROSE BOWL - Iowa (6-0-1) has just about clinched a bid to the Rose Bowl as the Big Ten representative. Their Pacific Coast opponent will either be the California Golden Bears or Washington State.

COTTON BOWL - I think that Rice will be the Southwestern representative although Texas Christian University still has a chance of going, provided it can get through its tough schedule. The opposing team will probably be at large choice, most likely Pittsburgh, Syracuse, or Army (if permitted to go).

SUGAR BOWL - Louisiana State University will definitely be the host team in the New Orleans' Classic. Its opponent will probably be another at large representative, most likely the Eastern team not picked to go to the Cotton Bowl.

ORANGE BOWL - The Oklahoma Sooners, if they can get by Missouri next week, will appear once again in the Orange Bowl located in Miami, Florida. If it is not Oklahoma, then Missouri will represent the Big Eight Conference, on New Year's Day. The opposition will come from the Atlantic Coast Conference in either Clemson or North Carolina.

Picks for this week:

NORTHWESTERN-PURDUE - This one is going to be a dilly of a game. Both these teams are very good and well-balanced. I've favored both clubs in the past few weeks, but this time I'll go with Purdue as it is a hot football team. PURDUE

S.M.U.-BAYLOR - The Mustangs are riding high after a slow start. They still have a slight chance to win the Southwest Conference Championship, and weakened Baylor isn't much of a roadblock. S.M.U.

IOWA-OHIO STATE - The Hawkeyes have clinched the Big Ten title and will probably go to the Rose Bowl. The Buckeyes blew a 14-10 lead to Purdue last week and this week they'll really have their hands full with a powerful Iowa team. IOWA

CORNELL-DARTMOUTH - This game could decide the Ivy League Title. This is a very hard game to pick as both teams have about the same potential. However, I'll go with Cornell in a real close one over Dartmouth. CORNELL

AMHERST-WILLIAMS - This contest will decide the winner of the Little Three. Each team has lost only one game and has won six, with Williams winning its last six in a row. This too will be a close game and can go either way. AMHERST

Other games:

ARMY over VILLANOVA
NAVY over GEORGE WASHINGTON
AUBURN over GEORGIA
OKLAHOMA over MISSOURI
WISCONSIN over ILLINOIS

Gridders Pound Panthers In Finale, 20-6 Share State Crown; Greene Scores 3 Times

Catamount Clippings

By Paul Stanton

GONE WITH THE WIND

The 1958 University of Vermont gridiron season has come to a close. The seniors have played their last game, while the sophs, juniors, and freshmen look forward to next year's encounters. Let's look back for a brief moment at this past season and recall some of the exciting moments, as well as the disappointing ones.

First stop on the schedule was New London, Connecticut, home of the United States Coast Guard Academy, where the Catamounts fought the determined Cadets to a 30-30 deadlock, after leading by 30-14 at halftime. Lou Petronaci scored UVM's first TD of the day. Bob Flance raced off tackle for the two extra points and Vermont led, 8-0. Still in the first period, Flance hit Greene from the five. Petronaci cut off left end for two more digits to give the Donnellymen a 16-0 bulge. After a Cadet touchdown, Roy Greene took the kick-off and raced 90 yards for the third Green and Gold TD of the game. After Petronaci had garnered the two points, the Cadets hit paydirt before the half ended. After a Cadet safety, the hosts tallied again to tie it up.

One week later, the Maine Bears invaded Centennial Field for the State Day tilt, and swept the Vermonters, 26-0. UVM's lone bright spot of the afternoon proved to be Lou Petronaci, who was in on almost every tackle, knocking down passes, throwing key blocks---stopping possibly twenty more Maine points. The Cats traveled to Geneva, N.Y., for a battle with powerful Hobart College. A costly UVM fumble late in the fourth canto handed the game to the hosts, 18-14. A Flance-Greene pass put Vermont into an early lead. Petronaci swept end for the twin-pointer and UVM led, 8-0. Two quick Hobart touchdowns in the second stanza sent the hosts ahead, 12-8.

Cats Display Great Team Effort; End Season With 2-4-1 Record

by "THE BARON"

The place was Centennial Field in Burlington, Vermont, where 6,500 spirited football fans saw college football at its best, last Saturday.

Our Catamounts scored a surprising 20-6 upset victory over the Panthers of Middlebury. This writer saw many standouts in the Cats' play, but the victory was a definite team effort. A tribute must also be payed to Coach Ed Donnelly for the brilliant Vermont recovery in the last half of the season. Along with its win, Vermont gained a three way tie for the state title with Norwich and Middlebury.

From the very beginning, the questions before Vermont were whether they could contain Triple Threat Pete Aldrich, and the hard running fullback Dick Atkinson. The answer to the problem was our own Roy Greene who scored all three TDs for Vermont and the "Hat-Trick" and Bill Simonds who was a stalwart on both offense and defense.

Vermont after receiving the opening kickoff, was stopped and the Panthers took over on hosts' 45 yd. line. Middlebury used a single wing and their powerful buck lateral series on offense. The first quarter saw most of the play in the Vermont territory, but still there was no scoring. In the second quarter, sparked personally by Aldrich, the Panthers drove down to the Vermont 8 yd. line. Middlebury at this point lost the services of Aldrich for the afternoon as he was hit hard by Vermont secondary. Dick Atkinson took command at this point and bulled 6 yds. and a TD. The Vermont forward wall held on the attempt for the extra point. Score: Middlebury 6, Vermont 0.

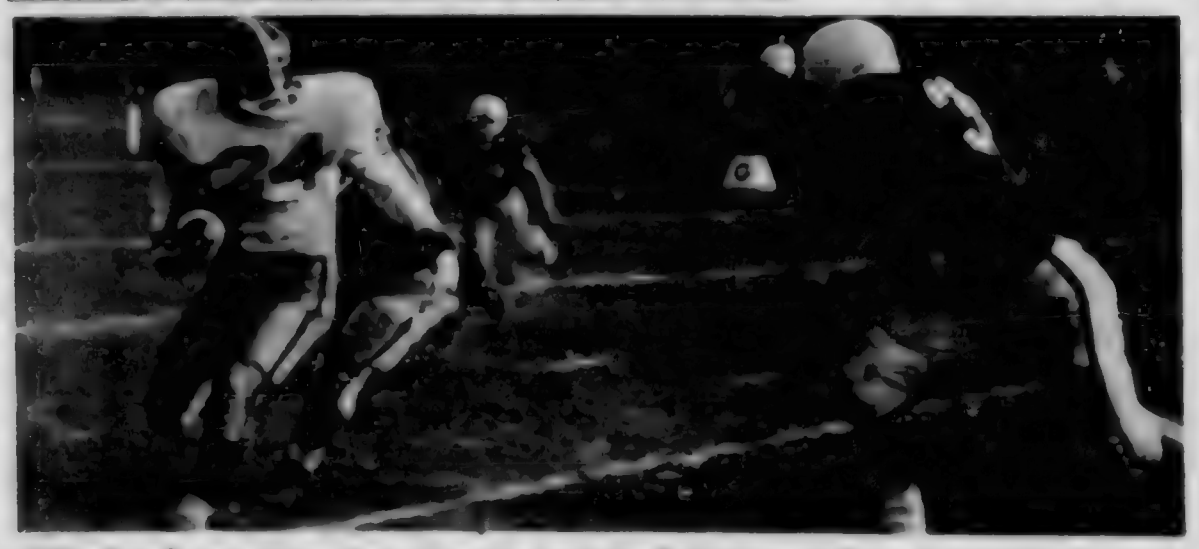
This was in actuality the end of the Panthers' offense for the afternoon. Vermont, meanwhile, looked as if it was just starting the season, sparked by Greene and Simonds' running, Lyford's aerials, and a charged up forward wall. It became obvious that they weren't to be stopped. It was 8 minutes to the half and the Cats found themselves on their own 25 yd. line. The next 3 minutes saw a 75 yd. march to paydirt for the Green and Gold.

Cassidy, who replaced the injured halfback Lou Petronaci, ran the end for 12 yds.; Pete, "the Arm" Lyford, then hit Greene up the middle, and Simonds in the flat for a first down deep in Middlebury territory. A 15 yd. penalty delayed the march, but Lyford had his own ideas, as he hit end Bill Grey for 35 yds. to the Panther 4. Roy Greene then took a handoff and swiveled over the goal line. Greene hit on an option pass to Cassidy for two points. Score: Vermont 8, Middlebury 6.

Middlebury took over with 2 minutes remaining in the half. They were stopped cold, however, as Cassidy intercepted a pass at the gun.

Vermont kicked to Middlebury starting the second half. Bill Atkinson went to work and sparked a drive down to the Vermont 18 yd. line. The standout play was a 35 yd. run by Atkinson. The Vermont line held at the 18 and the Panthers attempted a field goal but it fell short.

Vermont took over on its ow 20 and went 80 yds. to score It took just eight plays to ac complish the march. It wa sparked by a Simonds romp fo 20 yds., Greene around end fo 10, a Lyford aerial for 10, an finally a Greene plunge for 1 yds. and his second TD. Th attempt for the extra point faile Score: Vermont 14, Middlebury



Stu St. Peter kicked throug the end zone and Middlebur found themselves on their ow 20 yd. line. The Vermont lin play became stronger and pushe back the Panthers to the 4 y line. Middlebury kicked out third down to their own 40 y line. Vermont again put on sustained drive for paydir Simonds knifed for 9 yds. a Lyford, on the "keeper", dro inside the Middlebury 30. Gree ran the end for 12 yds. and an ther first down on the 20. Lyfo took to the air and hit Cassi on the Panther 8 yd. line. R Greene on a cutback went ov for the score and his third the afternoon. Vermont miss the extra point. Score: Ver mont 20, Middlebury 6. Th ended the scoring for the afte noon.

HIGHLIGHTS

Lyford continued to sparkle quarterback by hitting for ten twenty-one completions. Vermont blocking on the line a downfield was hard and sure. salute to the forward wall Hronek, Marino, Eccles Chalifoux and Mason is ca for.

The graduation of Cap Phil Chalifoux will be a g loss to the Cats next year, b majority of the starting elev will return.

Another outstanding factor this Saturday's game, in t writer's opinion, was the standing spirit shown by Vermont rooters. This al aids a winning effort.

CONTINUED ABUSES WILL RESULT IN LIBRARY RESTRICTIONS

Mr. Haviland, Director of Billings Library, shows empty space to a UVM student. The missing book was to be used as a reference. This is typical of the many problems facing the library. (Photo by H.B. Eldred, AVS)

Pat Harriman, Chief Justice of the Student Court, held a meeting of all the student leaders of the various organizations Thursday, November 13, to discuss the present library problem in regard to "missing books"

In addition to the student leaders, a few of UVM's administrators were present. They included Dean Rowell, Dean Harris, and Dean Clifford. The problem as stated by Mr. Haviland, Director of the Library, is that the students and faculty members, aware or unaware, take books without first checking them out at the circulation desk. The result of actions such as this has led to a large amount of books listed in the Missing Record. Sometimes the books are returned, sometimes they are not.

During a recent inventory, it was found that out of a 56 volume collection, 32 volumes are left unaccounted for. Also, popular items on the missing record list are the Dictionary of National Biography, various volumes of the Encyclopedia of World History, and Shipley's Guide to Great Plays.

Another problem cited at this meeting was the mutilating of the periodicals by cutting out articles. Not only does the library staff find this a chronic problem, but students are inclined to walk out of the library with valuable books and periodicals under their arm.

52 Schools To Participate In Annual Debate Tournament

by DAVE SCHULTZ

Resolved: That the Further Development of Nuclear Weapons Should be prohibited by International Agreement. This is the 1958-59 national collegiate debate topic. This Friday the University of Vermont will hold its thirteenth annual debate tournament. As UVM is rated as one of the country's top squads the response to this tournament has been overwhelming from other schools. To date fifty-two colleges, including such schools as West Point, Boston University, New York University, Rutgers and McGill have accepted invitations to attend this tournament.

There will be five rounds of debating: two Friday night; and three on Saturday. Following the rough debating grind there will be a banquet Saturday evening for all of the debaters.

So far this season the affirmative teams have presented four basic evils in the present system. They are:

Nuclear testing causes radiation to fall and thereby endangers the lives of the people of the world. 2. Small countries, "have nots", such as Sweden, France, and East Germany, will be able to obtain nuclear weapons in the near future and can be considered as agressor countries. 3. If the U.S. continues its bomb testing program, she will lose all chance of gaining further supporters in the cold war. 4. The nuclear weapons countries are taxing their people too heavily by producing large stockpiles of weapons.

There has been only one basic plan suggested thus far. That plan is to set up 180 seismic detecting stations throughout the world to make sure that no country can cheat. It has been suggested that a United Nations team survey the sites, and that all the countries of the world sign a mutual agreement for banning further testing. The penalty to be set up in case of violation would be to revert to the present system.

The negative team's job is to prove that there is no need for such a plan, and that there will be no benefits derived from the proposed plan. The negative's objections are so great that we dare not adopt the proposed affirmative plan.

Comprising a team is a set of affirmative and a set of negative debaters from one school. Listening to each debate is a judge who decides who the winner will be. The judge, as a rule, will give a critique after each round to help the debaters for further competition. There is also a timer in attendance at the debate. The timer's job is to welcome the opposing schools, introducing the debaters to each other, and to keep time in each debate. Each debater is allowed one ten-minute constructive speech and a five-minute rebuttal. If a debater exceeds his time limit the judge can penalize him.

Here at UVM there are forty members of the debate team. There are about sixteen varsity debaters, and twenty-four novice (people with less than a semester's experience behind them) debaters. Therefore there are seperate divisions set up for these two classes of debaters.

Preparations have been going on many weeks already. Besides the debaters, there will be about one hundred timekeepers as well as many men who will be in charge of supplying adequate transportation from building to building, as the tournament will be held in various buildings around campus. Everyone is invited to listen to the debaters.

UVM Players To Present "Brigadoon" December 3-6

by DOROTHY DeCECIO

"Brigadoon" a Scottish musical fantasy, will be presented as the premiere production in the new UVM Arena Theatre, on December 3, 4, 5, 6, at 8:30 P.M. Produced by the University Players and directed by Greg Falls, the show, which was a Broadway hit and later a successful motion picture, tells the tale of an 18th century village which comes into being only one day each century. Ruben Lamarque plays Tommy Albright, a contemporary American who falls in love with Fiona MacLaren, a Scot lass, who is portrayed by Carole Demas. The show also features students Barry Lessinger, Jane Cushman, Mike Solby, Andy Bailey and Bob Premier.

The University Orchestra, composed of students, faculty, staff, and townspeople, conducted by Prof. Ippocrates Papoutsakis, will play the entire orchestrated score. Also featured are the Dance Workshop, choreography by Marilyn Nana, and the Univer-

Kake Walk Directors Plunge Into Planning Of Winter Weekend

Preparations for Kake Walk are in the capable hands of [illegible] Dick Marron, Wales Newell, Al Overton, and Carol Morin, secretary. Photo by H.B. Eldred, A[illegible]

With three months left until the first night of Kake Walk many UVM students have only scattered and brief thoughts of the mid-winter holiday.

This is not the story for three busy seniors who are finding it difficult to get the winter carnival off their minds. These three men, the Directors of the sixty-second annual Kake Walk are Wales Newell, a member of Sigma Alpha Epsilon from Woodbury, Connecticut, Richard Marron of Tau Epsilon Phi, a resident of Albany, New York, and Al Overton, a member of Phi Delta Theta from Manchester, Vermont.

Already several changes have been made for the forthcoming event, among them a possible solution to the alumni ticket situation. Aiding the Directors in all aspects are the advisors Professor Fred Marston, and assistant UVM treasurer Mr. George Clerkin and, of course, their hard-working secretary Carol Morin, a resident of Kappa Alpha Theta Sorority and a member c of Middlebury, Vermont.

Also behind the scenes are the newly appointed Assistant Kake Walk Directors, Larry Brown of Delta Psi, Joe Dye of Sigma Nu, Jim MacAuliffe of Kappa Sigma and Fred Mandell of Phi Sigma Delta.

With twelve short weeks to go the activities in the Kake Walk office will be ever increasing, building up to the big first night and that climactic minute when the first team of walkers step down the floor to the tune of "Cotton Babes."

Garner Stars As "Blue Series" Attraction

by CONNIE EGNER

[illegible] Garner, top jazz pianist, will be featured Tuesday, December 2, in a "Blue Lane Series" Concert. Appearing with him will be Edward Calhoun, bass viol, and Kelly Martin, percussion. Garner comes to Burlington between sell-out performances in Chicago and Washington. He has a Carnegie Hall date in January.

Garner is one of the world's most original pianists, and also he is self-taught. His style is marked by a unique gift of improvisation and spontaneity of feeling. These combine as he extemporizes an entire program, in close interplay with accompanists and audience. His ability to create and sustain improvisations for an entire program is almost without parallel on the concert stage.

Garner made his solo concert debut in 1950, and last year toured Europe. Outstanding among the awards he received is the Grand Prix de D[illegible] from the French Academy of Arts.

A composer as well as pianist, this 'jazz' man has more than a hundred compositions to his credit. Some of the best known include "Dreamy", "Other Voices", "Play Play Play", and "Gaslight". Perhaps the most famous of all is "Concert By The Sea", recorded during an actual concert performance, and, incidentally, Columbia's top selling instrumental album for two years.

Undoubtedly, there will be a full house--eager, early, and anticipating the unique musical personality of the 'jazz' man. The program, though unannounced, will be in three parts, and will probably include selections from the more well-known of his recorded music.

"Lil Abner" Scheduled For Dec. 10 On "Red Series"

by CONNIE EGNER

In the "Red Lane Series" on December 10 there will be an 'unusual offering, this will be so unusual that the walls and halls of Memorial Auditorium will echo the shrieks of Daisy Mae, on none other than Sadie Hawkins Day. For Lil Abner has made the trek from Broadway to Burlington.

With the complete sets, orchestra and original materials, Lee Guber, Frank Ford and Shelly Gross will present a National Company of Lil Abner in collaboration with Norman Panama, Melvin Frank and Michael Kidd, producers of the original musical. Lawrence Kasha directs the company, with the choreography by George and Christy Reeder.

Those acquainted with Al Capp's comic strip will need no introduction to the characters (literally) in the cast. They are: Marryin' Sam, Dean Dittman; Daisy Mae, Patricia Northrup; Pally, Don Potter; Mammy Yokum, Charlotte Nolan; Lil Abner, Robert Kaye, Stupefyin' Jones, Ginny Gan, Lonesome Polecat, Bob Becker; Earthquake McGoon, Peter Costanza, Appassionata von Climax, Norma Kessler.

There is a Jubilation in the play, in actuality and in spirit, and it's genuinely natural, as pure as "corn-pone." The music is so inseparable from the story of Dogpatch, that the folly of it all is entirely persuasive. "If I had my druthers," I'd see it twice more.

The comedy is the long, lively pursuit of Lil Abner by Daisy Mae. She is thwarted, foiled, held back, and that only puts wings on her running shoes.

The evening promises to be a gay one, right to "von Climax." May it be as memorable for Burlington as it was for "BB"--Bright B'way.

Campaign For Missing Library Books Begins

year, the library reports that books are brought back by house mothers, janitors and even taxi drivers. This points up to the indifferent attitude of the student's part for his library and his university.

It was also pointed out at the meeting that the proposed new library to be built behind Morrill Hall, will probably try to revise their book-lending policy as to counteract this problem we are faced with today. At present, the plans for the new library call for open stacks available to all students. However, the plan for closing the stacks is not out of consideration, if the problem persists.

The cost of replacing the books so far has reached an astounding figure of $900 to $1200 per year. Mr. Haviland reports that each summer an inventory is taken, and as of last summer, they have reached the two-thirds mark of our total library collection. After completion of this inventory, which is a goal this summer, the library will be able to determine exactly what is missing.

It was also discussed at this meeting to have a campaign to keep students aware of the problem. The measures for implementing this campaign have not yet been decided upon, however it will begin in the near future. The minority of the students are responsible for this misdemeanor and it is a moral problem to be dealt with by one's own conscience. If the answer is to restrict the library privileges, then it will be considered. It was also suggested that there be library representatives in the fraternities, sororities and dorms.

The meeting certainly brought the problem to full view, however the one thing that remains is to see a quick remedy.

Special Rates Offered By Burlington Theater Club

In addition to the well known presentations of the University Players, UVM students may not all be aware of another outlet for their dramatic interests right in their own back yard.

We speak of the Burlington Theater Club, Inc., which this month begins its 35th season of unusually fine semi-professional offerings with "Monique", a two-act drama to be given Monday and Tuesday, November 24 and 25 at 8:30 P.M. in the Taft School Auditorium.

It is with a kind of brotherly affection that we recommend this interesting organization to you since it holds all its rehearsal and business meetings in the so-called University Barn behind the Infirmary. (You might be interested in what a stage crew can accomplish in the way of clever barn renovation).

Mrs. Ann Middlebrook, the Club's first woman president, cordially invites all students to take advantage of the low-cost subscription fee. Only $2.50 (special student rate) for a season's subscription of three plays. There is no obligation whatsoever for personal participation if you buy such a subscription, though students are welcome to try out for plays or take part in the Club's various departments.

Subscriptions may be purchased at Taft School the night of the play or at Middlebrook's Store, 190 College Street.

Directing "Monique", a combination of mystery, suspense and the supernatural, is Mrs. Gregory Falls, wife of UVM's Associate Professor of Speech. Also of University origin is Dave Montague in a lead male part. He's a 1958 graduate, and talented performer with the University Players. Finally Mrs. A.E. Arkin, Head Resident at Phi Sigma Delta, takes the role of a French maid. Good luck to students and residents in the Burlington Theater Club!

"Madame Butterfly" Thrills Audience With Balanced Opera

On Monday evening, November 17, an extremely enthusiastic Lane Series audience saw the New York City Opera Company's production of "Madame Butterfly" by Giacomo Puccini. As had been expected in view of previous operatic performances, the orchestra often overpowered the soloists because of its position at floor level. However, under Mr. Callinicos's direction, the music was of excellent quality and augmented the tensions of the plot.

When the music and voices were in balanced volume, the opera reached its highpoints, catching the audience in both the story and the beauty of sound. The love duet at the end of Act One and Butterfly's outbursts of joy and sadness during Act Two became especially effective. The singles, most of all Misses Carront and Safaty, not only communicated music, but also the tragedy of the situation, to which the audience responded with great favor. These positive aspects make doubly regretable and ungraceful movements of some of the minor characters, especially in Act One, and the make-up, which was not always convincing. These things broke part of the mood of the work, as did the stage set, which was an insult to oriental art.

It was, however, encouraging to see Butterfly convincingly portrayed as a young girl and the production as a whole made one wish for opera in English so that even more of the work's beauty could be appreciated.

On Your Honor

This issue is dedicated to our present library and the future supplement. The greatest problem in both libraries is the question of open versus closed stacks.

Billings Library has an open stack system: everyone is allowed to select his own book as all the books and periodicals are out in the open. A closed stack system is one where the shelves are sealed to the students and only the librarians have access to them. There is another system, an incorporation of both ideas whereby students receive permission to enter the closed stacks.

Do we appreciate our open stack system? Apparently not, since books and periodicals are stolen or mutilated. This system is beneficial because it enables a student to go to the shelves and choose a book. Also he may find another book next to it which might be more useful. Under a closed system, this opportunity is lost. The University plans an open stack system for its new library, but if more books are stolen and more periodicals damaged, then the University will probably change its mind.

MORALS AND ETHICS

Are books stolen because someone derives enjoyment from stealing or do students feel they can get ahead of their class by taking reference books. Sometimes there is one reference book for approximately eighteen students, and many students believe in "cut-throat play". They steal to get a better mark than their colleagues. These questions are hard to answer because each deals with an ethical or moral concept which, apparently, is regarded differently by each individual.

MILITARY BALL SIGN

Stealing does not go on just in our library. The Military Ball sign, which was placed between two trees opposite Waterman, was stolen. Money, time, and effort were lost when the big red sign was taken. This is not the only incident which might be mentioned. Perhaps we need another system.

Theoretically we have an honor system. Anything else would be an insult, since we are supposed to be mature. But there are some of us who are not, apparently. Sure, you pay all kinds of fees to this school, but this does not give you the right to steal things in return. You hurt yourself as well as the school by this sort of conduct. Stop to think ---- suppose it was your books that were stolen?

HIERACHY OF SA

Elections are over and the situation was handled as well as possible by the committee, who did their best with what they knew. Someone ought to tell the hierachy of SA about helping to clarify jobs for its committees. This confusion hurt many seniors who never knew positions were open for elections.

Faculty Orders

Dear faculty member:

The Ariel staff is proceeding in their plans for the 1959 Ariel. We regret that last year neither the faculty nor the departments received books since our budget did not allow for such distribution. The same circumstance faces us this year, as we have been appropriated money enough for distribution to Seniors alone.

Many departments have expressed need for an Ariel as a reference book. The 1959 Ariel may be ordered in advance by any faculty member or department at $4.00 per copy. Since the number of books to be published must be determined now, November 20 has been set as the deadline for ordering.

There will be an Ariel staff member in the Ariel Office, Rm. 212 Waterman, November 18 and 19 from 2.00 to 4.00 p.m. to take your orders.

Sincerely,
Sarah Godfrey

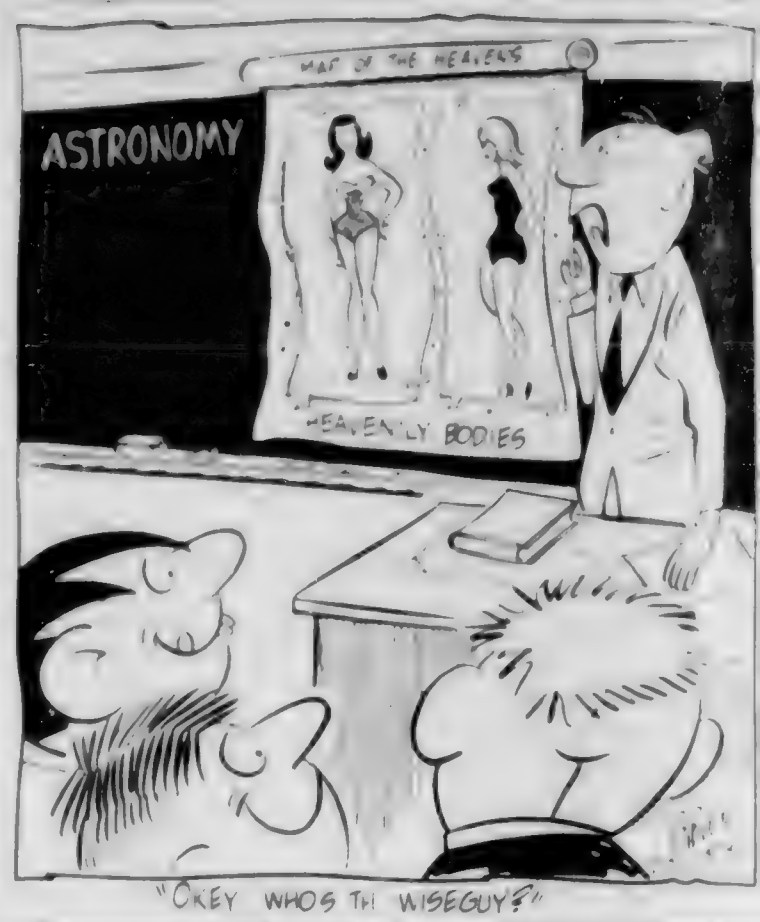
Intrigued

I was intrigued by the treatment accorded in the CYNIC, October 19, to the announcement of a $205 tuition increase for out-of-state students at the University of Vermont.

Perhaps a little re-definition of your editorial policy is in order. Indeed, there is no "perhaps" about it.

Are you fully aware of the desperate financial situation facing our colleges and universities today? Do you have firmly in hand the exact percentage of the cost of a UVM education paid for by the out-of-state student? Are you aware of the economic plight of the college professor, Ph.D. in hand (average cost of a year of graduate school--$2,000. Average time to complete Ph.D., including dissertation -- 4 years), in comparison, for example, with the electricians who wired the buildings in your new Redstone Campus?



Before you have any more front-page editorials on this subject, you should know these facts. Before you damage not only the morale of your student body, but the cause of a square economic deal for our underpaid, overworked college educators, you should have a fuller conception of what exactly you are going to get for you $1040.

The fact is that you probably have been getting close to $1500 worth of education for your $835 heretofore demanded. The mathematics? Of the $1900 now estimated by the financial authorities of Middlebury College to be the cost of a year's study at Middlebury, the student pays $950. State universities do not customarily receive anywhere near the financial support from gifts and grants that private colleges such as Middlebury do. Hence the gap between the cost of a UVM education and the per-student grant figure is going to be greater than it is here. Thus, out-of-staters must feel the difference most acutely.

Admittedly such a large increase is going to wreak hardship on many University students. But those, unfortunately, are the breaks of the educational ball game. If the degree which the students of the University hope to receive is to be worth anything in terms of quality of instruction, something is going to have to give.

Highlights

By Edson Darer

Hello there. It seems that the big news is still t high cost of education. All over the country, the shout of students, as ourselves, are for lower tuition rates It has swept the country like a fire running wild, a up, up, up, goes the tuition, room and board rates a universities and colleges. But, of course, the adminis trations have figured out ways to alleviate the burden from the immediate scene. For instance, Harvard Colle reports some 1,700 of 4,500 students paying tuition room and board in monthly installments. Grinnell l announced financial assistance programs to bring in creasing cost of college education within the range o the ordinary family budget. In addition to scholarshi and other aid, the University will offer parents optio of paying college expenses in monthly installments ove as long as seven to eight years. I'd like to know, wha they consider an ordinary family?

• • • • • •

IN THE LAND OF CAT-A-GORIC-ALLEY, which is the land of cats, there was once a very young bunch of cats who were tres-cool. They knew they were tres-cool and they were brought up, mainly, on milk, some of them on cream, and blessed fish, like all little cats should be, chopped up with a certain amount of ruffage. The trouble was that these cats knew they were cool, and they were because they were young, and like that. Soon, and they were from all over Cat-a-goric-alley; everywhere, man . . . soon these cats really got together in a place called school and they went, and like that, they graduated into a high place of learning, and they went, and they were shocked, at first, but gradually they really began to swing, and, man, I mean swing!

CAT-A-LACS

Now there are all sorts of schools for cats, and at this school, as well as others, one of the main sources of entertainment, edification, sublimation, and the general masochistic trend was lobster eating, and, man, these young, cool*(tres-cool)*cats really swung when they ate lobster, but the thing was, and that was this, man, that they didn't have much more taste for lobster than did those at other schools. Now, lobster, in case you don't know man, is not good in quantities, just like we should all "help to stamp out Cat-a-lacs;" the "golden mean," is the rule and like that, but there were a few of these cool cats who couldn't help themselves and once and again they goofed, because they were prone to lobster (and because of, like) and like that, see?

CAT-A-TONIC

There was also a rule, man, at this school, that said, like the Cat-a-goric-alley (the state) law, that all cats of under 21 white hairs couldn't eat lobster, and that they could only eat lobster in public lobster-serving places, which meant that all the tres-cool cats had to have 21 white hairs before eating lobster legally. Well, man, you know, you just know, how cats like lobster, and especially cool cats, so they got it and they ate it at club-like parties, and like that and all the people in charge of the rule sort of like turned their heads and winked like. They did this after the great war between the warring powers (to the enemy this meant a cat-astrophy because they nearly won) when all the tres-tres-cool cats, who were vetran-arians, came back into school, and they were older, like, and so the winking and the saying nothing went on and nobody even said meow about all the lobster eating.

CAT-A-COMBS

Occasionally one of the younger(under 21 white hairs) tres-cool cats would eat too many lobsters, and occasionally such a cat would stumble into the wrong cat-a-combs (diggings, dormatory or pad, man). Well soon, this having happened too, too often, there came along this bunch of "Trusty" cats, and they scratched up the old ruling, and made it new. Then they took on a huge building program and surrounded the campus with a thing that looked like a plastic bubble and this was a dehydrator and so the campus was dry, and this happened after an especially wet weekend and the dehydrator could smell lobster anywhere . . . supposedly.

CAT NIP AND CAT-A-RACKS

Well, what happened was that when they returned the next year, with the big plastic dehydrator which could

Criticized

"It is not a play, it is a mission." Thus spoke Otto Frank upon the opening of The Diary of Anne Frank in Germany. "In spite of everything, I still believe that people are really good at heart." Thus spoke a young Jewish girl facing death. Yet it was challenged in the November 13th issue of the VERMONT CYNIC by Mr. Peter Schoffstall that the Diary of Anne Frank lacks depth, shocking power, psychology, and "guts". The critic wondered what caused a "hullabaloo" about this play and what about it catapulted Anne Frank into prominence as a German national heroine.

What those of us saw on the night of November 7th, was the story of a family, of people; of a girl, who even though immersed in the whirlpool of a European tragedy, reaffirms her faith in man. Mr. Schoffstall critisized a lack of depth in the Diary of Anne Frank; but this is far more than depth, it is "Edelkeith," a quality of nobility. The terror which seems immanently to strike the Franks, the Van Daans, and Mr. Dussel is sublimated in an enclosed world to preoccupations with normalcy. But the underlying moment of the inevitable emerges from its lair in the sounds of running in the night, a girl's scream, and the tensions which promote petty bickering.

Why were the "dashing moments of frivolity" and the avoiding of terror, with which Mr. Schoffstall finds fault inserted into the Diary of Anne Frank? The answer lies in the phychological background of Jewish thought. Judaism is a religion which has no dogmatic view of an afterlife. Hence Jews are deeply concerned with life in this world. When the traditional Jew awakes, he thanks his God for preserving him through the night. He blesses God's name when he observes the natural phenomena. He toasts his friends with "'L' Chaim.'" (To life!) on festive occasions, and he prays to be inscribed in the book of life on the Day of Atonement. The Jews of the "Secret Annexe" were the products of five thousand, seven hundred and two years of history, throughout which the theme of life is inseparably intertwined. It is hard to imagine (and this thought is confirmed by the diary, by Otto Frank, and Ernst Schnobel in an article in Life, August 18, 1958) that the people with whom we are concerned and particularly Anne Frank would not make a desperate attempt to provide the artifacts of life to a situation full of impending doom.

Anne Frank became a German national heroine (or more properly, a heroine to a small minority of German youth) because the statistics of annihilation were personalized in the form of one sensitive, eloquent girl with whom it is possible to feel empathy. Of the countless others, one hears little. That the play is "entertainment" or "showmanship" is believed by the silent tribute accorded it by German audiences (New York Times, October 3, 1956) and the deep thought to which it led among all the world's intellectuals. It is doubtful whether the Diary of Anne Frank was substantially changed is translation.

If Mr. Schoffstall fails to see "guts" in the character of Anne Frank, he is unappreciative. If he was not shocked, it is because he lacks sensitivity and insight. If he sees nothing deeply psychological, it is because he knows little of psychology. And if he or anyone else was "insulted," we can only regret that Anne Frank and some six million of her coreligionists are not present to apologize.

Respectfully yours,
Theodore E. Brandwein, '60

ARGENTINA CONFLICT

In Argentina there are two conflicting forces: the Peronistas and the armed forces. The peronistas consist of mainly workers who were organized into a political force by Argentina's former dictator Juan D. Peron. Peron's concessions to labor-higher and higher wages, greater and greater economic benefits-virtually wrecked the Argentine economy. This was the main reason that led the armed forces to stage the uprising that forced Peron out in 1955.

For two and a half years afterwards a military junta ruled the country. Last spring the junta held free Presidential elections. Arturo Frondizi, a candidate supported by the Peronistas, was victorious. Since then, Frondizi's economic policies have alienated them because he has not followed Peron's policy of unlimited wage hikes. However during his office, the cost of living has climbed 20%. The Peronistas have fought President Frondizi with protest strikes that have further damaged the Argentine economy.

President Frondizi declared a state of siege last week and called on the armed forces to help him in the midst of an oil strike. Once again the military took control of the country.

It appears that the armed forces will retain control of the government until the immediate Peronist threat has disappeared.

COLOMBO PLAN

Eight years ago the Colombo Plan was organized as a British Commonwealth venture "for the cooperative economic development of the South and Southeast Asia." This region is vulnerable to Communist economic penetration because it is unstable economically and politically. Three weeks ago Colombo Plan technicians opened a conference in Seattle. The President acknowledged the need for more assistance for the region.

RUSSIAN OFFENSIVES

Last week Russia launched one of her most severe offensives. On the diplomatic front, in talks at Geneva and debate in the United Nations the Russians made it plain that there would not be an agreement on any of the three phases of disarmament now under discussion outer space, nuclear testing, and surprise attack. Russia also declared that she would undertake a vast economic expansion calculated to cut deeply into the West's lead in production by 1965 and surpass it by 1970. Russia threatened, by implication, a blockade of of West Berlin like the one which a Western airlift thwarted a decade ago.

Now, as in the past, efforts to solve the enduring issues of the cold war founder on the underlying mistrust each side has of the other's motives and intentions. Solutions to the hard questions apparently will elude negotiators until some firm basis can be found for removing or moderating the mistrust.

Genevieve Taggard's Works Are On Display At Library

Genevieve Taggard
1894 - 1948

(Current) an display at the Bailey Library is an exhibit of the work of the American poet, Genevieve Taggard.

Born in the State of Washington, she spent her early life in Hawaii, returning to the United States in 1914 to enter the University of California. At the end of college she came to New York where she founded and edited The Measure. Later she taught at Mount Holyoke, Bennington and Sarah Lawrence colleges. Her home when she retired from teaching was in Jamaica, Vermont.

The quality of Miss Taggard's poetry has been called brilliant, various and warm, her words, which move to a vigorous purpose, have been termed "lithe, eager and beforehand." This seems especially true as one hears them set to music by William Bergsma, Aaron Copland, Roy Harris, or Henry Leland Clark.

Among her works are For Eager Lovers, 1922, Hawaiian Hilltop, 1923; Words for the Chisel, 1926; Traveling Standing Still, 1928; Monologue for Mothers, 1929, The Life and Mind of Emily Dickinson (biography), 1930; Remembering Vaughan in New England, 1933; Not Mine to Finish, 1934; Calling Western Union, 1936; Collected Poems, 1918-1938, 1938, Long View, 1942, Falcon, 1942; A Part of Vermont, 1945; Slow Music, 1946, Origin: Hawaii, 1947.

The Dartmouth College Library has an extensive collection of material about the writer. The Genevieve Taggard Papers in the New York Public Library include correspondence and manuscripts. Additional manuscripts are in the Lockwood Memorial Library, Buffalo, New York.

Materials of this exhibit were lent by a member of the senior class. Others among the faculty or students who have books or manuscripts of unusual interest are urged to make the fact known to the Reference Department, Billings Library.

Swimming Club Attends Convention

During the weekend of November 7--8, three members of the UVM Sychronized Swimming Club attended the National Association of Sychronized Swimmers convention at Eastern College in Oxford, Ohio. The delegation consisted of Roberta Clauss, Patricia Townsbury, Tam Miller, and Miss Jean MacAndrews, physical education instruction and faculty advisor of the club.

The purpose of the convention was to acquaint the participants, through discussion and demonstrations, with the activities of clubs in various colleges and to provide suggestions as to the organization and presentation of performances.

The information acquired at Oxford was of much help to the Club and plans are already underway for a spring water-ballet show.

JohnDewey Club

The John Dewey Club will hold it's second meeting Thursday evening, the 20th, at 8 P.M. in Fleming Museum Lounge. Dr. Robert Hall will lead a discussion, the topic of which is liberalism and conservation.

All those interested in discussion of a philosophic nature are urged to attend.

March Of Dimes

As the March of Dimes moves forward Toward Greater Victories, its first new targets are two of the greatest cripplers of all---arthritis and birth defects (congenital malformations). At least 11 Americans suffer the pain of arthritis and rheumatism, including 30,000 children and adolescents each year. Birth defects afflict 284,000 infants annually, of whom 34,000 die within the first four weeks.

small lobster and made the campus all dry (and I mean crispy, man) what happened was that the cool cats took their lobster off campus in rented Cat-a-racks, which was strictly against the rule, but which was something like some of their parents had done and was exciting and fun, and nobody likes to get away with something like a tres-cool cat.

Somehow, on about the first week in November word got out that several cat-a-racks were to be visited by passing footing police cats in one big Cat Nip, and like that. . . . Well, the word got out, and so when the passing footers arrived they found only filet of flounder and milk on the tables and all the tres-cool cats and their "Kittens" behaving, and so they had to sit down and have some milk with the cool cats before they went home to their lobster and anyone knows that lobster and milk don't mix.

Scandinavian Study Available To Student

By ARNOLD DP BERLINER

The Scandinavian Seminar for Cultural Studies is one of the many foreign programs available to American college students. This organization is now accepting applications for its eleventh scholastic year, 1959-1960. Most of the students selected to study in Scandinavia will have been chosen by late January, so to all those who are interested: time is drawing near. Those eligible are college graduates, undergraduates who wish to take their junior year abroad, and a limited number of professional people.

The program offers nine difficult but rewarding months in a Scandinavian country of your choice: Denmark, Norway, or Sweden. Upon notification of admission to the Seminar Program, each student undergoes a period of preparation for his Scandinavian venture. Language records and other linguistic aids are supplied by the Seminar. Since all courses will be conducted in Danish, Norwegian, or Swedish, this is mandatory. Former members of the Seminar will always be on hand to make their past experiences useful. The tempo of the languages will immediately be picked up as the ship, carrying the students to the Old World, leaves New York.

Probably the most enjoyable part of the student's stay in Scandinavia will be the opportunity to participate in the home life of two native families; each stay will last from three to four weeks. Every student, according to his individual interests, is placed with urban or rural families. This will give the student a better insight into the life of the Scandinavians, their language and institutions.

Students within each country gather between families stays for five one-week courses. This provides opportunity for increased language instruction which is given by the Seminar faculty. Authorities in Scandinavian history, art, literature, and sociology also hold organized discussions. The lecture deals with the factual material as well as a comparison of the family experiences with this lecture material. Student counseling with staff members is also provided to insure the clearance of any problems of adjustment.

The culminative experience for a student of the Seminar is the attendance of a folk hojskole. There is no counterpart to this form of school in America. Although many similar courses are taught in the social sciences and humanities, for example, the folkenhojskole upholds particular requirements for entrance. They have been formed for young adults who have already chosen their vocation and who have been working in that particular field for a number of years. The school exists to enhance their understanding of their culture and themselves. The basis of the Scandinavian educational system is incentive on the part of the student. Adapting to this mood of education will be an invigorating challenge to conscientious foreign students.

The Seminar fee of $ covers board, room, tuition for the academic year of August to [illegible], office and administrative expenses, and language material. The estimated transatlantic fare from New York to Scandinavia and return is $450. The moderate fee of the Seminar is made possible by contributions from various foundations and through the hospitality of many persons and many persons and institutions in the United States and Scandinavia. One complete scholarship is given to a student with a definite financial need. Seven scholastic loans of $300 and $400 each are also given.

Gibbs School Offers Scholarships

Two national scholarships for college senior girls are offered for 1959-1960 by the Katharine Gibbs School. These awards were established in 1935 as a memorial to Mrs. Katharine M. Gibbs, founder and first president of the School.

Each scholarship consists of full tuition ($785) for the secretarial training course, plus an additional cash award of $500, totaling $1,285. The winners may select any one of the four Gibbs schools for their training--Boston, New York, Montclair, or Providence.

Winners are chosen by the Scholarship Committee on the basis of college academic record, personal and character qualifications, financial need, and potentialities for success in business.

Each college or university may recommend two candidates, and each candidate must have this official endorsement. Students who may be interested in competing for one of these Katharine Gibbs awards may obtain full information from the college placement bureau.

Riflemen Aim For Accurate Season

by FRED ROBINSON

Concentration, accuracy, and good eyesight are a must in almost every sport you encounter if you wish to become outstanding. This is the case in America's top sport, baseball. Experts have also claimed that baseball is a game of inches. Well, on the UVM campus there is another sport which is very seldom mentioned to any extent, but to become a member of this team, these qualities are a must, and matches are won or lost by only a minute fraction of an inch. The squad that brings this sport to the hills of Vermont is none other than the Catamount Rifle Team. Under the guiding eyes of Coach Sgt. Howard Berriman, the 11-man Cat team opened its season on November 8 in a postal match with the U. of Virginia, thus setting off a 15 match schedule which will carry them late into March. This is the longest season for any sport at UVM.

Things look rather bright for Sgt. Berriman this year as he lost only one man, Bill Hicks of Norwich, Vermont, through graduation. Bill was the captain of last year's squad which posted a record of 5 wins and 11 losses. Grouping together both veteran and new faces, Vermont has come up with a well-rounded group consisting of four Seniors, four Juniors, and three Sophs. The four Cats will be shooting their last for the Green and Gold are Marvin Dobert of Glens Falls, NY. Gleason Guyette of Orleans, VL; Al Kessler from Little Neck, NY; and another Vermonter, Bill Rowell from Hardwick. The Junior class is well represented by Capt. Ron Brand of Burlington; Ed Haight of Croton Falls, NY; Bill Sliney from Providence, RI, and Earl Stone, also a Burlington boy. Pete White of Laureton, NY; Bob Eaton, all the way from Asuncion, Paraguay, and Gary Vervoort of Manhasset, NY; make up the first year varsity men.

Highlights of the season will come with the newly-organized playoffs—or "shootoffs" if you will—when the Cats tangle with their Yankee Conference opponents on February 14 at the University of New Hampshire. On March 7, UVM plays off in the New England College Rifle League, followed on the 21st with the National Rifle Association Sectionals at Norwich in Northfield, Vermont.

Usually ten men fire at each match and the top five scores compile the team total. Scoring is based on firing from three positions; Prone, Kneeling, and Standing. A perfect score is 300, but a good shooter will probably fall around 285.

"Marksmanship is a hit or miss sport. You never get a second chance in a match—you hit the first time or not at all," stated Sgt. Berriman. "My boys look right now as good as they did at mid-season last year. These additional shoulder-to-shoulder matches make for keener competition; then you can tell the real shooters. There is no such thing as a mediocre shooter—he is either good or poor, no in-between." Sgt. Berriman pointed out that last year his team finished fourth of eight teams in the New Englands, and third of six teams in the NRA Sectionals. "What we need is the high combination for wins. If we get only four high men, we're usually sunk. But my boys are scrappers and I expect a lot from them this season."

Of course we can always turn to the friendly City of Burlington and request Varsity practice sessions at Memorial Auditorium. The city is only too happy to cooperate- - - -for $50 per practice session and $150 per game. This seems a bit unreasonable to me, for our University lets both Burlington high schools use UVM facilities as often as possible- - - - free of charge. The high school Cross Country and Track teams use the Centennial Field House as much as our own teams do, and what is more, our coaches assist them in every possible way. If the City of Burlington persists in charging our basketball team for each Auditorium practice, I honestly think that the University should require cash for the use of its athletic facilities.

With the out-of-state tuition going up, the University must look in its own back yard for athletic prospects. But this also presents a problem. Out of 102 high schools and academies in Vermont, 51% have less than 25 students in their graduating classes. They don't even have a football team. Only 7 high schools have more than 100 students in their graduating classes. Clearly then, it is somewhat of a problem to recruit athletes where none are to be found.

Where do other colleges and universities obtain their athletes? The goldmine of ballplayers is to be found in the great metropolitan areas of the East, such as Philadelphia, New York and Boston. There, literally hundreds of schools openly compete for talented athletes. The University of Vermont would and already does find it impossible to compete on the same level with these other institutions. What can we say, we'll give you a loan.

Once again, the only sure way of attracting top caliber ballplayers to this University is to grant scholarships, and until this is done, we will, unfortunately, continue to fight an uphill battle- - - -one which we can not win.

Cynic Sports Special: Coach Archie Post

by MARTY COLE

This fall, Archibald T. Post began his thirtieth year as a member of the Physical Education Department. Archie, who is an Associate Professor of Physical Education, has been head of the department since 1942. Since he came to the University of Vermont, in 1929, he has coached both the varsity cross-country and track teams.

Archie Post was born in Hinesburg, Vermont, which is only twelve miles from UVM. At the age of four, he and his family moved to Saratoga Springs, New York, where he attended Saratoga High School. During his high school days, Archie played varsity football, basketball, and baseball. After graduating from high school, he worked for about one year. Then in the fall of 1923, Archie enrolled at the University of Vermont. At UVM, Archie played freshman football and basketball, varsity basketball, and was on the varsity cross-country and track teams. In 1927, he graduated from UVM. While teaching at Vermont, Archie received a Master's degree in Education.

Archie now lives with his wife in Jericho, Vermont. He has two married daughters and four grandchildren. Both daughters are former UVM graduates. Archie divides his spare time between many diversified hobbies, namely fishing, hunting, gardening, and photography.

In 1950, under Mr. Post's direction, the Vermont Cross-Country team won the Connecticut Valley Cross-Country Championship and tied with Maine for the Yankee Conference Championship. This year our team has won every race, seven in all. The New England Championship, the Yankee Conference Championship, and the State Championship are among the various meets the team has won this year. During Archie's thirty years as coach of the cross-country team, from 1929 to 1958, our team has won 81 meets while losing only 43.

In the future, Archie hopes to continue teaching and coaching at the University of Vermont. As for this year's track team, our chances do not look very good. This is due to the fact that runners alone can not win a track meet, and we are not getting enough student participation in the other events. Looking ahead to next year's cross-country team, it can be said that we should have a very powerful team, as we are only losing one man from this year's team.

Mr. Post feels that the sports coverage by the CYNIC recently has been the best he has seen in past years.

Question of the Week

by DAVID FITTINGER

Vermont's basketball team has promise of being one of the finest teams in some years. How many of the 9 home games do you expect to see? Why will you or why will you not attend ALL home games? How about the games at Dartmouth, Middlebury, and Norwich?

AL OVERTON '59 – "I hope to see all of the home games. . .barring any unforseen hour exams. I won't be going to any road games. I would go if we had a real winning season."

TONY LOIACONA '61 – "I expect to see all of them. I did make the game at Norwich last year, and I'll try to see a few road games this year. The team has great potential this year, and everyone who possibly can, should go out and get behind them."

RICHARD STOCKEL – Graduate in Chemistry – "If the team shows improvement over previous seasons, I will definitely attend all the home games. The traveling would make road games extremely inconvenient. Unless transportation was provided for the student body, I would not expect a large turnout of UVM students."

SUE FLANNAGAN '62 – "I should be able to attend five or six home games. I expect to be going away some week-ends, which will prevent my attending all nine games listed on the home schedule. I intend to see some of the road games if I possibly can."

GEORGE KLINEFELTER '59 – "Call my friend Norm, I'm busy I'm watching the Yale – Princeton Football game on TV."

STEVEN RUBENSTEIN '61 – "If they start out on a winning streak, I'll support them. Concerning the road games. . . .I'll watch them on T.V."

MARK PLATT '62 – "I figure on seeing about six or seven games, inasmuch as studies will prevent attendance at the remaining few games. I'd like very much to go to the road games if transportation was made available. I hope our basketball team is more successful than our football team."

HANS WOLF '62 – "I think I'll see all of them if I'm here. I don't think I'll see the road games. . .no transportation."

TAY KRAUSE '62 – "I expect to see all of the home games if it is possible for me to do so. The one at Dartmouth will be difficult to get to, but I think I can see the Middlebury and Norwich road games."

JEANNIE PRETSCH '62 – "I'll see all of the games possible. I want to see them because I love basketball very much, especially when it's my team on the court. I'll go to the road games if I have dates for them."

FOOT-IN MOUTH-DISEASE

One morning a Cleveland businessman's secretary was showing off a stunning new suit, her birthday present from her family. Her boss stopped to admire it, then went on into his private office to greet a client who was waiting to see him.

"Sorry to keep you waiting," he told his startled caller, "but I was just admiring my secretary in her birthday suit."

THE READER'S DIGEST

COOP'S HOOP BY STEVE COOPER

Welcome basketball enthusiasts to the initial presentation of a new column, which will cover the collegiate basketball scene for the 1958-59 season. (Occasionally professional basketball will be spotlighted). We'll try to keep you posted on the results of games both nationally and locally (here in the East.)

The first two articles will preview the leading teams and players in the country. With most of last year's All-Americans returning, this season promises to be an exciting one. Many teams are "loaded" with fine players.

The increasing competition in college basketball circles for berths in post season tournaments has made basketball at the collegiate level very appealing to the American public. All clubs will be gunning to dethrown last year's N.C.A.A. champs, Kentucky, and runner up Seattle.

Unfortunately, one can't accurately predict a perfect preseason all-American team due to the presence of the "dark horse." (An example of this is illustrated with respect to West Virginia's Jerry West. This fine young ballplayer rose from complete oblivion last year to become one of the nation's outstanding stars.) For this reason, I will not try to pick "the" 1958-59 All American team. However, it is a good assumption to believe that many of this year's All American candidates are contained in the following list:

Oscar Robinson - - - - - - Cincinnati
Bob Boozer - - - - - - Kansas St.
Johnny Cox - - - - - - Kentucky
Bailey Howell - - - - - - Miss. St.
Doug Smart - - - - - - Washington
Rudy LaRusso - - - - - - Dartmouth
Al Seiden - - - - - - St. Johns
Tom Hawkins - - - - - - Notre Dame
John Green - - - - - - Michigan St.
Jerry West - - - - - - West Virginia

It is also a good bet that the top ten teams in the nation will be chosen from this group:

Louisville
Bowling Green
Kentucky
St. Joseph's
Syracuse
Dartmouth
Cincinnati
St. John's
North Carolina St.
West Virginia
St. Louis
Mississippi State
Michigan State
Manhatten
Xavier
St. Mary's
Kansas State
Oklahoma State
Pittsburg
North Carolina

If one analyzes this list closely, he should realize that the East is moving back into the National Collegiate Basketball spotlight. Since the college basketball scandals of the early 1950's, the Midwest and the Far West have dominated the college basketball scene. Recently, however, eastern schools have been able to keep metropolitan high school stars east of the Mississippi and north of the Mason-Dixon line. So don't worry basketball fans, eastern spectators will have plenty to cheer about this year.

Two of the leading independents in the East this year seem to be New York City's St. John's and Manhatten. At St. John's, ex-New York Knickerbocker coach Joe Lapchick has last year's starting five back including Al Seiden, a clever ballhandler and scorer of All-American caliber, plus the best sophomore prospect in the East in 6-4 Tony Jackson. Manhattan, on the other hand, has lost its top scorer in Jack Powers, but otherwise has the same rugged crew which led the entire nation in rebounding last season. Let's not forget N.Y.U. with the fabulous Cal Ramsey. He alone could make them go places.

Moving to the Ivy League, Dartmouth looks like a solid favorite with four starters returning from last year's fine quintet which represented the Northeast in the N.C.A.A. post season tournament. Among them are 6-7 Rudy LaRusso, a potential All-American candidate, and slick backcourt ace, Chuck Kauffman. Cornell has the best chance to catch Dartmouth but the rest of the league looks weak. Other leading independents, Syracuse and Niagra, are depending upon sophs to put them in the running for a post season tournament bid.

In the Yankee Conference, Connecticut seems once again to be the favorite, but might be surprised. The "Huskies," who have won the crown ten out of the past eleven years, lost two probable starters this year (6-7 Bill Schmidt and 6-5 John Pipczynski) due to scholastic difficulties and they also lost two starters from last year's fine club, due to graduation. The rest of the loop appears to be stronger and a wide open battle for top honors seems certain. New Hampshire and Vermont are two outsiders to watch.

Well, fans, that's it for now. Have a happy Thanksgiving and I'll see you in two weeks.

On December 2, the UVM basketball team under Coach John "Puggy" Evans journeys to Hanover, New Hampshire to play the Dartmouth Indians in its first basketball game of the year. This will be Vermont's toughest competition of the year, for the Dartmouth 5 is favored to repeat as Ivy League Champions.

Last year, Dartmouth, under Coach "Doggy" Julian, went all the way to the NCAA Eastern Regional finals with victories over Connecticut and Manhattan but were upended by Temple. Dartmouth's over-all record last year was 22 and 5 including an Ivy ledger of 11 and 3.

Dartmouth again a formidable power in the Ivy League, will rely on its big 6'8" center, Rudy LaRusso, to clear the boards plus Chuck Kauffman 6-0, and Walt Somowski, 6'1", a slick backcourt combination to move the ball. At forward with LaRusso are Gary Vandeweghe 6'4", always a threat to score and George Ramming, a soph who shows plenty of potential.

Vermont last year compiled an over-all record of 15-10 and a Yankee Conference record of 5-5. The Catamounts have 4 out of 5 returning starters from last year's team. They are Clyde Lord, Bob Gallagher, Frank Giordano, and Bob Kuchar. This year, Charlie Isles returns to the Vermont lineup after a year of ineligibility. Isles and Kuchar are the two backcourt men. Both have good outside shots and will lead the fast breaking type of offense employed by the Green and Gold. In forecourt, the Catamounts are going to rely heavily on Gallagher, Lord and Giordano to contend with the Indians on the boards.

Vermont's biggest weakness lies in the lack of a "big man" to contain a taller Dartmouth 5. The center is Clyde Lord, 6'1", and in each forward position are Bob Gallagher 6'4" and Frank Giordano, 6'2". The lack of height forces Vermont to take one shot at the basket while Dartmouth with a 6'6" average in forecourt is able to take 3 or 4 shots and almost assure themselves of a rebound.

When asked about the starting lineup, Coach Evans said that he will go with the experienced ball players, namely, Kuchar, Lord, Gallagher, Giordano and Isles. About the rest of the season, Evans feels that the team will have to improve over last year's .614 foul percentage. INTO HIGH GEAR

"We can't continue our athletic program the way it is currently being operated. It is necessary to strengthen our program without over emphasizing athletics. To improve our athletic program, we need more than just scholarships--it is hoped that we will be able to provide a training table in the Waterman Cafeteria for the football team (while in season), and further assist the boys with their living quarters." John T. Fey, President, The University of Vermont.

With these words, and, more important, immediate action by the Board of Trustees, it is hoped that the dying spark underneath the University's athletic situation will take on new life and burn brighter than ever before. The Board, currently studying the athletic situation in all UVM sports, must give its approval before aid is rendered to qualifying students. Due to the increased cost in attending the University, not only the athletic scholarship program, but the entire scholarship program needs a revamping.

Trying to obtain more funds for both scholarships and loans from private sources is indeed, a difficult task, as President Fey has discovered. Generally speaking, the alumni have shown very little interest in their alma mater 's athletic program, and there has been no organized campaign among the alums for sports support. When the grads do contribute, it is to a specific University organization other than the athletic department.

The National Defense Education Act of August, 1955, allocated $158,000 to the State of Vermont. This money is to be used for student loans at the state's institutions of higher learning. UVM is to receive from $60 - 70,000 of this money in September, 1959, which will be made available to students requiring loans, including athletes. It is this writer's opinion that these loans might attract a few qualifying athletes to the University, but the ONLY sure way of picking up our sports program is to grant full scholarships and not loans, which must be paid back.

Perhaps one of the major defects in the current athletic program here is the lack of proper facilities in which to practice. The UVM gymnasium is ancient, outmoded, and inadequate to handle the increasing students each year. There is only one way to remedy this situation- - - -and that is by constructing a good, modern gymnasium with facilities for both men and women such as indoor tennis courts, handball courts, a swimming pool, and several basketball floors. Now that the basketball season is upon us, the Varsity, Frosh and fraternity teams must share the same court. The players are being gypped, for they are not able to put in as much time as required.

Roy Greene And Bill Grey To Co-Captain '59 Gridders

SPECIAL TO THE CYNIC

The members of the 1958 UVM football team have elected Roy Greene and Bill Grey as co-captains of the '59 gridders. Approval of the choices was made Tuesday afternoon by the University Council.

Roy Greene was Vermont's leading ground gainer in '58, and also led in the scoring department. Donnelly's finest halfback, Roy also proved to be a defensive standout as well as an offensive threat. A native of Butler Smoke Rise, N.J., where he was a high school standout in football, track and baseball, Roy is an Economics major and a member of Phi Delta Theta fraternity.

Bill Grey started his football career at Vermont as a guard, but switched to end in his sophomore year, and earned his letter. At 5'9", and 185 lbs., he is exceptionally fast and rugged. Bill came into his own as first string left end this fall. A native of Grahamsville, N.Y., where he played football, basketball and baseball in high school, Bill is an Economics major and a member of Sigma Phi fraternity.

FOOTBALL CONTEST WINNER

Charlie Church, 156 Spear St., was the winner in the last CYNIC Football contest of the season, with a perfect ten out of ten right score. Herb Hein had seven right.

"Brigadoon" Hailed Success As Many Attend Spectacular

Mike Solby (center) explains about the University Players' successful production of "Brigadoon" to Ruben Lamarque and Barry Lessinger (right), as Carole Demas and Bruce Steele (top) look on. (Photo by Bennett Voll, AVS)

December 3 marked a turning point for the arts at UVM, for that was the date of the opening of the new arena theater in the Fleming Museum. In keeping with the spirit of the occassion, the culmination of four years of dreams and work, the University Players presented the musical comedy, Brigadoon, as the first performance on the new stage.

From the dimming of the houselights, it was apparent that the interest and cooperation of all concerned in staging Brigadoon had been worth while. The orchestra, under the direction of Ippocrates Pappoutsakis, was clear and formed a good background for the musical numbers of the show, and the overtures immediately set the mood for what was to follow.

The dancing, choreographed by Marilyn Nass, was especially outstanding and many people believe that it has aroused a new interest in dance at UVM. The precision of the choreography in enabling so many

ASSISTANT KW DIRECTORS APPOINTED FOR 62nd ANNUAL WEEKEND

The Kake Walk Directors have announced the appointments of the Assistant Directors for the 62nd Annual Kake Walk. The four recent additions to the Kake Walk Committee are all in their junior year at the University. They are James McAuliffe, a Kappa Sigma from Port Washington, Long Island, New York; Lawrence Brown, Delta Psi, Springfield, Vermont; Fred Mandell, a member of Phi Sigma Delta from Norwich, Conn.; and Paul Dye, Sigma Nu, from Burlington.

These four men have been assigned particular positions to lift some of the weight from the shoulders of the Directors. Their work has already begun; it will carry through Kake Walk and well into the Spring.

Adjustment Made For Pre-Meds And Pre-Dents

by MARC PECKER

Because of a financial stipulation, it was deemed necessary by the University Senate and University Council to make a technical adjustment concerning the status of future Pre-med and Pre-meds or Pre-dents.

All present freshmen Pre-meds and Pre-dents are considered to have been enrolled in the College of Technology for the current semester and will continue to be enrolled in that college for the remainder of their freshman and sophomore years. Future incoming freshmen Pre-meds and Pre-dents will also be enrolled in Technology.

This change will have slight, if any effect on the course of study or the requirements needed for completion of the pre-professional course. The present enrollees will maintain their current advisors and will be allowed the same choice of subjects as before. The college of Technology Studies Committee will now be charged with the considerations of the students marks and scholastic problems instead of the Arts and Sciences Studies Committee. At the beginning of their junior year, these students will be given the opportunity to enroll in the college of Arts and Sciences so that they may earn their B.A. degree.

The change was instituted for a technical reason. A certain stipulation stated that the enrollment of the college of Arts and Sciences should be limited to a little over a thousand students. Because of a very heavy enrollment in that college in recent years, it was decided that the problem be solved in the above manner.

UVM is a leader in its present system of Pre-professional preparation. The technical adjustment will be made but in no way will it affect the course of study or the quality of education that is now being offered to Pre-meds and Pre-dents.

Notice

There will be one more issue of the CYNIC on December 18, because of Christmas vacation. The next issue will be on January 15, and therefore, all articles and notices should be submitted as soon as possible. The deadline will be December 15.

Solutions Posed To Solve Library Problems

By ROGER S. ZIMMERMAN

It [illegible] the Bailey Library has been confronted with a serious problem of book losses. Within the last few years these losses decreased. And once more again, the University Library is faced with a situation similar to that of 1951. Just this past Fall the disappearance of fifty-six books belonging to the same class was discovered. This discovery led to further investigations, all of them revealing further losses. The books that disappear generally belong to one group; this being when a book has use for more than one course.

Miss Reilly, the circulation librarian at UVM since July of 1951, has offered some possible solutions to the problem. One such solution would be the creation of a student library committee. This committee would be made up of members from the men's and women's residence halls, including dorms, fraternities, and sororities, and, as one of their functions, would have the job of introducing new students to the library. Essentially, the committee would perform all their tasks in relation to the interests of both student body and faculty. Another solution would be the education of students to their personal responsibility towards the University library. However, this idea, if carried through, would certainly tend to disprove the validity of one of the basic assumptions the UVM administration has towards its students, this being that the student is an adult at the time of his entrance into college. It's a little late to start teaching "adults" respect for institutional property.

"Major library offenses", says Miss Reilly, "should be dealt with in the same manner as an academic offense (cheating on an exam) and should thus be punished accordingly."

The library staff dislikes the idea of instituting a typical Orwell "Big Brother" program within the library; this would squelch the concept of individual responsibility. And yet, this could certainly be a result of the "informal borrowing".

In summary, this situation is merely a manifestation of a psychological intangible which is deeply rooted within the personality of these "borrowers". Something is obviously lacking. One of the biggest consequences arising out of the whole situation is that so many have to suffer for so few.

Erroll Garner Lends Modern Beat To Burlington Jazz Enthusiasts

A very successful "Blue Series" attraction was Erroll Garner, whose jazz interpretations were enjoyed by many.

As a listener, not a jazz critic or a critical reviewer, I would like to briefly survey Mr. Garner's performance as it exemplified the basic principles of jazz, which are of prime importance in the development of an aspiring jazz musician and a key resource for the listener in understanding jazz.

Before proceeding with the concert, let's look at the background of Mr. Garner in order to see "where he stands" in the world of jazz. The most unusual factor in this famous pianist's background is that he can't read music which puts a great responsibility on the sensitivity of his ears. Not being able to read music was also a handicap to Art Tatum, a blind pianist heralded as the greatest jazz pianist to live and one of the greatest piano technicians of our time. In Pittsburgh, Garner's birthplace, Art Tatum, Errol Garner and the currently popular pianist, Ahmad Jamal, were all on the "bill" at a concert. It seems that Garner was the second pianist to play and after playing his regular repertoire, ended his stay by playing his interpretation of one of the Rachmaninoff Piano Concertos adding his own variation at the end. Mr. Tatum countered Mr. Garner by playing the same Rachmaninoff Concerto including Mr. Garner's variation and his own variation, this incident in itself is sufficient to credit each pianist as being great and the greatest. Errol Garner began playing at the unbelievable young age of three. Playing professionally on local radio shows at the age of seven, another remarkable feat. At sixteen he was playing in nightclubs around Pittsburgh and the then famous 52nd Street in New York, famous because 52nd Street had a concentration of jazz nightclubs featuring great musicians as Charlie Parker, Dizzy Gillespie, Thelonious Monk, George Shearring to name a few. Garner began his concert with a "swinging" rendition of "Dancing in the Dark," which seemed to do just what he wanted it to do, that was to catch all the "would be" anti-Garnerites on the first time. I looked around and saw smiles on faces and rocking side to side by some who haven't rocked since the Charleston days. "Dancing in the Dark" is a good example of the Garner standard, it contained his usual fluidity, variety and spontaneous creativity. It is in the latter quality that we have the first principle of jazz; briefly, it is imperative that jazz be a dynamic force full of individual expression or playing melodic lines as they come to you, and this is insured by the ability to create spontaneously. On Lover Come Back To Me," the world-famed pianist literally took off. He took the tune at such a pace that I didn't expect him to last through the song. I hope everybody noticed the real trademark of Garner; he builds and builds, as in his introduction, culminating with that soft soulful follow through. Soulful is another essence of jazz, without soul jazz is flat, strictly execution, but with soul one conveys the church heritage exampled by Mahalia Jackson and the Blues tradition. "My Funny Valentine" was a lovely piece showing off his piano virtuosity. He started it with a classically styled introduction, ending it to an unsuspecting, show, moody, Funny Valentine. It was quite a change of pace to the fast moving "Lover Come Back to Me."

Errol Garner's pianistic conversations, sense of humor and creative genius were indicative throughout such standards as "Can't Get Started With You," "There'll Never Be Another You," "What Is This Thing Called Love," "Lover," "Yesterdays," a sensitively played "Just A Thing Called Joe," "I Didn't Know What Time It Was," a changed "I'll Remember April" if you compare it to the same band on the Columbia album, "Concert By The Sea," a latin tempoed "Love For Sale" and medleys from "Porgy and Bess," "Oklahoma" and "My Fair Lady."

The Bassman, Calhoun and the drummer, Martin function ideally alongside the versatile pianist, signalling each other beautifully through the language of jazz.

It was a shame that people had to leave before the end due to, in one case, relieving the baby-sitter. The auditorium should have had a nursery section where the babies could have wailed with Garner. Quite a concert, quite a concert.

For those who would like to know more about jazz, why don't you let me know and we can try to get together some time to discuss jazz informally.

Through practice and technical ability he was able to communicate the connection of Brigadoon to the everyday world in which we live. Diane Jordan and Robert Frenier, as the young Scottish lovers, rounded out the play and the latters singing was particularly notable.

Special credit should also go to Howard Bennett for his musical direction, Francis Weinrich, for his work as vocal coach. Pat Ross for excellent work as stage manager and Lee Lovenheim, who was business manager for the production.

This was a difficult play to stage in an arena theater but, under the supervision of Greg Falls and Edward J. Feidner, the changes in place, the entrances and exits, and the realization of settings were extremely effective. Largely due to excellent lighting, and a few adaptable stage properties, there was never a feeling of incongruity. The only unfortunate aspect of the production was that the acoustics of the theater have not been as yet perfected. At times the singers could not be heard above the orchestra and the orchestra itself seemed in a few places unbalanced. However, as the use of our new theater continues to grow, these difficulties will be resolved.

It is truly a fine addition to our campus that we at last have a true theater as adaptable and convenient as the arena theater. It is through places such as this that a correlation between art and life may come about to its fullest degree for through theater there can be more communication between artist and audience than in almost any other art form. UVM has always been fortunate in having competent leaders in this field who have continually chosen exceptional theatre for presentation. With this tradition and the new theatre, it is hoped that even greater heights will be attained. But no matter how long the theater continues, the memory of the first production of "Brigadoon" will always remain. From the bright, appropriate costumes and properties to the excellent singing and dancing, and acting it was a production of which to be proud in any frame of reference.

Most encouraging to this new endeavor at UVM was the tremendous applause given the performers at the conclusion of the Wednesday night performance. This opening night acceptance plus the sell-out houses to which the actors played Thursday, Friday, and Saturday and the added Monday performance are indicative of the foresight and work which have gone into the making possible of this theatre at UVM. The reception after the Wednesday performance was also an excellent way to encourage more and wider knowledge about and work with the Arena Theater. It is to be regretted that it was not better attended.

Museum Features Color Woodcuts

The Fleming Museum is now featuring an exhibition of thirty color woodcuts by a Hungarian artist, Joseph Domjan. Domjan has long enjoyed an international reputation abroad. His prints are large and decorative and are notable for their variety of color and texture. They have the bold design of modern graphic art, but the figurrs and patterns that distinguish his work are straight ffom the peasant art of his native country. There is no mistaking their Hungarian background. Few Americans had seen the artist's work before he came to this country two years ago. At the time of the Hungarian revolt Domjan was exhibiting in Switzerland where his family fled to join him to escape the terror in their homeland. A Rockefeller grant brought them to the United States. The artist began his career anew. Now his prints are found in major museums on both sides of the Atlantic, the Victoria and Albert Museum, London, the National Museum, Stockholm, and the Metropolitan Museum of Art, New York, to mention a few.

The exhibition, on loan from the Kennedy Galleries, New York, will continue through December 31st.

UVM Chorus Plans Concert; Round Table Gives Dinner

A Christmas concert by the University Chorus and an open house sponsored by the UVM Round Table will highlight Yule festivities on Dec. 14.

The two traditional events will be staged in the Ira Allen Chapel and the Waterman Building, with the concert open to the general public.

The University Chorus will open the day's program with its concert in the Chapel at 4 p.m., followed by the open house, complete with a turkey dinner and all the trimmings in the Waterman Cafeteria at 6 p.m.

Two of last years' graduates will be soloists: Helen Chicoine will sing the solo in "I wonder as I wander," and Maurice Villemaire will sing the tenor recitative and air, "Comfort ye, my people" and "Every valley shall be exalted," from Handel's "Messiah."

Two freshmen will also be soloists: Barbara Rifkin, alto, will sing the Spanish carol "O Bethelehem," and Jeanine Cloutier will sing the alto air, "He shall feed his flock like a shepherd," from the "Messiah." A junior, Phyllis Tyler, will sing the following air, "Come unto him."

The chief work on the program will be Bach's cantata for the Sunday before Advent, "Sleepers Wake." The soloists will be Barbara Weinrich, baritone; and George Merritt, tenor. Mr. Merritt will also sing the air, "Take me, Saviour, for thine own" from Bach's Epiphany cantata, "All they from Saba shall come."

Two modern works will also be included -- the motet, "The Word became flesh" by Bender (new to these concerts), and "Deo Gracias," by Benjamin Britten. Traditional carols and choruses from the "Messiah" will complete the program.

Francis Weinrich will be the organist, and Sadah Shuchart Start the violinist. Judith Dutton will be the pianist and June Brown will play the organ for the Bach cantata, "Sleepers wake." Howard Bennett will direct the performance, which is free and public.

Immediately following the concert, open house activities will get under way for members of the faculty, staff and student body of the University. In addition to the turkey dinner, those in attendance will conclude the evening's program with a carol sing on the University green. Tickets are on sale in Lower Waterman for seventy-five cents and 800 tickets are to be sold.

In charge of arrangements for the open house are: Miss Carrie Power, head resident of Mansfield House, Miss Esther Knowles, of the UVM home economics department, and Allen Holt, '59, of Hartford, Conn.

Serving on committees for the event are: John Breed, Judith Kearns, Jean Kimball, Zana Calkins, Lawrence E. Van Benthuysen, Sandra Peters, John Meek, Don Wallace, Cecelia Maloney, Roger Allen, Charles Nash, Martha Page and Albert Sadler and Raul Hilberg, faculty advisors to Round Table.

The Vermont Cynic

"Time Marches On"

Changes have been made in the CYNIC office in an effort to improve the paper. In the past, this newspaper was run by an editor-in-chief with as many helpers as he could muster. The responsibility varied among the workers. But if one could spend more time than the others he usually acquired a higher position on the staff. Since this was an unsatisfactory method we have tried to alleviate the situation. We had to revise the constitution to try to better your newspaper.

TWO NEW EDITORS

To break the chain of a one-man newspaper, we have added two new positions to the CYNIC staff, the assistant editor becomes the head of the production end of the CYNIC, with the help from the managing editor. The executive editor becomes the office head, which includes correspondence, communications, and secretarial work, as well as the training of new individuals.

We have always had two managing editors, but now we have only one, who is responsible for the make-up and production of the newspaper with the help of the co-production managers. We have finally specifically stated the responsibilities and duties of our other editors and managers.

This allows the editor more time for his editorials, more time for meetings, more time to correct the paper, before it goes to press, and more time to put out issues of a high caliber. This also gives the CYNIC staff the opportunity to train at least three people, who will have the "know-how," and the ability to become the next editor-in-chief.

REMOVAL AND ELIGIBILITY

Article four states that any removal must follow certain procedures with legitimate reasons. Article five was amended so as to allow members to move up in our system because of eligibility. Although these ideas have been followed, somewhat, in the past, now it must be done because of this improved and strong constitution.

Above are the major changes made in the constitution. This training system is now in effect and it will become official at next year's elections. We have set up the CYNIC according to a constitution which has more authority, which eliminates areas of responsibility, and which provides greater opportunity for the advancement of qualified personel. We feel confident that this will result in an improvement in the CYNIC.

"BRIGADOON"

At this time, we would like to hail the production of "Brigadoon" for a wonderful performance. The setting of Vermont's new arena theater, the orchestra, the cast, the crew behind the scenes, and all those connected with the production, deserve an extra round of applause.

Loss Of Money

I would like to thank the student of UVM who found my purse and returned it to the COSA office. There were various pictures and identifications in my wallet which would have been difficult to replace.

There is only one thing to mar my happiness and that is -- money was taken from the wallet. Five dollars is not a great amount as compared to a loss of twenty-five dollars, but any loss hurts a budget. Like many students attending UVM, I am careful to account for every dollar which is given to me by my parents.

The loss of this money hurts me, but it also shows that the person who took this money must have had a "dire need" for extra cash. If this is the case, please keep the money.

What really disappoints me and lessens my confidence in members of the student body is the fact that some have not learned the meaning of the words on the UVM insignia--"Studiis, et rebus, honestis." All of the undergraduates here are young men and women with a mature and rational code of conduct when it comes down to draw a line between right and wrong.

As one among many, I urge you to be fair with yourself and with others.

Beverly Cawley, '62

Thanks For Blood

On behalf of the hospital patients whose lives have been saved and whose recovery has been hastened, we should like to express our thanks to the 182 UVM students who donated blood at the Waterman Lounge on November 24. The goal of 150 pints was substantially exceeded and this enabled us to fill all blood orders received over the long holiday week-end.

The physicians as well as the families of hospital patients join us in congratulating UVM students in maintaining their fine record in support of the Red Cross Blood Program. As sponsors of the drawing, the Ethan Allen Rifles did an outstanding job. Jack Campbell, Dick Loati and their associates organized the drawing in fine fashion so that no log jams developed. Our staff was unanimous in stating that this was the smoothest blood drawing held at UVM in the seven years Red Cross blood drawings have been held there.

Sincerely,
Edward R. Stearn
Center Administrator

"Brigadoon"

Being an interested thespian, I feel indeed fortunate at having had the opportunity to attend The University Players' production of Brigadoon.

I found this presentation a rewarding experience, exhibiting all the earmarks and craftsmanship of a professional performance.

The dialogue itself left little to be desired as far as coherence and perspicuity were concerned. What little dialogue was lost as a consequence of "playing in the round", was made up for by the intimate atmosphere of the arena theatre.

Not only was the acting itself done admirably, but the lighting, set, and general stage managing added visible support to the sentiency of this production.

Clearing House

By Peter Schoffstall

WHY WE DIDN'T WE HAVE A BIG WEDDING

The first reason I can think of is that the room was too small to accommodate more than seven people comfortably. They might have gotten eight or ten more in, but I dislike the idea of stacked people and so does Claire, so we asked two, our former roommates. Two other people showed up with my former roommate, and right after the ceremony while we were still blinking at each other, an old friend of my family here in town (a woman) just happened in at the door so the wedding wasn't quiet for very long.

The second reason no big wedding: we had decided that it had to be immediate. It was getting so that I almost felt I should sign out of Hamilton when Claire did, and we didn't think it would be appreciated if I were late another time. Unfortunately, as was misconstrued, we had no running battle against WSGA rulings, against anyone . . . just that curfews are inconvenient and were rather silly for us. (I am an old and balding man, and my wife is sage and very mature for all her youth.)

ADVICE TO NEWLYWEDS

(On moving into new(er) apartment out of smaller apartment): Make sure your roommate (former) is not hung over the day you are to move. (He wasn't). Make sure that to move the three items of furniture, the two hundred books, the papers, pencils, pots and pans (mis-dowery) knives, stainless, pictures and general junk, there are boxes (Saturday in the middle of the move: "I should have picked up a few boxes for this stuff." Wife, following, picking up dropped books, papers, pencils, pots and pans, knives, stainless, pictures and general junk: "You're so right." Later she asked how many trips I thought we should have had to make from (Peyton Pl.) to 141 (more respectable) Mansfield Avenue. I said "shut up" and we're still taking things out of our "car" every time we go upstairs.

ON IN - LAWS

Wife: (during dinner last night) What do you s'pose father will say when he sees the apartment?

Me: (We are sitting on floor at low coffee-like-table, eating very good meal she turned out) Oh, he'll walk in, look around and ask if we stand up all the time.

Wife: I can hear what he'll say about the (very, very tiny) bathroom: What do you do? Take off your clothes before you go in there to take a bath?

OTHER GUESTS (furniture comments)

So far, thankfully, we have not had a lot of company. The company we have had have luxuriated on the floor. (Former roommate of wife's and date wanted to paint furniture on walls for us, but we declined . . . no paint.)

College enrollment jumped to another all-time high. A total of 3,258,256 students have enrolled in the nation's colleges and universities, according to a Government survey. This was a rise of 6.2 percent over 1957 and the seventh consecutive year in which enrollment was increased.

Joe Knowledge

Here are some views and statistics from a report written by Prof. W. Max Wise of Columbia University.

By 1956, only 55 percent of undergrads were of traditional college age, 18-21. More students each year -- 2/ percent men and 10 percent women, are married. Four students out of ten earn more than half of their college expenses. Ability of students admitted to college is rising sharply.

The gentlemen's C is no longer admired. The new students study hard, but they are more interested in the race for grades than the pursuit of learning. The reason for this, is that it will give them an advantage in the job market. Hooray for the "power of the dollar."

Congratulations to Miss Betty Bandel on her new novel. We at UVM wish it a hearty success. Speaking of new books, the Student Directory is out. I was reading it the other day. Not much of a plot, but a helluva cast of characters. So long for now.

I believe much praise is due to Ippocrates Pappoutsakis as Orchestral Director, and especially to Marilyn Nass and her most talented terpsichoreans.

I wish to thank the cast and crew of Brigadoon for a very enjoyable and wonderful evening.

Pres. Fey Speaks To Newman Club

President Fey spoke Sunday morning to 200 Newmanites at the annual Bishop's Communion Breakfast. He stated in his remarks that, "In a legalistic approach, there is no objection to religion in a state institution to train other than the use of state funds in large amounts for religion." He continued, "It is my sincere opinion that religion is a very important and fundamental part of higher education."

He went on to say that higher education without religion is not really education and that the type of religious leadership exemplified at the breakfast provided a core around which in the future we could build. He said further, "The world is today in great chaos and the one thing that does stand out as a stabalizing factor is religion."

Bishop Robert F. Joyce gave the principle address and said that Catholic students must be prepared to be forward in their religion not just to sit back and answer questions. He stressed the fact that the church was not made by man but by God, for people who must ultimately answer to him and that it was made in the way which would best suit the needs of man.

He said, "You can have ideas but don't be going around merely defending, be forward and aggressive in sharing these convictions with others around you. They will appreciate it, because all men have these things in them. These same urgings and griefs are present in the heart of every human being."

Guests at the breakfast were President Fey, Dean Harris, Dean Wing, and Dean and Mrs. Paul Miller, Mary Ellen Han Ra Han and Bernier Mayo were the co-chairmen of this event.

Wide World

By Sue Herman

JUNO

Saturday, December 6th, the United States attempted to shoot a rocket to the moon. At 12:45 A.M. EST Juno II was launched. According to plan, it should have reached a top speed of 24,897 miles per hour, approached the moon some 34 hours after take off, and either hit the moon or continued on its course past it, and into orbit around the sun. However, due to some error in the firing of the first stage, the Jupiter failed to reach the necessary velocity. The United States will try again soon.

PROBLEMS IN URUGUAY

The smallest South American Republic has been one of the most stable democracies on the continent for twenty years. Recently there has been complaints against the government, primarily because of inflation. In the past year the cost of living has gone up 30%. Uruguay depends upon principally two agricultural products-wool and meat. Uruguayans have been eating most of their own meat lately because world markets for wool and meat have been depressed.

To ease the problem, trade with Communist nations has been expanded at a rate that will soon put the Soviet Bloc ahead of any Western country as Uruguays' best customer.

Last Sunday Uruguay held general elections. The voters turned to the right. The Nationals came into power and were cautious about announcing what they would do after their sudden emergence into power. They were thought likely, however, to devalue the currency and institute a "sound money" policy, reduce subsidies to industry, and cut back on imports not needed for production.

TOKYO

Last week Filipino President Carlos P. Garcia who was an anti-Japanese underground leader during the war flew to Tokyo for a state visit. He told the Japanese people, "Time the great healer has been at work . . The bitterness of former years is being washed away." Saturday the Presidential Party flew home. Both sides appeared to have advanced their basic purposes-to dispel mistrust, tighten economic relations and widen cultural exchange. The Japanese laid the ground work for a treaty of friendship which would symbolize a new era in Tokyo's relations with the Phillipines. In Tokyo and Manila the consensus was that the visit has done much to strengthen the free world's position in the Western Pacific.

BERLIN

Last week it became clear that the new Soviet challenge to the West over Berlin was a challenge to the entire Western position in Germany and Europe itself. Although Russia insisted that her only immediate concern was Berlin, there was no question in the West that she was also using the city as a lever to force reappraisals of the Continent. All Western government's made plain they would stay in Berlin.

Soviet Premier Khrushchev in the Thanksgiving Day note that raised his challenge to the West, demanded that West Berlin become a demilitarized free city. He gave the West six months to think about this and negotiate it. Secretary of State Dulles will hold a meeting at Paris next week with British and French foreign ministers to discuss what to say to Khruschev.

Outing Club Begins Ski Season

The UVM Outing Club began its ski season last week-end with a very successful trip to Jeffersonville. As the winter progresses, the club will sponsor trips to many of the ski areas, and is also planning a five day inter-semester ski trip to Canada.

This Saturday, December 13, a group is going to cut greens as decorations for the Round Table Christmas Dinner. The meeting will be in front of Waterman at 1:30 p.m. Any willing workers will be appreciated. This outing promises to be a lot of fun, since the method of transportation is the back of a truck.

Regular Outing Club meetings are held on Wednesday evenings at 7:30 in rm. 216 Waterman; new members are always welcome.

Cosmopolitan

On December 13, at 8:00 P.M., in the Vermont Room of the Home Economics Building, the Cosmopolitan Club is holding an informal party for its members and their guests. Admission is 25¢ per person, refreshments will be served.

Pinnings "do." around the green Just Notes And Quotes

A recent Monday evening was a very busy one at the Alpha Chi House. First, Donna Macey, '61, was serenaded to the Sigma Nus for becoming pinned to John Moore, '61. Then the Theta Chis arrived to serenade Carole Marshlowe, '60, on her pinning to Jack Tassey, '60. Following that the Owls came over and serenaded Polly Klentner, '60, and Bob Bolting, '60.

Two more Owls are engaged - Allen Aube to Cynthia Robbins and Raymond Goudreau to June Fiddler.

Andrew Janse, '59, pinned Ola Wahabir, '60, of Russell Sage College. Andy is a Sig Ep.

Everyone was happily surprised at the combined Phi-Delt - Tri-Delt exchange dinner when Sherril McWhinney, Tri-Delta and Danny Bianca, Phi-Delta announced their engagement.

Jim Bates became engaged to Linda Goodman of B.U. and Jan Wade a pinned Susan Zuckerman of New Rochelle, New York over Thanksgiving vacation. Both are Phi Sigs.

ALPHA CHI OMEGA

Congratulations to Bonnie Riggs, Sandy Hutton, and Carol Thomas, who are new members.

ALPHA EPSILON PHI

AEPhi's exchange dinner program is in full swing; pleasant evenings have been spent with Sig Ep, Alpha Chi and Pi Phi.

The theme of AEPhi's annual fall party, "West Side Story", was excellent. The appropriate garb was worn by everyone to their gay affair.

Refreshments and many door prizes added to the fun of their Card Party.

GAMMA PHI BETA

Gamma Phi's Annual Pie Party was delightful and well-attended. Who can resist jazz, pie, and a French atmosphere?

The 84th Founders' Day celebration was shared with Gamma Phi's alumni. A coffee hour followed the traditional ceremony.

KAPPA ALPHA THETA

The Thetas were pleased to have their new District President, Mrs. Becker, visit them. Like other sororities they have discovered that individual talks with their District President have been helpful in answering difficult questions and clarifying the duties of their official positions.

Theta's alumnae from Burlington treated them again at a social function. This time a luncheon was arranged for everyone, which was enjoyed immensely.

Fulfilling the collegian's desire for good jazz and dixieland, Phinney's Favorite Five from Williams College played to a packed house of eager students. The Thetas were very happy with the response.

LAMBDA IOTA

The Owls made plans for their Christmas Formal the 5th of December, and the Annual Beach Party which followed on the 6th.

Newly elected officers are John Homer Klinck, Pledgemaster and Richard Metcalf, Asst. Pledgemaster.

Stanley Van Horn, Robert Valler, Russell White, Grant Corson and John Homer Klinck attended the Debutantes Cotillion and Thanksgiving Ball at the "New" Hotel Statler in Washington, D.C., during the Thanksgiving vacation.

Mansfield House has presented the Owls with a new addition to the family. It's a girl - a four months old, Labrador Retriever appropriately named "Mansfield".

PI BETA PHI

Red checkered tablecloths, candles in wine bottles and dimly lit rooms set the scene for the Pi Phis' Hernando Hide-away party. A large crowd of hungry UVMers enjoyed vast amounts of spaghetti and root beer at the colorful supper.

SIGMA PHI EPSILON

Two more men have been initiated into Sig Ep. They are Frederick Norton and David Morriman.

THETA CHI

During the past month, the Theta Chis visited the Children's Home in Burlington to offer their services. They helped improve the appearance of the grounds as well as prepare the skating rink for the winter. Such thoughtfulness should be highly commended!

Dick Emery is a new pledge of Theta Chi.

concerned with the financial end of Kake Walk. He will assist in the management of the monetary records and will be involved with seating arrangements at Memorial Auditorium. Another important job is procuring the trophies and the traditional cakes.

Lawrence Brown is the Assistant in charge of production. He has many vital functions in the preparation of the annual event including work with the skits and skit directors, which will include rehearsal and staging. He will also be instrumental in the ultimate success of the Kake Walk Ball.

A very important consideration is the "walking" itself. Fred Mandell handles this department. He schedules rehearsals for the walkers and work directly with them. The King and Queen candidates come under his supervision also. In line with this he is in charge of the Royalty Reception.

Publicity will be Paul Dye's category of operation. His largest project is the Kake Walk Program. He also handles window displays downtown and in addition to this he sets up and takes charge of the Poster Contest. Later on will be involved with the Snow Sculpture competition.

The Kake Walk Directors, Alan Overton of Phi Delta Theta; Wales Newell, Sigma Alpha Epsilon; and Richard Marron, Tau Epsilon Phi have welcomed the newly appointed Assistants and informed them of their various tasks. The wheels are turning now and Directors and Assistants alike are working toward another successful Kake Walk.

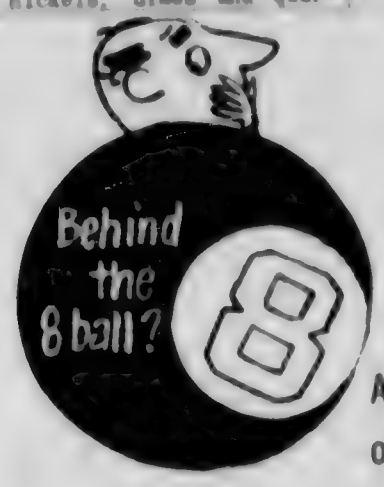
THE PROBLEM CORNER



The last problem was not printed as it was submitted, so let's try again.

Problem

A cash box contains $12.20 in nickels, dimes and quarters. If twice the number of dimes is less than the number of nickels, twice the number of quarters is less than the number of dimes, and five times the number of quarters is more than the number of nickels, how many coins of each kind are in the box?

Leave solutions to these problems at the office of Professor Schoenmaker, Room 341, Waterman, no later than Monday of the week following publication of the problem.

"A Cynical View Of The Ivy Leaguer At UVM"

We all have come in contact with that slim-hipped, clean limbed member of American youth known as the Ivy Leaguer. Ivy Leaguers come in various shades of loden green and are usually followed by the unmistakeable aroma of Shetland wool and pipe smoke. Our tweedy friend has four prize possessions: his meerschaum pipe, which he never lights due to the fact that he never learned how to smoke the thing; his flask of . . . or . . . rubbing alcohol; his petit Triumph TR-3, custom designed with a button-down license plate; and of course, his books, which are invaluable to him, for how would he ever keep that neat crease in his pants without them. This fellow is so gone on ivy, he even has the stuff growing up his leg. Mr. Rah is an advocate of the modern, up-to-date way of life as indicated by the fraternity to which he belongs: Nu Nu Nu.

Well, one of these fellows didn't go to Dartmouth and he didn't go to Yale - he liked girls - and so he came to UVM where the grass grows green and the ivy grows not.

They took away his car, and they made him give up his meerschaum for corn cob, the snow killed his ivy and the spirit killed his ego. And here is what happened to our Ivy Leaguer.

Treasurer Presents Financial Report

As I told you in the office this morning, this is the letter which I have prepared for publication in the CYNIC.

The first part of this report will naturally concern itself with the financial matters of Student Association. Since the opening of school in September, S.A. has granted a total of $2,931.75 in supplementary and special requests. This money comes from the unallocated fees or the surplus which was mentioned in my last report. On top of all this S.A. will sponsor the basketball games which are to be carried over WRUV.

The other financial problem which S.A. has considered recently was a request from President Fay to have the money which S.A. receives from the Vending Machines be used to provide money to support our athletic program until the Alumni Association could provide the funds necessary. I was in favor of this program and the S.A. Council also approved of it. It is my personal opinion that anything that can be done to strengthen the athletic program on this campus is worthwhile. However, I can foresee some problems which will arise from this, and I feel that the students should consider the problem and make some suggestions. That is, Vending Machines Committee has about $5,000.00 which is given out annually to various organizations for projects of a non-recurring nature. As far as I can see, these projects must now be financed from another source, and the only place where it would be practical to get the money would be from S.A. This will put an additional drain on S.A. funds and will further curtail many activities which are now sponsored by S.A.

There are various ways . . . I feel S.A. can raise . . . money to cover this . . . However, I would appr . . . hearing from any of you . . . garding this matter.

I would like to . . . this time that S.A. Fi . . . Committee and the . . . have approved a new . . . for Purchase orders. It . . . wishes to get approval . . . purchase made on S.A. . . . all that is necessary w . . . the approval of the organiza . . . tion Treasurer and its . . . This eliminates the appro . . . of The S.A. Treasurer, . . . putting more responsi . . . on the organization Treas . . . If an organization overdraws . . . its S.A. account, the Council . . . may suspend that organiza . . . tion's privilege of receiving . . . funds or recommend even more . . . drastic action to the Student . . . Advisory Council.

Lastly I would like to in . . . terject some of my own per . . . sonal opinions on a pet peeve . . . of mine. It seems that in . . . this university we have a . . . great number of faculty-stu . . . dent Committees. I am in favor . . . of having things done by . . . committees rather than by . . . large bodies. However, I do . . . feel that if there is a commit . . . mittee which is set up to act . . . on certain things, it should . . . be the final authority or . . . that matter. I am thinking of . . . a case where a faculty-student . . . committee was deliberating on . . . a particular question which I . . . was personally in favor of. . . . However, one member of the . . . committee opposed it most . . . wholeheartedly. In the course . . . of a discussion with this . . . member he said, in essence, . . . that it really didn't matter . . . what the committee decided, he . . . was within his juridiction to . . . deny the request and he would . . . do so.

My point in bringing this . . . forth is that it would seem . . . that if there is a committee . . . it should be binding to every . . . one. In this particular case . . . the committee denied the re . . . quest. However, even if the . . . Committee had granted the . . . request, the particular member . . . of the administration could . . . have reversed the decision of . . . the committee at will. If . . . this is what can happen, why . . . should we bother with commit . . . tees?

ADVENTURES IN SOCIAL SCIENCE: NO. 1

The proper study of mankind is man," said Geoffrey Chaucer in his immortal Canny At the Bat, and I couldn't agree more. In these tangled times it is particularly proper to study man—how he lives and works. Accordingly, this column, normally devoted to slapstick waggery, will from time to time turn a serious eye on the social sciences.

In making these occasional departures, I have the hearty approval of the makers of Philip Morris Cigarettes, whose interest is not only in providing young Americans with fine cigarettes, matchlessly blended of vintage tobaccos, grown with loving care and harvested with tender mercy, then cured with compassionate patience and rolled into firm tasty cylinders and brought to you in long size or regular, in soft pack or flip-top box, at prices which wreak no havoc on the most stringent of budgets, but who are equally concerned with broadening the minds and extending the intellectual vistas of every college man and woman.

I, for one, am not unmoved by this great-heartedness, and though I know it is considered chic these days to disparage one's employers, I shall not. Indeed, I shall cry "Huzzah!" for the makers of Philip Morris. I shall cry "Huzzah!" and "Viva!" and "Olé!" and "Geluchtenstva!"

But I digress. For our first lesson in social science, let us turn to economics, often called the queen of the social sciences. (Sociology is the king of the social sciences. Advertising is the jack.)

Economics breaks down into two broad general classifications: 1) coins, 2) folding money. But before taking up these technical aspects, let us survey briefly the history of economics.

Economics was discovered by the Englishman, Adam Smith. He published his findings in 1786, but everybody giggled so hard that Smith, blushing hotly, gave up the whole thing and went into the cough drop business with his brother.

For long years after that economics lay neglected while the world busied itself with other things, like the birth of Victor Hugo, the last days of Pompeii, and the Bunny Hug.

Then one day while flying a kite during a thunderstorm, the American, Henry George (also called Thorstein Veblen), discovered the law of diminishing returns, and then, boy, the fat was in the fire! Before you could say "knife" the Industrial Revolution was on! Mechanization and steam power resulted in prodigies of production. For example, before the Industrial Revolution, a Welsh artisan, named Dylan Sigafoos, used to make horse-shoes by hand at the rate of four a day. After the Industrial Revolution, with the aid of a steam engine, Sigafoos was able to make entire horses.

And so it went—factories rising from the plains, cities burgeoning around the factories, transport and commerce keeping pace—until today, thanks to economics, we have smog, recessions, and economics textbooks at $7.50 per copy.

© 1958 Max Shulman

The makers of Philip Morris are no economists, but they do understand supply and demand. Some people demand filter cigarettes, so they supply the finest—Marlboro, of course! Great flavor, improved filter—a lot to like!

Cadet Heller Initiated Into Air Society

Cadet Jerome Heller of New York City was initiated into the Arnold Air Society at a formal ceremony held in the Air Science Building on 11 November 1958.

The Arnold Air Society is a national honorary society for Advanced AFROTC Cadets. The Colonel Richard Walker Robinson Squadron at the University of Vermont, whose commander is Cadet Captain Hugh L. Hunter, was organized in 1952 and has sponsored University Blood Drives and the Military Ball. This collegiate honorary society serves to promote better understanding among AFROTC Cadets about the United States Air Force. Members wear a blue and gold fourragere and a distinctive ribbon.

Members are selected from those Advanced Course Cadets who are outstanding in academic achievement as well as in leadership ability and exhibit of a high degree of interest in the United States Air Force and the military security of the United States. These cadets are pledged if they are acceptable to all the regular members of the society.

A Campus-to-Career Case History

"I wanted a job I could grow with —and I've got it"

H. James Cornelius graduated from Swarthmore College in 1954 with a B.S. in Electrical Engineering. He's been "growing" ever since with the Bell Telephone Company of Pennsylvania.

After an initial 44-week inter-departmental training course, Jim was made Facility Engineer in charge of the fast-growing Norristown-Pottstown area. In that capacity, he engineered over half a million dollars' worth of carrier systems and cable facilities between major switching centers.

Today, he is one of 50 young engineers from the Bell Telephone Companies chosen to attend a special Operating Engineers Training Program at Bell Laboratories. This 19-month course of study—with full pay—deals with advanced techniques and new concepts in electronics which signal a new era in telephony. It involves both classroom theory and practical laboratory applications.

When Jim and his colleagues return to their companies, they'll review major engineering projects. This will assure the best use of equipment for current engineering, as well as for expected new developments in communications.

"I wanted a job I could grow with," says Jim, "and I've got it. I can't think of a better place than the telephone company for an engineering graduate to find a promising future."

Many young men like Jim Cornelius are finding rewarding careers with the Bell Telephone Companies. Look into opportunities for you. Talk with the Bell interviewer when he visits your campus. And read the Bell Telephone booklet on file in your Placement Office.

Hoopsters Beaten By Dartmouth, 82-64; Lord Scores 25 Points

by BOB KOONES

Before a capacity crowd of ,900 at Dartmouth College, the niversity of Vermont basketball eam was defeated, 82-64, while fficially opening its 1958-59 eason last Wednesday night. This is the first of a twenty game schedule the Catamounts have this year, but don't let this score be indicative of their chances in the contests which are to f llow.

Vermont's starting team averaged 6' 1" as compared to Dartmouth's 6'6", and this was the vital factor in contributing to Dartmouth's victory. The outcome had Dartmouth on top by eighteen points, but the game was much closer than the final score indicates. The Catamounts trailed at halftime by only five points, 39-34, and with nine minutes remaining in the game, UVM led by one basket.

The big difference in the scoring department was Dartmouth's Charlie Kaufman, a junior guard from Brooklyn, New York, who scored 26 points and was high man for both teams. Twenty-one of Kaufman's points came in the first half and at half-time, Coach Fuzzy Evans changed defensive assignments. Charlie Isles, a junior forward, was assigned the difficult task of guarding the hot hand of Kaufman, and this he did to perfection. The entire second half saw Kaufman score only a meager five points, which we can attribute to the brilliant defensive ability of Charlie Isles.

However, while stopping their scoring punch, we were unable to stop their rebounding power. Coach Doggy Julian of Dartmouth went to his bench in the second half and inserted a team that averaged five inches in height more than UVM. Led by Captain Rudy LaRusso at 6'7", Dan Berry at 6'6", and George Remming at 6'5", Dartmouth was able to control the boards and that was the keynote to its success.

As for our scoring ability, we had three men reach double figures, with Clyde Lord leading in that department with a total of 25 points. Charlie Isles and Bob Gallagher had ten points apiece. A special note of recognition should be given to Clyde Lord, who not only led the team in scoring, but in rebounds too. He hit for 48% of his shots and pulled down 13 rebounds.

Although never in serious trouble throughout the game, the Dartmouth Club was unable to let up at any time. The Catamounts were determined and fought hard in their vain attempt to upset last year's Ivy League Champions. The proof of their determined fight was the standing ovation given to them at the end of the game. What the Catamounts lacked in height, was made up in spirit, courage, and heart. Our basketball team made a showing that we all can be proud of and they deserve our complete support. Let's show them that the student body has as much spirit as the team does itself and support them at every home game.

Frosh Five Drop First Two; Bow To Indians And Knights

by MARTY COLE

Last Wednesday night at Hanover, the University of Vermont Freshman basketball team lost its first game in a hard fought battle to Dartmouth by a score of 72-50.

The Green and Gold five stayed right with the Hanoverians in the first half, which ended with the score 32-30 in favor of Dartmouth. In the second half, the hosts used a running offense which proved to be too much for the Kitten five. The height of the Dartmouth team controlled most of the rebounding throughout the game. This was another factor which contributed to the Dartmouth victory.

Among the top Vermont scorers were Dave Brandstein with 11 points, Low with 9, Wilkinson and DeNicola with 6, and Evans and Lamm, each with 4. Brown led the Dartmouth five with 14 points, followed by Brower with 12.

Ralph Lapointe, freshman coach, feels that with more practice the Kittens would have made a better showing. He looks forward to seeing much improvement in the team's coming games. Coach Lapointe thinks that our offense was good but out defense must improve somewhat if we expect to win in the future.

The Kitten's first two games are against the strongest competition that they will encounter all season, Dartmouth and St. Michael's. So, in future games the UVM Freshman hoopsters can look forward to a good season.

by JONNY KAPLAN

The Freshman basketball team sustained its second straight loss at the hands of the Purple Knights from St. Michael's, 49-38. St. Michael's quickly jumped off to a 9-0 lead before Dave Brandstein canned a foul shot. After playing a very jittery first three minutes, the boys settled down to chip away at the deficit. They cut the Knights' lead to 10-8 before the guns from Winooski started getting hot. Down by ten points, the Kittens again started working on St. Michael's lead. They cut the margin to two points (21-19) on a long jump shot by Bart Jeffrey. At this point there was a lapse in the foul shooting of coach Ralph Lapointe's squad which hurt the team considerably. The half ended with the Vermonters on the short end of a 23-21 score.

The Purple Knights opened the second half with two quick baskets making the score 27-19 before UVM could get started.

We tied St. Mikes 28-28 midway in the third quarter. From this point on it was all St. Michael's. They jumped ahead, 33-28, and the Kittens could never quite catch up. Paced by Emmeth and Holjacki with 18 points apiece, St. Mikes proved too strong for the fighting frosh.

COOP'S HOOP BY STEVE COOPER

Welcome back, basketball fans, and I hope all of you had a fine Thanksgiving holiday.

November, 1958, is now history, and with the arrival of December, we now have the beginning of the 1958-59 Collegiate basketball season. Before I continue, I would like to rectify an error which appeared in my first column. John Pipczynski, of UCONN, WILL be returning this season, and from all reports, he'll be holding down a starting corner position.

If you will recall, in my last column, I previewed the coming season, with emphasis on the Eastern collegiate picture. Let's see now how the rest of the country shapes up.

In the Southeast Conference, Kentucky doesn't seem to have the potential to repeat its 1957-8 year as "champs." Johnny Cox is the team's only returning starter. Mississippi State, with 6'7" Bailey Howell, looks like the league favorite. West Virginia with Jerry West, looks as though she will hold a solid spot in the Southern Conference, for this 6'3" star returns with two other fine lettermen. George Washington seems to be the only other club which has a chance to "de-throne" the "Mountaineers."

The way the teams appear in the rough, tough Atlantic Conference, there could be a wide open battle for top honors. North Carolina State has its entire starting line-up back. Maryland has tremendous strength up front, with four experienced returnees at 6'6" or better. Of course, there is always North Carolina with its great recruiting coach, Frank McGuire, to pose a threat. Although McGuire lost Pete Brennan and Tommy Kearns, he still has 6'7" Lee Schaffer, and 6'1" Harvey Salz, a real sharpshooter, not to mention a fine crop of "sophs", one of whom is Doug Moe, a former New York City high school standout.

Next we turn to the Midwest, where basketball is "King." Year after year, the Big Ten produces some of the finest basketball talent in the country. In the past years, such outstanding players as Bob Leonard and Don Schlunt of Indiana; John Kerr of Illinois; and last year's big ten M.V.P. Archie Dees (also of Indiana), have won all-American honors. This year, however, Michigan State looks good with 6'5" leaper, Johnny Green. The league, as a whole, has considerably good balance. Purdue, by the way, has an all veteran team returning, and could pull an upset.

Of the midwestern independents, Xavier looks strong. This "Cinderella" team of last year, pulled one of the year's biggest upsets by winning the N.I.T. She, surprisingly enough, received, a bid, despite a mediocre record of 15 wins-11 losses. To cap it off, she beat Dayton in the finale, after Dayton had beaten her twice during regular season play. Notre Dame is in good shape with 6'5" Tom Hawkins and classy playmaker, Gene Duffy. Coach Tom Blackburn, of Dayton, will have to perform miracles to equal last year's fine record of 25-4.

In the Prarie States, Kansas State and Cincinnati look like the top representatives of that area. Kansas State, which won the Big 7 Title of last year, has three returning starters, including two 6'8" men, namely, Bob Boozer and Wally Frank. Kansas, with Wilt Chamberlin in its line-up, was runner-up last year. It has, basically, the same roster it had last season, but is lacking the seven foot wonder who left the amateur ranks to launch a "pro" career. The Missouri Conference will have a good, competitive race with Cincinnati as the team to beat. (Oscar Robertson would make any team a threat). However, the league is well-balanced, and from this corner, a wide open race seems likely.

Seattle and San Francisco, the two outstanding Far Western teams of the past five years, will both have their troubles during 1958-59. Seattle, even though it retains most of its last year's men, lost valuable Elgin Baylor to the "pros". At San Francisco, home of the fabulous Bill Russell, they lack the big man underneath. Their 6'9" Art Day was dismissed as a player, due to disciplinary rules. Perhaps, the most exciting team and certainly the one to watch this year is Gonzaga University, which has 7'3" Jean Claude Lefebre, a French import. This team could give its opponents severe competition.

In the Pacific Coast Conference, Washington's Huskies look like winners all the way with one of the best big men combinations in the country, with 6'9" Bruno Boin and 6'7" Doug Smart.

That's it for now fans. Next week, we'll screen the National Basketball Association's professional ranks.

Skiers Confident Of Successful Season

Travel To Franconia This Weekend

by BOB GOLDMAN

It seems that the UVM ski team is well stocked with all types of skiers for the coming season. There is almost an equal distribution of both Nordic and Alpine skiers. The Nordic events consist of the cross-country and jumping divisions, while the Alpine events consist of the downhill and slalom divisions.

This year's captain is Frank Giordano, who also filled one of the guard positions on the football team. Frank is a Nordic skier, but will double in the Alpine events if he has to. He graduated from Lyndon Institute in St. Johnsbury, served two years with the army, and is now a senior here at UVM. He has been described as "a little guy with a lot of desire and determination."

Although he only weighs in at 130 lbs., and is only 5'5" in stature, Dan Measman is one of the top Nordic skiers on the team. His best performances have been in the cross-country events. If necessary, he can also ski Alpine. Two newcomers to the team, both sophomores, are Robin Wheeler and Tom Hackett. Wheeler is a transfer student from McGill where he skied in varsity competition. He is an excellent four way skier, having gained much experience at Deerfield Academy. Hackett, who hails from Burlington, is also an outstanding 4 way man. Both are contenders for the team.

The number 1 man on the team is Jake Stewart. He is the top Alpine skier on the team, but also performs equally as well in the Nordic events. He skied for the Hanover High School team in Hanover, N.H., and also for the Dartmouth freshman team before he came to Vermont as a transfer student. He is at the present time the only class A skier on the team, and was once a candidate for the American Federation of International skier's team. This team is comparable to the Olympics.

Contenders for other positions on the 8 man team along with Wheeler and Hackett are Steve Barry, a sophomore from Burlington, Tom Amidon from Montpelier, Steve Coppe from Rutland, junior Ken Eaton from Grandy Center, and George Silver from Natick, Mass.

Coach Sam Miller feels that this year's team has much more depth than last year's. This is apparent in the fact that last season there was only one man in class B, besides Stewart who was class A. This year there are six potential class B skiers. The skiers are classified by the U.S. Eastern Ski Association. The announcement of classifications will be out in a short while.

The Varsity squad opens its season on Dec. 13 and 14at Franconia, N.H. in a pre-season meet against several schools. The two schools which are expected to give the Catamounts the most trouble are Dartmouth and Middlebury.

Catamount Clippings

I PROPOSE!

The scholarship program at the University of Vermont is at a standstill, and headed nowhere. Each year, individuals suggest different ways to improve our athletic teams by the widely employed scholarship method. The state refuses to grant "free rides" to athletes matriculating at its University, resulting in unheard cries and objections of coaches and students alike. Still, our teams must play full Yankee Conference schedules, and participate in the state series. Without the horses, we can't win the race.

In the state of New Jersey, Montclair High School consistently produces top notch football teams, as well as winners in other sports. Their success is a direct result of a carefully organized "farm system," whereby the best athletes from the surrounding grammar schools are fed into the vast Montclair programs. Some of UVM's finest football players have come from this talented arena. Among them have been LeRoy Williams, John Galascione, and currently Lou Petronacci.

If this type of system can operate successfully for a high school, it should be equally as successful for a state university. Here in Vermont, the best athletes do not attend their state university, but are lured to other more attractive institutions.

Since the scholarship program has been frustrated, perhaps this University could turn to the use of a "farm system." This would require the cooperation of coaches all over the state, as the finest ball players would be siphoned into the UVM gas tank. Our Director of Athletics could assume the title of State Athletic Coordinator, and our basketball, baseball, and other coaches would take control of their respective sports. It would then be possible for the University of Vermont to retain home grown athletes and put them to work for their state school. The question is then raised, "Wouldn't other schools still be able to offer more?" No!

The University of Vermont has a high and respected academic standing, more so than some of the big athletic institutions. Although the athletes would only be receiving free tuition, they would still be spared the added expense of traveling to and from schools located in the South, mid and far West. Furthermore, the majority of these schools award only tuition and board scholarships to their athletes. Here, we would still face the problem of board for the athletes.

At the present time, only one fraternity on this campus gives board scholarships to athletes. If each of the other houses were to contribute one board scholarship per year, fifteen athletes would then receive free food. The problem of living accommodations is next on the list. If these fifteen athletes were allowed to work off their room obligations, this problem would then be eliminated. The University could create jobs for these men, such as concessions at ball games, testing service jobs, and maintenance work for the school. Perhaps an intradormitory laundry service could be set up. There are many unexplored possibilities.

Under this proposed set-up, the University of Vermont could easily obtain fifteen athletes per year. The total cost to the University would be $4,500 per year. That seems like little enough to pay for top notch teams. Out of the fifteen scholarships, four could be used for football, three for basketball, four for baseball, two for cross country-track, and one each for tennis and skiing.

Currently, the University can award a maximum of eight scholarships per year. If the number is raised to fifteen full instate scholarships, there is no reason for UVM to have losing teams. With the installation of such a program, Vermont could skyrocket to athletic fame.

Hoopsters Win First Yankee Conference Tilt

Hustle was the key word in the Vermont win over the University of New Hampshire last Saturday night at Memorial Auditorium, 78-67. Paced by Charlie Isles and Bob Gallagher, the hoopsters took the lead in the opening moments and kept it throughout the whole game. It was Vermont's first Yankee Conference win, and reaffirmed the sports writers' feelings that it will be Vermont who will have the best chance of upending the perennial Conference champs, the University of Connecticut.

The Catamounts opened the Wildcats' zone defense that had three men collapsing on Clyde Lord in the middle, forcing the Cats to shoot from the outside. The only trouble with the UNH strategy was that Captain Bob Kuchar and Charlie Isles hit consistently. Not to mention the tremendous tap in shots and rebounding by Gallagher and Lord. To make matters worse for the Wildcats, the fast break was used by Vermont to perfection. The only really bright spot for New Hampshire was Tim Lindman, whose soft-touching hook shot, and "bullfish" rebounding kept the Wildcats always within striking range. In the second half, the Vermont shooting and ball handling was noticably off. As UNH closed the gap to make it 54-52, favor of Vermont, one could almost feel the tenseness in the auditorium.

But Gallagher took charge to open it to four points, then Kuchar, Lord and Isles punched home enough points to run it to 72-60, with 1:45 to play. Hitting well from the outside and on drives, Kuchar led Vermont with 22 points while Gallagher added 20. Even though Lord was noticably off in his shooting, he contributed 16. Next was Isles with 14 points. Lord was literally all over the court and amazed the fans with his lightning passes and bone crushing rebounding. Also doing a fine job was Frank Giordano and Ray Weiner.

With the football season now at an end, the fraternity men began to warm up the hoops this past week. On December 2, the interfraternity basketball league got off to a fast start under the direction of Mr. Strassburg. In the first game of the night Delta Psi defeated Sigma Phi Epsilon by a score of 43 to 29. Fitzgerald with 10 points and Holbie with 12 were the high scorers for the victors. Alpha Tau Omega put the strings on Sigma Nu as they won the game 36 to 19. To round out the evening, Alpha Epsilon Pi beat Sigma Phi 36-21 with Leny Meshkin as high scorer for AEPi. Tau Epsilon Phi was a little too much for Theta Chi as it rolled to an easy 55 to 9 score. High men on the hoops for TEP were Hyman, Cohen and Shifrin.

On the dormitory circuit, Converse beat Buckham by a surprising score of 55 to 22, while Wills managed to edge out a victory over Phelps 29 to 27.

This week promises some exciting games as the rest of the houses and dorms put the records on the line.

VERMONT TAKES A 2 - 3 RECORD INTO THE TOURNAMENT

by STEPHEN PRODER

Tonight the St. Michael's College Invitational Tournament opens at Memorial Auditorium with Vermont playing Assumption of Worcester in the opener and the Knights of St. Michael's playing LeMoyne of Syracuse in the second game. The winners of the two encounters will play Friday night for the tourney championship while the losers compete for consolation honors.

The St. Michael's Tournament was inaugurated last year by Athletic Director George "Doc" Jacobs. The Purple Knights captured first place laurels last year by defeating Adelphi College and will be out to retain their championship. Vermont, in last year's tourney, had to settle for third place.

Vermont opened the season with a loss to Dartmouth, but bounced back with victories over New Hampshire and Norwich. The Catamounts returned this week from an unsuccessful trip to Orono, Maine where they were upended by the Black Bears of the University of Maine. The Maine team proved to be a taller and more rugged team than Vermont which forced the Catamounts to shoot from the outside.

Vermont To Play Host To 55th Annual APA Meeting To Begin Honoring Dewey

by LYNN GREENBERG

The American Philosophical Association (Eastern Division) is holding its 55th annual meeting from December 27-29 at the University of Vermont. This meeting will begin the celebration of the 100th anniversary of the birth of John Dewey, one of the university's most distinguished alumni.

Dewey was born October 20, 1859; celebrations in his honor will continue throughout 1959 in all parts of the civilized world. Representatives from all over the country as well as Canada will be in attendance. Between 500 to 600 persons are expected to attend the various sessions of the conference.

Prof. George Dykhuisen is the chairman of the forthcoming APA Conference which will celebrate the 100th birthday of one of UVM's most outstanding graduates, John Dewey.

Of special interest to members of the university community will be the opening session, when papers relating to the background of Dewey's philosophy will be given. The opening paper of this session will be on; John Dewey, the Vermont Years, and will be given by Professor George Dykhuizen of the University of Vermont. The second paper is entitled The Social Sources of Dewey's Philosophy and will be delivered by Professor Lewis S. Feuer, formerly of the department of philosophy at UVM, and now at the University of California. The third paper will be by Professor Charles W. Hendel of Yale University, and will be on the subject John Dewey and the Philosophical Division.

Members of the university and local communities are cordially invited to attend all sessions of the conference.

The American Philosophical Association normally holds its meetings on university campuses, and the University of Vermont this year has kindly offered to be host to the members. Professor Dykhuizen is in charge of the three day meeting and has made arrangements for members to be accomodated both in women's residences on Redstone campus and in the local hotels.

There will be on exhibit in Southwick items relating to John Dewey's years in Burlington and in the university. Arrangements have been made for members in attendance to visit Dewey's birthplace and other places of interest in connection with his early life.

Most of the sessions will be held on the Redstone campus

Sketches Reveal Proposed Library

Vermont unveiled architectural sketches of its proposed new library. The modern structure was designed by Freeman, French and Freeman Architects of Burlington.

The library, termed "a critical need" by UVM President John T. Fey, would provide reading and study areas for 650 students and space for 500,000 volumes.

The University will ask the 1959 Legislature to provide a $2,000,000 bond issue, which would permit immediate action on the building. Half that figure would be paid back to the state over a period of years through a $30 library fee to be charged each student.

Replacing Billings Library, which was built for a student body of 400 in 1885, the new structure would be located on the East Campus.

Its interior would be of open, free-access design, with a minimum number of walls and closed spaces. The building would house books, documents and periodicals presently located in Billings Library and other campus buildings, and would include the Marsh and Wilbur Libraries and the Stephens-Whittinghan collection.

The four-story structure would be rectangular, utilizing a curtain wall of brick with glass, with glass-en-

Measures Taken To Preserve Wilbur Fund

The Board of Trustees Saturday authorized President Fey to "take all reasonable steps to preserve and maintain the Wilbur Fund for the benefit of deserving Vermont students."

The University had earlier indicated that the fund of more than $2,000,000 which provides scholarship assistance to Vermont students, might be jeopardized by continued increases in enrollments. The late James B. Wilbur, who provided the fund, stipulated that enrollment in the University's College of Arts and Sciences should not exceed 1,000-students. Population increases have permitted the 1,000 figure to be raised to 1,064.

The resolution passed by the UVM Board today follows:

"Whereas the demand for higher education is growing year by year, and whereas the number of Vermont students is constantly increasing, and whereas the trustees do not desire to ever limit the admission of qualified Vermont students," and whereas the assistance of the Wilbur Fund has been of inestimable value to thousands of Vermont students in the past, and whereas there is a present need for more scholarship funds than are available even with the use of all the income from the Wilbur Fund,

"Now therefore --

"The president of the university is hereby directed to take all reasonable steps to preserve and maintain the Wilbur Fund for the benefit of deserving Vermont students."

Mortar Board Means Service To Senior Girls

The words mortar board can mean many things to many people, but to thousands of women all over the country Mortar Board signifies outstanding service, scholarship, and leadership. These women represent the 98 chapters of this honor society for senior women.

Although Mortar Board was founded forty years ago, it was not until 1924 that UVM's group became Akraia chapter of the national organization. Locally, Mortar Board has an unusually large membership of 15 this year, led by their president, Dianne Morse. The advisors are Miss Florence Woodard, Mrs. Samuel N. Bogarad, and Mr. Bryan J. Mosher.

After helping with Freshman Orientation in the fall, the next project of the group was the President's Reception and dance for seniors on October 17. Homecoming brought the traditional Mortar Board Mum Sale. Other activities of the group include campus tours for prospective students, a discussion by President Fey entitled "Where is UVM Going?" Meetings with both alumnae and the Middlebury Mortar Boards. In the future, the honorary will sponsor a "Bright Night" for Dean's List students, initiation ceremonies, and a breakfast for Mortar Board graduates and alumnae in June.

Almost synonymous with the name Mortar Board is tapping. Although customs vary from campus to campus, UVM Mortar Boards have for many years tapped the new members on the eve of Founder's Day, long after the junior girls are asleep. It is the hope that each new member will also discover the "privilege of service" as a Mortar Board Novel Written By UVM English Prof.

Betty Bandel, of the UVM English department, has recently published a novel entitled "Margaret Lane Cooper."

Miss Betty Bandel, a UVM faculty member in the English department since 1947, is the author of "Margaret Lane Cooper", a novel just published by Exposition Press. The book is essentially concerned with an unmarried woman's dynamic search for a productive life in the twentieth century. Although the woman remains single, her search, being a means, achieves a desirable end, that end being her fulfillment as a person.

Miss Bandel received a Bachelor of Music degree from the University of Arizona, and earned her M.A. and Ph.D. at Columbia University.

One of her research projects while at the University has been a study of Vermont history. This undertaking initially started when Miss Bandel delved into the problem of the "somewhat" apathetic feeling of many students for the University and the state itself. Pres. Fey Discusses UVM's Problems And Future Plans

by ARNOLD D. BERLINER

On December 9th, Mortar Board Society did UVM a fine service. They were responsible for President Fey's speech at the Student Lounge at 4:15. The topic was "Where is UVM going?" The major subjects discussed by Dr. Fey concerned UVM's athletic policy, tuition, and future curriculum.

It is noteworthy that Dr. Fey's first topic of discussion dealt with athletics. He called the development of UVM's athletic program important although it should not be over-emphasized. A "well balanced" plan to include all men and women of the University as well as those participating in intercollegiate sports is his goal. The reason is that the generally "poor state of physical condition of most young people calls for alarm." President Fey maintains that it is the University's duty to develop a more agressive program in regard to athletics. He, as many others, realize that this cannot be achieved with the present facilities the University offers. The ultimate emphasis, however, will be on physical fitness for everybody.

When discussing tuition, Dr. Fey upheld that the proposed increase had nothing to do with the in-state-out-of-state student ratio. Its main purpose was to increase faculty salaries. To back this theme, UVM's President mentioned that private institutions have already boosted the salaries of their faculty while others immediately plan to do so. Dr. Fey presented the belief that UVM was in danger of losing its qualified professors if the University fails to stay "in the market." To justify the aforementioned increase, it was brought out that 35-40% of the University's income arises from the state of Vermont, 40% from the student in the form of tuition, books, board, etc., and approximately 15% from the federal government and 5% from endowments to the University. Unable to obtain the necessary funds from the above sources, the student has been asked to supply the difference that was needed. To console the UVM student, Dr. Fey mentioned that the average tuition for New England private institutions will be about $1200 next year. He calls $1040 a reasonable sum but above all, "one that has to be set." For those who find it difficult to attend college for financial reasons, Dr. Fey emphasized the fact that UVM has a comparatively large loan fund for a state school, $45,000. Large scholarships can also be relied upon to ease the cost of an education. There is a major deficit, however, in the grants made to the University from out of the state. Thus the difficulty of giving out-of-state students scholarships is explained.

Concerning faculty salaries, President Fey said that Vermont now lies in the median range of all other new England institutions. UVM, nontheless, pays its professors and instructors less than private schools such as: Harvard, Yale, and Amherst. It is, however, above that of other New England state universities such as: Maine, New Hampshire, and Rhode Island but below the Universities of Massachusetts, and Connecticut. The University of Vermont must, in short, raise its present salaries at least 15% and in some cases 28% to bring them up to the level of other schools.

Dr. Fey discussed one of those subjects whose future is hard to determine. It was expressed that as far as can be seen, there will be no major curriculum changes in the near future. Dr. Fey seemed quite enthusiastic about educational television as a means of enhancing graduate work, not as a substitute for the close student-teacher contact so vital to undergraduate studies. Next month, for instance, the Medical School will employ closed-circuit television to make certain experiments available to all medical and graduate students. Such techniques will be studied and the findings used as a basis whether they will be applied to the remainder of the University. Dean Kidder expressed UVM's major obstacle to this and other objectives. The curriculum ties up with budget problems and there will be no real substantial expansion anywhere.

Dr. Fey's opening and closing remarks relate what he believes to be the main purpose of institutions of higher learning and the University of Vermont in particular. It is to increase knowledge and stimulate its acquisition as well. The outgrowth of which is to stimulate research and the graduate program.

In a domestic relations court, the judge listened intently to both sides in a case against an elderly man who was charged by his wife with nonsupport. After all the evidence was in, the judge told the defendant: "You haven't taken proper care of this good woman and I'm going to give her $25 a month."

The defendant beamed with pleasure. "That's mighty nice of Your Honor," he said, "and I'll give her a dollar or two from time to time myself."

New Kake Walk System Begins For Faculty And Staff Ticket Sale

In past years there has been a great deal of concern over the way in which Kake Walk tickets have been handled with regard to the faculty and staff at UVM.

The basic problem of course is the shortage of tickets. Due to the cut in seating capacity at Memorial Auditorium last year, tickets were available for less than half of the 900 members of the faculty and staff. The resulting problems was that there were three to four hundred people waiting in the faculty sale line. Needless to say, many were disappointed especially after standing in line for several hours and consequently wasting valuable time.

The Kake Walk Directors and Administration have been fully aware of the problem and have come up with a solution that they hope will be a more satisfactory system for all.

The new system will work in the following manner: All faculty and staff members will receive ticket application forms. On the application there will be several questions to be answered --

1) Which night one wishes to attend.
2) What price tickets are desired.
3) How many tickets are desired (1 of 2).
4) Whether or not the applicant would be willing to accept tickets for a different night.

These applications will be sent out in January and should some member of the staff or faculty be overlooked extra applications will be given out in the Dean of Administration's office.

These applications will be submitted at an early date in February, probably February 2 or 3. One will be able to submit them either through the UVM messenger service or directly to an announced place in Waterman Building.

Two or three days later, after all applications are in, the tickets will be placed in one large container from which three faculty members will draw applications, by "blind draw," until the quota is filled. Each person receiving tickets will be notified through UVM messenger service and lists will be posted in convenient places.

Two days after notification the persons who have tickets reserved will have a full afternoon to go to the Kake Walk office to pick up and pay for their tickets. Anyone failing to pick up his tickets after notification will automatically forfeit the tickets and they will be placed on general sale.

There will be those who will not like this system, but it is the feeling of the Kake Walk Directors and Administration that it will eliminate several of the major problems concerning the sale. The real and final solution to the problem awaits, of course, the construction of the gymnasium.

To the young man at the perfume counter the clerk purred: "Now here's one called 'Perhaps.' It's $35 an ounce."

"Thirty-five dollars!" exclaimed the young man. "For $35 I don't want 'Perhaps.' I want 'Sure.'"

Ever meet a pessimist?

He sees the world through dark glasses. He just knows that he'll wind up in a job he doesn't like, that he'll be underpaid, that he'll get lost in the crowd. But realistic men know these things depend largely on their own decision in choosing a career.

Realistic men look for companies that provide sound training, advancement opportunities, challenging work, stimulating associates and good pay. These are the fundamentals that insure success and progress in a career.

The Bell Telephone Companies offer these fundamentals to hard-working, ambitious realists majoring in the arts, the sciences, business or engineering. Get the whole story regarding telephone careers. Talk with the Bell interviewer when he visits your campus. Ask him about training, advancement opportunities, salary, job security. We think you'll like what you learn.

You can also get information about telephone careers by reading the Bell Telephone booklet on file in your Placement Office.

"Good Will To Men"

It is time to tie up loose ends before we all leave for vacation. Exams are around the corner with rushing and Bake Walk to follow. Because of these activities, THE CYNIC will publish one paper in January with the next issue coming out February 13, followed by our Bake Walk issue.

SAFE DRIVING CAMPAIGN

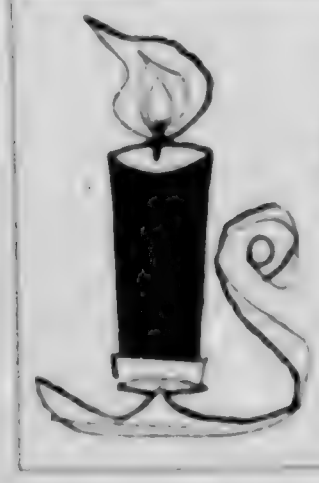
Every year this newspaper and most college newspapers take part in a safe-driving campaign. Last year 40,000 Americans were killed and 1,400,000 were injured, all on our streets and highways. The Kemper Insurance studies reveal that 85 per cent of those killed disobeyed traffic laws.

Our traffic deaths credited to UVM students this year is unblemished. Although Sunday morning it could have been marred by a near-fatal accident involving two of our students on route 22A. This terrible accident brought worries and troubles to many people who were not involved directly with the accident, but who were involved emotionally as friends and relatives. We are leaving for vacation and travelling on many icy roads. Let's all drive slowly as those extra minutes mean very little if we never get home.

WILBUR FUND

To those students who feel the school will lose the Wilbur Fund, we can be assured that this scholarship which provides between $60,000 and $70,000 yearly will be safe-guarded. Last year 590 students from the state of Vermont benefited from aid from the University's several scholarship funds, and 237 of these students received aid from the Wilbur Fund.

The University knows that this loss would be serious because our scholarship funds are very limited; and even with the help of this state, many Vermonters still need more help. Saturday the Board of Trustees authorized President Fey to assume any responsibility he may need to preserve and maintain this fund.



FRICTION

Again there have been complaints dealing with the society page. To clarify the stand of this newspaper, we feel this page depends on the cooperation of each social organization. The society editor is responsible to assign the coverage of the "social" life to each social organization, and then assume responsibility of the re-writing, make-up, and production of all material used on the society page.

Each social organization has a deadline of Thursday for all material to appear in the next week's issue. (it is preferable to have all material in by WEDNESDAY.) The society editor has a deadline on Friday morning with the George Little Press typists. If the social organizations do not want to cooperate under this system, then either we find a new one or abolish the society page entirely.

NOTICES DIFFER FROM SOCIETY PAGE

Any notice concerning a social function inviting members of the University family to participate shall be handed to one of the editors on the staff or left in the CYNIC office in the box labeled "news and feature stories". If the notice is to go on the society page, then it should be left in the box labeled "society editor".

Skating Rink

Every year for the past few years around this time of the fall talk travels fast and furious in regards to the establishment of an ice skating area for UVM students.

Once again like previous years a proposal for the establishment of such an area behind the gym has been voted down by the University Board. Apparently the necessity for such a facility, as determined by the University Board, is not great enough for the amount of time and money needed to maintain skating facilities for UVM students.

I, for one, disagree with this policy. A skating area should be a must for a State University situated in a state famous for its winter sports areas. One might argue that the other schools in this state have gone to the great expense of constructing indoor hockey rinks, no less, and have organized intercollegiate hockey teams.

In this current day and age physical fitness has been harped on over and over again. This University requires only 4 semesters of physical education and after that you are on your own. However, the UVM gym, as easily noticed, is many years out of date and is handling a student load far greater than it was intended to.

The limited facilities seem to indicate that some immediate steps toward expansion must be made. I therefore believe that although it involves some time and effort, a skating rink would be one of the best possible solutions.

I believe that a great deal of new interest in skating has been created by televised hockey games and certainly the students and fraternities are and have been sufficiently interested in skating and hockey particularly. Why not give it a try again and if it doesn't work then at least this current student body will have the satisfaction of knowing that an attempt was made.

In closing may I add that it is only through the combined efforts of the student body that anything will be accomplished. Needless to say it is almost useless for a small group of students to wave a "red flag" and expect to have anything come from it. If a request for support is made don't be afraid to back it if you believe in it.

Hoping for a rink.

Disturbed

I am very disturbed about the library from the standpoint of study purposes, as well as from the standpoint of the loss of books. This has been bothering me for quite sometime, but I have always hesitated to complain until today when I was subjected to the greatest inconsideration that I have ever known at any time since I began to use the library.

I cannot forgive the students for the unnecessary noise, but more than that, I CANNOT FORGIVE the library staff for their discourteous and inconsiderate actions which, to me, are one of the undesirable factors about studying, or should I say, attempt at studying in the Billings Library. Of all the people in the library, it is the administrators who make the most noise by speaking as loud as they would if they were outside of the library walking across the campus with a friend.

Clearing House

By Peter Schoffstall

Good Afternoon!

Several bits of wrapping paper-like paper make up the wrappings of this final "package" of Clearing House until next year. Quite a phrase: "Next year . . . until next year."

The recent University Players' triumph in their production of "Brigadoon" shows that the need is present for a real living theater on our campus, that the shows can be polished and professional, that the new arena theater in Fleming Museum is near perfect for comfort of both audience and cast and crew. I haven't spoken to anyone who did not thoroughly enjoy "Brigadoon". The show's success was due to all the individual people who made the team, and to them we owe our thanks.

From here and there also I've heard the groan: "Next time are they going to do another of those sad things?" Well, probably there will be some tragedies presented. (Current winds around Pomeroy Hall have Ed Feidner directing "Ghosts," for the Spring.)

The tradition of theater anywhere, engulfs all manner of representation. The idea behind a University Theater is to present as many types, styles and attitudes of drama as possible. The new arena theater will allow us to familiarize ourselves more closely with just what a play is . . . something some people on campus have not the slightest notion of and just the way to enjoy a play. I say this, because, so far as I know, "Brigadoon" played to the largest audience Players have had in several years. As the audience may have discovered, "Brigadoon" was not merely an entertainment piece, though the play itself, which is to say its authors, wanted much to disregard the fact. So with "Brigadoon" the success of, an idea which runs throughout the history of drama: that to really live well man must become involved . . . engage, the existentialists call it.

Further we must learn to separate our judgements of the performance, the play and the idea runs the course of the play.

TOPSY: PART THREE (BROOMS FOR BLOOMS) (Sub topic: Wifery)

I stood there . . . ridiculous man . . . holding out one broom and a dust mop ("magic swirl-shaking . . . frees this superior product of all dust!") which was blue to match the floor. Claire pouted a bit, receiving the items.

"Merry Christmas," I said.

Claire pouted a little more. "You used to bring me roses. Now you bring me cleaning equipment!"

I was touched.

"But, look, Baby! Look what I've brought!"

I produced the can opened (she had been opening things . . . cans I suppose . . . with a small GI version, which works well, but is just not as efficient as the newer shiney models.)

"And this! A vegetable peeler . . . finest 59¢ model . . . with fish scaler!"

"Oh," she said, in mock overjoyousness. "When are you going fishing?"

"I? Fishing?" I clutched.

. . . then remembered from somewhere . . . DIVERSION

March Of Dimes Begins Campaign To Combat Polio

The March of Dimes opens its 1959 campaign with the theme that itswinning battle over polio will lead "Toward Greater Victories."

In communities all over the country a total of two million volunteers are acquainting the public with the aims of the National Foundation's big new health program. They move into the annual drive with a winning combination whose success over polio evolved from a partnership of laymen and research scientists.

Now, as Basil O'Connor, president of the National Foundation, says, "This team is ready to apply its unique formula of success to the solution of other perplexing diseases of mankind."

An immediate broad attack has been launched against arthritis and birth defects (congenital malformations), but the National Foundation emphasizes that the polio problem is by no means over. In 1958, for example, about 50,000 polio victims received aid from the National Foundation. This aid will continue.

In 1959 "Greater Victories" drive will also seek funds for a greatly enlarged research program devoted to virus diseases and disorders of the central nervous system in general as well as to polio, arthritis and birth defects. The need to train more medical specialists also is envisioned in the National Foundation's new program.

Yes, the March of Dimes is needed more than ever. With the momentum of one job well done, we hope, with your (the public's) support, that it will move on TOWARD GREATER VICTORIES.

Panel To Hold Discussion On Outlook For '59

"Employment Opportunity Outlook - 1959" is the title of a program to be given Thursday afternoon, January 8th from 4:00 to 5:30 p.m. in the Student Lounge. The panelists: Mr. Norman Davis, Director, Personnel Dept., State of Vermont; Mr. Alfred Beauchamp, The Connecticut Life Insurance Company; Mr. A.J. Beliveau, IBM; and Mr. James Anderson, Research Associate, Commission on Human Resources, a project of the Graduate Business School, Columbia University. He will discuss the employment opportunity outlook as it will affect the college students entering the labor market in 1959. A discussion period will follow.

Cinema-Art Club Shows "Ugetsu"

On Friday, December 19 at 6 P.M. and 8:30 P.M., a public showing of the Japanese film "Ugetsu" will be presented by the Cinema-Art Club in the Arena Theatre of the Fleming Museum. The current art exhibits of the Museum will be open to the public between these showings and during the intermissions. For persons unable to attend the Friday showings, a special showing will be held on Thursday at 8 P.M., at 75 Bilodeau Court (off East Avenue). The film, which received the Grand Prize at the 1955 Venice Film Festival, has English sub-titles and was produced by the same group of actors as "Rashomon", which was shown here with great success last season. It is a romantic drama set in medieval Japan, and has been designated as an "unforgettable experience", because of the violence of its acting and its uncanny mixture of reality and fantasy.

Pre-medical & Pre-dental Freshmen: Enroll with adviser during enrollment week.

Arts & Sciences

To Students and Faculty in the College of Arts and Sciences:

Preliminary enrollment for the second semester will be held during the week of January 5 to 9 inclusive. During this period all students who expect to attend during the next semester must file preliminary enrollment cards showing the courses they plan to take. Those who complete this process on schedule and who have no changes to make at the time of regular enrollment will complete enrollment on the first day (February 6) and so have first choice of courses and sections. Students who have changes to make will enroll on the second day (February 7) only.

1. Students in this College will see their enrolling officers to obtain enrollment cards and to plan their programs.

A. Pre-medical students will consult their pre-medical advisors. Freshman pre-medical students will enroll in the College of Technology.)

B. Freshmen and Sophomores in the Liberal Arts curriculum will consult their faculty enrolling officers.

C. Juniors and Seniors in the Liberal Arts curriculum will consult the Chairman of the Department in which they are concentrating. Each student's program must have the approval of appropriate departmental Chairman.

N. B. Juniors and Seniors concentrating in Economics will enroll in 102 South Old Mill, (9-12 a.m.; 1-5 p.m.) as follows:

A - H January 6
I - Q January 7
R - Z January 8

2. Cards when fully filled out and signed by the appropriate enrolling officer are to be returned by the student to the Dean's Office. Be sure your name is on the card!

Enrolling officers will be busy during the preliminary enrollment period and it will be much easier for them and for their students if as many as possible enroll early in the week. Delay may prevent completing the progress on time.

Students who have special problems of any sort may consult the Dean. Appointments may be made for this purpose.

Just Notes And Quotes

Ann Gaitlich, a TEP pinned Barbi Hallanan of Bennington College this week.

Thanksgiving vacation resulted in two surprise engagements in the Pi Phi house. Linda Brown and Tony Adams became engaged. Tony is a graduate of Princeton and is presently waiting for his Navy orders. Pat Harrison and Rolf Long, an alumnus of Georgetown, who is now doing graduate work at Pennsylvania State, have officially set their wedding date for June.

Another Pi Phi, Pat Darling, became pinned to Bill Paquin.

Linda Farnkoff, ADPi, and Ross Artus, a Phi Delt, were recently pinned. Bert Robinson ADPi, '58, and Jake Sauter, SAE, '58 were married on Thanksgiving Day.

ALPHA DELTA PI

On December 4th, the ADPi's held a coffee hour in celebration of their chapter's seventh year on this campus and also in honor of their housemother, Miss Hope Brunson, whose birthday by coincidence fell on the same day.

Last Monday Mrs. Rex VanAken, Grand First Vice-President and Mrs. Philip Hartz, National Housing Director arrived for a few days visit. A coffee hour was given in their honor by the sisters and pledges on Tuesday evening.

The annual Tree-Trimming party was held on Sunday. Everyone brought ornaments to decorate the tree. Several faculty members and their families attended.

ALPHA EPSILON PHI

On the same evening of the AO's Card Party, the drawing for the transitor radio, part of the AEPhi Cancer Fund raffle, was held. The happy winner was Walter Cochran of Converse Hall.

DELTA DELTA DELTA

On Monday evening, the Tri-Delts Alumnae and Mothers' Club treated the actives to their annual Christmas Pine Party during which many gifts were presented to the chapter. The festive occasion was made complete by caroling and refreshments.

Since the scheduled joint Founder's Day celebration planned by the UVM and Middlebury Tri-Deltas before Thanksgiving recess was cancelled, Eta Chapter celebrated their 70th anniversary at the house, following vacation.

GAMMA PHI BETA

The Gamma Phis have been very busy this past week. The house has been a bevy of activity with secretive pixies running around doing their good deeds. On Thursday evening there was a formal dinner with Dr. Eleanor Luse, faculty adviser for the sorority. On Saturday the girls decorated the house with a tree and greens in preparation for their own Christmas party on Sunday evening and an exchange dinner with SAE on Tuesday. The dinner and the caroling that followed were enjoyed by both houses.

KAPPA ALPHA THETA

On Friday the Thetas held a tree-trimming party, which was attended by the girls and their dates.

At a fireside discussion on Tuesday, Mr. Daniels of the History Department spoke on Russia. At a previous discussion, Mr. and Mrs. Teal had delighted the Thetas with stories of their adventures in Norway.

Kappa Alpha Theta gained a new member by initiating Judy Morse, a sophomore from Glens Falls, New York.

On Saturday Sigma Alpha Epsilon and Kappa Alpha Theta jointly sponsored an orphans' party. Games were played and refreshments served. This year children from six to eight years of age were entertained.

PHI DELTA THETA

Phi Delt's Christmas formal was held on Friday at the Olde Board Restaurant with dancing following a buffet dinner.

Frederick Kolstrom and Anthony Wasilkowski were formally pledged at a ceremony just before Thanksgiving recess.

PI BETA PHI

The Alumnae of Pi Phi recently held a sale of Christmas gifts and decorations. The profits will go to the Settlement School Fund, which provides for the education of the "mountain folk" in Gatlinburg, Tennessee.

The Pi Phis enjoyed exchange dinners with both AEPhi and Kappa Sig this past week. In both cases, bridge games proved to be quite an after-dinner attraction.

The living room of the Pi Phi house has been a busy place this past week as the girls sent several hundred Christmas appeals throughout the state for the Children's Home of Burlington. Let's hope that this effort will add some joy to the youngsters' otherwise lonely Holiday Season.

PHI SIGMA DELTA

Election of officers was held this past week with Larry Markell being elected Master Frater, Steve Kuperstein, secretary; Shelly Weiner, Social Chairman; John Grotta, Historian; Robert Keimowitz, Rushing Chairman, and Jan Mashman, Activities Chairman.

Phi Sig's Christmas Formal was held in the form of a dinner-dance at the Lincoln Inn on Friday, December 5th. On Saturday the fraternity attended the UVM basketball game en masse.

SIGMA PHI EPSILON

The Sig Eps ushered in the Holiday season with their Christmas Formal on Friday Dinner in the Cameo Room at the Park Cafe, followed by dancing to the music of Pete Davis Quartet provided a gay evening. Chaperones for the affair were Mr. and Mrs. Lewis Owens and Mr. and Mrs. Jack Trevithick.

The Christmas party on Saturday rounded off the week-end with the music of the Northeast Jazz Band adding to the celebration. Mr. and Mrs. John Breed and Mr. and Mrs. Steve Plumb were chaperones.

TAU EPSILON PHI

The weekend of December 12th TEP held its annual Winter Formal beginning with a formal dance at the fraternity house Friday evening and concluding on Saturday with entertainment by the Royal Garden Six from Dartmouth in the afternoon and evening. Many UVMers flocked to TEP's Open House to hear the spirited jazz. A "Playboy" theme dominated the festivities, with the assistance of Playboy Magazine.

THE PROBLEM CORNER

Referring to last week's problem, the cash box contained either

1) 18 quarters, 37 dimes and 80 nickels.
2) 18 quarters, 38 dimes and 78 nickels.
3) 17 quarters, 38 dimes and 83 nickels, or
(4) 17 quarters, 39 dimes and 81 nickels.

There were several people who submitted one, two or three of the possible solutions, but only John McGinnis and Smith Tunsaroch gave the complete solution.

Because of the vacation there will be no new problem this week.

Dr. Young Addresses Psych Club

Dr. Wm. O. Young, Burlington psychiatrist, addressed the UVM Psychology Club Tuesday evening at 7:30 P.M. in the Fleming Museum lounge. The subject of his talk was, "A New Look at Curiosity."

Dr. Young said that in any list of instincts we always find curiosity at the bottom. He believes that the three basic instincts motivating humans are survival, love and curiosity. In order to satisfy any one of these, we may come into conflict with another. A frustration of any of these may lead to agression, or in some cases to regression. As aggression is generated by frustration, it may be viewed as a learned response and not inherently basic to the organism; and on this basis it is possible to replace aggression as a basic instinct with curiosity. He annotated this point, as well as his entire talk, with general observations and cases from his private practice.

If we accept curiosity as basic, we shall have to revise our realm of thought. For example, in education we must admit that poor students are made and not born. The case of the student with a high I.Q. who has quit school at an early age is probably due to the fact that his curiosity has been dampened. This was, he said as far as his thinking has currently progressed.

After this talk, a discussion period followed in which Dr. Young attempted to answer all questions. The queries fell into three classes: the position of curiosity, indeed of instincts themselves, as sound, well documented explanatory concepts in psychology, the methodology to be employed for verification, and the utilization of learning, per se, as an explanatory concept. Concerning the latter, Dr. H. Anabacher, professor of Psychology at UVM, commented that there must be some reason why we learn, whether we call it instinct, drive, motive etc., there is something propelling us to go on.

Following this most interesting meeting, coffee and doughnuts were served.

Brig. Gen. Sibley Speaks To Students

Brig. Gen. Alden K. Sibley, New England Division Engineer with the U.S. Army Corps of Engineers, visited the campus on Tuesday, December 9 and spoke before engineering students and cadet officers in the Army ROTC program.

General Sibley spoke first before freshman engineering students at 5 p.m. in the Hills Building Auditorium. His topic was "Engineering as a Career."

At eight, he addressed ROTC cadet officers and members of the University's engineering honor societies in the Waterman Student Lounge, speaking on "The Role of the Corps of Engineers in the Nuclear Age."

A graduate of West Point, General Sibley served as Deputy Chief of Staff for the Middle East Theater during World War II, following which he was named Chief of Staff of the SHAEF Mission to France.

Returning to the United States after the war, General Sibley was assigned to the War Department General Staff in Washington, D.C., where he served as Assistant to the Deputy Chief of Staff for Operations and became Military Secretary of the Army Policy Council.

From 1952 to 1954 he was assigned to SHAPE under NATO as Chief of the Logistics Plans Section.

Arrangements for General Sibley's visit to the University of Vermont were made by the UVM department of military science and tactics.

IFC Helps Leukemia Drive

by MARY EDWARDS

A concentrated effort proved successful Monday night as the Inter-Fraternity Council solicited money in divided sections of Burlington for the National Leukemia Fund.

From 7 to 9 Burlington was divided into 15 sections, each fraternity taking a section. Approximately 900 participants brought their results to Saldi's Restaurant where they received coffee and donuts for their fruitful efforts. Saul Agel, Burlington chairman, accepted the receipts for the Aiding Leukemia Stricken American Children. Danny Thomas is the national chairman of A.L.S.A.C.

Jerry Cutler, Marvin Dobert Bob Davison and advisor Steele worked closely with Mr. Agel in organizing this fund raising drive.

The money will go towards maintaining the St. Judes Hospital in Memphis, Tennessee, which has been established primarily for the dread disease.

St. Michael's covered the Winooski and Essex Junction area.

UVM Graduate Appointed To Alumni Post

A Bellows Falls native and UVM alumnus in the class of 1952 has been named University of Vermont Alumni Field Secretary.

Frank E. Dione, an assistant supervisor with the Boston branch of the Washington National Insurance Co., was named to the post effective Dec. 1.

He succeeds the late Arthur H. Cheney.

A member of Sigma Phi fraternity and president of the Newman club while an undergraduate, Dione received a B.S. from UVM in 1952, following which he taught English at Burlington Junior High School.

In 1953 he joined the staff of the Washington National Insurance Co. of Evanston, Ill., managing that comapny's Portland, Me. office from 1954-55. He was later named assistant supervisor for New England group insurance, assigned to the Boston office, a post he held until accepting his UVM position. He served as president of the Eastern Massachusetts Alumni Association for 1957-58.

Dione is married to the former Elsa Marie Brand of Garden City, L.I., and has two sons and a daughter. They will make their home at 155 East Avenue, Burlington.

IFC Adopts Novel Plan

Due to the steadily decreasing number of Freshmen that have rushed fraternities in the past few years, The Interfraternity Council has adopted a novel plan. All fraternities on the UVM campus has or will be given the opportunity to eat at the Waterman Cafeteria. This will enable all fraternity members to encourage underclassmen to nurture the thought of becoming rushees in the near future.

The program will not only be helpful to the fraternity system but to the Freshmen themselves. They are offered the chance of associating freely with fraternity members thus enabling them to make a better decision in their own minds. This recent IFC innovation, aimed at strengthening the fraternity system at UVM, is hoped to bring about the increase of prospective rushees when formal rushing arrives in February.

SAFE DRIVING MEANS SUNNY DAYS OF LIVING WITHOUT SADNESS, INJURY, OR MISFORTUNES

Editorial: One Minute

One minute - that's all it takes to ruin a life. One minute of carelessness, just one second, can wipe out a lifetime of plans and dreams. A glance away from the road or a chanced passing on a curve, and then it's too late. There's just the echoing impact and the smell of burning rubber, shattered glass and shattered lives on the road.

Think of this when your hurried foot presses hard on the accelerator and the speedometer needle creeps steadily forward. A patch of ice on a winter road - that's all it takes.

When your sleepy head starts to nod at the wheel, remember if you doze off for a second you may never wake up. Stop and have that cup of coffee.

And when you're tempted to excuse drunken driving with holiday spirits, remember that death won't accept this excuse, even if you're a good driver most of the time, because one minute is all it takes. You can be careful and law-abiding 364 days of the year, but the one minute's carelessness of the other day is all it takes.

P.J.

No amount of words can express how careful one must be when driving. Remember, a car is a deadly weapon.

"Helpful Hints For A Happy Holiday"

He who hastens while driving,
Earns not a cent for his striving.
Laws and speed limits should be obeyed;
Practice this and lives will be saved.
Further advice regards proper equipment,
Use snow tires if it's a life you don't want to lose.
Lack of heater or defroster or one light is no excuse.

He who drinks at the wheel,
Is endangering all lives, I feel.
Never drive unless completely able Tired eyes is not a good label -
Stay off the road, if you're not very stable.

An overturned car may seem funny in an automobile show, but not when you're in one.

One minute is all that it takes for an automobile accident. The person driving this car took his eyes off the road to crash into a telephone pole.

Practice Caution And Obey Rules For Protection Of Your Life

Keep the windshield clear at all times. Do not allow ice and snow to accumulate on windows, especially on rear windows. Carry an ice scraper to clear off ice and snow that cannot be removed by windshield wiper. -

Fog lights are recommended but should have a beam with a sharp vertical cut-off (no light above the horizon) to reduce back-reflection. Fog lights should be mounted as low as possible and should have clear lenses.

Proper vehicle maintenance is a must at this time of year. Here are special features to watch:

Keep headlights and tail lights in good condition. (Use upper beam with extra caution in winter.)
Windshiled wipers are of prime importance in the winter driving picture. See that they are in good working condition at all times.
Windshield wipers are recommended for rear as well as front windows.
Defrosters, too should be in good condition. See that the heater is issuing a steady flow of warm air to keep them working efficiently.

On wet or icy pavement, pump the brake pedal, gently but firmly. Jamming the brakes on and holding them on contributes to skidding on slippery roads.

The following benefits will be yours ----- "if" you drive within the law:

- You spare yourself arrest . . . A court appearance . . . The cost of a fine.
- You are less likely to be the cause of an accident yourself.
- You are better able to prevent an accident that could result from the violation of another driver, or a pedestrian.

At high speeds, the human body becomes increasingly vulnerable when an accident takes place.

If an injury accident occurs at 60 miles an hour or more, the injured person is eight times more likely to die of his injuries than if he had been injured in an accident at 20 miles an hour.

Slow down at sundown.
Be safe ----- be seen.
At night wear white.

Watch out for wacky walkers.
Can you stop ----- in time?

LOSE A MINUTE AND SAVE A LIFE!
Why ask for an accident?
IF YOU DRIVE, DON'T DRINK. IF YOU DRINK, DON'T DRIVE.
Death rides behind glaring headlights.
A little chance makes a big crash.
You may be the world's best driver - but what about the other fellow?
All traffic signs mean caution.

Propose Outing Club Trip To The Laurentians

Last Sunday eleven Outing Club members had a wonderful time near Jeffersonville practicing and learning to ski. The greens cutting trip of that weekend was also a big success.

During the inter-semester vacation, the club has scheduled a 5 day trip to the heart of one of the best skiing areas. We will be skiing in the Laurentians, using the McGill College Outing Club cabin (25 mi. N.W. of Montreal) as our base of operations. A one day trip to Mt. Tremblant is also on the agenda. This is a fabulous opportunity for anyone interested in the sport. It is not just a trip for experts, and instructions will be supplied beginners.

The cost of board and lodging for the five days will be under $15. For information call Dan Wallace 4-6321. Last years' trip was well attended and was greatly enjoyed by the entire group. We will leave the campus on Thursday, January 29, and will be back in time for rushing.

Committee Proposed To End Confusion

by JUDY JACK

Last May, a request was presented that the Student Advisory Committee study the feasibility of combining the various University Committees concerned with extra-curricular activities of students into one committee analogous to the UVM Athletic Council, and to define jurisdiction and related matters pertaining to the total student activity program. It is hoped that such a committee would eliminate the confusion of various organizations, and the overlapping of functions and personnel.

The present state of affairs is perhaps best illustrated by a comparison with the court system of our country. If the jurisdiction and duties of the local, district, federal and Supreme courts were not defined precisely, perpetual conflict would result. Similarly, because the boundaries of campus organizations and associations, (such as sororities, fraternities, Panhellenic, IFC, SA, etc.) overlap, conflicts are continually arising with no one to solve them. Of course, any one of several bodies are empowered to do so - SA, JSAB, SAC, the University Council - but the question is, which one has absolute authority? Obviously, it would facilitate matters considerably to have a committee which would not only resolve such issues, but would work toward their prevention by defining clearly and concisely the areas of responsibility of every organization.

Quoting the COSA, Mr. Walter Smalakis who is chairman of a special committee studying the feasibility of this proposal, such a committee . . . "would have jurisdiction over defining elegibility requirements for participation in all phases of student activity (except athletics), establish policies and regulations concerning the planning, sponsoring and conducting of social functions and for the scheduling of all other non-athletic events, conseling with student organizations and groups, establishing policies, rules and regulations governing student group life, and in general, with the relationship between the University and student organizations."

Clearly, then, the advantages of the proposed committee far outweigh any possible disadvantages: the existing entanglement would be considerably reduced, the present system of "passing the buck" from one organization to another when a conflict occurs would be totally or partially eliminated, and increased functional efficiency of the University would result.

Prof. Babcock Submits Resignation

The University's Board of Trustees accepted the resignation of Prof. Robert S. Babcock, Vermont's lieutenant governor-elect, in accordance with University policy relating to faculty members who are elected to major political office.

Babcock had been given a leave of absence for the fall semester at the June meeting of the UVM Board.

He was first appointed to the UVM faculty in 1946. A resident of South Burlington, he won election to the State Senate in 1951, 1953 and 1957, serving as president pro tempore for the 1957 Senate. In 1955, he was named Secretary of Civil and Military Affairs by Gov. Joseph B. Johnson. He is the author of a text book on "State and Local Politics."

The Board also accepted the resignation of Dr. Jack P. Keeve, assistant professor of preventive medicine.

For instance, in the reference room, if a student should need assistance, the man at the reference desk, seems to forget that there are many other students studying there, for he begins to talk in a normal tone of voice. Those studiers around him may glance up and give him a disagreeable look, but he doesn't seem to notice. He goes right on speaking regardless of the fact that he is annoying people around him.

When I arrived at the library today, I was forced to sit at the first table, for there were seats available there, but at no other table. I had some uninteresting reading to do, but it HAD TO BE DONE. I had just begun to read my material when I heard some hysterical laughter coming from the private office just to the left of the bookcase which shelves new books.

Perhaps, this aforementioned incident sounds a bit exaggerated, but, believe me, this is exactly what occurred in the Billings Library today. Not only that, but someone began to vaccuum in the place while I was attempting to read.

Before writing this letter I have consulted other students about this same topic and I have found that many others feel the same way about the library administration as I. I definitely feel that this is something which should be brought to the attention of the Director of Libraries and that some measures should be taken to do something about this discourteous and inconsiderate nature of those who work in the library and who are supposed to be there to help students when they are in need of information and to maintain the silence in the library if the students cannot do so themselves.

I shall be graduating at the end of this year and will no longer be bothered about this situation which I have had to contend with for fouryears, but there are others who will come after me and there are those who will be back next year and who will have to study in and use the Billings Library time after time.

It is of dire importance that such a situation be taken care of and that the student body learn the importance of silence in the library, but more important that the LIBRARY ADMINISTRATION AND STAFF DO SO, TOO.

Thank you,
Helen Kruk.

may be lost for the season. They still have the potential with 6-4 Paul Arizin, 6-6 Tom Gola (one of the best), and 6-7 [illegible] Souldsbury, last year's "rookie of the year" to fight off the boards. In the backcourt are reliable Jack George, and George Dempsey. Joe Brabowski, 6-8, will have to take up some of the slack left by the departure of Johnston in order to make the Warriors a contender.

SYRACUSE NATIONALS:

The "Nats" have not been clicking so far this season due to obvious backcourt weaknesses. The forwards are solid with 6-8 Dolph Shayes and 6-5 Ed Conlin, two players of excellent caliber. At center, 6-9 John Kerr, 6-8 Bob Hopkins and 6-9 Connie Dierking are formidable opponents. The apparent backcourt weakness is due to the inefficiency of Larry Costello, 6-4, Togo Palazzi and Coach Paul Seymour. The "Nats" definitely have good big men but need some new faces in the backcourt in order to challenge.

ST. LOUIS HAWKS:

In the Western division, St. Louis "can't miss." With a combination of 6-9 Bob Petit and 6-4 Cliff Hagen, the best forecourt "combo" in the league, 6-9 Clyde Lovellot (obtained in a trade with Cincinnati at the end of last season), 6-1 Jack McMahon, 5-10 Slater Martin and 6-2 Win Wilfong, they are potent. For reserves, there are 6-8 Coach Ed Macauley, himself a standout along with 6-11 giant Chuck Share. Any takers?

DETROIT PISTONS:

This club has been playing great ball of late. George Yardley, who at 6-5 is a tremendous scorer and rebounder, and newcomer 6-10 Phil Jordenhave been playing outstanding ball. The backcourt has been doing well with 6-2 Gene Shue and 6-0 Dick McGuire. The Piston's top draft choices, 6-7 Barney Cable and 6-5 Shelly McMillon have been slow to come around however. The Pistons' main weakness is the need of another big man to work with Jorden. Seven foot Walter Dukes is an erratic performer.

CINCINNATI ROYALS:

The Royals, as mentioned before are referred to as the "hapless" Royals. Most of it isn't their fault however. Maurice Stokes, Cincy's best player was lost permanently last year due to an unfortunate illness and the front office traded high scoring Clyde Lovellot for practically nothing. Except for 6-6Jack Twyman and 6-3 Si Green, the Royals' lineup will be dominated by rookies. The leading rookie is 6-8 Archie Dees, the Big Ten's M.V.P. of last year. Coach Tom Marshall will probably have gray hairs before this season is over.

MINNEAPOLIS LAKERS:

The Lakers have improved tremendously over last year and it has been due to the play of highly publicized Elgin Baylor, 6-6, who is currently leading the league in scoring. Jim Krebs at 6-8 has improved greatly over last year. Old pros, Larry Foust and Vern Mikkelson can be counted upon to play consistently good ball. The backcourt is very strong with Dick Garmaker, Bob Leonard, Ed Flemming and 6-4 Rod Hundley. We expect big things from the Lakers this year. And with that fans, I wish you a Merry Christmas and Happy New Year.

college ratings by the United Press Board of Coaches, is a strong contender to capture first place honors. The Knights, after an opening defeat to Steubenville came back to defeat St. Lawrence and Middlebury. St. Michael's five are slowly regaining the brand of ball playing that took them to the NCAA small college semi-finals. In the back court are high scoring Tony Nicodemo and Jim Browne, a good ball handler. Up front for the Michaelmen are Dave Miracek, Hank Gretkowski and Al Weir. The Purple Knights play a fast give and go game and are capable of breaking the game open at any time.

Assumption College of Worcester, UVM's first round opponent, last year went to the NAIA Tournament. They are a new team in the New England small college circles. Last year they compiled a 16-4 record under Coach Andy Laska. Assumption so far has compiled a 3-0 record with victories over American International, Merrimack and Worcester State Teachers. The Greyhounds are paced by their returning high scorer Lelix Masterson, who so far is averaging 23 points per game. Other players to watch are Co-captain Dick McGrath second high scorer and Co-captain Joe Sweeney, top rebounder.

LeMoyne from Syracuse is St. Michael's opponent in the first round. Last year, their record was 11-11 under Coach Tommy Niland. LeMoyne lost its first game to Villanova, but came back to beat St. Peter's of Jersey City. Their leading scorer is 6'4" junior Dick Lynch who averaged 17.5 points a game last year. His high this year was 41 points against St. Joseph's.

Earlier this week Doc Jacobs announced that four trophies will be awarded during the tournament. They are for: first place, second place, consolation honors and most valuable player.

These are four evenly matched teams, each capable of walking off with the tournament championship. However, from this side of the bench it looks like a Vermont and St. Michael's clash for the tourney championship, with Vermont winning in a close game.

HERB HEIN'S BOWL PICKS

I have been granted space in this week's CYNIC to try and acquaint all you football fans with the college teams that will be playing various Bowl games around the country on New Year's Day. Not only will I give some background on each team but I will also predict which team will be the victorious one, thus leaving myself open, once again, to the Monday morning quarterbacks. There promises to be some torrid tilts on January 1, mainly because people all across the country will be seeing the Nation's top teams in action.

ROSE BOWL – This is the Granddaddy of all the bowl games, not because it is the oldest, but because it used to match the two best at large teams in the country and not the winners of the Big Ten and Pacific Coast Conferences as is now done. This year, Pasadena, California, will play host to the California Golden Bears, (7-3-0), winners of the P.C.C. and the Hawkeyes of Iowa, (7-1-1), champs of the Big Ten Conference. California, the Cinderella team of the P. C. C., had come along very nicely under the able guidance of Quarterback Bobby Kapp. He alone will be the deciding factor as to how the Bears will fare on New Year's Day. Iowa, on the other hand, is one of the most well-balanced teams in the country. All-American Quarterback, Randy Duncan, leads the Iowa team but he is ably assisted by a score of good backs and an excellent line. This game will definitely reveal the abilities of two of the nation's best quarterbacks. IOWA is much too strong for California.

COTTON BOWL – One of the best battles of the season will take place in Dallas on New Year's Day as the Air Force Falcons, (9-0-1), meet the Horned Frogs of Texas Christian University, (8-2). Both teams have done very well this year and this game promises to be a good one. T.C.U. had a rough road to pave in order to win the Southwest Conference Championship, as it was one of the few teams in the country who finished in accord with the pre-season ratings. The underrated Falcons were unbeaten except for a tie with powerful Iowa. This should be a real close one but I'll go with the AIR FORCE hoping that enough spirit will be instilled in them to overhaul Texas Christian.

ORANGE BOWL – Miami will see two of the finest teams in the nation play in its city this January in the persons of the Oklahoma Sooners and the Orangemen of Syracuse University. Both clubs have powerful offensive units, and this game promises to be the highest scoring contest of all the games played on New Year's Day. The Sooners, (9-1), have beaten the teams in their own conference handily as in the past, but there is some doubt as to whether or not it can beat a powerful club like Syracuse. The Sooners have been further hurt by the loss of their first string Quarterback, David Baker, who was dropped from the university because of academic reasons. The Orangemen, (8-1), have posted victories over comparatively stronger teams than Oklahoma and certainly do not deserve to be fourteen point underdogs. However, I'll still have to go with OKLAHOMA because of its very capable coach and their excellent bowl game record.

SUGAR BOWL – For the first time this season the unbeaten Bengal Tigers of Louisiana State University will be seen in action. The Tigers, (10-0), were a pre-season choice to finish last in its conference, but with an offensive overhauling, Coach Paul Dietzel, (Coach of the Year), built the best team the Bengals have had in half a century. They not only finished first in their Conference, but first in the Country. L.S.U. is led by All American halfback Billy Cannon, and he along with his other fine teammates will provide many headaches for Clemson, their opponent. Clemson, (8-2), has played some outstanding games this season but on other occasions they have looked rather poor. At any rate they will have a very good day in order to beat L.S.U., who I think can handle them easily.

Vermont Belts Norwich For State Win, 94-62; Drops 2 Yankon Tilts To Maine, 77-75, 75-73

Five Trample Horsemen

by STAN MESINGER

Last Wednesday, the Catamounts of UVM travelled to Northfield, where they whipped the Norwich Cadets, 94-62.

The game was dominated by Vermont from the outset, as they controlled the boards and most of the downcourt play. Clyde Lord led both clubs in scoring, as he sent 28 points through the hoops. Captain Bobby Kuchar followed with 17 markers, most of his points coming via twenty and thirty foot set shots. Bob Gallagher added 14 points to the UVM totals, Charlie Isles 12, and Frank Giordano 11. Udell of Norwich was the Cadets' only bright spot of the evening as he hit for 19 points.

Vermont, favored by eight points, surprised everyone by running away with the till. The Cats were red hot from the free throw line, where they connected for thirteen out of eighteen attempts. At halftime, Vermont led by 50-28.

In winning, the Catamounts showed what red-hot shooting and careful ball handling can do.

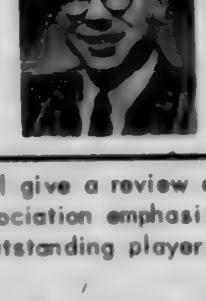
Kittens Lose To Airmen And Cadets

by AL SHRADRAN



The University of Vermont Frosh basketball team just can't seem to get started this year. The Kittens suffered their third straight defeat of the season last Monday night at the hands of the men in blue from Ethan Allen Air Force Base at the UVM gym.

The final score was 45-35. The Frosh scoring centered around four men, Bernard Lamm, Pete Low, John Jeffrey, and John Evans. They scored 4, 11, 13, and 6 points respectively. For the Air Force men Holt and Hinton were top scorers with 11 points each. Last Wednesday night the boys took a trip to Norwich to entertain the squad down there. It was a repetition of the previous Monday night's performance. This time, however, the frosh were on the short end of a 67-63 score. Top scorers for UVM were Jeffrey, Evans, and Low with 16, 11, and 13 points respectively. The top scorer for Norwich registered 23 points.

COOP'S HOOP BY STEVE COOPER

This being my last column for 1958, I'll give a review of the action in the National Basketball Association emphasizing the strength of the teams and the outstanding players.

Last season, the Boston Celtics and the St. Louis Hawks both dominated their respective leagues, the former in the Eastern division and the latter in the Western loop. Pre-season polls predicted the same two teams, Boston and St. Louis, to again repeat as League champs. However, as the 1958-59 season started, Boston floundered helplessly for about ten games and the New York Knickerbockers ripped off a string of nine straight victories. Then Boston began to click and at this writing, Boston and New York are waging a neck and neck battle for first place in the East, with Syracuse and Philadelphia bringing up the rear.

In the West, Minneapolis and Detroit started at a fast pace but the league favorite, St. Louis, has now assumed the league lead and threatens to run away with the crown. She presently leads the second place Detroit Pistons by five lengths with Minneapolis in third place and the "hapless" Cincinnati Royals in the basement.

A closer look at the Eastern division finds the high scoring, fast breaking Boston Celtics trying to sweep the championship for the second consecutive year. They presently have the best backcourt combination in the N.B.A. in Bill Sharman and Bob Cousy. Their center, 6-10, Bill Russell is the league's best rebounder. In forecourt are two reliable competitors, Jim Loscutoff, 6-5, and Tom Heinsen, 6-7. In 6-3 Frank Ramsey, the Celts have a top notch reserve who can play either guard or forward. Two rookies who will help are 6-9 Ben Swain and 6-1, K. C. Jones.

NEW YORK KNICKERBOCKERS:

The Knicks' phenomenal start under new Coach Fuzzy Levane this year has been due to the great play of young players such as 6-6 Willis Nauls, 6-4 Richie Guerin, 6-3 Ron Sobie, 6-8 Charlie Tyra, and 6-8 Mike Farmer, a defensive ace. Old pros such as 6-5 Carl Braun, 6-9 Ken Sears and 6-11 Ray Felix, together with former St. Louis Hawk, Frank Selvey, are also playing the type of ball to make the Knicks an outstanding competitor all year long.

PHILADELPHIA WARRIORS:

The Warriors, who were thought to be solid this season have been finding the going rough lately with the loss of high scoring Neil Johnston. He was injured early in the campaign and

UVM Ski Team Practice Under Way

by HARVEY CAPLIN

Next month the slopes of Mt. Mansfield will be jammed with skiers from all over New England. Skiing is definitely in the air, and here at UVM the ski season officially started on October 1 when the ski team began their Fall practice.

This year the Freshman and Varsity Ski teams will be under the leadership of Frank Smith and Sam Miller. Coach Miller believes at this point that the Freshman team is in better shape and shows more enthusiasm than the Varsity. There doesn't seem to be enough inter squad competition amongst the Varsity members for positions on the team. This lack of competition will hurt the team's chances of competing on the same level as Dartmouth, Middlebury, and Williams.

The Freshman ski program will be heavier than it has been in recent years. They will have more college meets and with top private ski clubs. heavy schedule will gi Frosh their necessary exp

NEW ELGART BAND PLAYS FOR ANNUAL KW BALL

Maynard Ferguson & "Salt City 6" Featured In Concert

Considered the most popular college band in the country, the New Elgart Band will play for the Kake Walk Ball. Above is Larry Elgart, who expects to draw a record breaking crowd at Memorial Auditorium.

HUGE JAZZ "JAM" PLANNED WITH TOP RATED FERGUSON AND DIXIE GROUP

One of the hottest Dixieland groups to ever hit the east coast will appear at Memorial Auditorium the Saturday afternoon of Kake Walk for the benefit of all connoisseurs of truly fine jazz.

The Salt City Six has thrilled audiences from Fort Lauderdale to Montreal, from London to Labrador to the Dunes at Las Vegas. They have appeared on television with Arthur Godfrey. For some time they performed nightly from New York City on the "Jazz on Times Square" radio program. The boys from Syracuse are currently playing return engagements in such major cities as New York, Chicago, Miami, Toronto, Detroit, and Milwaukee. They have played for collegiate functions at Cornell, Colgate, St. Lawrence, Syracuse, Hamilton, R.P.I., Clarkson, University of Rochester, and Middlebury.

Several years ago the group drew a capacity crowd at UVM before they gained national recognition. They were then known as the Salt City Five.

In the record field the Salt City Six has two albums out on Jubilee and one on MGM.

Two of the sidemen received awards in the Downbeat Poll; the group as a whole has been listed several times due to their fine ensembles, youthful gusto, and their fine solo technique.

Maynard Ferguson is the biggest up-and-coming name in contemporary jazz. He received acknowledgement as the most popular trumpet man in the business in the Downbeat 1958 Poll. He held this honor in 1956 and 1957 as well. Downbeat Magazine (January 8, 1958) has devoted five pages to singing the praises of this young Canadian and of his startling impression on the music world.

Ferguson will invade Burlington with fourteen of the most versatile musicians in the business. They can play anything from jazz to dance music.

The band was held over seventeen weeks at Birdland, played at Carnegie Hall, Storyville, in Boston, and the Blue Note in Chicago. They also performed at the biggest jazz spectacle in the country, the Newport Jazz Festival. Aside from these and other engagements too numerous to mention, Maynard Ferguson and his band has played thirty-one jazz concerts for colleges and seventeen jazz concerts for high schools.

This young man with the big band and the big sound, this veritable giant of jazz will be an integral part of Kake Walk 1958.

ELGART'S MUSIC SETS MOOD FOR K W BALL

The big new Elgart band will be making the sounds at the forthcoming Sixty-second Annual Kake Walk Ball. It was only three years ago when the Elgart band drew the biggest crowd recorded in Kake Walk Ball history.

Continually in the top three in all the dance band polls, the Elgart band will move into Memorial Auditorium rated as the number one college favorite in the United States.

Some of the recent top recordings of the Les and Larry Elgart band are, "Sophisticated Swing" which is far and away the best-selling dance-band album in recording history, "The Dancing Sound", "For Dancers Only", "The Elgart Touch", dance hits from Frank Loesser's "The Most Happy Fella", and most recently the recording that is rapidly climbing to the top, "Sound Ideas". In reference to this recent album, Variety stated that "The frères Elgart have provided some of the most refreshing ideas in the dance band field in recent years". A few weeks ago Walter Winchell said "New Yorkers are talking about . . . Larry and Les Elgart for their tremendous album 'Sound Ideas'".

Prior to forming their own band, the Elgarts played for such notables as Harry James and Woody Herman. Since 1953 and "Sophisticated Swing" the Elgart band has won every dance band popularity poll in sight. No other new orchestra has aroused so much enthusiasm and so immediate a response from all segments of the dancing public. The Elgarts

Annual APA Meeting Seen Success As UVM Hosts Group

The fifty-fifth annual meeting of the Eastern Division of the American Philosophical Association was held on the Redstone Campus December 27 through 29. Approximately 250 representatives from leading colleges and universities throughout the country attended the sessions. Over forty papers were delivered during the two and one-half day meeting.

The opening session of the conference began the celebration of the centennial of the birth of John Dewey, distinguished alumnus of the University and one of America's outstanding philosophers. Three papers relating to the background of Dewey's philosophy were delivered at the session: "John Dewey: The Vermont Years," by George Dykhuizen of the University of Vermont; "The Social Sources of Dewey's Thought" by Lewis Feuer of the University of California, and "John Dewey and the Philosophical Tradition," by Charles W. Hendel of Yale University.

Items relating to John Dewey's years in Burlington were on exhibit in the north lounge of Southwick, and tours were made by members to Dewey's birthplace at 186 South Willard Street and to other places of interest in connection with Dewey's early life.

At the annual banquet, held in Simpson Dining Hall on Sunday, December 28, President Max Black of Cornell University delivered the presidential address entitled, "Language and Reality."

Famed Stuttgart Chamber Orchestra Opens Second Semester Lane Series

The Stuttgart Chamber Orchestra will play for the Red Series on February 9 as the first attraction for the second semester.

by JUDY SYLVIA

The first Lane Series concert of the second semester to be presented February 9, 1959, is very fortunate to have the Stuttgart Chamber Orchestra conducted by Karl Muenchinger. This concert, under the Red Series, is completely sold out, and no extra tickets are available for this feature.

The Stuttgart Chamber Orchestra was formed in 1945, from the best young West-European instrumentalists available, by the eminent and youthful conductor Karl Muenchinger. Each player in this fifteen piece string orchestra has a personal reputation as a solo player. Muenchinger, himself, is in constant demand as a guest conductor. In fact, he preceded his group to the United States in the spring of 1953 to be conductor of the San Francisco Symphony for nine concerts.

Originally, the orchestra limited its activities to the Stuttgart, Germany area but later accepted invitations from other parts of Germany. Because of their increasing popularity, they were invited to various other European countries, where they were enjoyed immensely. Ecstatic reviews by international correspondents on the various appearances by the orchestra and the demand brought forth by record collectors was instrumental in bringing the Stuttgart Chamber Orchestra to America in 1954.

Since that time they have scored rousing successes throughout the United States, Canada, and South America. The Stuttgart Chamber Orchestra boasts a repertoire of many varied compositions for this type of ensemble. Although only 12 years old, they have achieved success and recognition offered to few organizations of any age.

Due to their increasing international popularity, the Stuttgart Chamber Orchestra now has approximately 12 recordings under the London label.

"They scored a rousing success....precision, warmth and a sort of headlong intensity that sweeps the listener along," wrote the New York Times. This group returns to the United States for a second American tour during the 1958-59 season, under the sponsorship of the German government.

The program they will present for the Lane Series on February 9 is as follows:

Bach -- Ricercare in six parts from "Das Musikalische Opfer".

Bach -- Bradenburg Concerto No. 3 in G major.

Vivaldi -- Concerto Grosso in D minor for 2 solo violins, for solo violincello, and string orchestra.

Mozart -- Divertimento in D major, KV 136.

Mozart - Eine Kleine Nachtmusik in G major, KV 525.

The final selection is probably the most well known of the Stuttgart Chamber Orchestra.

Med. Schools Recommend May Admissions Test

Princeton, N.J., January 5: Candidates for admission to medical school in the fall of 1959 are advised to take the Medical College Admission Test in May, it was announced today by Educational Testing Service, which prepares and administers the test for the Association of American Medical Colleges. These tests, required of applicants by almost every medical college throughout the country, will be given twice during the current calendar year. Candidates taking the May test, however, will be able to furnish scores to institutions in early fall, when many medical colleges begin the selection of their next entering class.

Candidates may take the MCAT on Saturday, May 2, 1959, or on Tuesday, October 31, 1959, at UVM and more than 300 other centers in all parts of the country. The Association of American Medical Colleges recommends that candidates for admission to classes starting in the fall of 1960 take the May test.

The MCAT consists of tests of general scholastic ability, a test on understanding of modern society, and an achievement test in science. According to ETS, no special preparation other than a review of science subjects is necessary. All questions are of the objective type.

Copies of the Bulletin of Information (with application form bound in), which gives details or registration and administration, as well as sample questions, are available from Dr. Clinton Cook, pre-medical advisor, or directly from Educational Testing Service, 20 Nassau Street, Princeton, New Jersey, or from University Testing Service, 234 Waterman. Completed applications must reach the ETS office by April 18 and October 17, respectively for the May 2 and October 31 administrations. Mail before April 1.

Report Given On Jurisdiction Committee

by ROBERT WEINSTEIN

The Committee on Jurisdiction of Student Court and Related Matters has held four meetings under the revised system which was discussed in the October 9, 1958, issue of the CYNIC. These meetings have been organizational ones to determine the exact functions of the committee.

In accordance with the new rules, the Committee on Jurisdiction consists of Dean Earl W. Clifford; Dean A. Rankin Harris; Dr. Wesson B. Bolton, representing the faculty; Wes Dacy, chairman, representing the Student Association; Carolyn Paine, secretary, who is a member of Mortar Board; and Frank Giordano, who represents the Student Court.

The Committee's purpose is to promote a better understanding and better co-ordination between student government organizations, and administration. The Jurisdiction Committee also wants to help the student body get a better understanding of its government.

The Committee would like to see a greater participation of the students in government organizations which will make for closer relations between the students and the faculty.

The responsibilities of the Committee on Jurisdiction are as follows

1. Temporary
 a. To serve in an advisory capacity to the Dean of Women and Dean of Men in implementing the recommendations of the report submitted last May by the Committee Jurisdiction of Student Court and Related matters.
 b. To explain the recommendations of this report to appropriate student groups.
2. Permanent
 a. To decide what group shall have jurisdiction in cases of questionable or overlapping jurisdiction.
 b. To decide questions of protest on jurisdiction.
 c. To receive requests for appeals from decisions of any judicial body. After reviewing the request, the committee may either deny the appeal or establish an appropriate board and assign the case for re-hearing and decision.

A meeting for the entire student body will be held in the near future so that all the students may have an opportunity to ask questions and learn more about the government which they are now living.

KW Weekend To Begin With Pops Night And Penny Carnival

Above is a scene from last year's Penny Carnival, sponsored by the WRA. This precedes Pops Night at which the candidates for Kake Walk King and Queen are introduced.

by DOROTHY INDICK

This year, on Friday, February 13th in Memorial Auditorium, heralding the advent of UVM's 62nd Kake Walk, will be Pops Night, an annual event in which the candidates for King and Queen of Kake Walk are presented to the campus. As a prelude to Pops Night, Penny Carnival, sponsored by WRA (Women's Recreation Association) and the Freshman Women's Gym classes will initiate the fun and excitement at Memorial Auditorium.

Penny Carnival, which is held from 7-9 P.M. and includes numerous booths similar to those found on a carnival midway. Walking in the basement of Memorial Auditorium, one will be attracted by the gaily colored booths. Leach run by one of the Freshman Women's Gym classes, with their barkers, while the UVM band plays some rousing music in the background. Telegrams, Fishing for Golf Balls, Mock Marriage, and Miniature Golf were a few of the various booths used in the past. The proceeds of Penny Carnival will go to the WRA Ski Cabin Fund to build a ski cabin for the use of UVM's women's students.

At 9, the crowd will move upstairs to view the activities of Pops Night. From 9 'til 10:30 or later if necessary, fraternities and sororities will present half hour skits showing their candidates for Kake Walk Royalty. UVM Book Makes "London Times"

A recent issue of the London Times gave the front page of its literary supplement to a review of the English edition of a book by University of Vermont Prof. H.L. Ansbacher and his wife.

The Individual Psychology of Alfred Adler was just published in the English edition by Allen and Unwin; the book is edited and annotated by the Ansbachers.

Prof. Ansbacher is a member of the psychology department at the University of Vermont, and an authority on Alfred Adler. When the Encyclopedia Brittanica decided to include a biography of Adler, Prof. Ansbacher was invited to write the article.

This book will be used as a text for the psychology course entitled Personality, to be taught by Prof. Ansbacher. The course is now listed in the catalogue as 206-Character and Personality. However, the description and title listed are obsolete and will be changed to fit the new text.

The Ansbachers worked for three years, spending one summer in New York, doing research at the Columbia University Library.

President of the Adlerian Society, Ansbacher is editor of the Journal of Individual Psychology which is published semi-annually by the American Society of Adlerian Psychology.

The Vermont Cynic

"The Land Of The Free And The Home Of The Brave"

One hundred years ago one of the most talked-about subjects in the United States was "abolition." There were people who urged revolution, many urged evolution. There are still many people who urge moderation because "these things take time." There are also people who claim that becoming upset over one incident will not solve anything. While we "keep cool", the waste in terms of human lives lost or blasted continues. We will not mention the economic losses involved. The overall situation is complicated, but there is one incident which we feel deserves to be regarded with emotion.

THE INCIDENT

Early in November a group of children were playing in a ditch in Monroe, N.C. In spite of the laws and customs of this enlightened town the group was integrated. At one point in their play a little girl kissed a nine-year-old Negro boy, Hanover Thompson. None of the other children paid any attention to that action, but her mother and father did. The little girl is white, you see. To avenge this insult to a bud of southern womanhood, six carloads of police picked up Hanover and his eight-year old friend, Fuzzy Simpson. The boys were held in jail for six days without charges. At first the mayor contacted the local NAACP leader to make arrangements for getting the boys out of town. Then the boys' mothers were summoned to juvenile court on ten minutes notice. Hanover Thompson and Fuzzy Simpson were tried, without counsel, for "attempted rape on females." They were given an indeterminate sentence at the Morrison Training School for Delinquent Boys at Hoffman, N.C. The Superior Court Clerk who acted as "judge" asked the reporter from the N.Y. Post to kill the story, as it had been killed in the local paper. The reason given for this request was that "somebody must be trying to stir up race trouble. . ." However, the story was printed. From the ensuing silence we gather the majority of New Yorkers are remaining calm.

In contrast to the justice received by Hanover and Fuzzy there is the case of Lewis Medlin, a white factory worker. In October Medlin was accused of brutally beating a Negro woman (who was expecting her sixth child) while attempting to rape her. His case was continued and he was freed on bail. According to Recorders Court Judge J. Emmet Griffin, he will probably be acquitted: "He's probably not guilty of what he's charged with. He was drunk, and may be guilty of assault on a female. But it was not aggravated assault, so there's probably not sufficient evidence to convict him for assault with intent to rape." This is justice.

Two boys are left to rot in a reformatory, that is justice. But something CAN be done. You can let the Governor of North Carolina know that Americans concede to no state the right to ruin its children's lives as a sacrifice to irrational race prejudice. If enough Americans express their sense of outrage, these two children can be free. Write a letter or send a telegram to Governor Luther H. Hodges, the Capitol, Raleigh, N.C. NOW. Or are you keeping cool?

Proposal Made For Eligibility

A proposal for an academic eligibility requirement for participation is a major student responsibility.

Students may participate in most student organizations without meeting eligibility requirements. Voluntary selection of activities by students with reference to number, kind and degree of participation, functions well both in principle and practice. Theoretically this view assumes a certain degree of maturity on the part of the student. It grants to him the responsibility of judging for himself how extensively and/or intensively he ought to indulge himself in extra-curricular activities while maintaining his desired scholastic standing.

Many studies devoted to examining the relationship between academic class standing and active participation in student activities have shown that there is a positive correlation between the two. The lack of a scholastic eligibility standard for participation in major student activity responsibilities has indeed been unfortunate in a few instances. We are all well acquainted with the cases of marginal students who have attained positions of major student responsibility only to be dropped from school for academic reasons. If academic eligibility was a requirement the marginal student would have been discouraged, if not prevented, from involving himself in a major responsibility in a student organization. Therefore, my proposal is:

The University establish an academic eligibility requirement of 75 cumulative average for students who wish to stand as candidates for the following offices of the following organizations.

1. Membership on Student Association Council.
2. Senior Editorial Staff of the CYNIC
3. Senior Staff of the Aeriel
4. Senior Staff of the Centaur
5. Executive Officers of WSGA
6. Executive Officers of IFC
7. Executive Officers of Pan Hellenic
8. Kake Walk Directors and Assistant Directors
9. Chairman, Assistant Chairman, and Committee Chairman of Freshman Orientation Committee, Homecoming Committee, Junior Week, Senior Week
10. Class Officers
11. Others?

• Candidates' lists to be certified by the COSA office from information obtained from the University Registrar.

SA Holds First Meeting Of Year

by CONNIE EGNER

SA held its first meeting of the new year Thursday, January 8th, at 7 P.M. Presided over by Charles Hines, reports of various committees were heard. Events on the calendar, scheduled by the Cultural Committee, are as follows: The week of March 2nd, a discussion--'Athletics, from the Coaches' Point of View'. Two weeks later, the 18th-19th, a panel of students from several schools, will come together to discuss and analyze college life today. April 19th will bring a film-discussion period; several good titles are under consideration.

The Constitutional Committee brought into discussion a constitution submitted by music students, who are petitioning for recognition as a chapter of the Music Education National Conference. Passed and accepted, the petition will be recommended to the Student Advisory Committee for further action.

There were several items on the agenda introduced by the Finance Committee. Action taken appropriated funds to Hillel for a lecture series, and to CDHA for an addressograph machine, while aid to other campus organizations remained in discussion. The meeting adjourned at 8 o'clock, with plans for the next meeting to be February 12.

Pinnings "etc"

Many important stepping stones for UVM students occurred during Christmas vacation. Over vacation Tri Delts' Kay Reed and Joanna Henderson, both of the class of '58, received the pins of Kenny Eaton, '60 of Sigma Nu and Eddie Sternich, an AEPi from Tufts Medical School. There were two engagements: Bobby Evans, '58 to Andy Arrobach, '58 of Sigma Nu, and Jackie Watts, '59 to Jim Shillings, '58, a Lambda Chi Alpha at Norwich University. The fifth Tri-Delt to "change her status" recently was Joan Booker, '59, who became pinned to Ben Dacey, a Delt Phi.

Three Phi Sigs became attached over the holidays too. Bob Ehrlich and Mimi Portney, AEPhi were pinned New Year's Eve, and Gerry Josephson became engaged to Susan Gold, a sophomore at McGill University. A June wedding is planned. On Christmas Day Sue Noreen became engaged to Howard Kalts, '60.

It was an eventful vacation too for two Pi Phis, who became engaged; Shirley Nichols to Richard Christlieb, a sophomore at Tufts Medical School and Mary Lee Morrill to William Mitchell, a Sigma Nu at UVM.

ALPHA DELTA PI

Although the ADPi's have been very busy with exams and papers, they took time out to entertain Dean and Mrs. King for dinner. The ATO's serenaded Bunny Hall, one of their nursing students, who is home now in between affiliation trips.

Their housemother, Miss Brumsen, surprised us with a Christmas party. All the members exchanged gifts and sang carols.

DELTA DELTA DELTA

Previous to Christmas vacation, the Tri Delts had the privilege of entertaining Barbara Birch. Barbara is the president of Middlebury's Tri Delta's Chapter, Alpha Iota.

KAPPA ALPHA THETA

Newly elected officers are: Sandra Mowry-President, Gail Kaufman-Vice-President, Gayle McQuillin-Corresponding Secretary, Sue King-Recording Secretary, Lynne Cotter-Treasurer, Judy Macomber-Assistant Treasurer, Judy Hunt-Scholarship Chairman, Martha Laston-Pledge Chairman, Pat Darling-Chaplain, Joan Schouth-Activities Chairman, Helen Riegels-Calendar Chairman and Betty Ogilvie-Publicity Chairman.

PI PHI

Pi Phi observed Chapter Loyalty Day last Friday with its traditional ceremony.

SIGMA ALPHA EPSILON

SAE recently pledged three new members, Paul Tessein, Clark Dickenson, and Bill Bradford. Both Paul and Clark are transfer students from Trenton Junior College. Frank DePolo, Frank Walters, and Phil Eby have been initiated.

Prior to Christmas vacation, Kappa Alpha, and SAE sponsored a joint Christmas party for the benefit of the children from St. Joseph's Orphanage. The children received gifts, and a phonograph was given to the orphanage.

SIGMA PHI

The pledging of Rod Hill and Grant Allen was one of the Sig's big pre-Christmas events. Both new pledges are Sophomores. Rod is a transfer student from Norwich, a member of the football team, and Grant is a University of New Mexico transfer.

THETA CHI

Theta Chi's Christmas Formal was very successful with Inge Dickerman reigning as Sweetheart. The weekend came to a close on Saturday night, when an informal party was held at the house.

New pledges for Theta Chi are Fred Dickerman and Bob Eaton.

Directory Lists Summer Employment

Want a free trip to a far-away place with a strange-sounding name? Or do you want to be a stay-at-home money-maker this summer?

No matter what your inclination, every teacher, college student and professor will have a choice from over 12,000 summer earning opportunities described in the new and expanded 1959 WORLD-WIDE SUMMER PLACEMENT DIRECTORY.

The DIRECTORY lists specific jobs in 20 foreign countries and all 49 U.S. States. They range from steamships to dude ranches, from work-travel trips overseas to summer theatres, from study projects to research, from camps to national and state parks.

Each listing includes a description of the job, the necessary qualifications, the salary, and the name and address of the employer. Information is also given on how to apply for positions with a sample résumé to assist applicants. The best summer jobs are filled early in 1959, so job seekers should apply as soon as possible.

In response to requests from students, the DIRECTORY has added a section especially for them. It lists training program, an asset to future careers, in hundreds of firms and the U.S. Government.

Copies of the DIRECTORY may be examined at most University Placement or may be obtained for $3.00 each by writing to The Advancement and Placement Institute, Box 99K, Station G, Brooklyn 22, N.Y.

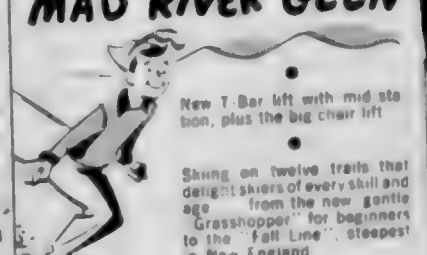
A current up-to-date SUMMER PLACEMENT DIRECTORY is published each year by the Institute, a non-commercial advisory service for the field of education since 1952. The Institute also publishes the monthly CRUSADE JOURNAL, which lists positions for educators, and the annual WORLD-WIDE GRADUATE AWARD DIRECTORY.

There are no fees for any positions obtained through the Institute and its service publications.

Alpha Zeta News

At our last regular meeting we had as a speaker, Mr. Floyd Campbell, a former Alpha Zeta and a UVM graduate of 1942. Mr. Campbell is employed by the Soil Conservation Service in the State of Vermont. He talked to us on the importance of scholastic ability in regards of getting and maintaining a job, along with how much people disregarded the use of "common sense" which he regarded as being just as important if not more so, than scholastic ability. A short discussion period followed his talk.

On December 17th, four new students were initiated into the brotherhood of Alpha Zeta. Those being iniated into the honorary society were all Vermonters: Willard Wires, Peru; Thedore Hinkley, Burlington; Francis Tobin, Charlotte; and Harrison Hoyt, East Dorset. All the brothers extend their congratulations to these new iniates.



The honeymoon is over when he phones that he'll be late for supper -- and she has already left a note that it's in the refrigerator.

It takes all kinds of engineers to do Western Electric's job

It is Western Electric's job in the Bell System to produce some 65,000 different parts which are assembled into a vast variety of telephone apparatus and equipment. This job, coupled with our other responsibilities, requires the help of engineers in every field.

Their skills and talents are needed to develop new manufacturing techniques, solve quality control problems, devise testing facilities and methods. They work on new applications for metals and alloys, calculate raw material needs, seek manufacturing cost reductions.

In helping meet the Bell System's need for more and better telephone equipment, Western Electric engineers have assignments in the other areas of our job — installation, distribution and purchasing.

Our engineers are also involved in defense projects entrusted to us by the government. Because of our specialized Bell System experience, we are well equipped to handle projects like the Nike guided missile system and the White Alice communications network in Alaska.

Of course, W.E. engineers are encouraged and assisted in developing professionally . . . in expanding their technical know-how. Company-sponsored programs - like the full-time Graduate Engineering Training Program and the Tuition Refund Plan — help them along.

Promotion from within — a Western Electric policy — helps our engineers move into positions of prime responsibility. Today, 55% of the college graduates in our upper levels of management have engineering degrees. In the next ten years, 7,000 key jobs must be filled by newly promoted people — engineers included.

Western Electric technical fields include mechanical, electrical, chemical and civil engineering, plus the physical sciences. Ask your Placement Officer for a copy of "Consider a Career at Western Electric," or write College Relations, Room 1111E, Western Electric Co., 195 Broadway, New York 7, N. Y. Sign up for a W.E. interview when the Bell System Interviewing Team visits your campus.

IS STUDYING NECESSARY?

Once there were three roommates and their names were Walter Fenwood Casimir Fing, and LeRoy Holocaust and they were all taking English lit. They were all happy, friendly, outgoing types and they all smoked Philip Morris Cigarettes as you would expect from such a gregarious trio, for Philip Morris is the very essence of sociability, the very spirit of amity, the very soul of companionship with its tobaccos so mild and true, its packs so soft and flip-top, its length so regular or long size. You will find when you smoke Philip Morris that the birds sing for you and no man's hand is raised against you.

Each night after dinner Walter and Casimir and LeRoy went to their room and studied English lit. For three hours they sat in somber silence and pored over their books and then, aquinty and spent, they toppled onto their pallets and sobbed themselves to sleep.

This joyless situation obtained all through September and October. Then one November night they were all simultaneously struck by a marvelous idea. "We are all studying the same thing," they cried. "Why, then, should each of us study for three hours? Why not each study for one hour? It is true we will only learn one-third as much that way, but it does not matter because there are three of us and next January before the exams, we can get together and pool our knowledge!"

Oh, what rapture then fell on Walter and Casimir and LeRoy! They flung their beanies into the air and danced a schottische and lit thirty or forty Philip Morrises and ran out to pursue the pleasure which had so long, so bitterly, been missing from their lives.

Alas, they found instead a series of grisly misfortunes. Walter, alas, went searching for love and was soon going steady with a coed named Invicta Breadstuff, a handsome lass, but, alas, hopelessly addicted to bowling. Each night she bowled five hundred lines, some nights a thousand. Poor Walter's thumb was a shambles and his purse was empty, but Invicta just kept on bowling and in the end, alas, she left Walter for a pin-setter, which was a terrible thing to do to Walter, especially in this case, because the pin-setter was automatic.

Walter, of course, was far too distraught to study his English lit, but he took some comfort from the fact that his roommates were studying and they would help him before the exams. But Walter, alas, was wrong. His roommates, Casimir and LeRoy, were nature lovers and they used their free time to go for long tramps in the woods. One November night, alas, they were treed by two bears, Casimir by a brown bear and LeRoy by a Kodiak, and they were kept in the trees until mid-January when winter set in and the brown bear and the Kodiak went away to hibernate.

...the effects were, on the whole, beneficial...

So when the three roommates met before exams to pool their knowledge, they found they had none to pool! Well sir, they had a good long laugh about that and then rushed to the kitchen and stuck their heads in the oven. It was, however, an electric oven and the effects were, on the whole, beneficial. The wax in their ears got melted and they acquired a healthy tan and today they are married to a lovely young heiress named Centiglim Bran and live in the Canal Zone, where there are many nice beaches to wave at.

Band Takes On Ivy Look

The UVM band is being reorganized to fit the tastes of the more progressive of the student body.

A Band concert is being planned for this Spring. The Constitution is losing its confusing clauses in a grand streamlining effort.

As the old saying goes, "looks aren't everything", but we disagree. We are going Ivy, a la Charcoal, black and Boulder green.

To experience one of the rarer thrills of your collegiate career, join the Band. The faculty advisers are Dr. Joseph Lechnyr at UN 4-6455, Dr. Herbert Shultz at ext. 217. The student directors are Gus Noponen at 2-7240, and Bill Brigham at 2-7897.

We meet Monday and Thursday afternoons at 4:10. See you at Kake Walk.

Loan Funds Under NEDA Made Available To Students

by ROBERTA GLUCK

The rising cost of education presents a great problem to many prospective and present college students. To help ease this heavy financial burden, the New National Defense Education Act has made a loan fund of more than $47,500,000 available to over 800 colleges in the country. The plan provides for increasing the amounts for loan, until 1962 when $90,000,000 will be available.

Students enrolled in Vermont's institutions of higher learning will have an opportunity to draw on $20,016 of the loan funds. Lyman S. Rowell, dean of administration at UVM, will administer the fund, although he said that it is not yet known how much of Vermont's $20,000 will be available to UVM. He emphasized the fact that the University is taking all steps necessary to qualify as a participating institution. He further explained that the allotment of the fund to each state would be in proportion to the number of persons enrolled as full time students in institutions in each state. No institution may receive more than 250,000 in any fiscal year. Participating institutions will be required to contribute about 10 per cent of their own funds to the NDEA loan fund. They will be additionally required to administer the funds and to receive payment on the funds from students who borrowed from them.

It was noted that the fund provisions of the NDEA are generally more liberal than UVM's loan funds. For one thing, UVM does not ordinarily lend money to freshmen students, but the NDEA loan fund makes money available to freshmen. Another advantage to the NDEA fund is that it permits a student to borrow up to $1000 in any one year and up to a maximum of $5000, where UVM's maximum loan in any one year is ordinarily $500. A third advantage to the NDEA fund is that it charges no interest until a year after graduation, while any loan from UVM carries a one per cent interest charge during the time that the student is in college, with the rate increasing to four per cent after graduation.

To be eligible for an NDEA loan, a student must be in need of the loan to pursue a course of study at the participating institution; must be capable of maintaining a good standing in such course; and have been accepted for enrollment as a full-time student or, if already attending college, be in good standing and in full-time attendance.

The news of the NDEA loan fund is certainly a welcome announcement for the many people who find the cost of higher learning slightly out of their reach.

Students interested in obtaining loans for next semester under the National Education Defense Act may obtain application forms at the office of the Dean of Men or the Dean of Women. At the time of filing the application the student will be expected to arrange for an interview.

The University does not know how much may be received from the federal government but has filed the proper requests.

Applications will be considered by the Student Committee and students will be informed of their action promptly as possible.

and evening. Each rushee will revisit all of the fraternity houses.

SECOND RUSHING PERIOD

Thurs., Feb. 5 Afternoon

Fri., Feb. 6, Evening.

The rushee chooses four fraternities to which he would like to return. He visits each of these houses for about two hours apiece.

THIRD RUSHING PERIOD

Mon., Feb. 9, Evening.

Tues., Feb. 10, Evening.

The rushee may accept two banquet bids for these days. On Wednesday each rushee submits a list of the fraternities in order of his preference to the Interfraternity council office. The fraternities submit a list of their pledge bids to the IFC. The pledge bids are then matched with the choices of the rushee.

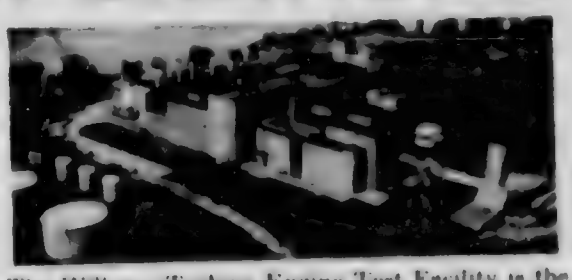
Thurs., Feb. 12 Fraternity pledging. The rushee reports to his IFC advisor for his bids and then to the fraternity for pledging.

If a person is undecided about pledging a fraternity he may remain undecided as long as he desires. In this case a mandatory 30 day waiting period must pass before he can pledge a fraternity.

The most important rules concerning rushing are

1. No Freshman is eligible for pledging at the beginning of the second semester unless he has fully participated in the formal Rushing Program.

2. There will be no contact between fraternity members and rushees during the rushing period, except during actual rushing.



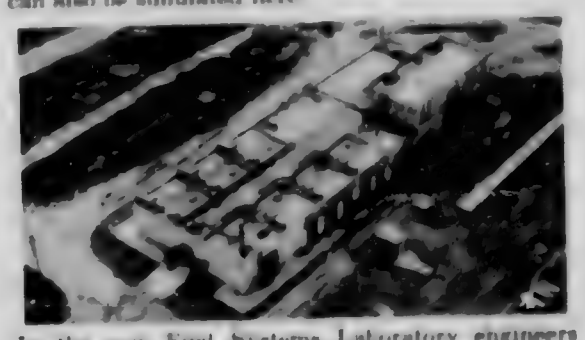
CONNECTICUT OPERATIONS

Unmatched Engineering Facilities for Developing Advanced Flight Propulsion Systems

Operations at Pratt & Whitney Aircraft are essentially those of an engineering and development organization. As such, an engineering atmosphere dominates the work being done, much of which directly involves laboratory experimentation.

In the past three decades, expansion at Pratt & Whitney Aircraft has been almost tenfold. In recent years, greatest emphasis has been on extending engineering facilities to meet the needs of advanced research and development programs in flight propulsion.

Among the Connecticut P&WA facilities are many that are unequaled in the industry. Thus today, Pratt & Whitney Aircraft is better prepared than ever to continue development of the world's best aircraft powerplants . . . to probe the propulsion future . . . to build and test greatly advanced propulsion systems for coming generations of flight vehicles — in whatever form they take.



The Willgoos Turbine Engine Test Facility is the world's most extensive privately owned turbine development laboratory. Designed and built specifically to test full-scale experimental engines and components in environments simulating conditions at extreme altitudes and speeds, it is currently undergoing expansions that will greatly increase its capacity for development testing of the most advanced forms of air breathing systems.

In chambers like this at the Willgoos Turbine Engine Test Facility full-scale engines may be tested in environments which simulate conditions from sea level to 100,000 feet. Mach 3 conditions can also be simulated here.

The Connecticut Aircraft Nuclear Engine Laboratory, operated by Pratt & Whitney Aircraft, is situated on a 1,200-acre tract near Middletown. The Laboratory was specially built for the development of nuclear flight propulsion systems.

In the new Fuel Systems Laboratory engineers can minutely analyze the effects of extreme environmental conditions on components of fuel systems — conditions such as those encountered in advanced types of flight vehicles operating at high Mach numbers and high altitudes. Fuel for these tests can be supplied at any temperature from −65°F to +500°F.

Directory Finally Appears

Anyone asking what's in a name is likely to find all kinds of puns forthcoming when one considers some 2200 student names in the 1958-59 University of Vermont Directory, which finally made its appearance on campus.

The tribe trend - that's its color this year - begins with Abbott, two of them and runs right through Zysk, a student who won last place honors from two Zuckermans.

In between are such names as five Farra - two Fords, a Packard, Nash, two Dodges, a Bus and a Perry-seven Collins, none of them Tom, a Blake, a Stone, a Bunce and a Boxer.

If too many Cooks spoil the broth, nobody has complained about the seven in UVM's directory.

The Andersons, with five, and Austins, with seven, more than keep up with the four Jonsons listed in the volume. But 14 Johnsons and 19 Smiths are not numerous enough to prevent "most" honors from going to 21 Browns.

University founder Ira Allen might be pleased to know that 11 Vermont students carry his family name, followed in numerical ranks by 10 Clarks and nine Woods.

The "saints" are represented by St. Amand, St. Onger and two St. Peters, while the Mc's number 43 and range from McAnney to McWilliam.

Colleges are represented by, of course, Smith, as well as Barnard and Vassar.

Only letter of the alphabet represented with but one name is "X", for Xiques.

Dance Workshop Elects Members

Thirteen students, members of the UVM Dance Workshop, have been elected to membership in Orchesis, national dance honor society at the University.

The newly-elected members will take part in such Orchesis activities as choreographing and performing their own dances, and participating in UVM's annual Fine Arts Festival next spring.

The initiates are Deborah Serotte, Susan Richterman, Marjorie Seldon, Natalie Gordon, Christine Borgmann, Eunice Apgar, Antoinette Poole, Maureen Sexton, Susan Clair, Vivian Sourifman, Theodore Edgecomb, and David Newton.

Other members of the society are Andrew Bailey, Dianne Jordon, Gerry Shippee, Jane Keon, Phyllis Babbitt, Betty Dunn, Joan Loveridge, Diane Lundry, and Elaine Margolin.

The All-Tournament team consisted of Tony [illegible] St. Michael's, Dick [illegible] LeMoyne, Clyde Lord-Vermont, Hank Gretkowski-St. Michael's and Bud Masterson-Assumption. Isles and Gallagher were named alternates. This was quite ironic as Isles was chosen MVP of the tournament.

Bedlam broke loose on the floor and in the Vermont stands at the final buzzer. Vermont hasn't shown this much enthusiasm in winning in recent years. It was the first St. Mike's loss at home to a New England team in four years. The victorious Catamounts also snapped a string of nine straight losses to the Knights in their spectacular win.

Thus far the meets have been individual ones; that is the team score is not compiled -- each skier is counted as an individual. The first team encounter UVM will run up against is in the Dartmouth Winter Carnival at Hanover on February 6 and 7. That is where the test will be.

Hoopsters Split With Rhode Island

by STEPHEN CAPLAN

In January 2nd and 3rd, the UVM Catamounts opened a two night home stand against the University if Rhode Island. Going into the series, Vermont held a 1-2 Conference mark. In the first game of the series, Rhode Island beat UVM, 84-77. In the first half, the crowd saw the Rhode Island team use it's famed fast break to roll to a lead of 31-13. The Catamounts missed many easy shots and failed to gain possession of the backboards. The first half was all Rhode Island, ending up with 50-28 half time score. In the second half, the Catamounts caught fire, cutting down the margin point by point, but it was not enough. The closest Vermont came to cutting down the lead was 6 points with 8:20 to go in the game.

In the percentage circle, Rhode Island won it on the foul line, sinking 12 out of 17 to Vermont's 5 out of 11. Overall, it was one of the cleanest games played here in a long time. Though Vermont had 11 personals, 5 in the later stages of the game were intentional in order to get possession of the ball. Bobby Kuchar led the scoring for Vermont with 24 points followed by Lord 20; Isles 16; Gallagher 11 and Giordano with 4. For Rhode Island, the results were as followal Edmonds 23; Multer 18; Harrington 15; Holland 10; Anderson 6; and Brown 12.

The Cats, showing only some of their brilliant playing that helped them win the St. Michael's Tournament, won a hard earned 77-76 victory in the second game. They were able to stop Rhode Island's fast break and managed in the second half to come from behind to win. In the first half, with excellent outside shooting by Tom Harrington and Harry Edmonds, Rhode Island led by a score of 48-38. In this half the Cats showed a much better average on their foul shooting, hitting 14 for 14, keeping them in the game. Isles completely riddled the Rhody defense with drives and jump shots. Rhode Island caught up, but with 36 seconds to go, UVM still led. Kichar missed a lay up and Rhody scored. A long jump shot was blocked by Isles and Giordano grabbed it to clinch the game.

The Catamounts never gave Rhode Island a chance to use their fast break and were in control of the boards all the time. Lord had 22 rebounds and was again high for the game. Isles was high man for the Cats with 27 and Lord followed with 23. Gallagher had 12; Kuchar 13; and Giordano 2. For Rhode Island, Harrington led with 25; Edmonds 21; Multer 12; Anderson 8; and Caswell 6. Though Rhode Island outscored Vermont on the floor in the second half, 32-28, they hit only 21 out of 29 in foul shooting which provided the Green & Gold victory margin.

Skiers Compete In Individual Meets

by FRED ROBINSON

Over the Christmas recess while most of the Campus inhabitants were home "partying," catching up on studies, or even basking in warm sunshine, Coach Sam Miller's Catamount Ski Team remained in the wilds of Vermont to fly over wind-blown slopes of white powder carrying out the final touches in preparation for their opening encounter of the season.

This came on December 20 and 21 at the J. Coffin Invitational in Franconia, New Hampshire. Dartmouth, Maine, Williams, Harvard, New Hampshire, and Middlebury were also represented in the Giant Slalom on the first day and in the five mile Cross Country competition on the second. Jake Stewart was high for the Vermont entry in the Giant Slalom placing 20th with a time of 45.3 seconds. Following him in 26th place was Frosh Dave Wheeler, in 30th, Steve Berry, and in 31st, Tom Hackett. On the second day, Soph Hackett breezed across the overland course in 43 minutes, 10 seconds to place 15th in the X-country. Steve Berry followed Tom in 23rd place, Hugh Sinclair in a tie for 28th "Duff" Wheeler, 43rd, and George Silver in the 47th spot. After the meet, the Cat team traveled to Stowe for a four-day training camp stressing slalom and small downhill events. They left for their homes for a short Christmas break at noon on the 24th.

On January 1 the Cats were back up in the 6 sub-zero weather of the Green Mountains — this time at Lyndon — carrying on another training camp for two days stressing x-country and jumping events. On the 3rd and 4th the Vermont squad took part in a meet sponsored by the Lyndon Outing Club with Dartmouth, Harvard, Middlebury, St. Lawrence, and St. Mikes on hand. In the "B" competition, Hugh Sinclair flew over the seven mile course in 51 minutes, 48 seconds, and scampered across 5th, followed by little Danny Mossman in 7th, Steve Berry in 10th, and Tom Hackett copping 19th.

After a week of studying and practice, the Green and Gold, on January 10, traveled to Mount Bromley to compete against ski enthusiasts from Dartmouth, Middlebury, Norwich, and independents, in the Orvis Trophy Race. In this Giant Slalom event, Jake Stewart placed 20th, Dave Wheeler, 26th, Bill Adams, 27th, Steve Berry, 39th, and Tom Hackett, 44th. Olympic Gold Medal winner, Othmar Sneider, copped first place. On the following day the Cats journeyed to Jackson, New Hampshire, to compete in a 7-mile x-country race. Danny Mossman was high man for Vermont, but the official results were not available at this writing.

Overall the Cats have a fairly strong team, but are weak in the Nordic Combined. They need a strong jumper which so far has been their only liability. Danny Mossman or Junior Steve Copps could

by JONNY KAPLAN

Last Wednesday, the Freshman basketball team netted its first win in five starts against the Dartmouth College Frosh, 52-51. Paced by Jim "Fuzzy" Evans and Pete Lowe with 17 and 15 points respectively, the Frosh made its finest showing of the year. The game was close through its entirety. Vermont jumped ahead on a field goal by Lowe and stayed there until the waning minutes of the first half. With less than four minutes to go in the first half, the Kittens enjoyed a two point bulge, 19-17. At this point the roof caved in for the fighting Frosh. Between their inability to hit from the outside, and Dartmouth's rebounding superiority coming through, it looked as though it was all over for Vermont. When the buzzer sounded ending the half, Dartmouth was on top of a 26-23 score.

The start of the second half was a duplication of the last few minutes of the first. Dartmouth looked unbeatable as they slowly widened the Vermont deficit. They moved ahead, 34-23, before they finally went cold. At this point the game took a sudden reversal, as the guns from Vermont started getting hot. At the close of the third quarter, the score stood even at 36-36. Once again the color of the game started changing. Dartmouth again began pulling away and with less than four minutes to go in the game, they led 49-41. Then in Frank Merriwell fashion, the Frosh slowly closed the gap. With under a minute remaining, Dartmouth was ahead by only one point, 51-50. They had possession of the ball, however, and all they had to do was freeze for half a minute. Johnny Bower, top gun for Dartmouth took a jump shot and missed. Lowe rebounded and Vermont called time out. On the inbound play Evans set up Parlato for a lay-up and Vermont led 52-51. Ten seconds later the game ended.

The team deserves a lot of credit for their dogged determination in staying with the much bigger and stronger Dartmouth squad. Between the playmaking and leadership of Evans, and the rebounding of Lowe and Levi, the Kittens achieved their first triumph. It may be added in the first meeting of these same two clubs., Dartmouth swamped the inexperienced Frosh by 22 points.

Extending their win skein to two straight, Coach Ralph Lapointe's Kittens Friday gained revenge on the Ethan Allen AFB five, winning by 60-55 in the losers' gym.

Paced by Jimmy Evans' 14 points, the Frosh led throughout the contest, and held a 31-18 advantage at halftime. A late Airmen rally fell short in the final half.

In addition to Evans, three other Kittens hit double figures. Levi Brown had 12 digits, Keith Low 11, and Bart Jeffery 10 points. The Airmen were led by Holt and Johnson with 11 points apiece.

In their first meeting of the season, the Airmen defeated the Lapointmen, 45-35.

COOP'S HOOP BY STEVE COOPER

Welcome back to the "hoop," fans, and a happy new year to all. Even though basketball is the primary feature of this column, the big sports news of the holidays was the Baltimore Colts' exciting football victory over the upset-minded New York Giants for the world championship. I was fortunate to see the game over T.V.; what a scene.

In college basketball, there was also plenty of exciting action, especially right here in the East. In the Holiday Festival Tournament at New York's Madison Square Garden, St. John's University of Brooklyn came from nowhere to win the event beating such teams as Niagara, Dayton, St. Joseph's and Syracuse. The two outstanding players on the St. John's quintet, Tony Jackson, a 6-4 jump shooting sophomore and classy senior guard, Al Seiden seem destined for all-American honors.

Down South, things were really hopping. North Carolina State won the annual Dixie Classic defeating such powerhouses as North Caroline, Michigan State, Louisville and Wake Forest. North Carolina State with its all veteran team looks like the number one team in the nation.

Over in Lexington, Kentucky, the hometown University of Kentucky Wildcats won their own tournament by defeating last year's top ranked quintet, West Virginia, despite a 36 point effort by West Virginia's All-American, Jerry West. Just a sidelight; Kentucky, which usually manages to play its key game on its own home court, has built up a phenomenal record since Adolph Rupp took over the coaching reins some 21 years ago. According to a recent issue of Sports Illustrated, Rupp's record at Kentucky since 1931 is 584 wins against 103 losses.

At this writing, Kentucky is the number 1 college team in the country but last week they were defeated by Vanderbuilt. As of January sixth, the top ten teams in the nation were:

1. Kentucky
2. North Carolina State
3. North Carolina
4. Kansas State
5. Michigan State
6. Auburn
7. Cincinnati
8. Northwestern
9. Bradley
10. St. John's

It is interesting to note that there are three Big Ten members in the top twenty. Illinois is presently no. 20. Purdue and Michigan are also threats to enter the "charmed circle." As a league, the Big Ten, from present indications, seems to be the strongest in the nation.

Turning to the professional ranks, pre-season predictions are holding their own. In the Eastern Division, Boston is running away from the field after the New York Knicks threatened to make shambles of the league. The Celtics recently ripped off a string of 11 straight victories to strengthen their first place hold, while the Knicks have been playing less than .500 ball since the first three weeks of the season. Syracuse and Philadelphia are third and fourth respectively.

Over in the Western Division, St. Louis is standing in a better position than the Celts. Even the latter's record is better. Bob Petit and Cliff Hagen are proving too much for any team to handle effectively.

Well, that's the picture for now fans. This will be my last column until Feb. 12. During these next couple of weeks, many of the college basketball teams take time out for finals and then tempo picks up about Feb. 1. So until February 12, take care and I wish all of you (myself included) the best of luck during finals.

Cats Pierce Knights To Win SMC Tourney; Defeat Midd. And U.N.H. In Latter Contests

Hoopsters Win Two Road Games

by STEPHEN PROHER

Last Wednesday night, the Vermont Catamounts won their second straight Vermont state basketball series game, 73-61, over the Panthers at Middlebury. The following night the Catamounts journeyed to Durham, New Hampshire, where they defeated for the second time this season, the Wildcats of U.N.H., 64-59, to even their Yankee Conference record at 3-3. Vermont's overall record so far is 7-4.

Ed. note - Not including last night's Union game.

The Middlebury game began at a slow pace with both teams trading baskets in the opening minutes, but picked up midway through the first half as the Catamounts rolled to a 36-17 half time score. The Vermont five proved to be too strong under the boards and from the outside as Clyde Lord hit for 18 points, Frank Giordano, 14, Charles Isles, 13, and Bobby Kuchar, 12.

Early in the second half, Coach Evans substituted freely to give the bench some needed experience. At one time in the second half, the Panthers closed to within 7 points, but the Catamounts turned back the drive and played to control the ball to the final buzzer.

At Durham, New Hampshire, the Vermont five, which was down by four at the half, came on to defeat the Wildcats, 65-59. With three minutes gone in the second half, Lord and Kuchar hit for a pair of field goals, and UVM went ahead for the remainder of the game. Clyde Lord held Pete Davis, the Wildcat's big center, to four points in the second half, two of which were from the charity stripe after Davis poured 16 points through the strings in the first half. With two minutes gone in the second half and Vermont ahead, 49-43, the Catamounts played smart and deliberate basketball to take its third Yankee Conference win. Scoring for Vermont were Lord and Kuchar with 14 apiece, and Gallagher and Giordano with 12 apiece. Davis was high for New Hampshire with 20 points.

This Saturday night, the Catamounts will travel to Storrs, Connecticut to play the University of Connecticut in what will be the Cats' toughest Yankee Conference clash this year. The UConn five are tall and rugged off the boards. They rely mostly on the ball handling of Jack Rose to set up their fast breaking game. Last year, the Catamounts dropped two league games to Connecticut and will be out to avenge their losses against the perennial Yankee Conference title holders.

Catamount Clippings

By Paul Stanton

HALFTIME BREAK!

As final exams draw nearer with each passing day, we shift our emphasis from socializing in the coffee shop and lounge, fraternity parties, basketball and skiing to cramming for mid-years. Let us relax for a few minutes, and look back over the first half of the UVM basketball season.

When the hoopsters return to the hardwood on January 31 at Massachusetts, they will be without the services of Ray Wiener, who was seriously injured in an automobile accident during Christmas vacation. Ray's spirit and drive sparked the team during the first month of the campaign, and his absence leaves a wide gap for mentor Fuzzy Evans to fill. Let us hope that Ray will make a speedy recovery.

The Vermont record shows seven victories against four losses. The Catamounts were beaten by a superior Dartmouth club, 82-64, in the season opener for both schools. Three days later, the Evansmen tipped New Hampshire, 78-67, before the largest opening game home crowd I have seen in three years. The Class of '62 turned out en mass to cheer the home team on to victory. Norwich entertained UVM on Dec. 10, as the Green and Gold trounced its state opponent, 94-62.

During 'Winter Formal' weekend, all hopes of winning the Yankee Conference and appearing in New York City's Madison Square Garden were obliterated as the University of Maine's underdog Black Bears surprised the Cats twice, 77-75, and 75-73. Had certain substitutions not been made, the statistics could have easily been reversed, as both games were won in the waning seconds of play. But we should not cry over sour milk---we should change brands!

After Maine, came the St. Michael's Holiday Tourney, which was initiated last year by then powerful St. Mike's. In addition to the two local rivals, LeMoyne of Syracuse and Assumption of Worcester participated in the elimination contests. Vermont dumped Assumption in the opening round, and not to be outdone, the Knights outlasted LeMoyne. The stage was set. On Friday night, Dec. 19, UVM beat St. Michael's to cop the top spot. The seemingly impossible had been done---the jinx was broken. Perhaps now the Cats will have the confidence to beat Doc Jacobs & Co. during regular season play. We may even win the state championship, beating those other "classy" Vermont basketball powerhouses.

The weekend following New Year's Eve was rather 'hangoverish' for Vermont, as sloppy ball handling contributed to Rhode Island's first night triumph, 84-77. The Cats squeeked out a 77-76 win in the second day's encounter for a split. Funny, Rhode Island was supposed to be a pushover. As a matter of fact, the Rhode Island Frosh twice whipped the Varsity. Things don't look very good for the next few years.

The Catamounts roared into Middlebury on Jan. 7, and easily disposed of the hapless Panthers. Vermont's record in state play is now 2-0. The following evening saw a seesaw battle with New Hampshire at the latter's court. Once again Vermont triumphed.

Our record is 7-4, 3-3 in Yankee Conference play and 2-0 in the "Green Mountain League." Right now we should be 6-0 in the Conference. Our chances of winning the Beanpot crown have all but disappeared. What was once a pre-season dream has turned into a nightmare. We'll be lucky to break even. We have four games remaining; two with Mass., and two with UConn. Both schools are strong and well coached. Even Sports Illustrated was mistaken. Vermont will NOT challenge UConn all the way. It's going to be a cold winter in Vermont this year and for many years to come.

Isles Chosen Tourney's M.V.P.; Lord Breaks Scoring Record

UVM Drops Assumption, 83-68

by JERRY FEIG

In the opening game of the second annual St. Michael's Christmas Invitational Basketball Tournament before a half filled, but enthusiastic Memorial Auditorium crowd, the University of Vermont turned back a well-drilled, smooth working Assumption College club from Worcester, Mass., 83-68. The Catamounts, who prior to the tourney opener were named the team to beat, were given a lot of pressure by their opponents in the first 30-35 minutes of play, but moved away in the late minutes. Although UVM showed flashes of brilliance, its overall game was somewhat sloppy.

Vermont gained on Assumption at the foul line, where the team hit a fine percentage on 27 free throws out of 35 attempts. It was Assumption's personal fouling that brought the big margin in the score, for the Worcester Greyhounds had a 29-28 advantage in the field goal department.

Assumption went on a hot streak near the middle of the second half to all but wipe out a sizeable Vermont lead. Then, the Cats put the pressure on with Clyde Lord, Charlie Isles, and Bobby Kuchar leading a scoring charge that put the game out of reach of the visitors.

Vermont was hot at times, and in this spurt and in one a short time before, they displayed some fine passing and shooting. Otherwise there were plenty of missed passes and shots that gave the visitors from Mass. plenty of chances to battle back.

The Assumption loss was its first of the season. They came up with varied pattern plays and worked the ball to get the good shots. They kept right in contention until the Cats pulled out a 57-50 margin with just under 10 minutes to play.

Assumption, down 50-44, had pulled into a 50 all tie on a trio of smoothly worked plays that sent Joe Sweeney once and Dick McGrath twice in for layups against a fooled Vermont defense. But that was as far as the Greyhounds got. Frank Giordano's layups, a pair of foul shots by Bob Gallagher and a three pointer by Clyde Lord moved Vermont ahead to stay. Bob Kuchar topped the Vermont scoring with 21 points, Charlie Isles added 18, Clyde Lord had 16, and Frank Giordano and Bob Gallagher each had 12 to put the starters all in double figures.

Five Tops St. Mike's, 69-63

by JOEL C. ULLMAN

The place was Memor Auditorium; the event the St. Michael's Invitatio Tournament finals, and winner was the University Vermont Catamounts.

It took Vermont five ye to do it--that is, beat Michael's in basketball. it was one of the bigg wins for the Cats in re years, coming out on to the 69-63 score.

Charley Isles was Vermo hero, and gained bows as tourney's Most Valuable Pl er. However, it was a de nite team effort which en bled Vermont to achi victory. Coach Fuzzy Ev applauded the whole club, stated that Bob Gallaghe game was the "best he played". Bob scored points and was a tower strength on the boards, w Isles was high scorer 20 points. Clyde Lord pla his usual consistent ga hitting for 18 points and Wiener showed the b strength by scoring 11.

The game started out complete rout for the Pu Knights, who jumped to 8-1 lead before UVM was to hit from the floor. trouble was SMC's Gretko and Mracek who contro the boards and were sco with consistency. The began to hit midway in first half to pull int tie with six minutes rem ing, 22-22. Denny M entered the game and spa Vermont's attack w blanketing the red hot Nicodemo. The Green and had a 34-26 halftime cush

The second half was a ture of hard fought bask ball. St. Mike's fought from the halftime def and finally caught the at 42-42 with twelve mi left in the game. With minutes remaining, the Kn put on the power with Nic mo hitting and took a point lead and held 61-58 until less than minutes remained. UVM it on a three point pla Lord and in the rema minutes of the game outs St. Mike's, 11-2. Ray Wi broke the deadlock for Cats with a pair of throws and Isles ice with a pretty drive-in.

St. Mike's was hurt foul line and most lost the game due to factor. Vermont hit fo of its free tosses. SMC registered 50% fro charity stripe. In the half, UVM hit for 40% the floor, while the K connected for only 27%. just couldn't keep u the torrid Vermont sho

5 Candidates Open Kake Walk As They Vie For King & Queen Honors

Pat Funkhouser

Judy Hauck

Bob Gallagher

Steve Moore

Dave Reilly

Candidates for the 1959 Kake Walk King and Queen thrones were presented to the student body tonight at the Annual Pops Night-Penny Carnival Program at Memorial Auditorium. The different candidates were introduced by the members of the sponsoring fraternities and sororities in skits which concluded the evening's festivities.

A total of five candidates will be competing for royalty honors. Two sororities and three fraternities will transform Waterman Building and the campus green into campaign headquarters on Friday and Saturday of this week.

In what promises to be a very lively contest, we find in competition for the Kake Walk Queen Delta Delta Delta's lovely Patty Funkhouser, a senior from Hanover, New Hampshire. Patty is a student in the College of Arts and Sciences majoring in Romance Languages. Last year she was chosen as a Junior Beauty in an all campus election. Pi Beta Phi's sparkling candidate, Judy Hauck, a senior nursing student, makes her home here in Burlington. She attended the local schools and graduated from Burlington High in 1955. In her sophomore year Judy was elected to Sophomore Aida, the girls' honorary. During her junior year she did affiliate work in New York City and Boston.

Vying for the position of KakeWalk King we find Alpha Tau Omega's Dave Reilly of Fairlawn, New Jersey, a senior in the College of Arts and Sciences majoring in Psychology. Dave, better known as Skip, has an especially strong feeling for Kake Walk as he was a Kake Walker last year. Kappa Sigma will present Bob Gallagher of Lyndhurst, New Jersey, as their choice for the 1959 Kake Walk King. Bob is presently a starter and two letterman on the UVM basketball squad. As a senior he is enrolled in the College of Arts and Sciences and is majoring in English. Sigma Alpha Epsilon will introduce Steve Moore as their candidate for King. Steve, a senior, hails from Peacham, Vermont, and is enrolled in the College of Technology. He has held several offices in his fraternity and is presently SAE's Steward. Upon graduation Steve plans to enter the field of Sales Engineering.

Changes Adapted To Student KW Ticket Sale

The ticket sale for the undergraduates of the University of Vermont will be held in the Gym on February 15, 1959. The doors will open at 8 AM and the sale will begin at 9 AM.

This year the student sale will work as follows: Upon entering the door at the Gym each student will be given a ticket stub with a number on it; another ticket stub with a matching number will be placed in a large container. At 9 AM stubs will be drawn from the container and the persons with matching numbers will be given opportunity to buy tickets. This process will be continued until all ticket are sold.

The reason for this change in ticket sale procedure is the result of careful consideration on the part of the Kake Walk Directors and their advisors. The new method will eliminate the need of a line and will allow for an equal chance for all students.

FRATERNITY

The Fraternity ticket sale will take place in the Kake Walk Office (Room 202), at 4 PM on February 16, 1959.

MEDICAL SCHOOL

The ticket sale for the students of the University of Vermont Medical School will be on the 19th of February, 1959 at 11 AM.

Royalty Reception Slated For Sunday At Southwick

With the Kake Walk holidays drawing near an important event on our February calendar stands out. This is the Kake Walk Royalty Reception. This year the reception will be held on Sunday afternoon, February 15, from 2 to 4 P.M. in the Southwick ballroom. With an open invitation to the entire campus, those attending will have an opportunity to meet the candidates for king and queen of the Kake Walk festivities.

The two queen candidates and the three king candidates will form a receiving line with the student directors of the Kake Walk program to greet student and faculty guests. At 3:00 P.M. the candidates will be formally introduced on the stage of the Southwick ballroom by assistant Kake Walk director, Fred Mandell.

Notice About KW CYNIC

The annual KakeWalk edition of the CYNIC will be distributed next Friday and Saturday, February 20 and 21. The ushers will give one copy to every person both nights during intermission between the skits and Walking.

Extra copies will be available in the CYNIC office following Kake Walk for those students who did not attend the Walking or those who did not receive a copy.

Action Taken On Fraternity

The University of Vermont has informed Phi Sigma Delta Fraternity that it will be suspended from the University's campus at the end of the spring semester unless the fraternity "can show cause why it should not be suspended."

Suspension would mean that the local chapter of the national fraternity would be closed for a period of time to be decided if the action should be taken. Removal of the organization would reduce the number of social fraternities on the campus from 15 to 14.

Dean Earle W. Clifford, who made the announcement recently, said that the suspension action resulted from a "serious breach of acceptable conduct on the part of a number of members of the fraternity." The fraternity action which drew the suspension notice occured prior to the December winter recess, Dean Clifford said.

The disciplinary action was the strongest such action to be imposed on a UVM campus organization in recent years.

The UVM dean said that during this probationary period the fraternity would be restricted from participating in any public activity during the remainder of the semester, but he said that "social activity of the fraternity's house would be permitted in order to give the chapter this means of showing, if it can, why suspension should not be carried out at the close of the semester."

Governor Stafford Proposes New Cuts In University's Budget

By MARK PLATT

When Governor Stafford's proposed budget was announced, President John T. Fey indicated that the cuts the Governor proposed in the University's operating budget would have both immediate and long-range effects for UVM.

The University has requested a 1959-61 biennial increase of approximately $1,819,000 over what it received from the State for the 1957-59 biennium. Governor Stafford recommended an increase of $370,000 for the University for the biennium.

The immediate effect to UVM's president would be a "reduction in the programs of the University which provide important services to the people of the state." The long range effect, he noted, would "place UVM in a position where it would be unable to compete with neighboring universities in New England in obtaining and holding faculty members, and make it virtually impossible to meet the future needs of increased enrollments at the University which are now a reality as a result of the increased college-age population of the state."

Governor Stafford's budget opposes UVM's plan to establish a uniform resident tuition fee of $300. The University had proposed lowering the $345 tuition charged Vermonters in arts and sciences, technology, secondary education and the Graduate College; and had proposed increasing the $225 charged Vermonters in agriculture and home economics, and elementary and junior high education. Gov. Stafford recommended making the $345 resident tuition the uniform tuition for all in-state students except those in the Medical College.

Turning the total effect of the governor's proposals, President Fey said "it must be recognized that an inability to meet the budget request of the University at this point cannot be offset by a restoration of a similar amount at a later date. The loss of faculty and the reduction of programs would result in a long-time reduction in the programs of the institution and would require even greater funds to restore them."

Although Governor Stafford, in his proposed state budget, made no mention of the UVM request for the building of a two million dollar library, President Fey said he did not think Stafford was opposed to the library. The University's plan called for a bond issue to permit an immediate start on the library. The plan would eventually repay the state approximately half of the cost through the proposed $30 library fee for students.

Reception this year, will serve refreshments throughout the afternoon. Directing the Sunday afternoon program is Pat Deacon, social chairman of Alpha Chi.

Last year's queen Jeanie Robbins and the members of Alpha Chi Omega along with the Kake Walk directors take this opportunity to extend a public invitation to members of the UVM family and their guests and urge that those who will be voting on Monday take full advantage of the reception to meet their candidates.

CYNIC Advisor Selected Judge For Press Ratings

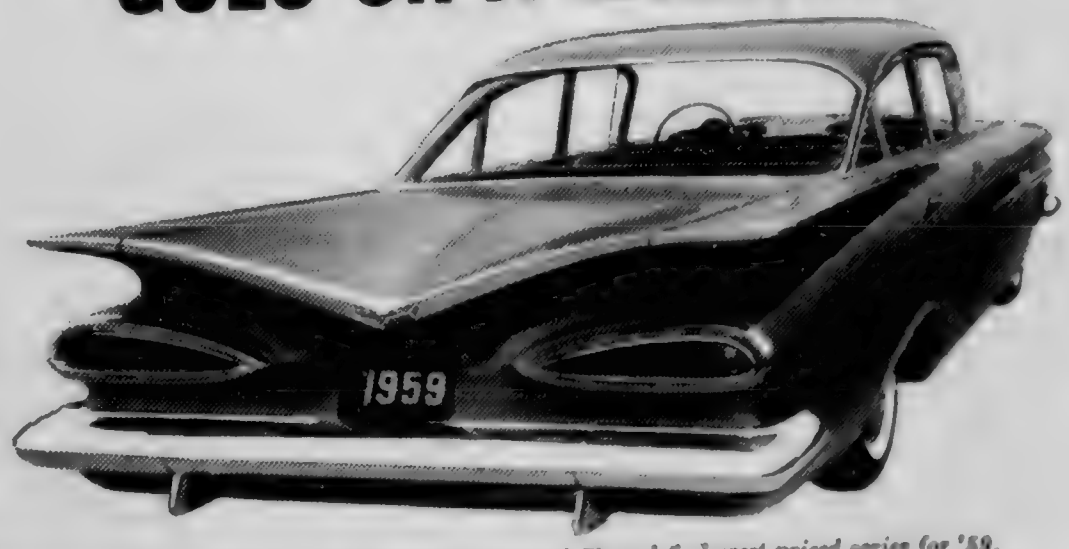
Mr. Lawrence Van Benthuysen, Director of Public Relations here at UVM, and advisor to the CYNIC, has accepted an invitation to be one of the judges for the college offset newspaper contest for this year. This contest is run annually by the Columbia Scholastic Press Association in accordance with their Duplicated Division. Mr. Van Benthuysen began receiving other college publications late last month. The judging is based on ratings in an official score book put out by the C.S.P.A. and also by personal comments of the judges.



Mr. Van Benthuysen graduated from this University in 1951 after transferring from Elmira College in his sophomore year. While attending UVM, he was a columnist for the CYNIC, and the editor of the Windfall, now called the Centaur. Formerly from Yonkers, New York, Mr. Van Benthuysen now resides in South Burlington with his wife and three children. Still very active in University affairs, Mr. Van Benthuysen is serving on The Lane Series Committee and the Dedication Committee of the new medical building now under construction.

Mr. Van Benthuysen, as stated in the letter of invitation from the C.S.P.A., was chosen for the judging because of the fine record the CYNIC has had over a period of years. Since the CYNIC is an offset publication, the staff of the paper as well as the University body deems it a great honor for Mr. Lawrence Van Benthuysen to serve as one of the judges in this college newspaper contest.

CHEVY'S NEW HI-THRIFT 6

More miles are back in a gallon of regular-grade gas—up to 10% more—and Chevy's new Hi-Thrift 6 engine puts them there. It also gives you more "git" in the speeds you drive the most.

Here's an engine that always seems able to coax extra miles out of a tank of regular-grade gas. In fact, if you're one of those drivers who keep tab on things like gas mileage, you'll soon see for yourself that this new Hi-Thrift 6 gets up to 10% more miles a gallon.

Another thing you'll like about this 135-h.p. 6 is the extra pep it gives you for passing and climbing hills. This is due to higher torque at normal speeds.

It may be hard to believe anything that looks and moves like this '59 Chevy can be such a stickler for economy. But—whether you pick the Hi-Thrift 6 or a vim-packed V8—this is just one more reason Chevy's the car that's wanted for all its worth. Stop by your dealer's and see.

The Vermont Cynic

Part Two:
"Land Of Opportunity"

In the last issue of the CYNIC we discussed the "kissing case" which occurred in Monroe, North Carolina, last November. We urged that letters be written to Governor Hodges protesting the results of that affair. On January 26 we received from Governor Hodges an impressive reply to our own message. In this missive we were told that we were the victim of "misinformation and half-truths" which "have been spread all over the country." Statements by J.M. Price, Judge of the Juvenile Court of Union Country, and Mr. Blaine M. Madison, Commissioner of the Board of Correction and Training, were enclosed.

According to these gentlemen the Morrison Training School is the best place for Manover Thompson and David Simpson because they come from "poor" homes which do not provide the proper supervision, and because they were both on probation for previous "delinquencies." These gentlemen also asserted that "these boys were not convicted of a criminal offense and 'sentenced to prison for life' rather they were made wards of the State and were committed to the Training School on this occasion for such time as is determined by the school officials would be in the best interests of the children."

This is very interesting. Perhaps, in this instance, the State was completely justified in committing the boys for their own welfare" and for the community at large." Let us grant that the boys' previous record of stealing (a lawn mower, a ham, and a bicycle) was reprehensible enough to warrant commitment to the Training School, that their home life was bad enough to warrant it also: that does not change the basic, patently ridiculous charge which precipitated the commitment. Nor does it change the fact that racial discrimination was the factor which caused the charge ("assault and molesting of three white girls") to be brought against the boys. Nor does it change the fact that there is something frightening about a law which gives the state such wide discretionary powers over the lives of children. Apparently the courts of North Carolina are given great latitude in juvenile cases. "Under North Carolina law, a juvenile is not convicted of a criminal offense but the Court is authorized to commit the juvenile to a training school. This applies in all cases, regardless of race." But is it exercised in all cases, regardless of race? We doubt very much if two white boys who acted in exactly the same manner would have been treated in exactly the same manner.

There is another aspect of the handling of this case which is upsetting. The boys had no counsel at their trial. According to Judge Price counsel would have been allowed by the court if a request had been made. Is it not standard practice to appoint counsel in juvenile cases if none is provided? Perhaps it should be. The closest thing to legal counsel the boys had was Mr. Robert F. Williams, president of the local NAACP. He was barred from the hearing room even though the mothers had requested his presence.

It is difficult to ascertain where the truth of the actual event lies in this particular case. The one thing that no amount of official fulmination can deny is the fact that racial discrimination was the dominant factor in the handling of the case. Fraternity Responds

To the students of the University of Vermont

By now it is no secret that the officials have taken action with respect to Phi Sigma Delta fraternity. This action is probationary in nature, with final determination of Phi Sigma Delta's status to be made in May of this year. During the second semester the fraternity may in no way publically represent the University of Vermont. But it may, however, participate in intramural athletics and sponsor social affairs on campus. It is conceivable that Phi Sigma Delta may be suspended from campus, but in view of our past record and our future plans we believe, without reservation, that we will more than fulfill the University conditions. As a matter of fact the University officials have themselves expressed confidence in the fraternity.

The incident for which Phi Sigma Delta was punished was unquestionably a high breach of socially acceptable conduct and even though a small minority of members were involved, the fraternity assumes complete responsibility. Unfortunately the prolific campus grapevine has twisted and altered the facts of the incident so that the greater majority of people do not know the real story. It is not my purpose, however, to elaborate on the incident, but rather to discourage random malicious rumors.

Phi Sigma Delta realizes its responsibilities in this matter and accepts the punishment as completely justified. We hold no malice against any University official and do not as a matter of policy condone the incident to which the punishment was directed. In conclusion the members of the fraternity wish to take this opportunity to apologize to the University Family for any embarassment which we may have caused.

J. Lawrence Markell
President, Phi Sigma Delta.

Clearing House

By Peter Schoffstall

Item: A letter from Judy Clark, '58, now working at the New England Mutual Life in Beantown, who does not totally agree with me in the review of "The Diary of Anne Frank," arrives: The letter refers me and the critics of my review to an article in the August, 1958 Harper's by Arthur Miller, entitled: The Shadow of the Gods.

Thumb-nail Review: The appearance and presentation of the motion picture "Auntie Mame" hails a new maturity of Burlington movie houses; not so much daring, as simple intelligence. This film, taken directly from the Broadway production, which was from the novel by Patrick Dennis, goes deeper than a scratch. The characters achieved dimension which a cut version would not have allowed and the total effect was that our intelligences were not insulted. We saw an adult entertainment; a mixture of glorious spoofing (the business complex, cultism, fads, camera bugs, togetherness, main-line-ism, Kiwani, commercism, etc.) and reality. We much enjoyed ourselves for the $1.80; our "best buy" movie of the month.

Not-So-Thumb-Nail-Review: I hope that eventually every responsible person will hear the hour-long documentary "The Business of Sex," which was broadcast several weeks ago over the CBS radio network, produced by Edward R. Murrow and Fred W. Friendly, and narrated by Murrow in his usual feint and jab voice. The program was a verbalization of the uses of prostitution in American business circles to clinch a contract, smooth a temper, black-mail a buyer, make a cool million and even, as in the case of a small California town, to support a hospital which would provide cheaper inspection of that town's most sought-after commodity.

It is a dreadful thing to listen to what one knows is a cultivated and intelligent voice mumble on about how necessary the business of sex is to American industry today; it is horrifying to hear the some type of voice clamly condone, by the very tone of it, a double moral standard for the institution of marriage ("Three or four men and the same number of girls. Everybody's 'going fishing' so there aren't any questions at home."). But perhaps most distressing are the monologues of the call-girls and prostitutes themselves. There are either not intelligent enough to realize their predicament, or they are so intelligent that they sense deeply their loss of place and soul in the big social picture. I got the sense that the more intelligent girls who contribute to the "program" were drained psychologically and spiritually; I got the sense that they were more lost and misfit than they had been before they entered the business of sex (many a reason for entering) and I got the horrible feeling that here were "human beings" who were more slaves, more de-humanized, than any group of people in the history of man.

Among the statements made by noted authorities in the fields of psychology and sociology, which were for the most part clinical than involved with human concern, was a short stinger from Margeret Meade, the anthropologist of some note. Dr. Meade stated, and I paraphrase, and most likely transpose, that if this (the elements uncovered by the documentation) were all true than there is a rot in our social structure which is deep enough to condemn us, indeed, that it already has, and that something had better be done about it very quickly.

Well, something had better be done about it very

Rules Set For Snow Sculptures

The sculpture rules for the 61st Annual Kake Walk will remain the same as in recent years, in that all sculptures will be made of snow. Ice and artificial coloring will be permitted.

Under no circumstances will any visible wooden or any other material be used as a support for the sculptures, as has been done in the past. Such material may be used, however, providing that it cannot be seen.

Judging will be based on originality and execution, not on a point for point basis, but for an over-all effect. The decision of the judges will be final.

Judging will take place on the morning of Saturday, February 22. All groups competing will submit their names to the Kake Walk Office by Tuesday, February 18, 1958 by 12:00 Noon.

Highlights

By Edson Darer

Hello there. It is good to be back with you once again after an extended vacation, which was spent most pleasantly. I saw the wilds of New York City once more and indulged in a few bowling matches with some real stiff competition, but fared pretty well. It seems that bowling has hit New York in a real big way. This is real bowling, not duck pins. If a fella doesn't have a date on a Saturday night, he can just pick himself up, and make it to the bowling alley. When he "makes it on the scene," the picking is all his. It used to be difficult to meet any different types of people, but now you run into all sorts of sorts, such as the "beatnick," the "hood," and other such unsavory characters. I guess it is part of the homey atmosphere. You all know the saying, "Take the family out tonight and go bowling." This is true if you want to introduce your children or friends to vice and other goings on.

In one of the college newspapers, there was a story about a beautiful red-haired girl who goes to school in one of the midwestern states. Her friends dared her to go to the big bowling alley in just a raincoat. Well, it seemed that this coed was not one of the shy types and so she took her girl friends up on this dare, for a little side bet, of course. When they arrived at the spot, which was one most frequented by male undergrads, the girls started a little ruckus, and our heroine stood herself up on the highest table in the place. When the commotion calmed down, the girl started to peel the raincoat. Well you should have seen the faces of her friends. Even the pinboys stood up from the places and gazed over at the happenings. There she stood, her hair waving due to the air-conditioning. There was a lull and then the place went wild. A riot started and the police were called in. There were eleven people arrested and our heroine got off stark free. The moral to this story cannot be reckoned by one such as myself, but as the police entered they spied our heroine standing on the table and they were amazed also. She had nothing on but one, well, I really don't know what to call it. If you read the story too, I wish you let me know what
